THE NEWS OF THE CHURCH

Edited by
WILLIAM B. SPOFFORD

Bishop Perry, back home from his four months through the Orient, is apparently going to have things to say about missions. He opened up in Chicago on June 23rd when he was the guest of the Church Club at a dinner. He levelled a sharp attack against the advocates of independence for the Philippines; charged gross misrepresentation on the part of American newspapers of the situation between Japan and China and clearly indicated that he proposes to back up the missionary program in the far east against the report of the laymen's missionary inquiry. In speaking on the latter subject he said: "The leaders of Christian missionary work in China are not the sort of people you read about in Rethinking Missions. The Christian Church in China is not a dream or a future project. It is a fact." He then declared that it would be unthinkable to withdraw missionaries from that country and predicted that in twenty-five years China will have an independent Church.

In dealing with Japan Bishop Perry stated that the Nippon people are "critical of themselves and longing to stand on the facts and to be understood." War reports on the Manchurian situation the Bishop termed as greatly exaggerated and said that it was a war "fought in the headlines of American newspapers. There was a job of policing to be done and the Chinese were not adverse to this. The Japanese have no purpose or desire for warfare. Friendship between the United States and Japan is capable of establishing a lasting peace in the Pacific and if this friendship is broken it will be America's fault, not Japan's."

Coming on the New York Bishop Perry again held forth on the subject of our missionary program on Sunday last in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. There he denied virtually every major criticism made by the laymen's inquiry into the missionary enterprise. He insisted that in Rethinking Missions, the book containing the laymen's report, the essentials of the Christian faith were denied, and that its proposal that the direction of all Protestant missionary work be carried on by a single administrative body representing all the denominations was "untrue to all Christian experience."

Bishop Perry found the missions operating in full accord with the Christian faith and asserted that the missionaries themselves were persons of whom the respective churches might well be proud. He pointed to the difficulties caused by financial stringencies and the huge size of the undertaking, but added that the workers were carrying out their tasks in the best manner possible and asked for financial and intellectual support on their behalf.

Aid for the Unemployed Clergy

The following communication has been received from Bishop Burleson, assistant to the Presiding Bishop:

"Much has appeared in the Church papers recently about clerical unemployment. It is well to distinguish between three classes among the clergy; namely, those who are non-parochial, those unemployed, and those who are destitute. The great difference in figures which has frequently appeared is probably due to a confusion of these three classes. The clergy who are suffering great hardship because of unemployment are those who should be our first concern, and their number is not great in proportion to the size of our clergy list. Their sufferings, however, are real and severe.

"In the statement sent out from the Presiding Bishop's Office some months ago allusion was made to a plan of relief undertaken in the Sixth Province. At that time, we had no information as to how it was working out. I have just received an interesting statement from Bishop Keeler, Coadjutor of Minnesota, which I am sure will be encouraging to the large number of Church people who feel keen sympathy for our brethren who are in distress.

"Bishop Keeler says: 'The Synod of the Sixth Province at its meeting in Casper last fall authorized the setting aside of $600 of our provincial funds to relieve destitute clergy, and a committee of three, with myself as chairman, was appointed and authorized to present this need to the clergy of the province. The letter of appeal elicited responses from eighty-eight clergy who are giving at least $1.00 each month for the relief of their brethren within the province. Practically $100 thus comes monthly into the hands of the committee. We are giving relief at the rate of $25 a month, and also some temporary assistance where needed. Thus far we have not had to draw upon the $600 voted by the Synod.'

"This very practical and direct method of meeting a difficult problem in a perfectly confidential manner is noteworthy. Were a like method of operation in other provinces, the situation would be adequately cared for. It is believed that every real case of suffering is being cared for in the Sixth Province. Bishop Keeler adds the following interesting comments: 'There is not as much unemployment of the clergy as many people feared there might be, and those who have been let out of work have shown a good deal of individual resourcefulness in adjusting themselves to their problem, so that the instances of clergy who are actually destitute are not many. In reply to our letters of appeal for pledges, I have received a good many letters from clergy who have told me that they could not possibly make a pledge because of greatly reduced salaries. They have told me just enough in their letters for me to realize what a splendid struggle they are making against odds to keep themselves going. There are men living on salaries as low as $600, $700, and $800 a year with rectory. I don't know how they do it, but the fact remains that some are doing this. My own conviction is that the Church may well be proud of its clergy in their capacity for self-sacrifice in the crisis through which we have passed; and I further believe that they have shown decided evidence of real leadership in these trying times. Personally, I doubt whether there is any other body of men, professional or commercial, who have adjusted themselves more unselfishly than have the clergy of the Church.'"

The High Cost of Making Converts

The cost of making converts is made the subject of a study recently completed by Professor Theodore Abel of Columbia, for the Institute of social and religious research. He discovered that missions for the proselyting of Catholic immigrants have been conducted by American Protestant churches for over fifty years. He estimates the expense of this work, over that time, at between fifty and one hundred million dollars. For this sum of hard cash you now have mission churches with a total membership of between fifty and sixty thousand, and this estimate includes, not only converts, but the children and grandchildren of converts. The conclusion that Professor Abel seems to arrive at is that supporting such work is like throwing cash into a bottomless well, that the work has failed in its main purpose which was to acclimate immigrants to American life. Social service centers, in some instances supported by churches, have performed a useful function, especially those that have helped the immigrant worker in the struggle for economic security and social recognition. Professor Abel feels that this work might well go on, but that it should be carried on with closer coordination with secular social service agencies.

Correspondence Church School Makes Offering

The first correspondence school of the Church to make an offering as far as I know is the one in the district of North Dakota which this year made a Lenten offering of $68. There was also a birthday offering of $5. Also out of the correspondence school, which is run by Miss Mildred Alley, United Thank Offering worker, has come two schools; one at Walhalla that is meeting each Sunday and a vacation school at Linton. She has discovered 798 isolated Episcopalians in North Dakota and 323 of them are members of her correspondence school.

Vacation Conference in Dallas

About 100 persons attended the ten day conference of the diocese of Dallas, held at St. Matthew's Cathedral. The National Council was represented by the Rev. Goodrich Fenner, secretary of rural work and Miss Margaret Marston, educational secretary of the Auxiliary.

Missionaries Praised by Newspapers

Judging by the Mineral County Independent, published at Hawthorne, Nevada, the two young women who as missionaries of the Episcopal Church work at St. Philip's Mission, Hawthorne, are becoming a recognized part of the community. At the public school graduation, one of them, Miss Edith Smith, pronounced an invocation and a benediction, and the other, Miss Betty Gould, delivered the address to the graduates.

Miss Smith and Miss Gould have been interesting themselves in a small colony of Indians near Hawthorne who have been long neglected. The local paper above mentioned carries as part of the Episcopal Church Sunday notice: 2:30, Service for the Indians. Bishop Jenkins says there are other such small colonies who will not be evangelized unless the local clergy can undertake it. St. Philip's is visited regularly by the Rev. P. T. Soderstrom of Trinity Church, Fallon.

Mission Has Course on Home Hygiene

Girls and young women of St. Mary's Mission, Middlesboro, in the Kentucky mountains, have completed a course in home hygiene, offered by the local Red Cross chapter. The class met in the parish house. Miss Bessie Ralston at this mission has the oldest class of mountain children in the diocese of Lexington.

New Window for Honolulu Cathedral

Another step has been taken towards the completion of perhaps the most important chapel built in very recent years in the missionary field—the Parke Memorial Chapel of St. Andrew's Cathedral, Honolulu, the gift of Miss Annie Parke. The Parke family has long been associated with these island possessions, Miss Parke's father, the late William Cooper Parke having been marshall of the Hawaiian Islands under five successive kings, from 1850 to 1884. Miss Parke placed with the J. & R. Lamb Studios of New York the commission for the entire interior work of this chapel, an interesting combination of the materials of marble, mosaic, metal, carved wood and stained glass. This most recent addition is the children's window based on the two themes of the Nativity and Christ blessing little children. This window is executed in the strictly decorative antique school of glass and will match in type of material and general decorative features the rose window at the chancel end of the chapel, completed by the Lamb Studios last summer, with the exception that in the children's window, the decorative features include figures as well as ornament.

Whitsunday Offering for National Church

At the request of Bishop Davis the Whitsunday Offering in the diocese of Western New York was designated for the work of the National Council. The results were encouraging.

Ordination in Michigan

Bishop Page ordained the Rev. Joseph L. Slagg to the priesthood in Christ Church Chapel, Grosse Pointe Farms, on June 25th, where Dr. Slagg is on the staff.

Volunteers for the Mission Fields

Frank H. Moss Jr., of Philadelphia, a student at Alexandria, left on July first for the South Dakota Indian mission field where he is to do volunteer work during the summer. Another Philadelphian to go to the mission field is the Rev. Timothy E. Woodward, young vicar of St. Andrew's, West Manayunk, who is to leave on July 15th for five years of service in the Philippines.

Institute Rector at Lynchburg

The Rev. Richard Henry Lee was instituted rector of Grace Memorial Church, Lynchburg, Va., on June 18th by Bishop Jett. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Vincent C. Franks, rector of the Lee Memorial Church at Lexington, Va., a classmate of Mr. Lee's at Virginia Seminary.

Rhode Island Priest Has an Anniversary

The Rev. William Pressey, rector of St. John's, Providence, and prominent in the affairs of the diocese, observed the 40th anniversary of his ordination on June 21st. Bishop Bennett preached at a service that was attended by many friends, including a large number of clergymen of various communions. Mr. Pressey was presented with a substantial sum of money by his parish.

School Celebrates

Founders' Day

Founders' Day for DeVeaux School at Niagara Falls was observed on June 24th. The Rev. William S. Barrows, headmaster, spoke on the prospects for the school and said that a large enrollment was anticipated for this Fall.

Religion and Morals Hang Together

A person begins to doubt the existence of a moral code only when he begins to drift away from his religious moorings, said Bishop Manning at a confirmation service last Sunday at the Holy Nativity, New York City.

Dean Inge Is to Retire

Dean Inge of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, England, announced last Sunday his intention of resigning next summer because of his advanced years. He is 73 years of age. He is famous throughout the world for his startling remarks.

Democracy to him is "the silliest of all fetishes," and Socialists are "court chaplains of King Demos." "Any dead dog can float with the stream," he says. Ridiculing "the herd theory of mankind," he has preached the majesty of the individual soul and described democratic governments as "wasteful, inefficient and generally corrupt, yielding before every agitation and paying blackmail to every conspiracy."

Recently, in a sermon dealing with the possibility that other planets are peopled, he said: "If the inhabitants of the other worlds need redemption doubtless God visits them as He has visited us. This is an inspiring thought. There is to my mind something derogatory to the Deity in supposing He made this vast universe for so paltry an end as the protection of ourselves and our friends."

Last month Dean Inge described the Hitler regime's anti-Semitic policy as "foolish as well as wrong." "Why the new German government should have this strange manner I cannot even guess," he said. "The sacred books of the Hebrews are by far the world's best sellers."

Assistant at St. James Resigns

The Rev. Sidney T. Cooke, for eight years the senior curate at St. James Church, New York City, has resigned, without plans for the immediate future. The junior curate, the Rev. F. Randall Williams, resigned recently to become the vicar of the church at Oradell, New Jersey.

New Window in New York Cathedral

Dean Gates of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine dedicated a window last Sunday; a memorial to the late Henry Wynd Young, stained glass artist, several of whose windows are in the cathedral structure. This new window was designed and executed by Mr. Ernest W. Lake-man, well known artist who was formerly associated with Mr. Young.

An Unusual School in the District of Nevada

The attendance at the vacation Church school held this past month in the Big Meadows Farming District of Nevada might not have been large but what there was of it was certainly good. There were 28 enrolled. This meant every child in the valley over three years old. And of these only two missed having a perfect attendance. The district is having twenty-one such schools in various centers during the summer.

A School Without a Deficit

The trustees of DuBose Training School, Sewanee, Tennessee, met the other day and low and behold it was revealed by the treasurer that the school closed the year not only without a deficit but with a cash balance on hand. He also stated that the capital investment had decreased not a single dollar and that the income from investments had decreased but slightly.

Boston Rector Receives Degree

The Rev. Phillips Osgood, rector of Emmanuel, Boston, was presented with a doctorate by Carlton College, Minnesota, in recognition of his services to the college while rector in Minneapolis.

Combine for Summer Services

All Saints', Brookline, Mass., is hooking up with the Congregational Church of the city for union services each Sunday morning during the summer. It is not uncommon for churches to join forces during the summer for evening services but it is something new for the record to have them united for the morning service.

Exeter Cathedral Celebrates

This month the eighth centenary of Exeter Cathedral in England is being celebrated and the foundation stone of the Metropolitan Cathedral at Liverpool is being laid. The great Liverpool church will be by far the largest in Great Britain, and of about the same size as St. Peter's in Rome. The plans call for fifty-three altars and the seating of 10,000 people. The site is Brownlow Hill, from which the whole of the Mersey and the Welsh mountains can be seen.

Exeter Cathedral has stood in its close for eight hundred years. "It was here," says the Archdeacon, "when the Normans were settling a land in which Celts, Anglo-Saxons and Danes were living side by side. It was here in the rough days of the Plantagenets, and in the dark and glorious days of the Middle Ages." Exeter is a city of 60,000 people, and is a seaport by canal connecting it with the estuary of the Exe. "Few sights," says a recent visitor, St. John Ervine, "are so reassuring and so pleasant to the tired eye as the spectacle of the cathedral, firm in its green setting, gray with years, yet vigorous with renewals of youth."

New Mexico Reports Progress

The missionary district of New Mexico and Southwest Texas last year came within one of maintaining its record of confirmations from the year before, which was the highest to date; there were 264 in 1932. The pledge for the Church's program was met in full, in spite of bank failures. The number of active clergy has not diminished and two ordinations are soon to increase it. Student work at the state university was discontinued as the subsidy received for it had to be withdrawn. Combined with the student work were a ministry to health seekers in Albuquerque and the care of four missions.

Pioneer missionary efforts of just fifty years ago have resulted in two self-supporting parishes, the Church of the Holy Faith, Santa Fe, and St. John's Cathedral, Albuquerque, which have been celebrating their first half-century.

Clinics begin at 6:30 a. m. at St. Anne's Mexican Mission. El Paso, and the playgrounds are occupied until late at night. There are now ten Mexican workers on the staff. Mexicans contributed over $1,000 to this mission last year. The National Council appropriated about five-sevenths of the total support.

Two new missions were opened last year, at Datil, thirty-seven miles from the nearest church, and at Corona, whose nearest neighbor church is fifty miles away.

The only new building in the district is an addition to the hospital at the San Juan Indian Mission, a stone building providing two new wards for the overcrowded hospital, together with living quarters for two of the staff. This was erected by the New York diocesan Woman's Auxiliary as part of their advance work.

Not as Strict These Days

They recently had a three day anniversary celebration of the first Sunday school of historic Monumental Church, Richmond, Virginia, when it was disclosed by Mr. Richard H. Meade, that the original school had a definite rule that those attending should appear "with clean face and hands, their hair combed, and as decently dressed as their circumstances will permit." This is in the original constitution, now owned by Mr. Meade. The Sunday school of this parish opened in 1817 and is said to be the oldest one in Richmond. It was in this church that John Marshall, Edgar Allen Poe and other famous Virginians worshipped. There were other regulations. For instance the rules declare that "They must be kind and affectionate to their school-mates, discourage and reprove swearing, lying and all immorality among their associates; be assiduous in learning their tasks at home; behave with reverence and attention in church, and on all occasions creditable to themselves and their church."

Monumental Church was erected following the disastrous fire which destroyed the Richmond Theatre on the night of December 26, 1811, with a loss of seventy-two lives, including Governor George William Smith. The church was opened on the site of the theatre on May 4, 1814, and the first of the three-day anniversary celebration planned for this year took place on Thursday, May 4, exactly 119 years after the opening of the church.

The people of Richmond felt that the terrible fire was an act of God designed to punish them for their wickedness, which explains their action in erecting the church on the site of the theatre. The cost of the building was defrayed by public subscription.

Among the speakers at the anniversary was Bishop Tucker of Virginia.

Interesting Chapel Dedicated at Newport

A little chapel, interesting for various reasons, has been dedicated at the Seaman's Church Institute at Newport, Rhode Island. For two years an artist, Durr Freedley, has been exploring legends and as a result has brought together here all sorts of decorations and arrangements which, through history, have associated the Church with the sea. Thus the floor is inlaid with shells and sea weeds; the altar is hung with an embellished sail cloth held by nautical knots; there are scenes depicting Christ's ministry among fishermen, while the frescoes also are associated with the sea. The chapel is the gift of Mrs. Hamilton Fish Webster who saw to it that her own family was brought into the picture by having the artist paint the figures of four saints, whom someone told her were among her own ancestors. And just to clinch the matter the artist showed one of the saints holding a small child by the hand, the child's figure having been copied from a miniature of Mrs. Webster as a young child. Well that is one way to get into such company; that is if you have a sufficient amount of cash to persuade an artist, who after all must eat, and a rector who wants a chapel very badly, that you belong there.

Missionary Afraid of our Civilization

Announcement was made some time ago that a Brazilian scientific expedition was going to spend a year or more on the island of Tristan da Cunha. Fearing what this sudden influx of civilization might do to his simple flock, the English missionary, the Rev. A. G. Partridge, who had just reached England for his furlough, turned right around and went back. Then the Brazilian expedition was cancelled after all, and a Japanese ship went off her route to pick up Mr. Partridge and bring him home. In the meantime, at the request of the English Colonial Office, he had set up a new form of government among the islanders.

Working in the Ozark Mountains

A part of the National Council appropriation to the diocese of Arkansas is for a clergyman, the Rev. Gustave Orth, working in the Ozark Mountains at a place called Havana, sometimes listed as Berry Mountain. Bishop Saphoré writes that a larger proportion of baptisms and confirmations have taken place in this mountain mission than elsewhere in the diocese. The missionary, who has been there about eight years, has largely overcome a strong community prejudice against the Church. Services were at first held in his home but there is now a church building. He has organized a day school for some twenty children who formerly had to walk four or six miles to the nearest public school. He represents the Red Cross and other welfare agencies, and has been helpful in securing medical attention for people in need.
