EPISCOPAL parents are deluding themselves if they think that their offspring are going to be strengthened in the faith while at college. Their sons and daughters actually have about one chance in ten of being at a college where there are well-organized activities directed especially at them as Episcopal students. Only 25,000 of the 250,000 college Episcopal students in the country are effectively reached by the Church, mostly at the large state universities and at the older private colleges.

The chief job of the National Canterbury Association is to plant and encourage new student groups on campuses where they do not now exist. The 25,000 students who are now members of Canterbury Clubs are beginning to contact Episcopal students on near-by college campuses, as well as the apathetic on their own campuses, in one of the most vital and necessary missionary movements in the Church today.

Students Challenged

WHY get excited? The reason is plain. The atmosphere on most college campuses today militates against the Christian student. Entering college with a Sunday School conception of what Christianity is all about, the student is challenged to think for perhaps the first time in his life, and among other things his immature religious beliefs are blasted. Without aggressive guidance on the part of the Church, the chances are great that instead of reformulating his thinking along intelligent and mature Christian lines, he will be weaned away from true Christianity and will adopt in its stead a sort of pseudo-Christian humanism.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The process is slow and easy. A psychologist teaches him that man is perfectible, and the student comes to think that sin is simply the result of an unfortunate childhood. An anthropologist teaches him that all values are relative, and the student sees missionaries as being harmful to other cultures. A historian teaches him that through the centuries man has made considerable progress, and the student feels that human nature is improving. By the time his college career is over, the former Episcopalian is likely to look upon Christianity and the Church as something for the weak, and tolerantly concedes that it's all right for those who need it. He says that he will follow the teachings of Jesus because they are helpful in human relationships, but he can get along quite well by solving his problems rationally without the props of Church or the supernatural. This process is clearly visible on every college campus, and its results are evident in the Episcopal Church as a whole.

Class Church

ANOTHER reason for getting excited is that, with most Church activity concentrated at the large state universities and the older private colleges, the Church is for the most part reaching those students in the higher social and economic classes, while ignoring students at state teachers' colleges and the smaller and younger and less-expensive private colleges. This present policy could perhaps unintentionally lead to a further concentration of Church membership in the upper socio-economic classes, which almost everyone would agree to be an unhealthy state of affairs if the Episcopal Church is to be truly catholic.

Why push hard with college students anyway? The answer to this question is that the college years are among the most impressionable in a person's life. It is often at college that an individual thinks seriously about the questions, "What am I? Why am I here? Where am I going?" The philosophy of life that he formulates, and the occupational choices that he makes, set the course of his life. If the Church is an active force in the college student's life, these decisions and thoughts can be guided into Christian channels, and his life dedicated to our Lord.

Why Canterbury Clubs

WHY Canterbury Clubs? Why must college students be organized into groups? The answer to this is that the college student has his faith challenged and contradicted constantly in the classroom and lecture hall, and he needs an opportunity to talk out the doubts and uncertainties that are raised by his secularly-oriented professors. Most Episcopal students do not know beans about Christianity or the Church, and without the opportunity for discussion and study of the problems, many of them intellectual, some of them personal and social, which are somewhat unique to the student in the college atmosphere, he is not likely to be able to grow in the faith as well as if he had a chance to talk out these problems with other students in the same boat. There is great encouragement in the close fellowship with other Christian students that is found in most Canterbury Clubs. It is much easier to stem the secular tide in league with other Christian students than it is to try to buck it alone.

In addition, a Canterbury Club gives an opportunity for corporate worship, for service to the Church and to the community, and for all-around good times.

What Is Being Done?

AT the present time, college Episcopal students on campuses where Canterbury Clubs already exist, are contacting Episcopalians on campuses where there is no organized life among student Churchmen. In one state, for example, where there are twenty-four colleges, during the past several months students from the four already-existing clubs have gone to the campuses where there are no clubs, and have so far helped establish three new clubs. Student missionaries who are convinced from their own experience of the great value of Canterbury Clubs are most effective in convincing other students to get the ball rolling.

Already-established Canterbury Clubs are not kidding themselves into thinking that they can ignore the missionary opportunities among the apathetic Episcopalians on their own campuses. In addition to offering the opportunity for a full range of church activities through the Canterbury Clubs, convinced Episcopal students call on all freshmen during orientation week in the fall, sponsor preaching missions to the campus, and in their contacts in the dorms and in all campus activities, make personal witnesses to the faith in an effort to spread the gospel to their fellow-students.

There is a tremendous opportunity for members of the National Canterbury Association to make it possible for thousands of other supposedly Episcopal students to have the same opportunities for learning and living in a Christian fellowship on the campus. Bringing the gospel into another person's life is the greatest thing that you can do for him. Many nominally Episcopal students are today groping for meaning in life, and are ripe for conversion. They can be won for our Lord if we will but exert the effort.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Church Work at Cornell

BY RICHARD B. STOTT
Chaplain to Episcopal Students

FOR more than sixty years Cornell University has benefited from one of the strongest interfaith programs in American college life. John R. Mott, then a student, was one of the first at the university to see the importance of trying to develop a workable program in cooperative religion for the college campus. His efforts and those of his successors eventually led to the founding of Cornell United Religious Work, a pioneer organization with an objective of developing understanding and respect among the eleven denominations and faiths that constitute its membership.

The close and genuine cooperation fostered by CURW between Episcopalians, Jews, Roman Catholics, Unitarians and other denominations sometimes amazes students. Cornell's interfaith program seems to be successful because of CURW's basic philosophy of not trying to reduce all religions to one "denomination," but by trying to increase and strengthen the effectiveness of each individual group. There is no attempt to create an artificial interfaith program on every level of religious activity, but to join together on such naturally cooperative activities as work with freshmen, inquiry groups, public affairs, fellowship and social service on the campus and in the community.

The significance of the successful CURW program so impressed itself upon Myron C. Taylor that he came forward two years ago with funds to erect the new interfaith building now under construction on the campus. The $1,940,000 building, named Anabel Taylor Hall in honor of Mr. Taylor's wife, will have quarters for interfaith religious work which would be difficult to duplicate in convenience and beauty.

Girls at Freshman Camp

In addition to cooperating on an interfaith level, each Church group in CURW carries on its own program geared especially to the needs of its own students. The Episcopal Church and eight other groups support such programs and maintain full-time chaplains on the campus. Even before Jim, the typical Episcopal student, arrives on the campus, he has an opportunity to meet the Episcopal chaplain, the Rev. Richard B. Scott, and other members of the CURW staff at "Freshmen Camp." Each year, under the sponsorship of the interfaith program, six hundred freshmen spend four days in an informal camp setting where the staff and upperclassmen try to help them prepare for some of the problems they are bound to meet in college life. Such topics as "men's-women's relations," "academic integrity," and "the place of religion in college life" are presented by student panels and then discussed by the freshmen in bull sessions in their cabins.

Students Visit

AFTER Jim and the other new Episcopal students are on the campus, they are visited by upperclass members of the Canterbury Club, the official Episcopal student campus organization, and welcomed into the Episcopal Church at Cornell. On the first Wednesday night of the school year, Jim and 175 of his classmates are guests at a reception for new Episcopal students at St. John's Church in downtown Ithaca where the Rev. Reginald Charles is the rector. At this informal party Jim has a chance to meet some of the other 1000 Episcopal students on the campus and hear about their program at Cornell.

Most of the student activities are centered in the Canterbury Club, headed by a student vestry with a senior and junior warden. On Sunday night, Jim goes to the meeting of the Canterbury Club, where supper is prepared by the students, and later he takes his turn cooking, serving or washing dishes. After the dishes are cleared away, a guest speaker or the chaplain opens the meeting with a talk leading up to a student discussion. Some of the recent topics have been: "why pray?," "Christian marriage," " is active participation in war contrary to Christian principles?" and "Christmas in music." A few weeks ago the Rev. George Gallos celebrated the divine liturgy of the Greek Orthodox Church at St. John's Church and was assisted by a choir of forty voices from the Greek Orthodox Church in Rochester. Some of the students stay after the meetings for dancing and recreation or just to sit around and talk.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

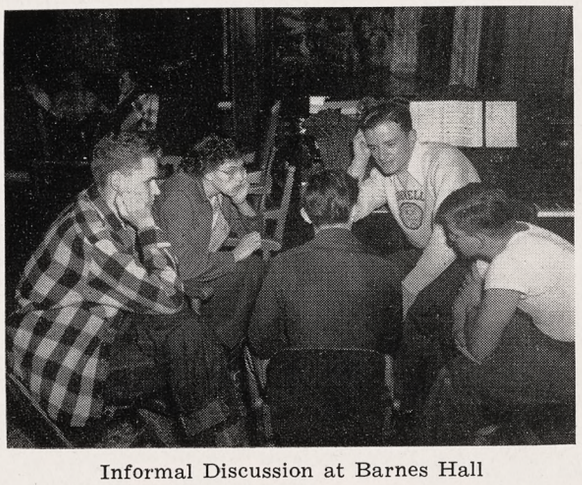
Many Church Activities

DURING the week, Jim may work with the service committee in redecorating an old Episcopal Church or painting a room in one of Ithaca's community houses or join the interfaith service program and spend his time at the hospital, the "Y" or with the Boy Scouts. If he has a flare for journalism, he is welcome to help in publishing the Canterbury Club monthly paper.

Every Tuesday afternoon there is an open house at the chaplain's new home on the edge of the campus, and Jim knows that he's always welcome. He also feels free to drop in at any other time to talk about some of the problems that are bothering him or just to say "hello" or have a cup of coffee. The chaplain's office in Barnes Hall is also one of the hang-outs for the Episcopal students. Jim may be one of the many who come up to the office to talk with the chaplain about such problems as: "I'm busting out of Cornell," "I've lost my faith," "I'm in love with a Roman Catholic," "I'm having trouble at home," "I can't pray any more," or "What's the purpose of it all?"

Several times a year Jim and some of his friends get away from their studies and relax for awhile at Mt. Pleasant, the university cabin a few miles from the campus. At these weekends the students cook their own meals, plan their own discussions and usually have a square dance on Saturday night.

Beliefs Challenged



AS an outcome of bull sessions and even classroom lectures, Jim may learn that his beliefs are challenged for the first time, he's on the defensive, and his knowledge of Christianity and the Episcopal Church are inadequate. No credit courses in religion are given at Cornell, but if Jim really wants to find out more about his own Church or even about other denominations or faiths, he can attend some of the lectures and discussions led by members of the interfaith staff in Barnes Hall. Each term the Episcopal chaplain teaches a volunteer course on the "doctrine, discipline and worship of the Episcopal Church." The Canterbury Club, at its Sunday night meetings, also tries to gear its lectures and discussions to subjects that will increase the student's knowledge and faith in his religion. Each Lent a three-day mission is held on the campus with such leaders as Rev. Samuel Shoemaker and Rev. Herbert Hawkins, OHC.

Contrary to popular belief, many college students and faculty members do attend church. On Sunday morning, Sage Chapel, the university interdenominational chapel, with a seating capacity of 1000, is always filled. In addition to this, many of the students attend the twelve churches in downtown Ithaca. Jim may prefer to go to one of the Sunday services at St. John's Church and then meet other students and faculty at the coffee hour after the 11 o'clock service. If it happens that Jim is up early on Sunday morning, he can go to the holy communion service celebrated by the Episcopal chaplain at the Lutheran Church at the edge of the campus. Mid-week services are held in the Barnes Hall Chapel, and last year during Lent, and exclusive of Sundays, approximately 700 communions were made at the 7:15 morning service.

Religion Makes Sense

TEN to twenty years ago it was often true that the student who got up and went to church was ridiculed by the other students in his living unit. Today, if Jim goes to church, he may still be laughed at by some, but many more seem to look at him and say, "He's got a hold of something." This increase in church attendance does not mean that 90% of the student body is caught up in a religious revival. However, it does seem to indicate that many students, because of various reasons, are beginning to think that perhaps, after all, religion is the missing link that can make sense out of life.

As Jim moves on through Cornell, he finds the Episcopal Church in many of his activities. One of his professors may be the junior warden at St. John's or a member of the Episcopal faculty committee working with the chaplain and the Canterbury Club. In his fraternity or dorm he may find himself in one of the many discussion groups led by the Episcopal chaplain. One of the seniors recently said, "It's a great help to know that my Church cares so much about me that it has moved on the college campus, and personally, it means a lot to me to know that my Church is on the spot when I need it."

Informal Discussion at Barnes Hall

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Since Jim usually doesn't have much spending money, the Church expects little financial support from him. The work of the Episcopal Church at Cornell is supported mainly by the diocese of Central New York with help from the Church Society for College Work, the Woman's Auxiliary, St. John's Church of Ithaca and the parents of our students. Last year the students bought a new set of communion vessels for the church on the campus, and next year they are going to try to raise $1500 to furnish their offices in Anabel Taylor Hall.

Jim and the rest of us at Cornell are looking forward to our new building because, as Myron C. Taylor put it: "Religion is the greatest force in the world today. Anabel Taylor Hall, as an interfaith center, will be built on the simple conception that we are all believers in God and human liberty, and that we must stand together to resist evil. Nothing being done at Cornell today is more important than the program to revitalize and strengthen that idea, which is the inspiration for this memorial."

Further Adventures Of Mr. Entwhistle

THE COMMITTEE SEEKS A RECTOR

BY

THOMAS V. BARRETT

"THERE'S a committee here to see you, Samuel," said Isabel Entwhistle one Sunday afternoon after dinner. "I think they're from St. Enthusia. Aren't they looking for a rector?"

"Tell them I'll be right down," Samuel mumbled as he struggled into a clean shirt. He was not in a particularly jocund mood. He felt reasonably confident that so far as the morning service was concerned, homiletically speaking, he had laid a large, ignoble egg. He wanted two hours of rest to recuperate from the ravages of failure. If there was anything he wanted nothing to do with that Sunday afternoon it was a committee; even one looking for a rector. But as he adjusted his collar and lifted the muscles of his face into a not unfriendly grimace he toyed with the idea of entertaining a "call" to St. Enthusia. To be sure it was not as large a parish as the Church of the Tribulation but since it numbered among its followers of the cross a goodly number of blue-bloods, there was a chance that it constituted what the bishop might call a "glorious opportunity."

"Not that I'm unhappy here," Samuel told himself as he went down stairs, "but a change might be good for my people."

The committee was made up of five middle-aged gentlemen and two mature members of the Ladies Aid.

"My name is Jepson," said one of the gentlemen who looked like a retired automobile salesman. "Sorry to bother you on a Sunday afternoon. We're from St. Enthusia's parish." He introduced his subordinates. "We just dropped in for a bit of advice."

Samuel Entwhistle smiled competently.

"You see," Mr. Jepson went on, "we're looking for a rector."

Mr. Entwhistle wet his lips, arranged his face in what Isabel called his "EinFeste Burg" look, and tried to find a natural and dignified position for his feet.

"We've been over to St. Stability this morning visiting Father Goodwear," announced Mr. Jepson. (Mr. Entwhistle decided it wasn't going to matter where he put his feet, and let them turn toward each other in mutual resignation). "We wondered if you could give us your . . . well . . . your frank and honest opinion of Father Goodwear as a possible rector for St. Enthusia. Entirely confidential of course."

"After all," Mr. Entwhistle whispered to himself, "the Tribulation probably has a larger budget."

"I think," he said out loud and with confidence, "that Goodwear is one of the best men in the diocese. He has fine judgment, he's a good preacher, an excellent pastor, and while not dynamic he would quickly win a place in the hearts of your people. You would all learn to love and respect him."

"We attended church at St. Stability, as I say," Mr. Jepson went on. "We found the service very well done. The sermon was helpful. We all liked Father Goodwear. We did wonder, however, whether he is perhaps well . . . a little . . . well . . . too old for the work in our parish."

"Old?" Samuel asked vacantly as he remembered that Goodwear was two years younger than he was.

"He seems energetic of course," put in an elderly member of the committee who looked to Samuel like a semi-retired dictator, "but we think we have an up-and-coming parish and we do need someone to work well with our young people. We understand Father Goodwear is about forty or so."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

"Old." Samuel repeated, leering stupidly at the committee. "He's only forty-two."

"We do need a man to appeal to our youth," Mr. Jepson added. "I think that youth is so important, and they seem to be slipping away from the Church don't they?"

Samuel threw out his chest slowly trying to look more robust than he felt on a Sunday afternoon.

"I would hate to think I was too old for St. Enthusia," he said rather icily. "It is your opinion that a man is incompetent after forty?" The members of the committee hurried frantically to make up for lost ground.

"Well of course . . ."

"We didn't expect . . . to aspire to a man of your calibre . . ."

"We just felt we needed to be sure we got a man who would attract our young people . . ."

"The 'teen agers never took to Father Squidge."

"Father Goodwear is capable I'm sure . . . it's just that we wondered . . ."

"You see," Mr. Jepson broke in, "we're in a growing community, as you know. Lots of new people; young married people moving in. We need a minister with energy—you know . . . someone to get out, and hustle and get these new people. Sell them on the Church. It's a challenge . . . for the right man." Mr. Jepson's tone and implications began to annoy Samuel. After all what was there to lose?

"How old are you?," he asked bluntly.

"I?," Mr. Jepson asked, pushed back on his sacroiliac. "Well . . . well, I'm fifty-eight. Why?"

"You're a salesman, did you tell me?," pursued Samuel.

"Well, no . . . I mean I don't think I told you. But I am. Buicks."

"Do you consider yourself too old for energetic work?," asked Samuel relentlessly.

"Who me? Of course not. I'm . . . I consider myself in my prime. Sold more cars last year than ever before . . ."

"And you sir," said Samuel turning to the semi-retired dictator, "what is your business may I ask?"

"I'm a lawyer."

"Mr. Bunce," put in another humble member of the committee, "is head of the law firm of Bunce, Doodle, O'Malley, Oppenheimer and Bunce. You must have heard of them?"

"Do you feel you are getting a little elderly for law work?" Samuel asked leaning forward solicitously. It was apparent that the senior member of Bunce, Doodle, O'Malley, Oppenheimer and Bunce would not be willing to allow very much equity. Samuel smiled jovially and raised a hand in good-natured benediction. "Just being facetious," he said. "My point is that clergy as well as lawyers, and salesmen, doctors, and industrialists—even major generals—sometimes still function well after . . . well . . . even forty-five."

"Of course we realize that," purred Mr. Jepson with an eye to the offended plumage of Mr. Bunce. "It's just that we old folks feel we can take care of ourselves. It's our youth we are worried about . . . perhaps Father Goodwear would be the man for us."

"I am sure he is one of our finest priests," said Samuel.

"Do you know anything of his political views?" asked Mr. Bunce.

"Well, I would say he is a progressive socially, and perhaps politically . . . on the liberal side."

"You mean he's communistic?" Mr. Bunce began to turn back his feathers again.

"Not at all . . . not at all," soothed Samuel. "He's a public spirited citizen with the welfare of . . . well of the youth in mind. Democratic I believe."

"I'm not sure that would suit us very well," Mr. Bunce said. "We're mostly Republicans at St. Enthusia."

"Do you think he would be co-operative with our Ladies Aid, and the other women's organizations of the parish?" asked a frail member of the committee.

"Undoubtedly," Samuel said, beginning to get ruffled again. "I feel quite sure he has no antagonism against women or their organizations." He smiled sweetly. "Anyway, you said you could take care of yourselves while he attended to the youth of the parish."

"Of course," Mr. Jepson warned. "We oldsters would want some attention, wouldn't we Clara? Ha! Ha!" "It seems to me," Samuel said, anxious to get on with his two hour rest period. "A parish needs above all else a mature man, of good judgment. If you get sick and need help, if somebody in your parish has some serious spiritual problem you want a man with experience don't you?"

"Yes, of course," Mr. Jepson agreed reluctantly. "Still, we think we need a young man with energy. St. Comforts over at Youngstown just got a new man. He's about thirty. Fine young fellow. He certainly is making things hum. Makes thirty-five calls a day they tell me. That's what I call good salesmanship."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Samuel decided it was time to throw in a bon mot.

"It's not the quantity of calls that counts but the quality," he said smugly.

"Yes of course." Mr. Jepson agreed unconvinced.

"Are there perhaps some other men whose names you might give us. We do not wish to leave a stone unturned," Mr. Bunce said.

Samuel chewed his lip in thought, and decided all the good men he could think of were too old for the kind of thing desired at St. Enthusia. Finally he remembered Rockbottom.

"There's Rockbottom over at Smytheville. He's a good man."

"How old a man is he?," frowned Bunce.

"I guess about thirty-six," Samuel said timidly shaving a couple of years off Rockbottom's age.

"We'll look him up," Bunce said dourly.

"Well," Mr. Jepson said getting to his feet, "we won't take anymore of your time. Thanks so much. Glad to get a line on Goodwear. If you think of anyone else who is the kind of man we need, please let us know."

The committee departed in a cloud of almost visible discontent. It was plain they had reservations about men over thirty. Isabel came rushing down the hall after the front door was closed.

"Samuel," she said, "how could you. You were almost rude."

"How do you know?"

"I listened through the door; I mean the keyhole."

"Tut, tut my dear. For shame."

"I thought they were after you."

"Oh not at all. Why should they be after me. The Tribulation is a much larger parish. Besides they want a young man."

"But Samuel, you're not old," Isabel said. "They can't judge you just by your bald head."

"Thank you my dear . . . besides I'm not bald. You said yourself it's just getting a little thin."

"I know. And only on the top."

Samuel grinned and started upstairs. "I'm still going to get some rest, my dear." He hesitated five steps up. "There is something pernicious working in the Church. You'd think it was like the air corps. Men over twenty-five have to be grounded—or elected bishops."

The next day Samuel wrote a strong letter to Mr. Jepson on behalf of Father Goodwear, and sent a copy to the bishop. Three days later he sent another letter recommending four good men who were he said, "eloquent, mature men of integrity." Mr. Jepson wrote back thanking him. The committee, he said, felt that the men were a little too far toward middle age, but they would investigate them.

"It's a shame," said Samuel to Isabel at dinner, "that I ever sent Delancey Doolus to Idaho. St. Enthusia would have drooled over him."

"It wasn't Idaho, it was Nevada," answered Isabel.

The following week Samuel attended a conference on the Church School New Curriculum in a neighboring city. He came home gleeful and mischievous.

"Good evening my dear . . . how have you been all day. Isabel I've found him. The man for St. Enthusia."

"Who is he?"

"Name's Juniper or Sage or something. Don't remember. He looks like a senior at P. S. nineteen and has enough energy to pull the Broadway Limited at ninety miles an hour. He's the answer to prayer."

"Samuel," interposed Isabel sweetly. "Why are you so rhapsodic? You're not getting another curate are you?"

"No thank God. I'm going to give St. Enthusia what it wants."

"Samuel, you mustn't be vindictive," Isabel remonstrated.

"I'm not. I'm being helpful. Every parish should suffer a little adversity. It's good for its soul."

He sat down at the typewriter and began pounding the keys with almost youthful energy.

"How long has this paragon been in the ministry?," asked Isabel perching herself on the study table.

"He isn't yet," grinned Samuel diabolically. "He has one more year at seminary. But he's already an expert on Christian education. He told me so. And he's young. Gloriously young."

In three days Mr. Entwhistle received a special delivery letter from Jepson. Mr. Jepson thanked him heartily and said that the committee had seen Mr. Sage and offered him the rectorship of St. Enthusia, which he had accepted. They all looked forward to many happy years together. Samuel turned to his secretary. "Send a wire please . . . Herbert Jepson, St. Enthusia. Congratulations. Stop. Believe Sage is the man you need. Stop. Suggest diet of Pablum for first five years. Signed Entwhistle."

Miss Kissam turned toward her employer. The dawn came slowly into her grey eyes.

"Oh Mr. Entwhistle," she snickered. "You're kiddin'."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Frederic M. P. Pearse Honored By New Jersey

★ One of the unusual aspects of the convention of the diocese of New Jersey, meeting in Trenton, May 8, was the retirement of the Hon. Frederic M. P. Pearse, chancellor, who, in the terms of a resolution passed unanimously by the delegates, concluded a record of remarkable service in the Church. The testimonial is as follows:

The Honorable Frederic M. P. Pearse, chancellor of the diocese of New Jersey, is about to conclude a record of service to the Church in and through this diocese which has never been surpassed and seldom if ever equalled, taking into account the versatility of his talents employed, the number of years of his service, and the quality of that service.

He is a striking example of the very great good which can be rendered to the Church by a member of the lay priesthood of Christ, provided one has the gifts, consecration and perseverance manifested by Mr. Pearse.

Frederic M. P. Pearse is the son of the late Reverend Henry M. P. Pearse (May 8, 1843 - January 19, 1920) and Harriet B. (Hulm) Pearse. His father was ordered deacon in 1880 and ordained priest in 1882 by Bishop Frederic Dan Huntington of Central New York. After eight years of service in that diocese, he became rector of Christ Church, South Amboy, N. J., which he served with ability and devotion for twenty-five years (1888-1912), and where he was greatly beloved. At the age of seventy, he resigned that rectorship and spent the rest of his life, as health permitted, in diocesan missionary work under the archdeacon of New Jersey until his death in 1920—just four months short of 77 years.

Here is impressive proof of the fact that the good which a man does, lives after him, and is not "interred with his bones." The same ability and consecration of the father, shown in the ministerial priesthood of Christ, has been manifested in the lay priesthood of Christ by his son.

After graduating from St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., Frederic Pearse studied law and was admitted to the bar. In that profession he attained distinction as a trial lawyer, especially in the federal courts, and rendered special service to both state and nation: to the former, as secretary to the Governor of New Jersey, the late Honorable George S. Silzer, 1923-1926; and to the nation, as Assistant United States Attorney.

Parochial Service

As soon as Mr. Pearse took up residence in Metuchen, N. J., he immediately became active in the work of St. Luke's parish. He taught in the church school, he sang in the choir, he directed the choir, he served as vestryman and as a lay reader. By officiating in this latter office, the rector was always able to have a vacation with a good conscience, knowing that the worship of God was being maintained in his parish church.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

In 1907—44 years ago—Mr. Pearse began representing his parish as a delegate to the diocesan convention. At that time, St. Luke's Church, Metuchen, had only 171 communicants and annual receipts of only $2,732.46. Today, it has over 600 communicants and annual receipts of $15,000.00.

Diocesan Service

1. As a Delegate to the Diocesan Convention

Mr. Pearse's long service of 44 years as a delegate to the diocesan convention from his parish, coupled with his legal ability, gave him an unrivalled knowledge of the operations of the legislative body of this diocese, and of its constitution and canons. All of us here have seen him in action, and all of us know well how much the diocese owes to him on this score, especially as a member of the diocesan committee on constitution and canons.

2. As Secretary of the Standing Committee

Mr. Pearse was first elected a member of the standing committee of the diocese in 1927, and his service thereon has totalled 24 years.

Two years later, in 1929, the committee itself elected him their secretary. So many canonical and legal problems are involved in the work of this committee that the services of a competent lawyer are invaluable, if not indispensable. As secretary, Mr. Pearse has been its most important member for 22 years, and more because of him than of any other one member it has been able to discharge its responsibilities with wisdom, efficiency and dispatch.

3. As Chancellor of the Diocese

When the diocesan convention convened on May 7, 1935, the Bishop of New Jersey, the Rt. Rev. Dr. Paul Matthews, announced the appointment of the Hon. F. M. P. Pearse as chancellor of the diocese, and invested him with the chain of the office.

The present diocesan, the Rt. Rev. Dr. Wallace John Gardner, has reappointed Mr. Pearse with the glad consent of the standing committee each year thereafter. Mr. Pearse's service in this office has therefore totalled 16 years.

Those who have had cases before the bishop's court know how well the minds of the bishop and the chancellor have meshed in knowledge, justice and mercy.

The chancellor of the diocese is not expected to be a parish counselor, but many of the clergy, having had no parish lawyer with the requisite knowledge to turn to, have often—perhaps too often—sought counsel in their parochial problems from Chancellor Pearse. Invariably, as they can testify, he has been both kind and generous in helping them as far as he was able.

Service to the National Church

Mr. Pearse was first elected a deputy to the General Convention of 1925, and has been re-elected to every triennial Convention since, including that of 1949—making nine in all.

In 1931, he was appointed a member of the standing committee of the House of Deputies on Evangelism, and reappointed to the same committee in 1934.

In 1937 his more notable service to the National Church began as a member of the standing committee of the House of Deputies on amendments to the constitution. The importance of this committee can be readily understood when one remembers the significant statement of the late Dr. E. A. White, the distinguished expositor of our Church law:

"The General Convention legislates in ecclesiastical matters without let or hindrance, except so far as restrained by the limitations of the constitution."

Mr. Pearse was reappointed to this committee in 1940 and in every General Convention thereafter. In 1943, we were told by a very able clerical member thereof that Mr. Pearse was the ablest member on it. This was given signal recognition in 1946 when the committee elected him their chairman, and re-elected him to that office in 1949.

Chancellor Pearse's knowledge, wisdom and skill in debate have always been expressed among us without arrogance, but, on the contrary, with great good humor and with a keen sense of humor which have endeared him to us. Our admiration, respect and esteem have long been merged in affection for him. We, therefore, take this opportunity to express to him our deep appreciation for what he has done and for what he is. And we thank God for his goodness in giving to the diocese of New Jersey during these many years such an exceptional representative of the lay priesthood of Christ.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

PARISH DAY SCHOOL CONFERENCE

★ A conference on parish day schools was held at Grace Church, New York, May 19, under the auspices of the board of religious education of the diocese. Speakers were Bishop Donegan, Canon Wedel of Washington, the Rev. John Heuss, director of education of the National Council, E. Allison Grant, headmaster of Grace Church School, the Rev. John Mulligan, rector of All Angels, James Pike, chaplain at Columbia.

SWIFT CONSECRATED FOR PUERTO RICO

★ Albert E. Swift, former missionary, was consecrated bishop of Puerto Rico at Grace Cathedral, Topeka, Kansas, May 3. At the luncheon that followed Dean Day presided, and the speakers were Bishop Burton of Nassau, Bishop Ludlow of Newark, Bishop Bentley, vice-president of the National Council, Bishop Boynton, suffragan of New York, the Presiding Bishop, and the newly consecrated bishop. Bishop Swift, just 37, is one of the youngest bishops.

INDUSTRIAL SUNDAY IS OBSERVED

★ The theme of Rogation-tide found local application in the services at St. David's, Shelton, Washington, when the vicar, the Rev. J. Gergory Lee, arranged to have some of the products of local industry displayed in the church and had the lessons at Morning Prayer read by representatives of management and of labor. Members of the congregation brought symbols of their daily work and placed them on a table at the front of the nave. Special intercessions for workers in local industries were offered, and daily work was consecrated to the glory of God in a special act of dedication. The vicar in his sermon reminded the congregation that the exploitation of the land for one generation can have grave consequences for generations to come, and he commended a local farm for its intensive efforts to protect and manage the growing forests.

LAYMAN W. C. TURPIN HITS CONGRESS

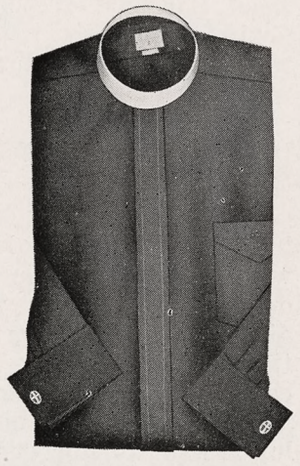
★ Congressional inaction on relief aid to famine-stricken India drew fire from William C. Turpin, Macon attorney, at the convention of the diocese of Atlanta. He said that Congressmen "put politics and technicalities before feeding starving people." A resolution on the subject was passed following Bishop Walker's demand that food aid should go to India or any other country whose people are starving.

CONNECTICUT HOLDS CONVENTION

★ The convention of Connecticut was held at Christ Church Cathedral, Hartford, May 15, with addresses by Bishop Gray, diocesan, Bishop Budlong, retired bishop who is still filling confirmation engagements, and Bishop Hatch, new suffragan, being features. Archbishop Carrington of Quebec was the speaker at the dinner sponsored by the Church Club of the diocese.

WYOMING SEEKS STATUS AS A DIOCESE

★ Bishop Hunter told delegates attending the convocation of Wyoming, meeting at the Holy Communion, Rock Springs, of steps to be taken to reach first the status of an aided diocese and then full diocesan status. The guest speaker at the banquet was Bishop Everett Jones of West Texas.



ST. LUKE'S GRADUATES LARGE CLASS

★ The largest class to enter the School of Nursing of St. Luke's Hospital in peace time, eighty-two, was graduated on May 17 at a service at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York. Grayson L. Kirk, vice-president of Columbia University, gave the address.

Such fine quality

BLACK clerical neckband SHIRTS

may soon be hard to find — at ANY price

NOW only 3 for $15.00

These superbly tailored shirts represent a remarkable value, at any time. Now, with fine broadcloth getting scarcer daily, is a wise time to examine them. Combed mercerized, high-count broadcloth. Sanforized and color fast. French cuffs. Breast pocket. Fly front. Send NO money! Simply check your size on coupon below. If you are pleased in every way, let us bill you later. Otherwise, simply return shirts within 10 days, and owe us nothing. Hopkins Co., 422 Washington Bldg., N. W., Washington, D. C.

HOPKINS CO., Dept. W55
422 Washington Bldg., N.W.
Washington, D. C.

Rush black broadcloth shirts for examination. If delighted, you may bill me at 3 for $15.00. Otherwise, I will return shirts within 10 days, and owe you nothing.

Please circle—

Neck Size:

14 14½ 15 15½ 16 16½ 17 17½

Sleeve Length

32 33 34 35

Name .....

St. & No. .....

City ..... Zone .... State.....

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

RICHARD R. EMERY IS CONSECRATED

★ Richard R. Emery was consecrated bishop of North Dakota in his parish church, St. Paul's, Minneapolis, May 15, by Bishop Sherrill with Bishop Keeler of Minnesota and Bishop Atwill, retired of North Dakota, the co-consecrators. Bishop Gesner of South Dakota and Bishop Hunter of Wyoming were presentors; Bishop Kemerer, retired suffragan of Minnesota read the epistle and Bishop McElwain, retired of Minnesota, the gospel. Attending presbyters were J. T. Baker of St. John's, Minneapolis, and Dean Barnhart of Gethsemane Cathedral, Fargo. The service was followed by a dinner and a reception.

PITTSBURGH HOLDS CONVENTION

★ The diocese of Pittsburgh held its convention May 8 at which Bishop Pardue pointed out the many ways in which the diocese is progressing: in baptisms, confirmations, communicants, church school enrollment, giving to the program. A resolution was passed requesting the bishop to form the Society for the Promotion of Industrial Missions which will have diocesan and nationwide objectives to promote trained clergy for work in industrial areas, and to promote lay education and support for the work.

NEW JERSEY HAS PLANNING BOARD

★ Following a challenge in the address of Bishop Gardner in which the industrial expansion in the state was stressed, with all that it means to the Church, the convention of New Jersey, meeting at Trenton, set up a long-term planning committee. Functioning with the diocesan foundation and the board of missions, the committee will work with diocesan officers in determining population shifts and taking full cognizance of the expected residential expansion of the Delaware valley. The diocese already has under way a campaign for $60,000 this year and a like sum in 1952 for a revolving fund for mission advance.

There was a standing tribute to the retiring chancellor, the Hon. Frederic M. P. Pearse, reported elsewhere in this issue. Jay B. Tomlinson, Bordentown, was appointed his successor.

A missionary budget for 1952 of $171,877 was adopted, with $96,964 for support of the program of the National Council.

L.I. DELEGATES BACK BISHOP DE WOLFE

★ By a standing vote, the 550 clergy and lay delegates to the convention of Long Island, meeting May 16, adopted a resolution declaring that "despite widespread misunderstanding and criticism of his exercise of godly judgment, the bishop has proven himself to be a real pastor in his staunch upholding of the canons and polity of this Church."

KLOMAN LEADS CONFERENCE

★ The Rev. Felix Kloman, rector of St. Alban's, Washington, was the leader of conferences sponsored by the social relations department of South Carolina, meeting at Charleston and Bennettsville.

CONNECTICUT HAS MASS MEETING

Bishop Horseley of Gibraltar was the preacher at a diocesan mass meeting on mission, held May 22 at Christ Church Cathedral, Hartford, sponsored by the priest's fellowship of the diocese of Connecticut.

DAY OF WITNESS IN LOS ANGELES

★ Hundreds of clergy and lay people gathered in St. Paul's Cathedral on May 12 for an all-day rally of the Day-of-Witness, sponsored by the regional committee of the American Church Union. Bishop Bloy pontificated at the opening service at which the Bishop of Gibraltar preached.

PROTEST POLICY WITH SPAIN

★ The present policy with Franco-Spain was vigorously protested in a letter to President Truman, May 15, which was signed by large numbers of people, including a number of Episcopalians. "The prospect of a U.S. military alliance with the Franco regime, and of furnishing arms to its fascist troops, must come as a shock to the American people. To people in every section of the world who fought and sacrificed heavily to wipe out fascism, this prospect will be interpreted as a promise of betrayal."

Episcopalians to sign the letter were Bishop Gooden, Bishop Mitchell, Bishop Moulton, Rev. C. B. Ackley, Rev. Shelton Bishop, Rev. Russell Bowie, Rev. Fleming James, Rev. W. H. Melish, Rev. George L. Paine, Rev. Clarence Parker, Rev. W. B. Spofford Sr., Rev. Joseph Titus, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Mrs. John F. Moors. Prof. Vida D. Scudder, Mary van Kleeck and Bishop Parsons.

● ADDRESS CHANGE

IN MAKING AN ADDRESS CHANGE, PLEASE SEND both THE OLD AND THE NEW ADDRESS AND ALLOW THREE WEEKS FOR THE CHANGE.

Publishers of Fine Books for over Four Centuries

The Scriptures in perspective

The SHORTER Oxford Bible

Edited by G. W. BRIGGS, G. B. CAIRD and NATHANIEL MICKLEM

The SHORTER OXFORD BIBLE makes it possible to read the Bible as a consecutive, coherent story. It is ideal for school and study groups. The text is printed the full width of the page, with subtitles and chapter references. It includes all the most frequently consulted passages from the Old and New Testaments and the Apocrypha skillfully edited . . . chronologically arranged . . . carefully annotated . . . with short introductions for each major section. With suggested syllabus. 480 pages. 2 maps.

$1.85 at your bookstore

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
114 Fifth Avenue, New York 11

Schools of the Church

BARD COLLEGE
Formerly St. Stephen's
A Coeducational College of Liberal Arts and Sciences
FOUNDED 1860
For catalogue and further information write to The Director of Admissions, Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, New York.

DANIEL BAKER COLLEGE
BROWNWOOD, TEXAS
Established 1889. Operated under the auspices of the Diocese of Dallas. Co-educational senior college offering B.A. and B.S. degrees. Special opportunities in teacher training, music education, business administration. The only available undergraduate course in the Episcopal Church in Church Work Training. Member: Association of Texas Colleges.
REV'D W. A. CROSS, M.A., President
REV'D L. A. HASELMAYER, Ph.D., Dean

SAINT PAUL'S POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE
LAWRENCEVILLE, VIRGINIA
Approved by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. B.S. Degree with major in Trade and Industrial Education, B.S. Degree in Home Economics Education, B.S. Degree with major in Elementary Education, B.S. Degree in Secondary Education.
EARL H. McCLENNEY, President

VOORHEES SCHOOL & JR. COLLEGE
DENMARK, S. C.
Co-educational. Accredited by State Dept. of Education of S. C. and the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges. Under the two Dioceses of S. C. and The American Church Institute for Negroes. Expenses reasonable. Limited scholarship aid for worthy students. Apply:
CECIL D. HALLIBURTON, President

Okolona College
Okolona, Mississippi
Co-educational, Private, American Church Institute for Negroes (Protestant Episcopal Church) Established 1902
High School and Junior College - Trades and Industries - Music
For information write: W. MILAN DAVIS President
Today's Training for Tomorrow's Opportunities

St. Augustine's College
RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA
1867 — 1951
Accredited Four-Year College for Negro Youth. Co-educational. Music, Pre-Medical, Health and Physical Education, High School Teacher Training, Business, Pre-Social Work, Nursing Education in co-operation with St. Agnes Hospital.
HAROLD L. TRIGG, President

SAINT HELEN'S HALL
Portland 1, Oregon
Historic Pacific Northwest Episcopal resident and day school. Founded in 1869. Co-educational pre-school. Boys admitted to Lower School through grade III. Upper School girls only.
Write for catalog.
The RT. REV. BENJAMIN DAGWELL, D.D.
President, Board of Trustees
JANE ALLEN SAXTON,
HEADMISTRESS

The Cathedral Schools
National Cathedral School for Girls
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding department, grades 7-12
KATHARINE LEE, Principal

St. Albans
The National Cathedral School for Boys
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding Department, grades 8-12
CHARLES MARTIN, Headmaster

Address:
Mt. St. Alban, Washington 16, D. C.

St. John Baptist School
FOR GIRLS
Offers College Preparatory and General courses. Music, art, outdoor sports, and a happy home life, with character building extra-curricular activities for resident and day students, under the care of the Sisters of St. John Baptist. In the country near Morristown, New Jersey. Accredited.
For catalog address Box 556
The Sister Superior, Mendham, New Jersey

St. John's MILITARY SCHOOL
Salina, Kansas
Since 1887 St. John's has been perpetuating the cultural tradition of the Church by stressing sound scholarship in Christian atmosphere. Grades 3 through 12. Fully accredited.
COL. R. L. CLEM, Rector

ST. MARY'S HALL
SECONDARY BOARDING SCHOOL
Faribault, Minnesota
Close relationship of students and faculty in residence allows for a maximum of spiritual, academic, and social growth. Preparation for leading colleges. An extensive sports program, including riding.
PHYLLIS M. NEWMAN, M.A.
Founded 1866 Headmistress

IOLANI SCHOOL
Episcopal Church School for Boys
HONOLULU 17, HAWAII
A college preparatory church school for boys. Kindergarten through twelfth grade. Established 1862. Day tuition $225 to $275. Boarding $665 - $775. Summer session. Accredited.
REV. CHARLES A. PARMITER, JR.
M.A., S.T.B., Rector

The MERRICOURT SCHOOL
(Episcopal)
A country boarding school for 40 boys & girls. Grades 1-8 (pre-preparatory). Home-like environment. Sports, extra-curricula program. 26th year. 8 weeks summer camp. For information: Visit, write, or phone 3-3209.
THE REV. M. W. WHITFORD, Hdm.
BERLIN, CONN.

ST. LUKE'S HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING
New York City
Offers a 3 year course in nursing to high school and college graduates. College graduates may be admitted with 9 months advanced credit allowance. For further information write to The Director of Nursing, St. Luke's Hospital, 421 West 113th St., New York 25, N. Y.

HARVARD SCHOOL
Diocesan School for Boys. 52nd Year. Fall term opens September 11, 1951. Grades seven through twelve. Fully Accredited. R.O.T.C. unit. For all information apply to
THE REV. W. S. CHALMERS
Headmaster
3700 Coldwater Canyon Rd.
NORTH HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

Cathedral School of St. Mary
An accredited Episcopal school for girls. Suburban New York City. Day-nursery to college. Boarding—fifth grade to college. Strong college preparatory course. Music, Dramatics, Art. Excellent sports program. Catalog on request.
MARION REID MARCH
Box W, Garden City, Long Island, N. Y.

ST. STEPHEN'S SCHOOL FOR BOYS
ALEXANDRIA, VA.
Grades 3 thru 12 (Day School). College Preparatory. Under the Church School System of the Diocese of Virginia.
Address
THE REV. EDWARD E. TATE,
Headmaster
2405 Russell Rd. ALEXANDRIA, VA.

ST. MARY'S HALL on the Delaware.
Episcopal boarding and day school for girls 8-18. Founded 1837. Thorough college preparation. Fully accredited. Separate lower school. College preparatory and general courses. Music, Art, Clubs, Sports, Dramatics. Near New York and Philadelphia. Catalogue.
FLORENCE LUKENS NEWBOLD
Headmistress
Burlington, New Jersey

DeVEAUX SCHOOL
Niagara Falls, New York
FOUNDED 1852
The Church School in the Diocese of Western New York. College preparatory for boys. Representative form of student government. Small classes. Reasonable charges. Grades 7 through 12.
For information address The Headmaster.

The Church Home and Hospital
SCHOOL OF NURSING
Baltimore 31, Maryland
A three year course of nursing. Classes enter August and September. Scholarships available to well qualified high school graduates.
Apply to Director of Nursing

ST. AGNES SCHOOL
An Episcopal Country Day and Boarding School for Girls
Excellent College Preparatory record. Special courses arranged for girls not contemplating college. Day pupils range from Kindergarten to College Entrance. Boarders from Grade 8 to College Entrance.
MISS BLANCHE PITTMAN, Principal
Albany New York

HOWE MILITARY SCHOOL
Thorough Academic Training in a Spiritual Environment. R.O.T.C. Accredited college preparatory, business courses. Junior School. Small classes. Every boy participates in sports. Balanced program. Episcopal. Established 1884. Summer Camp, boys grammar school age. Catalogue.
COL. B. B. BOUTON
13 Academy Place, Howe, Indiana

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

PEOPLE OF THE CHURCH

CLERGY CHANGES:

JOSEPH E. LIVINGSTON, assistant at the navy chapel, Long Beach, Cal., is now vicar of the Ascension, Tujunga, Cal.

WALTER C. MIDDLETON, formerly rector of Trinity, Watertown, N. Y., is now vicar of St. Peter's, Del Mar, Cal.

WILLIAM F. LICHT, formerly vicar of Elizabeth's Mission, San Diego, Cal., is now vicar of St. Matthew's, Baldwin Park, Cal.

ARNOLD F. MOULTON, formerly in charge of Trinity, Whitefish, Mont., and associated missions, is now assistant at St. Paul's, Peoria, Ill.

NEWTON C. WILBUR, formerly rector of St. John's, Bellvue, Ky., is now rector of the Transfiguration, Washington, D. C.

MALCOLM RIKER, graduate of Church Divinity School of the Pacific, becomes rector of St. Michael's, LaMarque, Texas, June 15.

W. NORTHEY JONES, said to be the oldest active clergyman in the Anglican Communion (85), has resigned charge of Trinity, Jasper, Texas, to return to his home in Conn.

GEORGE ESTES, who graduates in June from the theological seminary of the University of the South, will take charge of Trinity, Jasper, Texas, and Christ Church, San Augustine.

STANLEY B. SMITH, formerly associate rector at Grace Church, Medford, Mass., is now on the staff of Christ Church, Cincinnati.

JOHN M. GROTON, for reasons of health, has relinquished charge of the Church of the Holy Spirit, Shannock, R. I. and St. Thomas', Alton.

JOHN E. WINSLOW, formerly rector of Trinity, Van Buren, Ark., is now rector at Senora, Texas.

BRUCE W. LEFEBRE, assistant rector at St. Luke's, Atlanta, Ga., becomes rector of Holy Innocents, Henderson, N. C., July 1.

JOHN R. McGRORY, rector of All Saints, Leonia, N. J., becomes rector of St. Paul's, Bound Brook, N. J., July 1.

THOMAS A. M. BARNETT, instructor at Philadelphia Divinity School, has accepted the chair of O. T. literature at Wycliffe College, Toronto.

ORDINATIONS:

ROBERT C. RUSACK was ordained deacon by Bishop Lawrence of W. Mass., acting for the ecclesiastical authority of Utah, at the Reconciliation, Webster, Mass. He is in charge of St. James, Deer Lodge, and St. Andrew's, Philipsburg, Mont.

MICHAEL J. FRANCIS, former R. C. priest, is to be ordained in June by Bishop Bloy of Los Angeles and will be assigned to the staff of the city mission society.

DEATHS:

COURTENAY BARBER, 74, an outstanding layman of the diocese of Chicago, died May 4, after a brief illness. See Notes and Comments.

ARTHUR POE, 72, warden of St. John's, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, died April 15 of a heart attack. He was a member of the board of the diocese and active in many Church activities.

PAUL R. R. REINHARDT, 61, rector of St. James, Prospect Park, Pa., died May 11.

EDWIN S. POTTER JR., 25, communicant of All Saints, Santa Barbara, Cal., was one of the 22 killed when a plane crashed April 2. He was a teacher in the Church school and his wife is secretary to the rector of the parish, the Rev. George J. Hall.

FOR SALE

RESIDENCE of Bishop Littell in Cambridge, New York; in foothills of Green Mountains, 45 miles N.E. of Albany; 22 from Bennington, 26 from Saratoga Springs. Automatic oil furnace heats 7 rooms winter; 3 extra bedrooms summer. Two bath rooms: Automatic hot water. ½ acre rear garden lot; Garage. Lawn shade trees: Unrestricted S. view. Episcopal Church: Hospital: School. Hunting and Fishing facilities. Nearby lakes. Thro' trains daily New York City, (Eagle Bridge Station, 5M). Bus Service twice daily Cambridge-Troy. House excellent repair: Presently priced $12,000 plus agent's commission. Apply: Jerome E. Wright, Cambridge, Washington County, New York.

Rector of sound Churchmanship desires a Parish preferably in the Southern States. Interested in youth work. Start at $4,000.00 and adequate Rectory. Reply Box A, THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Penna.

SMOKE SIGNALS

Unique, bi-monthly publication on the American Indians—tells the dramatic story, past and present, in compact, informative stories and articles—$1.50 a year. The Indian Association of America, Inc., 211 Ward Avenue, Staten Island 4, New York.

BEAVERBROOK
POCONO PINES, PA.

Enjoy Real Fun, Gay Informality, Congenial Companions at this beautiful 2000 acre estate "Atop the Poconos." All Sports and Entertainment facilities. Lake. Beach. Riding. Tennis. Swimming. Boats and Canoes. Latest movies. Country Dances. You'll like the fine Christian fellowship. Protestant Services. $38 Weekly.
N. Y. Office, 11 W. 42nd St. (Room 1274)
"A CAMP FOR ADULTS ONLY" LO 5-1550

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER
FABRICS + WINDOWS
EST. 1917

Everything for the Episcopal Church
Ammidon & Company
HORACE L. VARIAN
31 S. Frederick St. Baltimore 2, Md.

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS
Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS
Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.
SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

Exquisite
IRISH LINENS
BY THE YARD
From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States, I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values; unsurpassed quality, imported direct from Ireland. Also transfer patterns, linen tape, and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 3 inches at 75c, 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.00.
MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

THE BISHOP WHITE
PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833
Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.
PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)
Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

FINEST PURE IRISH LINEN
Buy linen now from complete stocks personally selected in Ireland. Also Cassock Cloth, Vestment patterns. Embdy. designs and instruction books.
Samples Free
MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
BOX 386 CHILLICOTHE, MO.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important

DUBOSE MURPHY
Rector at Tuscaloosa, Ala.

The editorial "Peace in our time" (Apr. 26) is excellent but incomplete. The reason why war is now going on is that the North Koreans, first, and the Chinese, second, flouted the charter of the UN and resorted to armed conflict. Friends of theirs have indeed spoken much about peace. Let those friends devote their efforts to those who broke the peace. Let them persuade the N. Koreans and the Chinese to recognize the great objectives of the UN and submit to the moral authority of its charter. Then there will be peace.

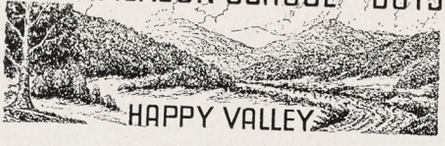
ANSWER: In regard to the People's Government of China and the UN we refer readers to the article by Helen Mears, an authority on the Far East, in our issue of May 3.

GEORG ALMO
Minister to Deaf in Ohio

Although this reader appreciates The Witness' stand, in matters vital to our Church, our country, free speech, free press, etc., it, nevertheless, is hard to swallow all that angle Mr. James F. Lincoln introduced into The Witness' "Backfire" (vol. XXXIV, No. 13). Having approached the whole matter thoughtfully, seriously, and with sincerity, the approaching conclusion is: all that Mr. Lincoln suggested or hinted are questionable. Lasting peace (on earth) can be won, but only when the world has a complete change of heart and practices brotherhood, in its truest sense of the word.

J. FRED PARISH
Layman and Attorney, Newport, Ark.

Your editorial on the "American Mikado" was timely, well conceived and entirely true to the facts as I see them. That is perhaps why I liked it. Noticing several eminent contributors in Backfire, I hasten to send you this, my contribution to the pro side of the controversy.



I have been a reader of The Witness for three years and as an Episcopalian I conceive it to be more expressive of what the general views of the Church should be than any other periodical. If you are considered to be "toward the left," then that is what I also would be.

It is my observation that those who write in behalf of the doughty General do not approve of anything that President Truman does. Why should they be expected to approve of removing old "Mac" as Clergyman Luisa calls him. I shouldn't be surprised to learn that Fr. Luisa believes in McCarthyism as well as MacArthurism.

As a salesman for Chiang Kai-shek and the China Lobby, Old Mac is a real China Hand. His charm, suavity and grace of manner make him an appealing and sometimes plausible figure, particularly to the gullible. But it should be remembered, and never for an instant doubted, that the quality of the goods he is selling is way below par.

If this were the age of converting the "heathen chinee" and putting him to work in foreign owned sweat shops then Old Mac would be our man; since it is not why do we not just let him "fade away in the twilight of his life with neither rancor nor bitterness."

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL
A Coeducational Parish Day School
Founded 1894. Preparing for leading secondary schools through sound academic training based upon Christian principles. Kindergarten thru 8th grade. Special emphasis on French, Latin. Complete academic & psychological testing program. Music, dramatics, arts & crafts, sports.
E. A. GRANT, Headmaster
86-88 Fourth Ave., N. Y. 3 GR 7-5285

THE PATTERSON SCHOOL for BOYS

Episcopal School in Blue Ridge Mountains of Western No. Carolina. Accredited. Grades 6-12. Gymnasium, sports, 42nd year. 1300-acre estate. Board and tuition, moderate.
GEORGE F. WIESE, Supt.
COLLEGE PREPARATORY Legerwood, N. C. HEALTH EDUCATION CHARACTER BUILDING

FORK UNION MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

SCHOOLS

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof buildings.
REV. EDRIC A. WELD, Rector
Box W Plymouth, N. H.

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

The Hannah More Academy
Est. 1832, Episcopal school for girls, grades 7-12. Outstanding preparation for leading colleges, also General Academic Course, Music, Art, Athletics and Riding carefully supervised. Eighteen miles northwest of Baltimore. Moderate rates. Catalogue.
ELIZABETH N. HARVEY, M.A.
Headmistress, Reisterstown, Md.

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. City 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE-MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

FACULTY INSTITUTES

PROVINCES I, II, III

June 22-29

Hamilton College

Clinton, N. Y.

Cost $21

Speakers: The Rev. Albert T. Mollegen of the Virginia Theological Seminary on Christianity in Liturgy and Life. The Rev. W. Norman Pittenger of The General Theological Seminary on Man's Frustration and Christian Conviction. The Rev. H. B. Cannon and the Rev. James A. Pike on Truth and Error in the Cult of Objectivity.

Registrar: The Rev. James Rockwell, 443 Wellington Ave., Rochester 11, N. Y.

PROVINCES V, VI, Upper VII

June 17-22

DeKoven Foundation

Racine, Wis.

Cost $17.50

Speakers: The Very Rev. William H. Nes of Nashotah House on Christian Vocation in Teaching and Scholarship. Professor Ursula M. Niebuhr of Barnard College on God as Creator and Redeemer: The Gospel in Relation to Culture and Society.

Registrar: Ruth Morrison, Milwaukee-Downer College, Milwaukee 11, Wis.

PROVINCES VII and VIII

June 18-25

Church Conference Center

Prescott, Ariz.

Cost $21

Speakers: The Rev. George Morrel, Trinity Church, Redlands, Calif., on Christian Perspective for a World in Chaos. The Rev. Joseph F. Fletcher of the Episcopal Theological School on Social Implications of Christian Theology. Since this is a Conference Center, families are invited as well.

Registrar: The Rev. John W. Ellison, St. Paul's Church, Tucson, Ariz.

Although these Faculty Institutes are sponsored by specific Provinces, all are open to any faculty throughout the Church. Write registrars for further information.

Sponsored by:

The National Council Division of College Work

The Church Society for College Work

Provincial and Diocesan Commissions of College Work

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE Witness
10¢ A COPY
May 31, 1951

ST. MARY'S HALL, BURLINGTON

The Chapel is the Center of School Life

CUSHIONED PEWS BY IRVING P. JOHNSON

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY

Sundays: 8, 9, 11 Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4.

Weekdays: 7:30, 8 (and 9 Holy Days except Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 8:30, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer. Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.

Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector

Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
4:30 Vesper Service — Music
Weekdays: Tues.-Thurs., Prayers—12:30.
Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C.—11:45
Fri., Organ Recital—12:30.

THE HEAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street

Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.

Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10 a. m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a. m.
Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 11 a. m.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street

Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes Jr., Rector

8 a. m. and 9 a. m., Holy Communion.
11 a. m., Morning Service and Sermon.
Weekdays: Holy Communion Wednesday at 8 a. m.
Thursdays and Saints' Days at 10:30 a. m.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK

Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector

Sunday: 8 a. m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a. m., Church School; 11 a. m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p. m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a. m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street

Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector

Sundays: 8 a. m., Holy Communion; 11 a. m., Morning Prayer—1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a. m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a. m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK

Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector

Sundays: 8 a. m., Holy Communion; 11 a. m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p. m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a. m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY

The Rev. Grieg Taber

Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High).
Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY

The Rev. James A. Paul, Vicar

Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V

Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail

The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson

Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a. m., 4:00 and 7:30 p. m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK

The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean; Rev. Leslie D. Hallett; Rev. Mitchell Haddad

Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon.
Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.

The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D., Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist

Sunday: 9 and 11 a. m., 7:30 p. m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p. m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p. m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO

Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon

Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 — 4:30 p. m. recitals.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.

Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a. m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a. m., Morning Prayer; 8 p. m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat. 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE

Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain

Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a. m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a. m.
Thursday, 7:30 a. m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI

Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector

Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a. m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Monument Circle Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon

Sun.: H.C. 8, 12:15; 11, 1st S. Family, 9:30; M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.

Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean

Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO

Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.

Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Week-day, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

Rev. Payton Randolph Williams

7:30 a. m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p. m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a. m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education

Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p. m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p. m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"

Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant

Sunday Services: 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH

Rev. William W. Lumpkin, Rector; Rev. Eugene M. Chapman; Rev. E. Laurence Baxter.

Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698

Rev. James R. MacColl, 3rd, Rector

Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 21 The WITNESS MAY 31, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 135 LIBERTY ST., NEW YORK 6, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Church Work in Middle East Develops in Importance

Promises To Be Center of International Conflicts in the Days Ahead

★ The attention given this year to study of Christian work in the Middle East, and the fact that the Episcopal Church has no jurisdiction in that area, has brought out a number of queries as to the work of the Anglican communion. In brief outline, five Anglican dioceses or jurisdictions may be listed: North Africa, Egypt, Iran, Jerusalem, Gibraltar. Of these, the most familiar to the American reader and the one with which American Church people have the most direct contact is Jerusalem or, more descriptively, Israel, Jordan, Syria, Lebanon, Cyprus, Iraq, and the western shore of the Persian Gulf.

The real "Bishop of Jerusalem" is the Eastern Orthodox patriarch, whose predecessors have come down from the days of St. James. About 110 years ago, for a number of reasons it seemed wise to have a Church of England bishop in Jerusalem, to look after Church people among the English and American residents, to aid and cooperate with the impoverished Eastern Church, and to do missionary work among Moslems and Jews. So the Anglican title is not Bishop of but Bishop in Jerusalem. His work is supported by the Anglican communion all over the world. Each year the Episcopal Church contributes chiefly through the Good Friday offering from many parishes.

Iran—Persia—is a Church of England diocese, organized in 1912. It is understaffed and not strong in numbers. As it is in direct contact with Islam, it has a hard problem and faces many opportunities it cannot meet with its present staff. The bishop is the bishop in Iran as this area, too, should be a field of the Eastern Church. Long centuries of Moslem rule have reduced the Eastern Church to pitiful dimensions, which the past thirty years of wars, depressions, and other disturbances have not helped.

Part of the Church of England's work is in the oil fields, said to be the richest single field in existence. Americans have been ministered to, as well as British and the native people. A hospital at Shiraz reaches out to surrounding villages through visits by members of the staff, providing for poverty-stricken villagers the only medical help available. Government regulations have made difficulties for the schools although recent reports have stated that the present Shah has "extremely liberal ideas for the reconstruction of his country" and has "strong men with western leanings" in his cabinet. The Episcopal Church through its fund for world relief in 1950 made a contribution to this diocese.

North Africa is another Church of England diocese, one of thirty-four in Africa. It was set off in 1936 from the huge old diocese of Sierra Leone (organized in 1853). In area, North Africa includes French and Spanish Morocco, Tunisia, Algeria, Tangier and the Canary Islands. Its work is chiefly the care of British and other English-speaking residents, and, in addition to this, one of the Church of England missionary societies, Bible Churchmen's Missionary Society, maintains at least one missionary in French Morocco.

Egypt and the Sudan was an old Church of England jurisdiction. Work has gone on there since the 1880's. In 1905 it was an archdeaconry of the bishop in Jerusalem. In 1920 the diocese of Egypt and the Sudan was organized, 3,000 miles in length, and in 1945 this was divided into two. In Egypt the work is almost wholly among Moslems, plus the care of English residents. The Sudan diocese, not strictly in the Middle East, has Moslems and also, in the south, some extremely primitive pagan tribes. The Anglican communion in Egypt and also in North Africa tries to have helpful contacts with the ancient native Coptic Church, another sufferer in the long Moslem centuries.

The Anglican bishop in Gibraltar has perhaps the most varied jurisdiction in the Church. He travels from the shores of Portugal to the Black Sea. Again, since all these countries (except Gibraltar itself) have their own bishops, Eastern or Roman, the Anglican bishop does not intrude and is not a bishop of those countries, but has for his responsibility the care of British and other English-speaking residents, and whatever help and cooperation he can give to the various branches of the Eastern Church. He ministers, or his chaplains do, to American officials, consuls and others, and the mission to seamen, which is something like the American Seamen's Church Institute, serves many Americans. The bishop of Gibraltar, Cecil Douglas Horsley, arrived in the United States the middle of April to stay through May.

The ancient Church of Greece of course has had its own bishops from the earliest days, just as Jerusalem has had, but in Greece no need has been felt to have an Anglican bishop. Greece has been hard hit in recent years, and American Church people have been glad to help the Greek Church, partly through contributions for material relief, and partly through scholarship aid to Greek seminary students.

This spring the Greek Church is celebrating the 1900th anniversary of the arrival of St. Paul. Directly after his visit to the United States the bishop of Gibraltar is flying to Athens to take part in this observance.

CENTRAL NEW YORK YOUTH MEET

★ Bishop Walter M. Higley, suffragan, was the principal speaker at the annual meeting of young people of the diocese of Central New York, meeting May 18-19 at St. Paul's, Syracuse. Various phases of work in the diocese were presented by a number of speakers.

CAMP CHICKAGAMI, Diocese of Michigan, is a place where boys always have fun

LAYMEN'S TRAINING PROGRAM

★ Robert D. Jordan, director of promotion of the National Council, has sent a communication to bishops and promotion chairmen of dioceses, giving plans for the laymen's training program for this year. Last year instructors spent almost all their time on the program of the Council. This year Saturday afternoon and evening will be devoted to the national work with Sunday morning devoted to work in the diocese. The presentation last year took 45 minutes, which many thought too long, so this year it will be 30 minutes, equally divided between the two phases of the work, national and diocesan.

Mr. Jordan reports that the greatest single criticism last year was the word for word reading of the manuscript; this year "we shall insist that the trainee either deliver his message from notes or that he know his message so well that he gives the appearance of speaking rather than reading."

The diocesan part of the training conference is to be prepared between now and September 1, with instructors assigned to the dioceses in July. The conference for their instruction will be held at Seabury House, Sept. 7-9. Diocesan training conferences will be help Sept. 22-Oct. 14, with October 21 the opening date for parish presentations.

NO WOMEN ALLOWED ON VESTRIES

★ There will be no women on vestries in the diocese of Western New York, since a resolution making them eligible was overwhelmingly defeated at the convention meeting May 21 at Lockport.

CHURCHMEN ASKED TO TITHE

★ A resolution asking parishioners to give ten percent of their income to the Church "and for other Christian causes" was adopted by the convention of the diocese of Western Mass., meeting May 18 at Springfield. The action of the 150 delegates followed a plea by Bishop Lawrence for a return of the ancient practice. The convention also went on record as opposing loyalty oaths but one opposing universal military training was defeated.

GENERAL CONVENTION PREPARATIONS

★ General Convention, 1952, is a long way off but nevertheless the chairman of the arrangements committee for the diocese of Mass., the Rev. Gardiner M. Day, was able to report definite plans to the convention of the diocese meeting this month. It will open with a communion service for bishops and deputies in Trinity, Boston, Sept. 8th, with the opening service at 10:30 that day in the Boston Garden. Bishops will convene that afternoon in Horticultural Hall, and the Deputies in Symphony Hall. The official reception will be held that evening at the Museum of Fine Arts.

Joint sessions of both Houses, together with the Auxiliary, will be held Sept. 9 and 10 from 10 to 1 for the report of the National Council. The evening of the 9th the main attraction will be a mass meeting on missions at Tremont Temple. On the evening of the 11th there will be a mass meeting on the ecumenical movement.

The youth convention will be held at nearby Tufts College, Sept. 11-14, with their service at Trinity, Boston, the evening of the 13th. An added attraction at this Convention will be a service in recognition of the children's offering for missions which will be held at Trinity the afternoon of the 14th.

Mr. Day said that requests for exhibit space had been received from a number of Church affiliated organizations, and that they, and possibly commercial firms catering to the Church, would be assigned space in the order of application.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

JAPAN UNIVERSITY GETS SUPPORT

★ The diocese of Southern Ohio is making an all-out effort to raise funds in the ten million dollar campaign for the International Christian University in Japan. As of May 18, somewhat over $21,000 had been raised, according to the chairman of the diocesan committee, the Rev. Luther Tucker. He likewise stresses that the diocese contributes its full share to the increased budget of the National Council.

SCOUT TROOP VISITS OTTAWA

★ Every boy in the troop of Scouts at St. Mark's, Syracuse, N. Y., forty in all, went to Ottawa, Canada, over a recent weekend where they were guests of a troop of that city. Arrangements had been made a year ago at the national jamboree at Valley Forge, Pa., when leaders of the Syracuse troop met the Canadian scouts. In Ottawa there was a sight-seeing tour, a party and other activities. Six adults who comprise the committee for the Syracuse troop made the trip.

JAMES A. PAUL MADE DEAN

★ The Rev. James A. Paul, rector of Holy Trinity, New York, was elected dean of the convocation of Manhattan at a meeting held at St. George's. The Rev. John A. Bell, rector of the Incarnation, was the dinner speaker in which he told of improvements in the Manhattan parish situation which are planned for the near future. Bishop Donegan conducted the prayer service and the Rev. Louis W. Pitt, rector of Grace Church, presided at the business meeting.

NEW DISTRICT REPORTS

★ The first annual report has been received from the new diocese of Southwestern Brazil whose bishop, Egmont M. Krischke, took office in March, 1951. He has visited each of the twenty-two parishes and missions and reports that there are "large gates of opportunity being opened in many a place but our shortage of clergy and lay workers puts our Church on unequal terms with the great challenge of this hour." He has confirmed 152, received one candidate and one postulant, ordained one deacon and another deacon and priest. Parishes and missions have accepted increased quotas.

He adds that although Santa Maria, where he lives, is a Roman Catholic stronghold with two bishops, he "has been invited by the town authorities to every public ceremony and festival."

The three dioceses of Brazil have their own "national council" and Bishop Krischke, as chairman of the department of education, has made several trips throughout the three jurisdictions.

SUMMER CONFERENCE ON CHURCH MUSIC

★ A school of church music, designed primarily for organists and choirmasters of the south, will be held at the conference center at Monteagle, Tenn., July 17-27, with Bishop Theodore N. Barth, coadjutor of Tennessee, in charge. The faculty is composed of outstanding men, among them the Rev. Massey H. Shepherd Jr., Witness columnist and professor at the Episcopal Theological School.

THEODORE SERGWICK IS DEAD

★ The Rev. Theodore Sedgwick, 87, for more than forty years a clergyman of the diocese of New York, died at Sharon, Conn., May 22. He was rector of Calvary, New York, from 1911 to 1924, then rector of St. Andrew's, Yonkers, until 1930. He then was rector of St. Paul's, Rome, Italy, until his retirement in 1934.

DEACONESS THOMPSON OF ALASKA

★ Deaconess Kathleen Thompson of Alaska, who went to that field in 1927, died there April 26, just four days before she was to have retired. Last fall a serious illness was followed by an operation in Seattle but she was able to return to St. Mark's, Nenana, hoping to carry on her work but it proved impossible. Her first post was at Allakaket where she and a missionary nurse were the only residents who were not Indian or Eskimo.

PAUL RUSCH RETURNS TO JAPAN

★ Paul Rusch left San Francisco on May 22 to return to the Kiyocato project, an experiment in cooperative Christianity which is sponsored by the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. As director of the work, he has been in the States for four months on a fund raising tour. He carried back 36 tons of clothing, a tractor, a bull and four heifers.

SILAS J. HIRTE is in charge of St. Thomas' Mission for the Deaf in St. Louis

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EDITORIALS

Town and Country

AT the recent national conference on Episcopal town and country work the startling statistic was produced that out of the more than 7,000 congregations of the Church in the United States approximately 3,700 of them are in communities under 10,000 population, or in what is classified as the town and country work of the Church. It is this more than fifty per cent of the parishes and missions of the Church and the people to be ministered to from these bases, that is the special concern of those persons who compose the membership of the Rural Worker's Fellowship. Under the critical shortage of clergy, many of these congregations are without a regular pastor and the people in the area surrounding these units of the Church's work are without a shepherd. Statistics are not available as to the extent of the stretch-out in the rural work, wherein one clergyman is required to minister to three or more congregations. Despite recent relatively large graduating classes from the seminaries the shortage of clergy for town and country congregations remains acute. Current figures indicate that there are not less than 450 vacancies in the clergy ranks.

The 1950 federal census reports an increase of more than 18 million persons in the United States during the past ten years. In the corresponding decade Episcopal Church active clergy serving in the domestic field have had a net increase, taking into account number of clergy on pension, of only 158. In our failure to produce more clergy we are failing to meet both the needs of the people and the opportunity of the Church. A net gain of only 16 clergy per year is not enough to keep pace with the demand on the Church both to intensify and extend the Christian service which our Church must fulfill if we are to carry our fair load of Christian witness and evangelism. There is immediate and insistent need that the number of candidates for the ministry be increased and that adequate professional training be provided for them.

Commission Report

AWARE of this need, the joint commission on rural work in its report to General Convention in 1946 stated, "It is our considered judgment that the Church must set itself to increase our number of active clergy from the static or declining number of approximately 6,000 to a minimum of 7,000 active clergy by 1960 . . . Even if the enrollment in our seminaries will soon be to full capacity, it is a short-sighted and futile policy to take satisfaction in the fact that the annual capacity output of our seminaries, approximately 200 graduates per year, will be adequate for replacement and normal growth. Even with the addition to our ministry of a large number of clergy professionally trained in theological schools of other Church bodies, there is need for more than doubling the present output of our seminaries without sacrificing quality for quantity. If the Church is to provide a sustained pastoral ministry to the growing national population, characterized by the migrancy of families, we must have many more clergy to meet the needs of the individual, the family and the community. Only through greatly increased numbers of qualified leaders can we fulfill our obligation."

To meet the need of the Church, as stated by the rural commission and as is obvious to all who observe the need in American life for a more vigorous and witnessing Church, the annual net gain of active clergy during the current decade must be at least 100 men rather than the pathetically small increase of each year of the past decade.

Encouraging Signs

IT is encouraging to note that one of the major emphases both in national Church policy and in seminary training is increased quantity and improved quality of men and women for the rural ministry. More than 200 men and women in

"QUOTES"

IT is said that the Church's field is the world. That is true, but the Church's immediate field is its community, its local world bounded by the lines of geography, face-to-face contacts, interests, and mutual activities. No Church can cultivate the seeds of the kingdom of God in the garden of the world unless it learns how to plant, cultivate, and harvest in the near-at-hand field, the community. It is not serving the community first and the world last, but serving both, recognizing that the same kind of ministry is applicable in the near as in the far field. The community stands in relation to the Church much as the first wave circles are to a stone thrown into the water. The enlarging circles reaching to the very shores of the lake are symbolic of the church reaching into all the world.

MARK RICH

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Church training were enrolled in the several rural institutes and training projects of the Church last summer, with at least that number about to begin this special training this year. Also, it is significant that courses on town and country Church work are increasingly a part of the seminary curricula.

In this time of increased need for clergy it is the small churches that suffer first and longest for want of qualified leadership. This intensification of concern for adequate rural Church leadership is timely. But regardless of how improved the total training program for the rural ministry becomes, the basic need of the Church as a whole for more leadership remains untouched so long as the nation's population increased by 18 million persons and the active ministry increased by only 158 ordained men.

Notes and Comments

ROMAN CATHOLICS, according to a little known book called "The Catholic Voice" edited by Theodore J. Vittoria, are quite dissatisfied with the power of their own press. This may be a surprise to Protestants, but as the Catholic critics say: "There is no Catholic daily because there aren't enough daily Catholics . . . Therefore our churches are jammed to the doors—but our newspapers and magazines and books lie unread."

Roland E. Wolseley, writing in The Christian Century, shows the weakness of both the Roman Catholic and Protestant press. "Religious journalism in the United States, whatever the group supporting it, is weak in the face of a teeming secular press. Secular dailies now reach nearly 54 million every day except Sunday, and on Sunday they reach 46 million. Add 15 million for the secular weeklies. Monthly magazines distribute 100 million copies of each issue, and weeklies and quarterlies add many millions more. The Reader's Digest alone is read by as many Americans as attend church; it is the church for many citizens, serving—as John Bainbridge remarked in his somewhat sarcastic study of it, 'The Little Wonder'—as the modern Sunday school for adults."

WE read with considerable interest the results of "This Week's" efforts to obtain a new name for capitalism. Conscious that Russia uses "capitalism" as a swear word against this country the editors sought a new word. They received more than 12,000 replies. Although "Americanism" and "Individualism" ran high among the suggestions, there were some terms with Christian implication. Among the suggestions were: Christian Democracy, Christian Economy, Christocracy, Dynamic U. S. Democracy, People's Capitalism, and Our Way.

WE have been re-reading G. K. Chesterton. We have not done this since our college days when we were studying the masters of the essay. In "Orthodoxy" we came across a sentence, the implication of which we must have missed in the college days: "Thoroughly worldly people never understand even the world; they rely altogether on a few cynical maxims which are not true."

Cushioned Pews

BY

IRVING P. JOHNSON

Founder and First Editor of The Witness

WE are always thanking God because of the sins we do not commit, whereas God is ever testing us for the things that we are trying to do.

What the Church needs is those who serve, and what the Church gets is men who do not drink nor swear.

Christ came among us as one who served, and we go among men as those who have never disgraced ourselves.

Respectability is one thing and service is another, and the one cannot take the place of the other.

A servant may be perfectly respectable and absolutely worthless to us, for we do not advertise for ornaments but for workers.

For after all, character is a by-produce of service, not to be sought directly but rather to be obtained indirectly.

If you want to show your love for Christ, do something in his name and your love will begin to have a reality.

You are not serving a definition of God, but a master of men, and he expects you to serve.

The problem which confronts the Church is, "How can we transform a cushioned pew into a working bench?"

If we succeed we must reverse a great deal that has become custom in our comfortable parochial lounge rooms.

In the first place the Church must not become a club with a recognized social status and the atmosphere of material prosperity.

The end does not justify the means, and an expensive program does not excuse us for adopting secular standards.

I do not know who invented the cushioned pew and the parquet circle in our modern churches.

When a man selects the best seats in the sanctuary because he can afford to pay for them, he forgets that God is not pleased that he should choose the higher seats.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Give Much, Ask Little

LET him, if he be a Christian, give the largest subscription and then, because it is hard for a rich man to enter the Kingdom of Heaven, take the lowest seat.

He doesn't go to God's house for his own comfort but for sacrifice.

Sacrifice is a hard thing for him to make.

In this world he has the good things; then in God's house let him choose the hard things.

Why not? For it would seem to be what his master would have done.

At least that is what he indicated when he marked those who chose the higher seats.

If a prosperous man desires to make his religion real let him give much and ask little.

My experience is that our wealthy members have been in the habit of giving little comparatively and demanding much relatively, to their spiritual vision. That is why the Episcopal Church has such well-appointed parish churches and such poorly supported charitable institutions.

Better have wicker chairs and well-equipped hospitals than cushioned pews and poorly supported institutions.

The Early Service

IN the next place let us appraise our service list. The early celebration of the holy communion is the most devotional service that we have and therefore the poorest attended. It is in the quiet of the early morning; it has no mixed appeal. We go because we would be with Christ; not to hear a preacher, nor a choir, nor to be seen of men. We go purely and solely to give ourselves, our souls and bodies to be a holy and living sacrifice to God which is our reasonable service. We go that we may dwell in Christ and he in us.

The effort to go is a sacrifice; the effect of going is his blessing.

The hour of eleven is the hour that is regarded as sacrosanct for worship on Sunday.

It has become so by use.

It is the time when we can get "those without" to come, so with a strange inconsistency we demand that it shall be used as a service for "those within."

Our missionary instinct is made secondary to our religious selfishness.

We want a service that we will enjoy at that time so we have either Morning Prayer or a High Celebration.

Neither of these services appeals to those without.

The one is tedious; the other by its nature is for Christians only.

Of course, if we could have a time after the sermon when non-Christians could retire, the Eucharist might be profitably used.

But no! If we do that, then Christians also join the procession and turn their backs on Christ's promised presence there.

Surely it is better taste for a guest to push back his chair and leave his host and guests in the middle of the meal when he has had enough, than for a Christian to bolt from the Lord's Supper.

The intolerable rudeness of modern Christians to the living Christ can be excused only on the ground of their invincible ignorance of good manners.

But the very fact that outsiders can be induced to come to church at eleven ought to make Christians keen to have a service which is adapted to the needs of those who are ignorant of the Church's ways, and yet which reflects the rich devotion of our inheritance.

In some way the General Convention should provide a service for eleven o'clock, other than Morning Prayer which is too long and complicated, and other than the Eucharist unless it can designate the place at which the unbaptized and excommunicate may retire.

Preaching

AND in the third place, preaching has to undergo some sort of a major operation.

I do not see how a young man, trained in an academic atmosphere, full of half-digested theories and without any real experience, can preach the gospel acceptably to those whose problems are in the kitchen and the shop.

Of course they could and would if they realized that they were to know Christ and him crucified in their own spiritual combat, and then preach out of their own experience.

But your young preacher is full of definitions of God, and opinions about social service, and ideas about religious education, and panaceas for reforming secular relations and theories of spiritual philosophy; so that the man on the street is neither interested nor profited.

For your tyro begins to preach where his theological education left off and is entirely oblivious of the fact that his congregation never has completed a theological training. And I do not see after he begins to preach, just when and how he is going to learn what to preach and how to do it.

The world is hungry for the gospel of Christ but they are not interested in theological essays, even though the English be faultless and the ethics commendable.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The Christian faith needs a new emphasis in preaching and in practice.

We need to learn that we are not above our master; that he came not to be ministered unto but to minister; and that we go to church to forget self and to practice his presence.

Money selfishness is mean but not any meaner than religious selfishness.

The grace of Christ is like the sunlight which brings fertility to the field which has been properly prepared and therefore is in a receptive state. The same sunlight will bake the very next field into hard unproductiveness.

It is not enough to let the sunlight in—the ground must be broken up by penitence and irrigated by the waters of life, if the seed sown is to bring forth fruit.

Let us stop fooling ourselves with our religious fancies.

Unless we are willing to lift up our hearts unto the Lord we must not expect his grace to be sufficient for us.

Church-going is not the end of Christian practice but the beginning of Christian service.

We will really give thanks unto the Lord, when we carry into the house of God, the spirit which he desires. And that spirit is not "What can I get out of this service?" but "What can I give to God through this service?"

It is equally true of church-going as of everything else, that he who goes to save his life will lose it, while he who goes to give his life will find the joy and peace which come from service rendered.

Daily Vacation Bible School

BY

SCHUYLER LAWRENCE
Layman of Towanda, Pennsylvania

AT this season of the year plans are being made to postpone the evil day when the children are home from school and under foot. Some parents are relieved to hear that two or three neighborhood churches are putting on a joint daily vacation Bible school for two weeks. Some parishes have their own, but all too many more don't even try. The daily program can be much more than a baby-sitting substitute, yet too many Episcopal churches today are inert, and indifferent to the possibilities of advance in this direction.

One reason may be that the national Church has supplied little leadership or materials for such a program. I've talked with several workers in the national field; they have little to offer from the Church, though they seem to recognize the theoretical importance of the work. They recommend a slim bibliography, little of it Episcopalian. A little pamphlet called "Vacation Church School" by Catherine A. Sanders seems to be 281's only real contribution in the field, and it's pretty good, as far as it goes.

Student rural field service (division of domestic missions) has mimeographed several units for use in vacation Church schools run by seminarians and also some brief but good suggestions for them. The best text of the lot is Miss Florence Pickard's "Paul, Man or Adventure" for juniors. The lessons used in 1949 and 1950 were rather colorless, and while adequate lacked pep. The field service publications were of course for special purposes and were not intended to be generally available, though they might make a good departure for a Churchwide series.

The national town-country institute recommends this year the Judson keystone series. Some of them appear to be officially recognized by other Churches, and all represent a useful collection of suggestions for any curriculum, though the texts could be improved on. Just what our new curriculum will mean to the vacation Church school is not clear yet.

Real Opportunity

IT boils down then to the individual priest and whether he dares have a daily vacation school with a positive approach, on the basis of presently available materials. It's a chance to get the attention of a group of boys and girls every morning for one, two or more weeks, but maybe the program gets bogged down in personnel and curriculum problems, and ends up as a wishy-washy nursery school or as a project for next year.

The truth is that a vacation church school is much easier than it sounds and can be as entertaining as promotional. Very little of the meagre literature (except the Judson lessons) explains the details requiring specific know-how. A national curriculum could easily be prepared to nail down what has been learned within the Church by those who have developed such programs. The substantive teaching materials are not really a problem but an opportunity. Poor material is a standard alibi of the teacher who fails. The school's appeal however is geared to know-how and techniques—many of them not usually associated with a Sunday school.

A national training program is needed to develop on parochial levels the special staffs required to handle vacation Church schools. The philosophy behind the program is so different from Sunday schools that separate orientation is indicated.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The vacation Church school can be a mission to the children, from 3 to 13 usually, and for that age group parallels youth conferences. A good program is a lively alternation of contrasts—games and substantive teaching, laughter and prayer, visual aids and handcrafts, refreshments and memory verses, notebooks and funsongs, charades and story-telling. There must be no moment unutilized from the time the first early-comer is set to pitching horseshoes or playing a game in the churchyard to the final funsong that sends him home laughing and wanting to come back to school the next day. Pep, pace, variety are the keys.

This attractive, dynamic program can be put to work to teach a few specific things the Church wants taught—which can be hammered in by an irresistible broadside of techniques and available aids.

The Episcopal Church is hanging back from making full use of vacation schools. It's about time we did a real job within the Church with our own and with the unchurched young. We need leadership and helps throughout the Church, but, even so, enough is now available reflecting experience in other communions to help any parish have a vacation school. A few days' operation will supply enough know-how and confidence to see some of the places where the pattern needs reshaping, and after one week they'll feel like old hands. The biggest test of courage seems to be the start and the first day.

There is no reason for Episcopal parishes to hold back. Let's capitalize on this special opportunity to reach our very young.

Jesus and Morality

BY

JAMES FOSTER

Rector of Christ Church, Gary, Indiana

THE important thing about Christian morality is that it is practical; something that can be used by everyone, everywhere, every day.

In fact, morality is a very practical thing. It is what men do to and with and for each other, and how they do it.

Jesus based morality on the fatherhood of God, which makes all men brothers. By deed and by word he expressed this relationship. Do this and you have morality. Deny the relationship and you have immorality.

The crime expose was a good thing because it revealed the deeds, and the doers of crime. This people could get. They could see how crime and its attendant evils hurt society and many people in society. The immorality of it was made apparent.

The same thing is becoming true as regards war. Most people are opposed to war, not as a matter of principle, but because of immediate interest. Modern war hurts too many people too hard: hurts them where they live, practically. They object; they don't want to be hurt needlessly, senselessly; and they don't want to be atom-bombed. So war is exposed as immoral; no way for man to treat or be treated by his fellow man.

The Book says: Where there is no vision—that is, when people can't see aright or understand what they see—they perish. When people realize that morality is a matter of the simple practical things which make up most of our living in relationship with others, then they can get it. Then they can agree on what helps and what hurts, what is good for them and what isn't, to achieve the moral unity which is essential for community. Again, Jesus put it clearly: Love God, love your neighbor, as yourself. This is the law and the prophets. This is morality.

NEXT WEEK: Since we lose a working day this week, Memorial Day, June 7 issue will be 16 pages. The paper shortage is also a factor. June 14 and 28 will however be 24 pages, the first featuring the Evangelical Fellowship and the other devoted to the Pacifist Fellowship.

THE PRAYER BOOK

Its History and Purpose

By

IRVING PEAKE JOHNSON

Founder and First Editor of The Witness

Just the book to place in the hands of the inquiring lay person. Chapters are on Its Origin; Its Career; Its Purpose; Its Contents; the Holy Communion; Morning and Evening Prayer; The Sacramental Offices; and a final essay on using the Prayer Book.

25c a copy — 10 copies for $2

The WITNESS

Tunkhannock Pennsylvania

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

FULL PROGRAM FOR SEWANEE

★ The busiest summer in many years is in store for the Sewanee campus beginning June 13, according to Boylston Green, vice-chancellor. The 10,000 acre domain of the Episcopal-owned University of the South will be the scene for seven activities and conferences during the summer. Coordinator for the various groups which will use the university facilities will be Prof. Ben F. Cameron.

The summer session of the university will initiate the series of activities when it opens on June 13, two days after commencement, under the direction of Dean Gaston S. Bruton. Women as well as men will make up the 100 students expected to enroll for courses in the liberal arts college.

The following day, June 14, will see Episcopal laymen from all over the south assemble for their annual seven-state conference. James A. Smith Jr. of Birminghan, Ala., president of the group, and Robert Finley, secretary, will preside over the three-day meeting.

About 150 members of Delta Kappa Gamma, women's teaching sorority, will meet for the annual state convention of that group on the week-end of June 22nd.

Beginning on June 25, the Cumberland Forest festival will open its nine weeks session. Roy Harris of Nashville, Tenn., director, has announced that about 100 artist students are expected to enroll in the advance courses in string instrument and music composition to be offered.

Rev. John Heuss of the National Council will direct the education conference from June 29 to July 1. This conference has as its purpose the instruction of parish lay leaders in the new church education program. About 300 church men and women from throughout the south will attend.

Following this the Sewanee summer conference will have its opening meeting on July 1 of an eight-day conference on education of the fourth province. This group will be led by the Rev. Clarence R. Haden Jr., and about 150 laymen and clergy are to be present.

The graduate school of theology gets underway on July 23 for a five-week session on the campus of the School of Theology. Under the direction of Prof. M. Bowyer Stewart, this school will attract from 75 to 100 persons who wish to continue study at the graduate level.

TRENTON CONVOCATION HAS MEETING

★ Mrs. Elwood Haines, national director of the Girls' Friendly Society, was the headliner at a meeting of the Trenton-Burlington convocation of the diocese of New Jersey, meeting at St. James', Trenton, May 19. There was also an address on working with young people by the Rev. Victor Hoag. Later in the day there were workshops on techniques of working with girls and on worship, with Louise Burpee of the GFS staff in charge.

GENERAL WARNS CHAPLAINS

★ A warning to chaplains against aligning themselves with the "politics of war" was voiced by General A. F. Geerhardt, air force deputy chief of chaplains, at the convention of chaplains held in San Francisco. The chaplains were welcomed to the city by Church dignitaries, including Bishop Karl Block. General Gearhardt said: "You don't make Christians by killing Communists" and, recalling his service in two world wars, added: "We fight wars for freedom and Christianity, and yet when the war is over, both are in worse shape than they were before."

CANON WILLIAMS VISITS ITHACA

★ Garfield Williams, canon to the ordinary and formerly dean of Manchester Cathedral, England, was the preacher at the service May 24 at St. John's, Ithaca, N. Y., held in connection with the convocation of the fifth district of the diocese of Central New York. At one time he was in charge of the work of the Church of England in the Far East and Africa.

CENTRAL SCHOOL OF RELIGION
(A Correspondence Institution)
6030 Lowell Ave., Indianapolis 19, Ind.
College level courses since 1896. Bible, Theology of O. & N. T., Pastoral Psychology, Church Publicity, Religious Education, etc. Complete interrupted studies at home. Excellent faculty. Reasonable. Write to Secretary for further information NOW.

BEAVERBROOK
POCONO PINES, PA.

Enjoy Real Fun, Gay Informality, Congenial Companions at this beautiful 2000 acre estate "Atop the Poconos." All Sports and Entertainment facilities. Lake. Beach. Riding. Tennis. Swimming. Boats and Canoes. Latest movies. Country Dances. You'll like the fine Christian fellowship. Protestant Services. $38 Weekly.
N. Y. Office, 11 W. 42nd St. (Room 1274)
"A CAMP FOR ADULTS ONLY" LO 5-1550

MEMORIAL WINDOWS
DESIGNERS AND MANUFACTURERS
STAINED & LEADED ART GLASS
Lilores Stained Glass Studios
215 MORELAND AVE. N.E.
PHONE AL. 7372 ATLANTA GA

Sudbury CHURCH WORSHIP AIDS
Have your dealer show you the wide variety of well made church appointments we produce
FOR COMPLETE CATALOG SEND TO
SUDBURY BRASS GOODS CO.
55 SUDBURY STREET, BOSTON 14, MASS.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

All Things Common. By Claire Huchet Bishop. Harper. $3.00.

In this documented and dramatic account of an investigation into the "communitarian" movement in France and the neighboring countries, communitarianism is presented as a way of liberation for man, a progressive training in freedom, a deliverance from the "salariate" status and an initiation into the responsibilities of ownership and management. Communitarians pool, organize, produce, sell, and share. Communities of work are few and scattered, islands, as it were, in an ocean of capitalistic production somewhat curbed by legislation. As such, and in common with all other types of enterprise, communities must market their products and are dependent on price. But in the fields of management and distribution they are free to experiment.

Interesting features in these organizations are: (a) the psychological incentive fostered by congeniality in team work, (b) the experience of relative security founded upon solidarity, (c) the widening of horizons through a reinterpretation of personal interest and a renewal of faith in the worth of the total man. Thus in some groups cultural effort is remunerated, and in all groups spiritual values (religiously or philosophically envisaged) are stressed as essential. Those features may not be specifically communitarian, but the fact is that, at present, they are observable in the communities described in the book. It is very encouraging.

Communitarianism is a constructive force, an active leaven in French life. Its positive attitude is, within the ebb and flow of history, the result of a negative reaction, a refusal to be licked by blind tradition, ruthless individualism, corruption, poverty, and despair. Spontaneously and in divers manners, communities of work are trying to evolve a pattern of economic life that will harmonize with the ideals of spiritual humanism.

The author conducts a tour through the most typical communities (agricultural, industrial, and professional). The reader is introduced to the communitarians themselves and hears them describe in their own way their experiences and their hopes. Charts show the scheme of communitarian organization. The book shows men of good will facing reality with practical sense and ardent faith.—Rene E. B. Vaillant

What Becomes of the Dead. By J. P. Arendzen. Sheed & Ward. $3.50.

This book is an extended and explicit account of the doctrine of the Roman Catholic Church concerning the dead. In brief this is the doctrine:

"First, that those who die in peace with God will be rewarded in heaven everlastingly by seeing God face to face, and that those who die in unrepented, grievous sin will be punished in hell everlastingly by being cast out into outer darkness deprived of the sight of God.

"Secondly, that by baptism the gates of heaven are opened to the believer, but that on the other hand no one will go to hell except through his own fault.

"Thirdly, that this life is our only time of probation and that there is no repentance after death, but that on the other hand it is a good and a wholesome thought to pray for the dead, that they may be loosed from their sins.

"Fourthly, that there is to be a General Judgment when Christ returns to judge the living and the dead and when the dead shall rise again, but for your support

Thank You

Month after month in this space we appeal to you to support our Seminaries.

It's time we told you that we are grateful for the continued and ever increasing interest shown by the clergy and people of the Church in Theological Education. As the Treasurer of one Seminary has said: "Most inspiring of all . . . is to see the substantial support given to the Seminary through the efforts of our own alumni and through others."

It is inspiring and the whole Church is encouraged.

* * * *

Berkeley Divinity School, New Haven, Conn.; Bexley Hall, Gambier, Ohio; Church Divinity School of the Pacific, Berkeley, Calif.; Divinity School of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia; Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass.; The General Theological Seminary, New York City; Nashotah House, Nashotah, Wis.; School of Theology of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.; Seabury-Western Theological Seminary, Evanston, Ill.; Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

that on the other hand those who die before His coming, shall not lack their reward."

The book is a lengthy and dogmatic elaboration of these "truths." It does not try to win men—it tells them—period.—R. T. F

The Book of Leviticus An Exposition. By Charles R. Erdman. Revell. $1.75.

Leviticus is perhaps the least read book of the Bible. Inasmuch as it is a manual of directions for ancient Hebrew worship, one can easily understand that it does not directly concern the faith and life of modern Christians. However, Dr. Erdman notes rightly that the Epistle to the Hebrews finds in Leviticus the prophetic symbols of Christ the Great High Priest. He thereupon expounds passage after passage in a cursory and readable manner and shows the meaning of the Old Testament cultus from a Christian point of view. He is aware of the "temptation to give rein to unbridled fancy in studying the types" (p. 10), but he might have shown more sharply than he did the dangers of ritual formalism and the ambiguity of the priestly concept of holiness.—S. L. Terrien.

This We Believe! By Eric Montizambert. Morehouse-Gorham. $2.00.

A chaplain of the first world war tells the story of the young man about to go into battle who came to him and said: "Tell me all you know about God—Quick!" He was the forerunner of many who are today discovering that they know next to nothing about God, and that there may not be much time left to find out.

For such as these, as well as for many others whose faith is sure, if a little dulled, Dr. Montizambert has performed a notable service. In "This We Believe!," he has provided in 140 pages an illuminated and illuminating re-statement of the basic facts of Christian belief and practice as a worthy and inescapable challenge to those weary ones who either despair of freedom or seek it where it may not be found. The author believes, and persuades his readers to believe, that it may be found in Christ, and there alone.—R. T. F.

A History of Philosophical Systems. Edited by Vergilius Ferm. Philosophical Library. $6.00.

This is a new kind of history of philosophy, an account of 47 philosophical movements, all the way from Indian philosophy and Zoroastrianism, down to the latest philosophies of culture, science, and religion — each movement being analyzed and described by a recognized authority, and each chapter followed by a good bibliography.

"I Shall Try To Be A Good Child . . ."

Armandino's entire family perished in a bombardment. He was found wounded but still alive, in his dead mother's arms . . . he had lost his right arm up to the shoulder, and several fingers of his left hand. For years he has wandered homeless and hungry.

Yet Armandino faces life with a smile. Now in a Plan colony near Rome, he writes to his American foster mother:

"Your dear letter is a dear company for me; I read it over and over again, always. Do you know I am beginning to do well at school? I can make the little accounts by myself and solve all the four operations. Only in reading I limp. But I promise to do better. I shall try to be a good child, you will see."

Wherever war has struck, thousands of brave hearts like Armandino's are beating in little maimed bodies, waiting and hoping . . . You alone, or as a member of a group in your church, can help these children by becoming a foster parent, or by contributing funds for plastic surgery, artificial limbs, glass eyes. As a foster parent you will receive a case history and photograph of your child. Your child is told clearly how he is being helped and that you are his foster parent. Children thus feel that they have a friend, rather than someone who is just giving them charity. Correspondence through our office is encouraged, so that you can ask the child questions about his health and welfare that you would want to know if these were truly your own children.

The Plan is helping children of fourteen different nationalities—in Greece, France, Belgium, Italy, Holland and England. By aiding these children you are working for the greatest aim of all—for peace.

The Foster Parents' Plan for War Children does not do mass relief. Each child is treated as an individual with the idea that besides food, clothing, shelter and education, the child will live in a homelike atmosphere and receive the loving care that so rightfully belongs to childhood. Your help can mean and do so much—won't you give it—TODAY?

CONTRIBUTIONS DEDUCTIBLE FROM INCOME TAX

FOSTER PARENTS' PLAN FOR WAR CHILDREN, INC.
55 WEST 42ND ST., NEW YORK 18, N. Y.

Partial List of Sponsors and Foster Parents
Nancy Craig, Mary Pickford, Mrs. William Paley, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic March, Ned Calmer, Joan Bennett, Helen Hayes, Edward R. Murrow, Larry LeSueur

C 1951 F.P.P FOR W.C., INC., N. Y.

FOSTER PARENTS' PLAN FOR WAR CHILDREN, INC. W-5-5D
55 W. 42nd St., New York 18, N. Y. LO 4-6647
In Canada: P. O. Box 65, Station B, Montreal, Que.

A. I wish to become a Foster Parent of a War Child for one year. If possible, sex .....
I will pay $15 a month for one year ($180). Payment will be made monthly ( ), quarterly ( ), yearly ( ). I enclose herewith my first payment. $.....

B. I cannot "adopt" a child, but I would like to help a child by contributing $.....

Name .....
Address .....
City ..... State ..... Date .....
Contributions are deductible from Income Tax

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

PEOPLE OF THE CHURCH

CLERGY CHANGES:

KEITH R. DEAN, formerly rector of Trinity, Detroit, is now in charge of the Nativity, Lewiston, Idaho.

RALPH S. VAN ATTA, formerly assistant in the Chenango County mission field of Central New York, is now in charge of the Epiphany, Trumansburg, N. Y. and Christ Church, Willard. He is also Episcopal chaplain at Willard State Hospital.

CHRISTOPHER J. ATKINSON, formerly rector of St. James, Downingtown, Pa., is now rector of St. Faith, Brookline, Pa.

MALCOLM P. BRUNNER is now rector of St. John's, Burlington, Wis., with charge of the church at Jewelcrest.

F. RANDALL WILLIAMS, formerly rector of Grace, Cuero, Texas, is now chaplain for the Toledo, Ohio, area and director of the social welfare council.

EDWARD DALEY is now rector of St. Matthias, Trenton, N. J.

WILLIAM E. STOTT, formerly vicar at Belford and Keansburg, N. J., is now rector of Christ Church, Trenton, N. J.

JAMES H. CUPIT JR., formerly of Smithburg, Md., is now rector of St. Andrew's, Lambertville, N. J. and St. Andrew's, Trenton.

ROBERT COOK, formerly assistant chaplain to Episcopal students at Syracuse University, is now curate at Trinity, Elmira, N. Y.

ROSWELL G. WILLIAMS has resigned as rector of St. Stephen's, New Hartford, N. Y., to take active duty with the national guard.

E. KINGSLAND VAN WINKLE has resigned as rector of Calvary, Utica N. Y., to become rector of Trinity, Hartford, Conn.

BISHOPS:

BISHOP IVINS of Milwaukee has announced his intention of retiring, effective December 31, 1952.

BISHOP HUBBARD, suffragan, is now handling all applications for remarriage in the diocese of Michigan.

ANNIVERSARIES:

OTEY R. BERKELEY observed the 30th anniversary of his rectorship at St. Columba's, Detroit, May 15. He received a doctorate that day from Olivet College.

ROBERT A. MAGILL recently celebrated the 20th anniversary of his rectorship of St. John's, Lynchburg, Va.

ORDINATIONS:

LEWIS R. SHAMHART was ordained deacon May 1 by Bishop Phillips at R. E. Lee Memorial Church, Lexington, Va. and has been placed in charge of St. Thomas', Christiansburg, Va.

GALE F. MILLER was ordained priest March 21 by Bishop Harris at St. John's, Robertsport, Liberia. He is a teacher at St. John's School.

Rector of sound Churchmanship desires a Parish preferably in the Southern States. Interested in youth work. Start at $4,000.00 and adequate Rectory. Reply Box A, THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Penna.

POSITION OFFERED: A woman as Director of Religious Education, or an unmarried clergyman as assistant in a New Jersey suburban parish. Evangelical Churchmanship. Box T, WITNESS, TUNKHANNOCK, PA.

FOR SALE

RESIDENCE of Bishop Littell in Cambridge, New York; in foothills of Green Mountains, 45 miles N.E. of Albany; 22 from Bennington, 26 from Saratoga Springs. Automatic oil furnace heats 7 rooms winter; 3 extra bedrooms summer. Two bath rooms: Automatic hot water. ½ acre rear garden lot; Garage. Lawn shade trees: Unrestricted S. view. Episcopal Church: Hospital: School. Hunting and Fishing facilities. Nearby lakes. Thro' trains daily New York City, (Eagle Bridge Station, 5M). Bus Service twice daily Cambridge-Troy. House excellent repair: Presently priced $12,000 plus agent's commission. Apply: Jerome E. Wright, Cambridge, Washington County, New York.

VESTMENTS
Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves
Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries
Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars
Custom Tailoring for Clergymen
1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951
COX SONS & VINING, Inc.
131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

ST. JAMES LESSONS
A nine course series of instruction for Episcopal Church Schools including illustrated work books — 150-250 pages (60c each) and teachers' manuals I, II, III 40c each, IV through IX 60c each).
No Samples - Payment with orders
St. James Lessons, Inc.
865 Madison Ave., Dpt. 5, N. Y. 21, N. Y.

CASSOCKS
Surplices — Choir Vestments
Eucharistic Vestments
Altar Hangings and Linens
Prices Sent on Request
J. M. HALL INC.
14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.
Tel. CH 4-3306

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE·BRASS·SILVER
FABRICS + WINDOWS

Everything for the Episcopal Church
Ammidon & Company
HORACE L. VARIAN
31 S. Frederick St. Baltimore 2, Md.

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS
Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS
Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.
SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

Exquisite
IRISH LINENS
BY THE YARD
From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States, I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values; unsurpassed quality, imported direct from Ireland. Also transfer patterns, linen tape, and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 3 inches at 75c, 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.00.
MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

THE BISHOP WHITE PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833
Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.
PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)
Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

FINEST PURE IRISH LINEN
Buy linen now from complete stocks personally selected in Ireland. Also Cassock Cloth, Vestment patterns. Embdy. designs and instruction books.
Samples Free
MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
BOX 386 CHILLICOTHE, MO.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

FRANCIS J. MOORE
Editor of Forward

In the summer issue of "Forward-day-by-day"—page 4—an expression was inadvertently used and allowed to slip through my hands which has given offense to many of our readers, and I should be grateful if you would kindly permit me the use of your columns for a sincere apology to all concerned for this oversight. Neither the writer of this issue nor myself had the slightest idea that the offending word would be read in a derogatory sense, and it is a matter of profound regret, not only that it has greatly pained our Negro fellow-Churchmen but also that it has given the impression that there was some deliberation in the use of it. It is, unfortunately, too late now to do anything about it but seek to assure as many of our readers as we can reach, that it was due to inadvertence, to apologize humbly and sincerely for it, and to ask them to forgive us. The author himself has written personally to several who have already protested, and with your permission I will quote part of his letter:

"I am greatly distressed over having caused you or any of your people concern over my attitude or the Church's attitude toward any of our Negro Churchmen. Since I am the author of this summer issue I take full responsibility for the statement. However, it was not intended in any derogatory sense at all. I picked up the story some place—I do not even remember where now—and I envisioned in the use of that phrase an elderly Negro man of saintly mien who radiated the presence of God. I sincerely hope that this can be made clear to your people and that others who do write in will take it in the sense in which it was meant.

"I would like to add that my parish is in the forefront of leadership concerning the relations of all peoples in this community on a Christian basis. We are one of the few churches in this part of the world where Negroes and whites sit down and eat together as brothers. This is one of the few pulpits in this area where there is a constant pressing toward the elimination of any idea of discrimination or segregation.

"I understand, I believe, how you feel and I regret more than I can say that I have been the cause inadvertently of anything disturbing. I hope you will please accept my explanation as a true and honest one and do your best to pass along that explanation to your people."

I hope that this combined statement will have the effect of at least mitigating any bitter feeling and also help to restore confidence that this unfortunate slip had shaken.

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL
A Coeducational Parish Day School
Founded 1894. Preparing for leading secondary schools through sound academic training based upon Christian principles. Kindergarten thru 8th grade. Special emphasis on French, Latin. Complete academic & psychological testing program. Music, dramatics, arts & crafts, sports.
E. A. GRANT, Headmaster
86-88 Fourth Ave., N. Y. 3 GR 7-5285

THE PATTERSON SCHOOL for BOYS

Episcopal School in Blue Ridge Mountains of Western No. Carolina. Accredited. Grades 6-12. Gymnasium, sports, 42nd year. 1300-acre estate. Board and tuition, moderate.
GEORGE F. WIESE, Supt.
COLLEGE PREPARATORY Legerwood, N. C. HEALTH EDUCATION CHARACTER BUILDING

FORK UNION MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

Shattuck School
FOUNDED 1858
Shattuck integrates all parts of its program: religious, academic, military and social to give high school age boys an environment in which to grow "in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man." Summer School-Camp. Catalogue
REV. SIDNEY W. GOLDSMITH, JR.
RECTOR AND HEADMASTER
Box W, Shumway Hall
SHATTUCK SCHOOL FARIBAULT, MINN.

SCHOOLS

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof buildings.
REV. EDRIC A. WELD, RECTOR
Box W Plymouth, N. H.

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

The Hannah More Academy
Est. 1832, Episcopal school for girls, grades 7-12. Outstanding preparation for leading colleges, also General Academic Course, Music, Art, Athletics and Riding carefully supervised. Eighteen miles northwest of Baltimore. Moderate rates. Catalogue.
ELIZABETH N. HARVEY, M.A.
Headmistress, Reisterstown, Md.

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. City 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE-MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Schools of the Church

BARD COLLEGE
Formerly St. Stephen's
A Coeducational College of Liberal Arts and Sciences
FOUNDED 1860
For catalogue and further information write to The Director of Admissions, Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, New York.

DANIEL BAKER COLLEGE
BROWNWOOD, TEXAS
Established 1889. Operated under the auspices of the Diocese of Dallas. Co-educational senior college offering B.A. and B.S. degrees. Special opportunities in teacher training, music education, business administration. The only available undergraduate course in the Episcopal Church in Church Work Training. Member: Association of Texas Colleges.
REV'D W. A. CROSS, M.A., President
REV'D L. A. HASELMAYER, Ph.D., Dean

SAINT PAUL'S POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE
LAWRENCEVILLE, VIRGINIA
Approved by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. B.S. Degree with major in Trade and Industrial Education, B.S. Degree in Home Economics Education, B.S. Degree with major in Elementary Education, B.S. Degree in Secondary Education.
EARL H. McCLENNEY, President

VOORHEES SCHOOL & JR. COLLEGE
DENMARK, S. C.
Co-educational. Accredited by State Dept. of Education of S. C. and the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges. Under the two Dioceses of S. C. and The American Church Institute for Negroes. Expenses reasonable. Limited scholarship aid for worthy students. Apply:
CECIL D. HALLIBURTON, President

Okolona College
Okolona, Mississippi
Co-educational, Private, American Church Institute for Negroes (Protestant Episcopal Church) Established 1902
High School and Junior College - Trades and Industries - Music
For information write: W. MILAN DAVIS President
Today's Training for Tomorrow's Opportunities

St. Augustine's College
RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA
1867 — 1951
Accredited Four-Year College for Negro Youth. Co-educational. Music, Pre-Medical, Health and Physical Education, High School Teacher Training, Business, Pre-Social Work, Nursing Education in co-operation with St. Agnes Hospital.
HAROLD L. TRIGG, President

SAINT HELEN'S HALL
Portland 1, Oregon
Historic Pacific Northwest Episcopal resident and day school. Founded in 1869. Co-educational pre-school. Boys admitted to Lower School through grade III. Upper School girls only.
Write for catalog.
The RT. REV. BENJAMIN DAGWELL, D.D.
President, Board of Trustees
JANE ALLEN SAXTON,
HEADMISTRESS

The Cathedral Schools
National Cathedral School for Girls
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding department, grades 7-12
KATHARINE LEE, Principal

St. Albans
The National Cathedral School for Boys
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding Department, grades 8-12
CHARLES MARTIN, Headmaster
Address:
Mt. St. Alban, Washington 16, D. C.

St. John Baptist School
FOR GIRLS
Offers College Preparatory and General courses. Music, art, outdoor sports, and a happy home life, with character building extra-curricular activities for resident and day students, under the care of the Sisters of St. John Baptist. In the country near Morristown, New Jersey. Accredited.
For catalog address Box 556
The Sister Superior, Mendham, New Jersey

St. John's MILITARY SCHOOL
Salina, Kansas
Since 1887 St. John's has been perpetuating the cultural tradition of the Church by stressing sound scholarship in Christian atmosphere. Grades 3 through 12. Fully accredited.
COL. R. L. CLEM, Rector

ST. MARY'S HALL
SECONDARY BOARDING SCHOOL
Faribault, Minnesota
Close relationship of students and faculty in residence allows for a maximum of spiritual, academic, and social growth. Preparation for leading colleges. An extensive sports program, including riding.
PHYLLIS M. NEWMAN, M.A.
Founded 1866 Headmistress

IOLANI SCHOOL
Episcopal Church School for Boys
HONOLULU 17, HAWAII
A college preparatory church school for boys. Kindergarten through twelfth grade. Established 1862. Day tuition $225 to $275. Boarding $665 - $775. Summer session. Accredited.
REV. CHARLES A. PARMITER, JR. M.A., S.T.B., Rector

The MERRICOURT SCHOOL
(Episcopal)
A country boarding school for 40 boys & girls. Grades 1-8 (pre-preparatory). Home-like environment. Sports, extra-curricula program. 26th year. 8 weeks summer camp. For information: Visit, write, or phone 3-3209.
THE REV. M. W. WHITFORD, Hdm.
BERLIN, CONN.

ST. LUKE'S HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING
New York City
Offers a 3 year course in nursing to high school and college graduates. College graduates may be admitted with 9 months advanced credit allowance. For further information write to The Director of Nursing, St. Luke's Hospital, 421 West 113th St., New York 25, N. Y.

HARVARD SCHOOL
Diocesan School for Boys. 52nd Year. Fall term opens September 11, 1951. Grades seven through twelve. Fully Accredited. R.O.T.C. unit. For all information apply to
THE REV. W. S. CHALMERS
Headmaster
3700 Coldwater Canyon Rd.
NORTH HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

Cathedral School of St. Mary
An accredited Episcopal school for girls. Suburban New York City. Day-nursery to college. Boarding—fifth grade to college. Strong college preparatory course. Music, Dramatics, Art. Excellent sports program. Catalog on request.
MARION REID MARCH
Box W, Garden City, Long Island, N. Y.

ST. STEPHEN'S SCHOOL FOR BOYS
ALEXANDRIA, VA.
Grades 3 thru 12 (Day School). College Preparatory. Under the Church School System of the Diocese of Virginia.
Address
THE REV. EDWARD E. TATE,
Headmaster
2405 Russell Rd. ALEXANDRIA, VA.

ST. MARY'S HALL on the Delaware.
Episcopal boarding and day school for girls 8-18. Founded 1837. Thorough college preparation. Fully accredited. Separate lower school. College preparatory and general courses. Music, Art, Clubs, Sports, Dramatics. Near New York and Philadelphia. Catalogue.
FLORENCE LUKENS NEWBOLD
Headmistress
Burlington, New Jersey

DeVEAUX SCHOOL
Niagara Falls, New York
FOUNDED 1852
The Church School in the Diocese of Western New York. College preparatory for boys. Representative form of student government. Small classes. Reasonable charges. Grades 7 through 12.
For information address The Headmaster.

The Church Home and Hospital
SCHOOL OF NURSING
Baltimore 31, Maryland
A three year course of nursing. Classes enter August and September. Scholarships available to well qualified high school graduates.
Apply to Director of Nursing

ST. AGNES SCHOOL
An Episcopal Country Day and Boarding School for Girls
Excellent College Preparatory record. Special courses arranged for girls not contemplating college. Day pupils range from Kindergarten to College Entrance. Boarders from Grade 8 to College Entrance.
MISS BLANCHE PITTMAN, Principal
Albany New York

HOWE MILITARY SCHOOL
Thorough Academic Training in a Spiritual Environment. R.O.T.C. Accredited college preparatory, business courses. Junior School. Small classes. Every boy participates in sports. Balanced program. Episcopal. Established 1884. Summer Camp, boys grammar school age. Catalogue.
COL. B. B. BOUTON
13 Academy Place, Howe, Indiana

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE Witness

10¢ A COPY

June 7, 1951

BISHOP HUBBARD HONORS MARGARET WILSON

Story on Page Five

On Rearming Germany by J. L. Hromadka

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11 Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4.
Weekdays: 7:30, 8 (and 9 Holy Days except Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 8:30, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer. Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues.-Thurs., Prayers—12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C.—11:45 Fri., Organ Recital—12:30.

THE HEAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10 a. m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a. m. Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 11 a. m.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes Jr., Rector
8 a. m. and 9 a. m., Holy Communion. 11 a. m., Morning Service and Sermon.
Weekdays: Holy Communion Wednesday at 8 a. m.
Thursdays and Saints' Days at 10:30 a. m.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a. m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a. m., Church School; 11 a. m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p. m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a. m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a. m., Holy Communion; 11 a. m., Morning Prayer—1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a. m., Holy Communion. Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a. m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a. m., Holy Communion; 11 a. m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p. m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a. m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Vicar
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a. m., 4:00 and 7:30 p. m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean; Rev. Leslie D. Hallett; Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon. Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D., Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a. m., 7:30 p. m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p. m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p. m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 — 4:30 p. m. recitals.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a. m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a. m., Morning Prayer; 8 p. m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat. 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a. m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a. m.
Thursday, 7:30 a. m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a. m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 12:15; 11, 1st S. Family, 9:30; M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Week-day, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a. m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p. m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a. m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p. m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p. m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services: 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. William W. Lumpkin, Rector; Rev. Eugene M. Chapman; Rev. E. Laurence Baxter.
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacColl, 3rd, Rector
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, N. 22 The WITNESS JUNE 7, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 135 LIBERTY ST., NEW YORK 6, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Church Work in Puerto Rico Has Promising Future

St. Luke's Hospital, Four Clinics and Schools Are Important Part of Work

★ When A. Ervine Swift proceeds to Puerto Rico as the new bishop he will have the care of just under 11,000 Church members. Of these, 3,676 are communicants. Baptisms during the past year totaled 1,394, of which fifty-five were adults. Confirmations were 288. The number received from the Roman Communion is either included or not reported. In the previous year sixty-four were so received.

To care for these the missionary diocese has eighteen active clergy; fifteen Puerto Rican, three North American. The clergy list as a whole includes seven others: four retired, one working among Puerto Ricans in Brooklyn, N. Y., and a sixth in Barbados. One other is the chaplain, James W. Conner, reported missing in Korea.

The Church has twenty-three missions—twenty-five congregations since St. John's Cathedral has three, Spanish-speaking, West Indian, and North American. The cathedral is in Santurce, a suburb of San Juan, the capital.

The smallest three missions report 72, 82, and 84 members. (In all these figures, "members" include both communicants and those not yet confirmed). The largest is St. Andrew's, Mayaguez, on the west end of the island, with 2,598 members; 598 were baptized here during the year.

The Church of the Resurrection at Manati on the north shore has 1,296 members, and Holy Trinity, Ponce, on the south shore, 900. The others have from 100 to 650.

The Church people include extremely few with any considerable wealth but, even so, the membership contributed more than $21,000 in a year. This amount is entirely separate from hospital fees, which totaled $115,000.

The chief medical work carried on by the Church is that of St. Luke's Hospital, Ponce. The hospital has ninety-four beds. Three North American doctors and twenty or more Puerto Rican physicians cared for 2,028 inpatients, and 7,000 dispensary cases during the year. The nursing staff includes one nurse from the North, ten Puerto Ricans, and thirty-six students in the long-established and widely known training school.

Besides the hospital, four clinics are connected with the missions at Manati, Mayaguez, Quebrada Limon up in the hills outside Ponce, and Barahona, in the north central area. They treated nearly 1,000 patients in the year.

Educating Puerto Rico's teeming school-age population continues to be a problem beyond the reach of the government's best effort, the children keep coming on so much faster than schools are built. The Episcopal Church has three kindergartens, in connection with the missions at Mayaguez, Ponce, and Hato Rey, a modern community near San Juan; also a primary school at Ponce, 200 children in all. The Cathedral Academy at Santurce has a kindergarten and primary school, 300 children.

At St. Just, near San Juan, Colegio San Justo is an industrial school started in 1947 from the former St. Joseph's School at Quebrada Limon but completely reorganized and newly built in the new community. Puerto Rico has no other schools like it. Its enrollment of twenty-nine boys could be much larger if funds permitted. St. Just's is trying to reach boys who most need its training and at the same time are most likely to make good use of it. As in so many mission schools, these are often the boys who can least afford to come.

CONFERENCES ON NEGRO WORK

★ Four conferences for Church workers among Negroes will be held this summer, the first from June 11-15 at St. Augustine's College. One on religious education will be held at Voorhees College, June 18-22, and the same subject will be treated at conferences at St. Paul's Polytechnic, July 16-20, and at Okolona School, July 23-27. The oldest of these is the one held at St. Augustine's which has met each year since 1909.

Some of the faculty members are Mary L. Villaret and Eleanor Snyder, assistant secretaries of the division of leadership training of the department of education; Prof. Edgar C. Young of the Philadelphia Divinity School; the Rev. Charles Hamilton of Corinth, Miss.; the Rev. Thomas V. Barrett, chaplain at Kenyon; the Rev. David H. Lewis of Culpeper, Va.; Mr. Everett M. Tyler, layman of Cleveland; the Rev. Thomas Logan of Philadelphia; Mrs. Naomi Crowley of Philadelphia; the Rev. John H. Edwards of New York; the Rev. Osmond Brown of Augusta; the Rev. Gustave H. Caution of Savannah.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Also the Ven. Stephen B. Mackey of Charleston, S. C.; the Rev. George A. Wieland, head of domestic missions; the Rev. Claude Pickens, returned missionary from China; M. M. Millikan, head of the American Church Institute; Lelia Brown of Memphis; Iris King of St. Paul's Polytechnic; Lulu H. Robinson of Voorhees; Dorothy Jackson of Wilmington, Del.; the Rev. Theodore J. Jones, chaplain at St. Paul's Polytechnic.

The four deans of the conferences are to attend the Wellesley Conference, June 24-30, hoping to improve the work of the conferences under their supervision.

ANGLICAN BISHOP RAPS PSYCHIATRIST

★ Views of Dr. D. Ewen Cameron, professor of psychiatry at McGill University, were scored as "fundamentally atheistic" in a pastoral letter issued by the Rt. Rev. John Dixon, Anglican Bishop of Montreal. Although the bishop did not mention Dr. Cameron by name, he quoted the psychiatrist's statement that man "is limitlessly capable, through his own powers, of changing his habits and ways in the direction of more effective and socially constructive living."

This, Bishop Dixon said, is "fundamentally atheistic, a denial of the existence and of the grace of God." He said the Christian view "condemns a purely secular humanism as the expression of man's basic sickness, the disease of pride and self-sufficiency, the root cause of the ills of civilization."

Dr. Dixon's letter resulted from a request made at the annual meeting of the Montreal Anglican Synod, where several delegates criticized Dr. Cameron's views as set forth in an address before the Montreal Rotary Club.

DEACONESS FUND IS GROWING

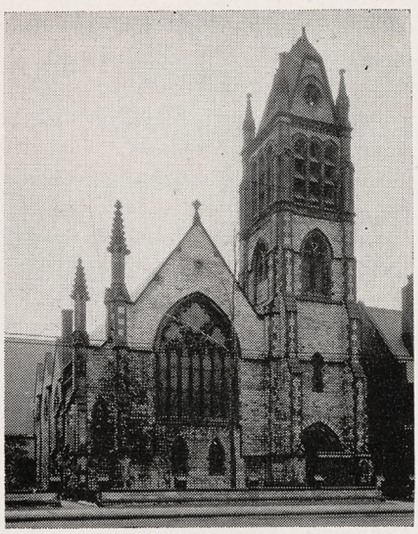
★ The Deaconess Retiring Fund was started twenty-five years ago when a group of deaconesses met to face the problem. At that meeting one deaconess put 25c on the table and said: "I put down this quarter to start such a fund." A year later the fund was incorporated with $500.27. In 1935 the capital had increased to $50,000 and payments to beneficiaries were begun. It has now passed the $150,000 mark and has set $200,000 as its next goal.

UNIFICATION DISCUSSED IN NORTH INDIA

★ Representatives of the United Church of Northern India and Pakistan and of North India Anglican, Methodist, and Baptist Churches discussed how they might unify their ministries in a single merged Church at a conference at Calcutta. The discussion marked the first meeting of a negotiating committee which aims to draft a plan for church union in North India and Pakistan.

Attempts were made to reach a common understanding on the significance of a proposed service for the unification of the ministry, according to a representative of the (Anglican) Church of India, Pakistan, Burma and Ceylon, one of the negotiating bodies of North India.

The representative, Bishop Henry C. Read of Nasik, said the committee agreed in regarding the ceremony as an extension of the authority of previous ministries.



He said that previous denominational ordinations would still hold good, and that re-ordination was not implied in the ceremony.

The North India plan of union, Bishop Read said, would contain a clause recognizing that "there may be different interpretations of the rite deriving from different church traditions."

He added, however, that the clause will stress that "the use of this rite does not imply a denial of the reality of the ordination previously received by those now seeking to become presbyters in the United Church . . . nor is it presumed to bestow again or renew any grace, gifts, character or authority that have already been bestowed upon them by God through whatever means."

W. COBURN COOK, chancellor of the district of San Joaquin, is one of the most active laymen of the district

Christ Church, Detroit

Christ Church, Detroit

Mother Church of Many Thriving Parishes

★ May 26, 1845, fell on Sunday. St. Paul's Church, a little brick building forty by sixty feet, on lower Woodward Avenue, Detroit, was unusually well filled and the congregation included many of the most prominent citizens in Detroit's population of thirteen thousand.

There were James Hicks, Thomas Hopson, and William Carpenter, all prosperous merchants. Alpheus Williams, the lawyer who was to become a general in the Mexican War, was sitting not far from Alexander Adams, treasurer of the church and president of the town's leading bank. In another part of the church could be found Henry Walker, owner and editor of the Free Press, and Alexander Goodell, the real estate dealer.

Another vestryman of St. Paul's Church was there. In fact, he seldom was absent from any service or meeting of the church. He was a member of the standing committee of the diocese, a deputy to General Convention, president of the Detroit charity society, banker, railroad president, and esteemed citizen of the growing city: Charles Christopher Trowbridge.

Mr. Trowbridge had brought two of his friends to church that morning, James Elbert and William Lee, dealers in real estate and lumber lands. Most of these men lived on that newly developen street named Jefferson Avenue and had built substantial homes.

After church Mr. Trowbridge asked his friend, Bishop McCoskry, who was also rector of St. Paul's to meet with Mr. Elbert and Mr. Lee that afternoon at three o'clock. They had all seen that the church was really getting too crowded. Detroit needed a second Episcopal church. Out on Jefferson Avenue where people were moving beyond Hastings Street would be an admirable location.

Three days later a second meeting was called and a new parish came into being with sixty-seven signing the register as charter members.

So came into being "Old Christ Church," now occupying the oldest religious site in the city of Detroit. Within a month a lot had been purchased where the church now stands and plans had been drawn for the first edifice by Lt. M. C. Meigs, later General Meigs, who was the architect of the Pension Office and U. S. Treasury in Washington.

In a few more months the church was completed and the first rector called. He was that notable missionary of Michigan, the Rev. William Narcisus Lyster, graduate of Trinity College, Dublin, a young man with missionary zeal who had come over to work in the frontiers of America.

Within ten years the building was outgrown and a new chapel

CHILDREN flock to vacation school at Christ Church. Social service program is important part of work at 106-year-old parish

HAPPY-GO-LUCKY CLUB, providing companionship for many retired men and women, cuts across creedal and national barriers was built facing Woodbridge Street in back of the church. By 1860 plans were drawn for the present handsome gothic building seating nine hundred people. The architect was Gordon W. Lloyd, a Canadian trained in England, who came to Detroit in 1858 and designed many notable buildings.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Starts Daughter Churches

The missionary spirit of Dr. Lyster was built firmly into the fabric and tradition of Christ Church, and it soon began starting a series of daughter churches. By 1869 the growing population of the east side required another church and St. Stephen's was built. Later this merged with St. Philip's to form the now thriving St. Philip's and St. Stephen's which has recently built a handsome modern church in northeastern Detroit.

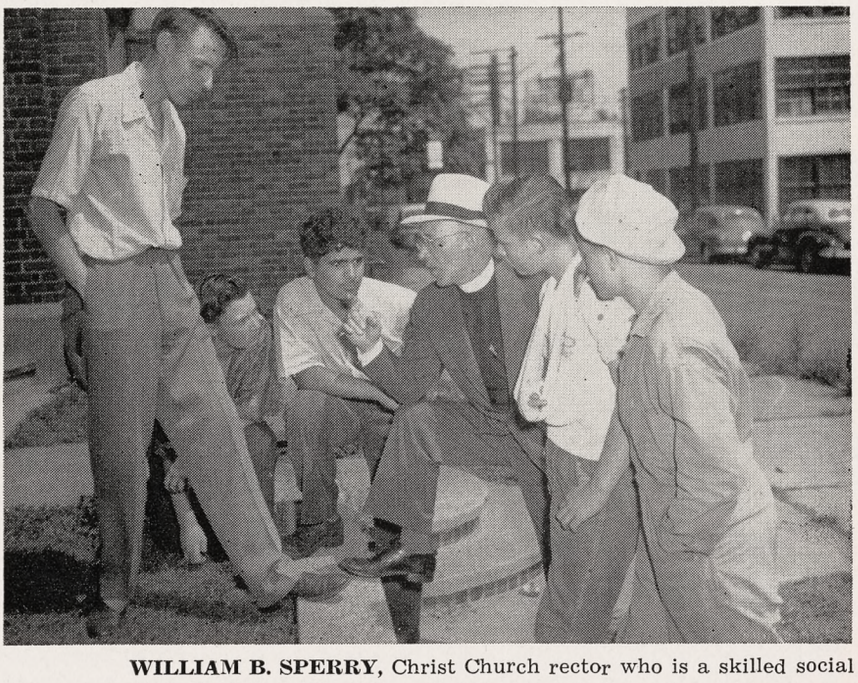
In 1874 another parochial mission took form and became the Church of the Messiah. This parish is now at E. Grand Boulevard and Lafayette in the original old St. Paul's Church which was moved to the new site, stone by stone, and rebuilt. Then in 1895 Christ Church made another venture, the "Waterworks Mission." When it moved into its own building it became the Church of the Epiphany.

Detroit kept growing and Christ Church kept filling the need for new churches. In 1914 another mission was started and is now the busy parish of St. Columba, with a handsome English style gothic edifice.

Still people came to Detroit and moved on east. Many from the old neighborhood of Christ Church moved out to Grosse Pointe. Plans were made for the most ambitious of all its missionary ventures in 1926. Christ Church Chapel, Grosse Pointe. was to be the biggest and most beautiful of all the daughter churches. The subsequent years were not easy either for the new chapel or for the mother church. The worldwide business depression in 1929 and the banking difficulties in Detroit in the early thirties came after the plans were made and the work started.

But the work went on. The Rev. William D. Maxon who had been called as rector in 1899 had seen St. Columba's grow under his direction and was determined to complete the new project. He put his able young assistant, the Rev. Francis B. Creamer, in charge and Mr. Creamer's vigorous leadership rallied the resources of the parish. Parishioners, personnel, and money were mobilized for the project and many thousands of dollars were lent without interest by the old church to the growing chapel. It was formally opened for services in 1930.

Begins Dual Ministry



Dr. Creamer succeeded Dr. Maxon as rector in 1933, Dr. Maxon having served as rector for thirty-four years. Christ Church then began a dual ministry which served a growing and flourishing parish in Grosse Pointe and continued to exercise a downtown ministry where its fine gymnasium, its neighborhood house, and its social service work had become an established part of the city of Detroit.

The interests of the two congregations gradually diverged, with the Grosse Pointe chapel carrying on an effective ministry in a residential area and the mother church maintaining a social service work and a civic ministry which because of its now widely scattered congregation effected the whole city of Detroit.

In 1946 it was decided to separate the two congregations and again under Dr. Creamer's leadership, the business affairs and parochial work of the two congregations were severed. Christ Church, Grosse Pointe, came into being as the fifth daughter of Christ Church, Detroit, with a magnificent parish building and rectory completely paid for, and two thousand communicants. Old Christ Church called as its twelfth rector the Rev. William Butler Sperry who had been serving with the Detroit Council of Churches as director of the social service department.

The ministry of a downtown parish with its widely scattered, heterogeneous congregation makes a decided contrast with the thoughts that were in the

(Continued on Page 11)

WILLIAM B. SPERRY, Christ Church rector who is a skilled social worker, talks things over with boys of factory and warehouse neighborhood

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EDITORIALS

Marvelous Doctrine

THE Trinity Season is of particular interest to all of us in the Anglican family of Churches. We are not the only Church which lays stress on the doctrine of course but it has, from ancient times, been held in great devotion on English soil; and we and our forebears are the only Christian body who date half our Church year as "after Trinity" instead of "after Whitsunday," as does Rome and the Lutheran Churches.

It is interesting too because it marks a doctrine rather than an event. Christmas, Easter, Whitsunday, saints days, Holy Week all bring to mind things which happened; things which God did in our history. But the Trinity season celebrates something more than events; it enshrines reflection and reasoning about many events; and it brings our attention to focus on the greatest and most central of the doctrines of the Church, born out of the Church's reverent reflection and reasoning.

The doctrine of the Trinity is, beyond question, the supreme and most audacious flight of human reason. We live in an age which is deeply suspicious of reason. In point of actual fact the Church and Christian theology supply now almost the last fortress of reason in this world so profoundly skeptical of anything which cannot be weighed and packaged and shot out of a gun; and it would be well if we could regain some of the perspective of history to help us see this marvelous arrow-flight of Christian thought in its true light. Alas, many more faithful Christians "believe" in the doctrine only on the basis of a dogged trust that what is incomprehensible still must somehow be good and reliable; many "believe" in the little girl's sense that "faith is believing what you know ain't so"; many reject utterly the right of man to use his mind as best he can to think about what God must be, if he does these great things among us.

Indeed, what matter in Christian faith and practice are events and not theories. What we do . . . and, infinitely more, what God does . . . is of far more direct consequence than what we think. But the Church's great teachings are not simply theorizing; they are the means whereby we learn more of what God does and how we can do more. We thing nothing of the abstract symbols of a doctor's prescription, for example . . . doctors have such peculiar handwritings anyway that nobody expects to understand what they write in their little memo to the druggist . . . We understand that somehow in the abstract symbols there is contained a healing truth and power for us; and so it is.

Some thing of the same is true about all reasoning. We know that to speak of God as we do in this doctrine, for instance as "three persons," is to use symbolic language; we shall not be cured by the theory any more than we are healed by folding up the doctor's prescription and solemnly swallowing it. But the prescription is the means of life; and the doctrine is infinitely more so. Our trouble is that we do not think as hard as our ancestors did, nor trust our thoughts as God wills us to.

Well—all that we say is a preface to what we would like to say about the blessed Trinity. Maybe someday we can do it. Meanwhile, open your Prayer Books to page 284; read the creed and the questions which follow. What God does is to create, to redeem, and to make us strong and holy. What kind of God is it who does these things in us? That is the question to which the doctrine of the Trinity is the Church's sublime answer.

"QUOTES"

IF truth is correspondence with ultimate reality, and personality is the only truth, then ultimate reality must be personal, and the universe becomes a system of personal relationships. But this is what the Christian religion has always maintained, imagining God not only as personal, but as a perfect unity of personalities, and his only reflection here on earth a society built round a personality at once human and divine.

—W. E. ORCHARD

Notes and Comments

REASON is often of little avail in a mad-house, but even some psychoses can be cured. We had that feeling—and it lifted our hearts—as we read the recent report by the American Friends Service Committee entitled "Steps to Peace." Objective, factual, realistic, it deals with the present international situation in a manner which must give pause to even the most hardened "war at any price" advocate. By all means read it and distribute copies to your friends. It may be obtained (25c) from the American Friends Service Committee, 27 South 12th Street, Philadelphia 3, Pa.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

IN a recent letter to the New York Times Christopher G. Janus makes the following suggestion: "Why don't we organize a Kefauver Committee to track down goodness and good people no matter where they are and make goodness more glamorous? Let's conduct this investigation in Madison Square Garden with complete television, radio, newspaper coverage. Let's interview some of our good and happy men and become more conscious of our blessings." Good idea.

Should Germany Be Rearmed

BY

J. L. HROMADKA

I HAVE not very much to add to what has been said on the issue of the remilitarization of Germany and Japan and on the general international situation. You may have the feeling that my words are nothing but a repetition of the much more powerful, relevant analysis of the burning problems which you have heard from this platform. However, speaking at this moment, I wish to reach the ears and minds of my friends and brothers within the Christian Churches throughout the world, in order to make them realize where we, the Christians of all countries in the East of Europe, stand and how we react to contemporary events. The perspective from which I approach the issue is that of a faithful Christian theologian. Faith in Christ, as I understand it, has nothing to do with a sanctimonious, pious sentiment or with an abstract idealistic dream. It is to have the eyes open before the essential historical events, before the real meaning of the present moment; it is the courage to break with one's own self-complacency and self-righteousness, to throw away the old traditions and habits and to give up the old unjust privilege and possessions. We must admit that today the historical Churches of the so-called Christian Nations have been dangerously crippled by the tight shackles of their economic, political and national atmosphere. Nothing is more difficult than to free oneself from what we have regarded as a sacred and untouchable privilege given to us by virtue of our honorable past.

March of History

THE present march of history has found its most obvious expression in the Korean and Chinese situations on the one hand, and in the—what we call—remilitarization of Germany on the other. To take a definite stand on these two issues is a paramount responsibility of individual Christians as well as of the Christian Church. It is here that any pious, self-righteous Christian crusade or self-complacent neutrality would be an evil.

Now we must ask: who has created the unbearable tension in the Far East by denying to New China, with her almost 500 million people, her just place within the family of nations? Who has insulted her? Who has for many years irritated the sentiments of the Asiatic peoples? Who has backed the most privileged and selfish elements within the Asiatic countries? Who has done his very best to heighten the distrust of these countries in what we call "Christian civilization?" What have the official Churches of the Western Nations done to bring about a peaceful solution of the Far Eastern tension? Please do not misunderstand me! I have numerous noble friends within the Western Churches whom I deeply respect and love. I know many individual Christians who are disturbed about the present situation and are eager to contribute their share to a peaceful world. I do not wish to condemn anybody. What I wish to say it this: if we miss the most decisive point in the process of history and if we fail to make the right decision, at the critical moment, we may lose our lives and our souls. I am afraid that we have failed in many things and took the wrong direction precisely in those days of July 1950 when a serious word of warning should have been given to the statesmen of the Western Nations. Instead of looking straight into the face of the real events and the real conditions in the Far East, the Christian Churches took refuge in empty legalistic formulas and pious phrases. It is this that has disturbed us and brought us the heartfelt conviction that the real solution of the present crisis must be brought about in a different way and on a different basis.

Germany

IN the problem of Germany for instance, the remilitarization of her Western Section is the other focal point of the present. Everyone is re-

The Rev. J. L. Hromadka is the dean of the Czechoslovakian Protestant Reformed Evangelical Church and is recognized as one of the most eminent living theologians. He was formerly a professor at Princeton Theological Seminary and is prominent in the affairs of the World Council of Churches and delivered one of the important addresses at the Amsterdam Conference in 1948. This article is an address he delivered at the World Council of Peace at a meeting of that organization recently in Berlin.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

volted by this idea. A Christian and a Christian Church body cannot be silent in face of this grave issue. If we, the Christians who are taking part in this conference, join heartily with the World Council of Peace in its campaign against the re-arming of Germany, we do it with a genuine desire to help the German people in their most dangerous fateful hour. We have no right to judge the people of Germany. We will not do it. We know what we owe to our German brothers, the great German thinkers, writers and reformers. But we shudder in visualizing the destruction, the total destruction of Germany in the case of a new European war. Re-armament is not an abstract thing. The rearming of Western Germany has a definite, a concrete meaning. It involves the resurrection of the most sinister elements in Germany, Western Europe, in Spain and everywhere else. Rearmament would be an unpardonable effort to ignore the terrible catastrophy of Europe between 1933 and 1945; it would be an absurd attempt to stop the overdue social and economic reconstruction of human society, both European and non-European, by sacrificing the German people for the sake of selfish interests.

The end of the sacrifices would be hideous and absolutely in vain, since the transformation of Europe would proceed anyway after a new war and would proceed in a most brutal way. The Christian Churches—I repeat—cannot be silent. If they remained silent they would give proof of their own weakness, fear and confusion. I don't wish to repeat the noble names of the men who have manifested their opposition to the rearmament of Germany and who have been mentioned at this conference. What I wish to say—and say with satisfaction—is this: the present problem of Germany is a dividing line between those who have the courage to make a decision in spite of everything that binds and oppresses the human mind and life, and those who, because of their position and point of view are unable to cope with the events of our time, who are unable to understand what is going on in the depths of the present world situation.

The presence of us Christians at this conference demonstrates our conviction that the World Council of Peace reflects at this juncture, the most important, the most realistic and the most effective effort not only to save the peace but also to satisfy—if it is at all possible—the vital needs of mankind. We stretch forth our hands to reach our numerous beloved and honest brothers, both in the East and in the West, and to bring them into our fellowship of peace and goodwill.

Talking It Over

BY

W. B. SPOFFORD SR.

LETTERS from friends sometimes serve as pegs on which to hang things, like the one objecting to our recent statement that "labor is being pushed back where it was before the CIO." Which brought the outburst: "Of all the absurd misstatement! Bind up your bleeding heart, Bill! Labor isn't being pushed back into antedeluvian oppression."

Fact is, I was not the writer of that particular piece, but I was at the editors meeting when it was discussed and I think I know what the author was driving at. And the analysis of what is happening to us I got, not from a labor leader or from anyone on the left, but from a partner in one of the biggest banking houses in the world. More, I didn't get it yesterday but some years ago. We were discussing the future outlook, with me urging international understanding and peace, which he brushed off as a lot of sentimental eyewash. This was his line:

There's nothing that is international but money. That flows over national barriers to make profits. What's ahead of the U. S. is perfectly clear. We'll eventually move into a war economy: huge contracts for the corporations; big salaries for management; good dividends; good business for the little fellow. Taxes will be high, but so what? The burden will be shoved onto the little fellow for the most part, and even if we have to pay 'em what does it matter as long as profits and salaries are high. As for labor, don't kid yourself about these fellows not going along with the show. We're not out to smash labor unions. It's much easier to take them over. There won't be any unemployment under a war economy. We give them their wage increases. So they'll have work and high wages and therefore the illusion of prosperity, even if there is a scarcity of the goods they need and their dollar will buy damned little of what there is.

He brought a standing army into the picture too—and mind this was far enough back in years so that most people then considered such a thing impossible. Millions in the armed forces, to this international banker, would also help solve unemployment. And when I ventured the guess that folks would not stand for it, particularly women folks, he just guffawed. "Ah, nuts, they'll love it. They'll even go along with a few minor wars. What are a few hundred thousand casualties as long as we are prosperous?"

A hard-boiled analysis perhaps, but where was he wrong? So if my heart is bleeding it is for all of us, not just labor. Bleeding even for the poor parson's wife who can, I imagine, tell her irritated husband something about what a dollar will buy today at the corner store. And bleeding too for the rank and file of laboring people who are getting their few cents more an hour with which they can buy less, when they can get it at all.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Mr. Phil Murray made a speech at a tremendous mass meeting at the time of the San Francisco UN conference. On the stage that night were labor leaders from all over the world, representing millions of organized workers. They pledged to each other brotherhood and peace and their new federation was going to be strong enough to maintain it. And Mr. Murray, in a moving address, put the aims of labor in these simple phrases: "What we want is pictures on the wall; carpets on the floor; food in our bellies; a chance to get out once in awhile into God's wonderful sunshine."

The international labor federation is gone. And it isn't "God's wonderful sunshine" but death in Korea and threatened everywhere, with Mr. Murray and Mr. Green and Mr. Reuther winning "victories" before the wage stabilization board. A few more pennies in the pay envelope. With the clerks at the chainstore taking down the price tags and putting up new ones: butter, 84c; hamberger, 76c. Ask Mom, she knows. And that there is one less mouth to feed is hardly a consolation—not with her boy way off there in Korea.

What's the Big Idea

BY

PHILIP H. STEINMETZ

Rector of the Ashfield Parishes

CHILDREN ask this question when something happens they dislike. God's children ask it when death, disease, disappointment or other disaster strikes them.

The answer is in the first verses of the gospel according to St. John. Put "big idea" in place of "word" in that passage and read it over a few times.

It is saying that the whole of creation is planned in order to express love, love shown in the giving of order and structure where there was none; in the effort to bring into being creatures who will love back; in the process of turning these creatures from the selfish use of what is given to them to the grateful return of it to the giver, a process involving patience, suffering—the cross.

That this is indeed the big idea is made clear when once life is lived in line with it. That life can take it. That life cannot be broken by anything that the world can do. No one having caught a glimpse of that life can fail to get the big idea.

But there are steps beyond getting the idea. It must be accepted and applied to ourselves. That's where the rub comes. As members of the body of Christ we get a share in suffering as well as victory.

The important thing is to keep in mind all the while what it is all about and to realize that we are having a part in the very core of the process of creation, that we are being made over into the image of God.

What if the process is long and full of suffering! We have a part in the working out of the big idea.

Thy People, My People

BY

JAMES FOSTER

Rector of Christ Church, Gary

THINKING about God is sometimes formalized in devotion known as the practice of the presence of God. Those who engage in it, generally the religious, take advantage of some particular time and place to realize more definitely the relation in which they stand to the Father.

This is good to do, and it would be good also to practice the presence of the children of God, all the other people who are our brethren in the Lord; to realize that they are people, as we are people. It would be good because today there is much emphasis upon the non-personal. We tend to think in terms of powers and parties, of systems and ideologies, of states and classes. There is little understanding of, or sympathy with people as peoples; nor the realization that the world is the home of countless men and women and children who are all, as the Bible put it, of one blood and of one Father. They, as we, have a birthright to be persons, to be regarded as persons, to be able to live in benevolent relationship with other persons.

The true wealth of the world is the people of the world. We share the wealth by virtue of our fellowship. To practice the presence of people, to think of them as people, to know them and their hopes and their needs, as we would like them to think and know of us, would be a true act of religion, pleasing unto God.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CHRIST CHURCH, DETROIT—

(Continued from Page 6)

mind of C. C. Trowbridge and his friends on the May afternoon in 1845.

Gymnasium is in Demand

The gymnasium is active with groups of newsboys and children from the neighborhood whether or not they are members of the church. A club of Detroit's "retired citizens" is an experiment in the growing problem of providing wholesome, creative activities for older people. All the members of this club are over sixty-five and many of them have only an old age pension on which to subsist while they lack friends or family to take an interest in them. Here again the inclusiveness cuts across all creedal or national barriers.

Restores Interior

Recently the old church embarked on a restoration program and the chancel, baptistry, and chapel have been brought back to their original beauty. As Bishop Emrich said when he first entered the church, "It's a nineteenth century church but it's the best nineteenth century church I've ever seen."

One of the features of the church is its organ, rated among the great organs of the midwest. With this organ has gone a special interest in music so that now, 106 years after Mr. Trowbridge had his dream of a new parish, one can find in the heart of downtown Detroit a busy parish alive to the needs of the people about it, and a sanctuary of beauty where descendants of the original founders are still worshipping.

Cover Picture

Miss Margaret Wilson, who has served Christ Church for forty years, was recently honored with a reception and was presented with a silver cross by Bishop Hubbard.

CHICAGO ADOPTS BIG BUDGET

★ A missionary budget of $231,950 was adopted at the convention of the diocese of Chicago, with $105,000 pledged to the National Council. A new canon was also approved which will provide for the establishment of a diocesan investment trust. It provides that there be six lay trustees, of whom two shall be members of the bishop and trustees of the diocese, and all of them are to be appointed by the bishop.

The convention also voted to seek $100,000 annually for a special fund, half to be used for advance work in the diocese; 25% for social service work and the rest for the National Council.

VIRGINIA SEEKS LARGE SUM

★ The diocese of Virginia is seeking $1,300,000 for advance work, including aid to the seven schools in the diocese. The operating budget for next year was set at $237,028, an increase of about $17,000.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN PLANS CENTER

★ The convention of Northern Michigan authorized Bishop Page to appoint a committee to study the need and location of a diocesan center which will include a cathedral, offices and bishop's residence.

The bishop in his address urged the use of trained laymen in mission fields to help relieve the clergy shortage and also a concerted effort to recruit men for the ministry.

MEMORIAL SERVICE TO BISHOP JETT

★ A service in memory of Bishop Jett, first bishop of Southwestern Virginia, was the high light at the council of the diocese, meeting at Emmanuel, Staunton, May 15-16. Bishop Phillips conducted the service and there were addresses by Bishop Tucker, former Presiding Bishop; Bishop Brown, retired bishop of Southern Virginia; the Rev. D. L. Gwathmey, rector at Whytheville, Va., and Bishop Phillips.

The meeting adopted a missions program calling for $68,531 and a diocesan expense budget of $22,370.

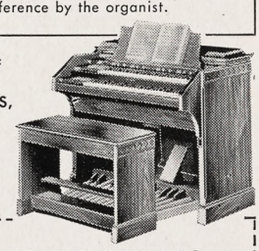
HARRY LONGLEY GOES TO HOLY TRINITY

★ The Rev. Harry S. Longley, rector of St. John's, Charleston, W. Va., will become rector of Holy Trinity, Philadelphia, on September 1. It is one of the outstanding parishes of the country.

World's leading church organ

The Hammond Organ offers a combination of features found in no other organ:

- A full range of true church tones
- Exclusive "reverberation control"
- Provides music of cathedral quality for the smallest church
- Never gets out of tune†
- Installed without structural changes



These are a few of the reasons why the Hammond Organ is the world's largest-selling Church Organ, selected by more than 20,000 churches.

PRICES START AT $1285*
For Spinet Model with tone equipment and bench

HAMMOND ORGAN
MUSIC'S MOST GLORIOUS VOICE

*f.o.b. Chicago; includes Federal excise tax, rebated to churches.
Concert Model has 32-note pedal keyboard built to AGO specifications and an additional †Pedal Solo Unit, tunable to preference by the organist.

COMPLETE LINE OF 2-manual-and-pedal HAMMOND ORGANS, including Church Model (shown at right)

FREE! TWO BOOKLETS

☐ "Are You Wondering About Organs?"
☐ "49 Tested Ways of Raising Money for a Church Organ"

Hammond Instrument Company
4231 W. Diversey Ave., Chicago 39, Ill.

Name.....
Street.....
City.....Zone.....State.....

© 1951, Hammond Instrument Company

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CONNECTICUT LAUNCHES LARGE FUND

★ The diocese of Connecticut has launched a campaign for at least $1,000,000 for an advance work program. Bishop Gray announced that the money would be used to develop a conference center, a summer camp, employ a full time youth worker, establishing work at Yale, with a home for the chaplain, build a chapel at the University of Connecticut, open new missions, employ an additional diocesan missionary, employ a full time social relations worker, remodel the diocesan house and install a small chapel. It is expected that the fund will be sufficiently large to maintain these enterprises until such time as they can go on their own.

CLAYMONT PARISH CELEBRATES

★ The Ascension, Claymont, Delaware, celebrated its 100th anniversary on May 27 with a special service at which Bishop McKinstry was the preacher. The Rev. Charles A. Rantz has been the rector for 32 years, and has built the membership from 36 communicants to about 400, with a church school of nearly 200 children and teachers.

WHEAT FOR INDIA CAMPAIGN

★ A large number of Church people in Boston are contributing to a fund to purchase wheat for India. A wheat sale was held in Harvard Square, Cambridge, May 21-22, when people were able to buy a portion of wheat for the shipment. It was stated that $5 would buy and send 100 pounds and that it would feed an Indian for 200 days. The campaign was organized to make a dramatic demonstration of the desire of individuals, apart from the action taken by Congress, to aid the people of India during the famine.

Episcopalians who sponsor the campaign, which is being continued and extended, are Dean Charles L. Taylor and Prof. Joseph F. Fletcher of the Episcopal Theological School and the Rev. Gardiner M. Day, rector of Christ Church, Cambridge.

OKLAHOMA TO ELECT COADJUTOR

★ A special session of the diocese of Oklahoma is meeting in Tulsa this week to elect a bishop coadjutor.

BEAVERBROOK
POCONO PINES, PA.

Enjoy Real Fun, Gay Informality, Congenial Companions at this beautiful 2000 acre estate "Atop the Poconos." All Sports and Entertainment facilities. Lake. Beach. Riding. Tennis. Swimming. Boats and Canoes. Latest movies. Country Dances. You'll like the fine Christian fellowship. Protestant Services. $38 Weekly.
N. Y. Office, 11 W. 42nd St. (Room 1274)
"A CAMP FOR ADULTS ONLY" LO 5-1550

THE CHURCH PENSION FUND

and its subsidiaries

administered for the benefit of the Church

THE CHURCH HYMNAL CORPORATION

Publishers of The Hymnal; Hymnal 1940 Companion; Book of Common Prayer; A Prayer Book for Soldiers and Sailors; Prayer Book Studies; Book of Offices; Stowe's Clerical Directory.

CHURCH LIFE INSURANCE CORPORATION

Offers low cost insurance and annuity contracts to clergy, lay officials and active lay workers of the Church, either voluntary or paid, and their immediate families. Services include individual insurance programming and assistance to parish officials in preparing and establishing plans for retirement of lay employees.

THE CHURCH FIRE INSURANCE CORPORATION

Low cost fire, windstorm and extended coverage insurance on property owned by or closely affiliated with the Church, and on the residences and personal property of the clergy.

Further information available by addressing any of the above at

20 EXCHANGE PLACE NEW YORK 5, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

OTHER CHURCHES

INCREASE IN CHAPLAINS ON ACTIVE DUTY

There are 2,695 chaplains on active duty in the armed forces, with about 500 more needed to bring the corps to minimum standards. There are 1,287 in the army; 608 in the navy; 800 in the air force. The services seek clergymen between 24 and 31. Some between 31 and 41 can be accepted, but none over that age except a few reservists who volunteer.

R. C. BISHOP PUZZLED BY CRITICISM

R. C. Bishop George J. Rehring of Toledo told a group of women meeting in that city that Roman Catholics cannot understand why anyone would say that his Church is an enemy of democracy or takes away personal freedom. He asserted that the hierarchy does not meddle in politics.

BENNETT ADDRESSES METHODISTS

Prof. John C. Bennett of Union Seminary told New York Methodists, meeting at Poughkeepsie, that they should reject Communism because even "the good elements in it turn out in practice to be the entering wedge for evil." He also said that the Church should help America become aware of its own temptations and shortcomings. "America must overcome the habit of thinking that its institutions furnishes the only ways. We must stop thinking we can go it alone. The people of Europe and Asia don't understand us very well. They are afraid we will drag them into a war in which they'll be attacked more devastatingly than we will be. We must understand the way in which our fantastic prosperity separates us from the rest of the world. America must learn how to be prosperous to the glory of God."

TAYLOR SEES VATICAN ENVOY TALK 'FOOLISH'

Myron C. Taylor said after a conference with President Truman that "it is foolish to talk" about the possibility of naming a new personal representative of the President to the Vatican. The former representative of Mr. Truman to the Holy See waved aside recurrent rumors that such an envoy would be named, with the remark, "That's old stuff; there have been such rumors ever since I left the job."

Mr. Taylor, an Episcopalian, said he had not discussed the question with Mr. Truman in his 30-minute interview at the White House. He described his visit as a "courtesy call" on the President.

The 77-year-old former diplomat declared categorically that he had no intention of taking any post with the government.

CLERGY SHORTAGE PROBLEM CONCERNS BUSINESSMAN

A businessman who overcame the student nurse shortage for Indiana Methodist hospitals has now tackled the shortage of ministers and lay church workers. Edward F. Gallahue, president of an insurance company, accepted an invitation from Methodist Bishop Richard C. Raines of Indianapolis to work out a recruiting program for Christian vocations similar to his nurses' recruiting plan which has been adopted nationally by the Methodist board of hospitals and homes.

Mr. Gallahue will attempt to provide Indiana Methodists with a permanent program for bringing "the cream of the state's youth" into the ministry.

In Indiana's 700 Methodist churches, as elsewhere in the nation, there is a shortage of properly qualified ministers. Small congregations share their pastors, use part-time lay preachers, or have full-time "supplies" -- men whose spiritual qualifications are approved by the Church, but who are lacking in educational requirements.

After personally underwriting a banquet for about 500 outstanding high school and college students from throughout the state, Mr. Gallahue planned a state-wide conference on church-related vocations.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

PEOPLE OF THE CHURCH

CLERGY CHANGES:

NORMAN H. V. ELLIOTT of Detroit, a student at Virginia Seminary, has been assigned to the missionary post at Nenana, Alaska, with the understanding that in a year he will be transferred to the newly created post of diocesan missioner, stationed at Eagle.

W. BRADFORD HASTINGS, formerly rector of Trinity, Concord, Mass., is now rector of Christ Church, St. Paul, Mo.

F. C. BROWN, former missionary in China, is now rector of St. Mary's, Dorchester, Mass.

H. A. JERAULD, formerly rector of the Epiphany, Dorchester, Mass., is now rector of the Good Shepherd, Reading, Mass.

R. P. McCLINTOCK, formerly rector of the Messiah, Auburndale, Mass., is now rector of Trinity, Watertown, N. Y.

GEORGE PEABODY, son of Bishop Peabody of Central New York, becomes assistant at Grace Church, St. Louis, Mo., July 1.

EDWARD I. SWANSON, formerly vicar at the Messiah, Foster, R. I., becomes rector of the Good Shepherd, Clinton, Mass., on Aug. 1st.

DAVID SWEET, student at Virginia Seminary, has been appointed minister in charge of the Good Shepherd, Milford, Pa.

MALCOLM LANGLEY, rector of St. John's, Havre de Grace, Md., becomes rector of St. John's, Mankato, Minn., June 16.

ARTLEY B. PARSON, former ass't at St. George's, New York, becomes rector of the Good Shepherd, Fitchburg, Mass., Sept. 1.

ROBERT H. CUMMINGS, student at Berkeley Divinity School, becomes minister in charge of Grace Church, Chicopee, Mass., June 15.

ARNOLD A. FENTON, student at General Seminary, comes as assistant at Christ Church Cathedral, Springfield, Mass., July 1.

DEATHS:

GRIFFIN M. CUTTING, 81, associate rector of St. Paul's, San Diego, Cal., died May 15 from injuries received in an auto accident.

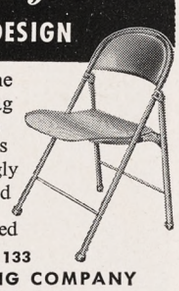
MELBOURNE R. HOGARTH, 45, former vicar of St. Martin's, Watts, Cal., died May 16 after a long illness which he contracted while serving in the South Pacific as chaplain in W.W. 2.

FRANCES LEBARON CASIDY, wife of Bishop Casady of Okla., died April 28 after a long illness.

HERVEY C. PARKE, 78, one-time rector of Grace Church, Amherst, Mass., was buried from that church on May 9 with Bishop Lawrence conducting the service.

J. HUGH HOOPER, 78, retired rector of Zion Church, Hudson Falls, N. Y., died May 13.

HONORS:



ALBERT E. CAMPION, rector of the Mediator, New York, was awarded a doctorate by New York University.

MURIEL LENTON was honored for her 25 years service as director of the family service dept. of the N. Y. City Mission Society at the spring meeting of the board of managers. Bishop Donegan presented a gift on behalf of the board.

POSITION OFFERED: A woman as Director of Religious Education, or an unmarried clergyman as assistant in a New Jersey suburban parish. Evangelical Churchmanship. Box T, WITNESS, TUNKHANNOCK, PA.

Widow, mature, clergyman's daughter, desires position in cultured family as companion-secretary, summer or permanent. Can type, drive car and will travel. Reply Box W, Witness, Tunkhannock, Pa.

American Folding Chairs
NEW IMPROVED DESIGN

DURABLE—strong steel frame
SAFE—can't tip, pinch, snag
COMFORTABLE—extra-wide and extra-deep seats, backs
FOLD QUICKLY, quietly, snugly
THREE SEAT STYLES—formed steel; formed plywood; imitation-leather upholstered

Write Dept. 133
AMERICAN SEATING COMPANY
World's Leader in Public Seating
901 Broadway N. W., Grand Rapids 2, Mich.

IHS Paraments

A full line of altar cloths, linens and antependia. Also unusual designs for pulpit book marks and lecturn hangings. Write for our catalog of Church Furniture and Other Appointments. Also Stained Glass Windows and Books of Remembrance.

WHITTEMORE ASSOCIATES, INC.
16 ASHBURTON PLACE, BOSTON 8, MASSACHUSETTS

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER
FABRICS + WINDOWS

Everything for the Episcopal Church
Ammidon & Company
HORACE L. VARIAN
31 S. Frederick St. Baltimore 2, Md.

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS
Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS
Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.
SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

Exquisite
IRISH LINENS
BY THE YARD
From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States, I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values; unsurpassed quality, imported direct from Ireland. Also transfer patterns, linen tape, and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 3 inches at 75c, 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.00.
MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

THE BISHOP WHITE PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833
Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.
PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)
Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

FINEST PURE IRISH LINEN
Buy linen now from complete stocks personally selected in Ireland. Also Cassock Cloth, Vestment patterns. Embdy. designs and instruction books.
Samples Free
MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
BOX 386 CHILLICOTHE, MO.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

LEE C. PARSONS
Layman of Springfield, Mass.

The recent visit of Paul Blanshard to Springfield was of outstanding importance. The author of "American Freedom and Catholic Power" made a strong impression upon those who heard him and those who read accounts of his lectures. Mr. Blanshard had no criticism of Roman Catholics as individuals but did criticize the lust for power of that Church.

Here in Massachusetts we see this purpose in the growth in parochial schools and the activity of the Roman Catholic Church in politics. This was conspicuously shown last year in the campaign for a law authorizing the practice of birth control by married persons for health reasons. This proposal was fought bitterly by the Roman Catholic Church and defeated largely through its efforts. The determination of the Church was shown by its exclusion from medical practice in Roman Catholic hospitals of all Protestant doctors who took a stand for birth control. So Massachusetts remains one of the two states which ban birth control, Connecticut being the other. The address of Mr. Blanshard has served a useful purpose in opening the eyes of Protestants to the sinister plans for control of the government on the part of the Roman Catholic hierarchy.

C. T. ABBOTT JR.
Vicar of St. Anne's, Stockton, Cal.

At this time of year many students are having a "pre-registration" period for the fall semester in colleges and universities. It would materially help the college workers if our clergy would encourage students to register as Episcopal students and not as "protestants," if religious preference cards are available. Many students "escape" the pastoral ministrations of the college chaplain because of this difficulty. If the clergy would also use the "Letter of Commendation" for college and university students it would also assist in a more effective religious life on campus.

C. B. LUCAS
Rector of St. Timothy's, Atlanta

Notes & Comments, April 26, in regard to "Low Sunday": It may interest you to know that in my ministry here I have had several "Low Sundays" with a larger attendance than at 11 a. m. Easter. This is because I have planned special services that so appealed that more came. I have also had splendid summer attendance because I begin immediately after Easter to emphasize Whitsunday. It is not always easy—but it can be done. Several times in my ministry I have had splendid attendance in August. In Buffalo, N. Y., where I spent 15 years in one parish — we sometimes featured "Summer Sunday Evenings"—by making a house to house canvass and inviting people to come to our evening services if their own church had none. All this takes lots of work; much prayer; and workers who believe in and are willing to work for whatever program one may make for "after Easter." Sometimes we are disappointed in the results—but as a boy we learned to "pick ourselves up" after each defeat and keep on keeping on.

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL
Coeducational Episcopal Day School
Prepares for leading secondary schools. Sound academic training. Kindergarten thru 8th grade. French and Latin emphasized. Complete testing program. Est. 1894. Music, drama, arts & crafts, sports. Bus service. Hot lunch. Tel: AL 4-2000
E. ALLISON GRANT, Headmaster
88 E. Fourth Ave. (11th St.), N. Y. 3

THE PATTERSON SCHOOL for BOYS

Episcopal School in Blue Ridge Mountains of Western No. Carolina. Accredited. Grades 6-12. Gymnasium, sports, 42nd year. 1300-acre estate. Board and tuition, moderate.
GEORGE F. WIESE, Supt.
COLLEGE PREPARATORY Legerwood, N. C. HEALTH EDUCATION CHARACTER BUILDING

FORK UNION MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

SCHOOLS

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof buildings.
REV. EDRIC A. WELD, RECTOR
Box W Plymouth, N. H.

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

The Hannah More Academy
Est. 1832, Episcopal school for girls, grades 7-12. Outstanding preparation for leading colleges, also General Academic Course, Music, Art, Athletics and Riding carefully supervised. Eighteen miles northwest of Baltimore. Moderate rates. Catalogue.
ELIZABETH N. HARVEY, M.A.
Headmistress, Reisterstown, Md.

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. City 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE-MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Schools of the Church

BARD COLLEGE
Formerly St. Stephen's
A Coeducational College of Liberal Arts and Sciences
FOUNDED 1860
For catalogue and further information write to The Director of Admissions, Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, New York.

DANIEL BAKER COLLEGE
BROWNWOOD, TEXAS
Established 1889. Operated under the auspices of the Diocese of Dallas. Co-educational senior college offering B.A. and B.S. degrees. Special opportunities in teacher training, music education, business administration. The only available undergraduate course in the Episcopal Church in Church Work Training. Member: Association of Texas Colleges.
REV'D W. A. CROSS, M.A., President
REV'D L. A. HASELMAYER, Ph.D., Dean

SAINT PAUL'S POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE
LAWRENCEVILLE, VIRGINIA
Approved by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. B.S. Degree with major in Trade and Industrial Education, B.S. Degree in Home Economics Education, B.S. Degree with major in Elementary Education, B.S. Degree in Secondary Education.
EARL H. McCLENNEY, President

VOORHEES SCHOOL & JR. COLLEGE
DENMARK, S. C.
Co-educational. Accredited by State Dept. of Education of S. C. and the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges. Under the two Dioceses of S. C. and The American Church Institute for Negroes. Expenses reasonable. Limited scholarship aid for worthy students. Apply:
CECIL D. HALLIBURTON, President

Okolona College
Okolona, Mississippi
Co-educational, Private, American Church Institute for Negroes (Protestant Episcopal Church) Established 1902
High School and Junior College - Trades and Industries - Music
For information write: W. MILAN DAVIS President
Today's Training for Tomorrow's Opportunities

St. Augustine's College
RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA
1867 — 1951
Accredited Four-Year College for Negro Youth. Co-educational. Music, Pre-Medical, Health and Physical Education, High School Teacher Training, Business, Pre-Social Work, Nursing Education in co-operation with St. Agnes Hospital.
HAROLD L. TRIGG, President

SAINT HELEN'S HALL
Portland 1, Oregon
Historic Pacific Northwest Episcopal resident and day school. Founded in 1869. Co-educational pre-school. Boys admitted to Lower School through grade III. Upper School girls only.
Write for catalog.
The RT. REV. BENJAMIN DAGWELL, D.D.
President, Board of Trustees
JANE ALLEN SAXTON,
HEADMISTRESS

The Cathedral Schools
National Cathedral School for Girls
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding department, grades 7-12
KATHARINE LEE, Principal

St. Albans
The National Cathedral School for Boys
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding Department, grades 8-12
CHARLES MARTIN, Headmaster
Address:
Mt. St. Alban, Washington 16, D. C.

St. John Baptist School
FOR GIRLS
Offers College Preparatory and General courses. Music, art, outdoor sports, and a happy home life, with character building extra-curricular activities for resident and day students, under the care of the Sisters of St. John Baptist. In the country near Morristown, New Jersey. Accredited.
For catalog address Box 556
The Sister Superior, Mendham, New Jersey

St. John's MILITARY SCHOOL
Salina, Kansas
Since 1887 St. John's has been perpetuating the cultural tradition of the Church by stressing sound scholarship in Christian atmosphere. Grades 3 through 12. Fully accredited.
COL. R. L. CLEM, Rector

ST. MARY'S HALL
SECONDARY BOARDING SCHOOL
Faribault, Minnesota
Close relationship of students and faculty in residence allows for a maximum of spiritual, academic, and social growth. Preparation for leading colleges. An extensive sports program, including riding.
PHYLLIS M. NEWMAN, M.A.
Founded 1866 Headmistress

IOLANI SCHOOL
Episcopal Church School for Boys
HONOLULU 17, HAWAII
A college preparatory church school for boys. Kindergarten through twelfth grade. Established 1862. Day tuition $225 to $275. Boarding $665 - $775. Summer session. Accredited.
REV. CHARLES A. PARMITER, JR.
M.A., S.T.B., Rector

The MERRICOURT SCHOOL
(Episcopal)
A country boarding school for 40 boys & girls. Grades 1-8 (pre-preparatory). Home-like environment. Sports, extra-curricula program. 26th year. 8 weeks summer camp. For information: Visit, write, or phone 3-3209.
THE REV. M. W. WHITFORD, Hdm.
BERLIN, CONN.

ST. LUKE'S HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING
New York City
Offers a 3 year course in nursing to high school and college graduates. College graduates may be admitted with 9 months advanced credit allowance. For further information write to The Director of Nursing, St. Luke's Hospital, 421 West 113th St., New York 25, N. Y.

HARVARD SCHOOL
Diocesan School for Boys. 52nd Year. Fall term opens September 11, 1951. Grades seven through twelve. Fully Accredited. R.O.T.C. unit. For all information apply to
THE REV. W. S. CHALMERS
Headmaster
3700 Coldwater Canyon Rd.
NORTH HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

Cathedral School of St. Mary
An accredited Episcopal school for girls. Suburban New York City. Day-nursery to college. Boarding—fifth grade to college. Strong college preparatory course. Music, Dramatics, Art. Excellent sports program. Catalog on request.
MARION REID MARCH
Box W, Garden City, Long Island, N. Y.

ST. STEPHEN'S SCHOOL FOR BOYS
ALEXANDRIA, VA.
Grades 3 thru 12 (Day School). College Preparatory. Under the Church School System of the Diocese of Virginia.
Address
THE REV. EDWARD E. TATE,
Headmaster
2405 Russell Rd. ALEXANDRIA, VA.

ST. MARY'S HALL on the Delaware.
Episcopal boarding and day school for girls 8-18. Founded 1837. Thorough college preparation. Fully accredited. Separate lower school. College preparatory and general courses. Music, Art, Clubs, Sports, Dramatics. Near New York and Philadelphia. Catalogue.
FLORENCE LUKENS NEWBOLD
Headmistress
Burlington, New Jersey

DeVEAUX SCHOOL
Niagara Falls, New York
FOUNDED 1852
The Church School in the Diocese of Western New York. College preparatory for boys. Representative form of student government. Small classes. Reasonable charges. Grades 7 through 12.
For information address The Headmaster.

The Church Home and Hospital
SCHOOL OF NURSING
Baltimore 31, Maryland
A three year course of nursing. Classes enter August and September. Scholarships available to well qualified high school graduates.
Apply to Director of Nursing

ST. AGNES SCHOOL
An Episcopal Country Day and Boarding School for Girls
Excellent College Preparatory record. Special courses arranged for girls not contemplating college. Day pupils range from Kindergarten to College Entrance. Boarders from Grade 8 to College Entrance.
MISS BLANCHE PITTMAN, Principal
Albany New York

HOWE MILITARY SCHOOL
Thorough Academic Training in a Spiritual Environment. R.O.T.C. Accredited college preparatory, business courses. Junior School. Small classes. Every boy participates in sports. Balanced program. Episcopal. Established 1884. Summer Camp, boys grammar school age. Catalogue.
COL. B. B. BOUTON
13 Academy Place, Howe, Indiana

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE Witness

10¢ A COPY

June 14, 1951

NORMAN B. NASH

Massachusetts Bishop is an EEF Leader

Episcopal Evangelical Fellowship

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY

Sundays: 8, 9, 11 Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4.

Weekdays: 7:30, 8 (and 9 Holy Days except Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 8:30, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer. Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.

Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector

Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues.-Thurs., Prayers—12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C.—11:45 Fri., Organ Recital—12:30.

THE HEAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street

Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.

Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10 a. m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a. m.
Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 11 a. m.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street

Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes Jr., Rector

8 a. m. and 9 a. m., Holy Communion.
11 a. m., Morning Service and Sermon.
Weekdays: Holy Communion Wednesday at 8 a. m.
Thursdays and Saints' Days at 10:30 a. m.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK

Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector

Sunday: 8 a. m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a. m., Church School; 11 a. m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p. m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a. m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street

Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector

Sundays: 8 a. m., Holy Communion; 11 a. m., Morning Prayer—1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a. m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a. m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK

Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector

Sundays: 8 a. m., Holy Communion; 11 a. m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p. m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a. m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY

The Rev. Grieg Taber

Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY

The Rev. James A. Paul, Vicar

Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V

Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail

The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson

Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a. m., 4:00 and 7:30 p. m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK

The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean; Rev. Leslie D. Hallett; Rev. Mitchell Haddad

Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon.
Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.

The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D., Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist

Sunday: 9 and 11 a. m., 7:30 p. m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p. m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p. m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO

Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon

Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 — 4:30 p. m. recitals.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.

Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a. m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a. m., Morning Prayer; 8 p. m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat. 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE

Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain

Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a. m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a. m.
Thursday, 7:30 a. m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI

Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector

Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a. m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Monument Circle Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon

Sun.: H.C. 8, 12:15; 11, 1st S. Family, 9:30; M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.

Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean

Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO

Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.

Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Week-day, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

Rev. Payton Randolph Williams

7:30 a. m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p. m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a. m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education

Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p. m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p. m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market

Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant

Sunday Services: 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH

Rev. William W. Lumpkin, Rector; Rev. Eugene M. Chapman; Rev. E. Laurence Baxter.

Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698

Rev. James R. MacColl, 3rd, Rector

Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 23 The WITNESS JUNE 14, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 135 LIBERTY ST., NEW YORK 6, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

England Makes Real Progress In Church Relations

Books Just Published Discusses Results Of Conferences Held Recently

BY
HUGH McCANDLESS
Rector of The Church of the Epiphany
New York

★ In his Cambridge sermon of 1946, the Archbishop of Canterbury suggested that Church union might best be effected in England not by a formal scheme such as that proposed in 1938, but by the introduction of bishops into the polity of "nonconformist" Churches.

A number of Anglicans and members of other Churches have conferred together since that time to discuss this. Their findings have been published by the S.P.C.K. in a booklet called "Church Relations in England." This is unfortunately not available yet in this country through the regular agents of the S.P.C.K. My copy is on its way to me now, so this report is in the nature of a notice about the book, and not a review.

It seems that the findings are that six steps would be necessary.

First, there would have to be agreement in doctrine on the basis of Holy Scripture.

Second, the other Church would accept episcopacy from the Church of England, which would recognize these men and those they ordain as having valid orders.

Third, there would be intercommunion. Confirmation would not be necessary.

Fourth, the Anglicans would hope that confirmation as we know it would become the general practice in the other Church.

Fifth, the other Church would not change its relations with other non-conformist Churches.

Sixth, the ultimate goal would be full union.

Two problems immediately occur to the reader. Do the other Churches want episcopacy? There is strong evidence that they well might, if our approach were one of humility. We can well treasure the apostolic succession without being offensive about it.

Many of the other Churches now have growing bureaucracies in which all the imagined faults of episcopacy exist, and none of the virtues. Many of them agree with Archbishop Temple in placing doctrine on a higher level than order.

Another problem would be caused by the admission of baptized but not confirmed persons to Holy Communion. Would this result in complete anarchy?

We have some experience to guide us here. In the missionary district of Puerto Rico, this has been done in the case of a merger with the "Church of Jesus." This is a rather catholic missionary district. The results seem to have been good.

Such books as "Church Relations in England," and the spirit that lies behind their production, must immediately bring to mind the recently multiplied, intensified, and much publicized manifestations of irreconcilability on the part of the Roman Church. The contrast is remarkable.

There are some who will say that we should imitate the Roman Catholics, as they are so much more astute and worldly-wise than we are. This point of view should be carefully weighed. It will be found wanting.

In the first place, are they really cleverer, or is this isolation an expression of insecurity? When they feel they are making satisfactory progress, their demeanor is usually rather bland and debonair.

Or again, may this not be their warning to those who are following them in a crusade against "secularism" to remember to keep their place? We may be their allies in the fight against another form of totalitarianism, and perhaps they are warning us that this alliance does not mean we are equal or similar to them, or can be too intimate with them.

Let us suppose they are cleverer. Is this "cleverness' of theirs particularly wise? Rome's greatness was first based on hospitality, and then on its missionary program. Let us suppose it is wise. Is it the wisdom of the children of light? Is worldly success our only criterion?

Keeping up with the Joneses in such matters may be a dangerous substitute for listening to the Holy Spirit.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

ANGLICAN CONGRESS IS POSTPONED

★ Bishop Keeler of Minnesota has announced that the world-wide Anglican Congress, scheduled to meet in Minneapolis in August, 1953, has been postponed until August, 1954. The reason is that the second assembly of the World Council of Churches has been changed to 1954 and it is expected that many of the overseas delegates will attend both events.

UNITED CHURCH HAS EEF CHAPEL

★ Acting Principal Carl Kellar writes that the new chapel at the Kerala United Theological Seminary of the United Church of South India, at Kannamoola, Trivandrum, South India, which was built at a cost of about $4,500, contributed by E.E.F. members, is now nearing completion.

From its inception in the 1930's, and its actual inauguration four years ago, the United Church of South India has been a witness to the Episcopal Evangelical Fellowship of the kind of approach to Church unity for which the EEF has been working and praying in this country. When the Rev. Gardiner Day, former president of the fellowship, asked Bishop Hollis, the moderator of the United Church, how the EEF might help, the chapel at Kerala was suggested.

The contribution of the chapel is more than a missionary act, and more than an act of helpfulness to a sister Church. It is a demonstration of the faith of the EEF that God wills unity.

OFFICERS OF THE EEF

★ The Episcopal Evangelical Fellowship board — President, the Rev. Charles D. Kean, Kirkwood, Missouri; First Vice President, the Rev. Charles F. Penniman, St. Louis, Mo.; Second Vice President, the Rev. E. Felix Kloman, Washington, D. C.; secretary; the Rev. R. Malcolm Ward, Maumee, Ohio; Treasurer, Miss Elsie C. Hutton, New York City.

Executive committee—Mr. Kean, Dr. Penniman, Dean Sidney E. Sweet, the Rev. J. Francis Sant, the Rev. William H. Laird, Messrs. J. Maver Feehan, John H. Leach, and Paul E. Rutledge.

Directors—Gardiner M. Day, John W. Day, Roscoe T. Foust, Harold C. Gosnell, James W. Kennedy, John C. Leffler, Stiles B. Lines, Randolph C. Miller, William H. Marmion, Francis John Moore, John R. Pattie, Mrs. Henry Hill Pierce, Mrs. Arthur Sherman, Charles W. F. Smith, C. C. Tarplee, Frederick Warnecke, Matthew M. Warren, Theodore O. Wedel, Alexander C. Zabriskie.

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL TO EXPAND

★ Grace Church, New York, will start this summer an extensive remodelling and construction program in connection with its parish day school, it was announced at services on May 13 by the Rev. Louis W. Pitt, rector. Speaking at the service was Judge Robert M. Marsh, chairman of the building committee, who said that the building which the school now occupies will be completely remodelled and a new six-story building be constructed next to it. The estimated cost of the project is $500,000 of which more than half has already been raised through special gifts or advanced from parish funds by the vestry.

DEAN SIDNEY E. SWEET of Christ Church Cathedral, St. Louis, was recently honored on the twentieth anniversary of his deanship. Mrs. Sweet cuts the birthday cake as the Dean and Bishop and Mrs. Scarlett look on. They are all staunch members of the Episcopal Evangelical Fellowship

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SHERRILL ADDRESSES PRESBYTERIANS

★ Presiding Bishop Henry K. Sherrill, in his capacity as president of the United Council of Churches, told the delegates attending the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, meeting in Cincinnati, that no single Church could cope successfully with the "disorder, chaos and confusion" of modern times. He delivered the address at an ecumenical service held in connection with the Assembly.

Describing the "forces of evil" rampant today as "powerful beyond description," Bishop Sherrill said "they must be faced on a world stage." He pleaded for greater interchurch cooperation and warned modern Christians to beware of "smallness of vision within" more than "opposition from without."

Turning to recent "authoritative revelations of moral delinquency," Bishop Sherrill cited the need for the "inculcation of principles of right and wrong." These, he said, "must rest upon the character of God and the imperatives taught and lived by Jesus Christ."

The bishop lauded the World Council of Churches for breaking down the "inner walls of partition between races and nations." But the World Council and the National Council of Churches, he said, are bodies with no control over the faith and doctrine of member Churches. Their purpose, he stressed, is to promote cooperative effort "without compromise of principles or of conviction."

Bishop Sherrill emphasized the responsibility of the Churches of the world to build a fellowship which "reveals the character of God in Christ." At the same time, he warned that "the strength of the wider Christian fellowship will rest not alone in budgets, in organizations, in activities, however good, in constitutions and by-laws, but in the quality of Christian life, in self-sacrifice, in loving kindness."

"The forces of evil are unquestionably of great power," he said, "but not so much so as the invincible forces of the spirit. With consciousness of all we hold in common, with high purpose and consecration, the Churches of Christ can build a nation and a world under God."

The service at which Bishop Sherrill spoke included a colorful procession of church dignitaries and a roll-call of all Churches of the national and world councils. The combined choirs of 22 churches in Cincinnati furnished the music.

UNION SEMINARY COMMENCEMENT

★ The largest graduating class in the history of Union Seminary, 200, received their degrees on May 22. There were 19 Episcopalians among the 36 denominations represented. The Presbyterian Church had the largest number, 53, with the Methodist second with 41. There were five Episcopal clergymen to receive degrees: the Rev. James A. Pike, chaplain at Columbia received a B.D., as did the Rev. Alexander Stewart of Boston. The Rev. Paul M. Suzuki of Japan received the S.T.M. and the Rev. Harold Bassage of Webster Grove, Mo., and the Rev. Charles R. Stinnette Jr. of Rochester, N. Y., received doctorates.

DANIEL BAKER COLLEGE HAS GRADUATION

★ Commencement at Daniel Baker College, Brownwood, Texas, was held May 30 when 22 seniors received degrees. Two of them are to enter theological schools, Ronald Dunham, postulant of Dallas, to General, and Masao Fujita of Honolulu to the Church Divinity School of the Pacific. The bishop and suffragan bishop of Dallas as well as many of the clergy of the dioceses of Dallas and North Texas participated in the commencement which marked the first year that the college has operated under the Episcopal Church.

THE REV. CHARLES D. KEAN, president of the Episcopal Evangelical Fellowship and rector of Grace Church, Kirkwood, Missouri, calls upon Miss Henrietta Scheetz, one of his parishioners, on her ninetieth birthday. An article by Mr. Kean is featured in this issue

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CHURCH SCHOOL OFFERING

★ The missionary offering of the Church schools—for 1950 has reached a total of $526,679, with final return not yet in from three dioceses. The offering for 1949 was $509,393. The 1950 offering has been exceeded but twice since it was started in 1877. The largest offering ever received was the year of the jubilee observance, 1927, when the total was $553,252.

EVANGELICALS TO HAVE PAPER

★ The Evangelical Education Society and the Episcopal Evangelical Fellowship will be joint publishers of a monthly newsletter beginning in September. The publication will be edited by the Rev. Robert O. Kevin, of the Virginia Theological Seminary, assisted by the Rev. W. Russell Bowie, the Rev. William R. Clebsch and the Rev. Clifford L. Stanley.

The purpose of the newsletter is to provide a medium through which news of importance to Evangelicals can be presented to the Church. Each issue will, according to present plans, contain one article treating some development in the life of the Church.

Dr. Kevin and his staff will be assisted by a nation-wide board which will keep it informed of news developments in various parts of the country.

All dues-paying members of the Episcopal Evangelical Fellowship will be automatic subscribers to the news-letter. Other persons may subscribe directly through the office of the Evangelical Education Society.

BISHOP WYATT-BROWN IS HONORED

★ Bishop Hunter Wyatt-Brown, who retired as bishop of Harrisburg in 1943 because of illness, attended the convention of the diocese, meeting at St. Stephen's Cathedral, Harrisburg, to mark the 20th anniversary of his consecration. He participated in the services and sessions and addressed the convention.

Bishop Heistand in his address said that "we are in danger not only from communism but also from corruption and evil in our national and political and social life, on all levels." Declaring that the Church must not be passive in this time of crisis, he added that "the danger lies in any desire to withdraw from the area of conflict."

The Rev. George Wieland, director of the home department of the National Council, addressed a mass meeting on the first evening of the convention.

The size of the executive council was reduced in the interest of efficiency. A committee was appointed to study methods of fixing assessments and quotas for the diocesan fund and the field work fund.

JUNIOR COUNCIL OF CHURCHES FORMED

★ The youth organization of St. James' Church, Greenfield, Mass., has joined with youth groups of eight other Protestant churches in the city to form a junior council of churches. The council will conduct its own meetings and activities. Plans are being made for a rally in the fall, a radio show in February and a dance next April.

MISSIONARIES RETURN FROM CHINA

★ The Rev. Robert E. Wood of Wuchang has been in New York on the way to Batavia, N. Y., where he was born March 29, 1872. After his graduation from the General Theological Seminary and ordination to the diaconate in 1897, he was ordained priest in 1898 and went directly to China. He has been there ever since except when he was with a Chinese labor corps in France 1918-20. He retired officially in 1940 but has continued to be almost as active as ever.

From St. James Hospital, Anking, Blanche Myers, hospital manager, and Emeline Bowne, superintendent of nursing, left Shanghai on May 7 for Hongkong and were to sail from there June 1 on the President Cleveland, Miss Myers stopping off in Honolulu, Miss Bowne coming on to the States. Miss Bowne has been in China since 1922, Miss Myers since 1924.

LITTLE TOTS like these present a major problem in Christian education as told by Professor Randolph Crump Miller in this issue

The Rev. and Mrs. Charles P. Gilson, who have each been helping with special work at Church Missions House since their return from Shaghai, have gone to Carolina, R. I., where Mr. Gilson will have charge of a group of missions.

Lillian Weidenhammer, chemistry teacher from Huachung University, Wuchang, was looking for a place to teach when she was offered and accepted an industrial position with a chemical firm in Niagara Falls, N. Y., at a salary, it might be noted, about three times her missionary salary.

MAN BITES DOG IN COLORADO

★ Snow and freezing weather in June is a "man bites dog" item—and that was what the weatherman provided for the 65 lay persons from seven dioceses who went to Evergreen, Colo., June 1-3, for a conference on Christian education. All attending agreed however that the inspiration and warmth of Christian fellowship which was experienced was in no way hampered by the weather. The affair was conducted by the National Council's team of the Rev. Walter Williams, Mrs. Dora P. Chaplin, Canon and Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel.

CUTTINGTON COLLEGE IS GROWING

★ Cuttington College, Monrovia, Liberia, now has 31 students. One is studying theology and five others are looking forward to preparation for orders when their college work is completed. One of the five is a Methodist, the others Episcopalians.

A recent visitor at Cuttington was Mr. LeTourneau and five members of his company. He is the well-known manufacturer of earth-moving machinery, who is an ardent lay evangelist. He is studying Liberia with the possibility in mind of building a plant there. He addressed the students at Cuttington on giving themselves to God.

The Sunday School Union of Mesurado County has pledged support for one of Cuttington's theological students and has also offered employment at Caldwell of a teacher to be paid by the Union. St. Thomas Sunday school is contributing toward the support of another student preparing for the ministry.

St. Paul's Sunday School of Sinoe County has presented to the parish 300 steel chairs, an organ and a carpet for the aisle. St. Paul's congregation completed its new church building in time to entertain the convocation.

NATIONAL EPISCOPAL PARISH

★ An Episcopal chaplain stationed at an army installation in this country has set up "The National Episcopal Parish," his explanation being that the people to whom he ministers "come from so many dioceses and so many different states."

"During my first week here," the chaplain wrote in a news report to Episcopal Church people at the installation, "34 Episcopalians have come to my attention and I have personally met many of them. We hope that presently we can have a line on every Episcopal churchman here. It is my prayerful hope and plan to make my new military congregation a 'Church home away from home,' with as many of the organizational features and teaching programs in action as possible, so that the Church may mean as much as possible to as many people as possible."

In his "organizational parish setup" the chaplain has named a general as senior warden, a colonel as junior warden, a lieutenant colonel parish lay reader, a corporal as organist.

BISHOP SWIFT TO BE ENTHRONED

★ Bishop A. Ervine Swift of Puerto Rico is to be enthroned in the Cathedral of St. John the Baptist, Santurce, on June 24. His first official act in the district was to speak at the first graduation exercises at Colegio San Justo, boys' school at St. Just, on May 30.

LEADERS OF WORKSHOP in Diocese of Lexington on the new study course on faith and order, referred to in the article in this issue by Dr. Kennedy: Mrs. Cecil Cantrill; Mrs. William A. Turner; the Rev. Frederick C. Grant, Witness Book Editor; Bishop Moody, the Rev. James W. Kennedy; Mrs. Margaret Johnson

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EPISCOPALIANS IN CONGRESS

★ There are 41 Episcopalians who are members of the House of Representatives. Methodists lead with 84; Roman Catholics are second with 72; Baptists third with 56; Presbyterians fourth with 48. There are 50 members who specified no Church preference.

ST. LUKE'S HOSPITAL IS BUSY

★ St. Luke's Hospital, Tokyo, has had its hands full with a variety of work and responsibility. The directors' report to the board of trustees in May told of final repairs or replacements after fire damage in the previous year, addition of some new modern equipment provided through the National Council, new books and journals received from the Church Periodical Club, increased staff salaries in keeping with rising cost of living, larger number of patients cared for by various agencies in accordance with national health insurance, continued health supervision for St. Paul's and St. Margaret's Schools, public health activities at the rural clinic at Kyosato, cooperation with government agencies to improve hospital administration, nursing, and medical social service throughout Japan, and demonstrations and conferences on hospital problems with medical men from all parts of the country.

In October, 1951, the hospital will lose its government recognition as a general hospital unless more than one hundred beds are available. The present number is twenty-six. It is therefore felt to be essential that either the "real St. Luke's" (the big main hospital building which has been occupied by the U. S. army since 1945) be released after a peace treaty is signed, or a temporary building of 120 beds be erected without delay. Clinic treatments are around 500 daily.

The staff of doctors, nurses, and others, totals 145. Of these, 71 were Christian at the time of the report. The baptism of six senior physicians, reported some months ago, has been followed by their confirmation by the Bishop of Tokyo.

SUGGEST MacARTHUR FOR JAPAN

★ A plea for General MacArthur to return to Japan to work for the Church highlighted the convention of the diocese of Central New York, held at Trinity, Binghamton. The convention accepted the suggestion of Bishop Peabody that plans be made for an adequate diocesan center.

NEWARK PRESENTS OFFERING

★ The United Thank Offering for the diocese of Newark was presented at a service on May 18 which was attended by about 650 women and clergymen of the diocese. The Rev. John E. Large, rector of the Heavenly Rest, New York, was the preacher at the communion service with Bishop Washburn celebrant assisted by Bishop Ludlow. At the luncheon it was announced that the offering was $14,732, about $3,000 more than 1950.

ENGLISH DEAN SPEAKS ON WORLD STRUGGLE

★ Dean Garfield Williams of England, told a large group of Episcopalians meeting at the Church of the Saviour, Syracuse, N. Y., that "a world revolution is on" with the people "advancing under the urge of a divine discontent." He added that "they are seeking for a new economy; they will build a new way of life, but will need help, inspiration and guidance."

Speaking of communism, the dean declared that "the mistake of the western world has been to underestimate its effects. It has raised the level of life for people living at a primitive level."

WITNESS EDITOR GOES TO ENGLAND

★ The Rev. William K. Russell, a member of The Witness editors board until he went to St. Louis to be the minister of St. Andrew's, and is now a contributing editor, is one of seven American clergymen of various Protestant Churches to go to England this summer on the "exchange of preachers" program of the National Council of Churches. An equal number of English clergymen will visit the United States.

INDIA CONFERENCE STUDIES REVISION

★ Proposals for a revised Prayer Book for the Church of India, Pakistan, Burma and Ceylon (Anglican), were discussed at a two-week conference sponsored by the denomination's liturgical committee, meeting at Bombay. It was announced that the proposals will be submitted to the Episcopal Synod of the Church which will meet at Calcutta from October 15 to 21.

AMONG THE MANY BISHOPS who are members of the Episcopal Evangelical Fellowship are Bishop Barton of Eastern Oregon; Bishop Keeler of Minnesota; Bishop Carruthers of South Carolina

EDITORIALS

The EEF View

THIS issue presents the views on some contemporary issues of the Episcopal Evangelical Fellowship, whose purpose is "to unite for common prayer, study, counsel and practical activities members of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America, who, valuing greatly the unbroken heritage of the Anglican Communion as part of the historic Catholic Church, value equally the evangelical character restored to it at the Reformation." There are no narrowly restrictive formularies to which members are required to give assent. The Fellowship invites to membership all who value the Protestant nature of our communion equally with its Catholic heritage and wish to share in adventurous action under the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

A fuller statement of its purpose will be found on page nineteen which is called to the attention of our readers, with the suggestion that they respond to the invitation it contains.

Spiritual Tonic

THIS is the open season for Church conferences, a happy invention indeed. Presently in almost every diocese groups of lay people will be off to a country retreat to work, play and pray for a week or a week-end. Selected clergy will teach the faith and offer courses in dozens of related subjects. A good time will be had by all, for that is the inevitable way at all summer conferences. Fortunate is the parish that is sending several of its members, for they will return enriched and inspired in almost every instance.

Obviously we are enthusiastic about Church conferences and heartily recommend them to our readers. For a brief week or less they offer an experience of Christian community such as too few of our lay people ever know or ever forget. It has been said that a few days at a good summer conference achieves more in the life of a young person than a year of Sunday school. He learns much more and also gets much more of a sense of the fellowship and the faith of the Church in the concentrated treatment. In our busy world with its infinite distractions, a week or even a week-end given over to study, worship and recreation in a quiet place can be a spiritual tonic indeed. We know from experience that Church conferences have been turning points in the lives of many Churchmen, occasions always to be remembered and prized.

If perchance you are thinking of attending such a conference this season—by all means don't let it remain just one of those good intentions!

"QUOTES"

MANY people are afraid of evangelism. I know a lot of people who cannot talk about their religion because they feel it is too personal and sacred. You tell your friends about your new clothing, about a new neighborhood store, about the advantages offered in the civic music course. If you can talk to them about these things, why can't you talk about the Christian way of living? All of these things are ours because someone, somewhere, felt they could talk about Jesus Christ.

—MRS. RALPH E. REULING
President of Auxiliary
Sixth Province

Boost for Press

ON the inside of the back cover of the summer issue of "Forward Day By Day" there is a plug for the Church press, with readers urged to read one of the five independent Church papers. The editors say that it is as important for a Churchman to read a Church journal as it is for a doctor to read a medical journal, or a lawyer a law review. They suggest that summer is a good time to start the habit of regular Church reading. The independent papers are listed and readers are urged to write for a sample copy and to subscribe to the one that appeals the most.

We thank the editors of Forward for their interest. We will even do better than they suggest. If you will send the names of people whom you think would be interested in The Witness we will send them not one but several copies.

To the best of our knowledge, and we are quite familiar with the religious press, all denominations are having difficulty in maintaining circulation. You can help us and increase the effectiveness of The Witness if you will give a few minutes of your time to jot down on a postal or a note the names and addresses of one or more persons and mail to The Witness, Tunkhannock, Pa.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Evangelical Faith And Modern Needs

BY
CHARLES D. KEAN
President of the Episcopal Evangelical Fellowship

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SOMEONE has said that religion can be defined as "God, man and the relation between them." The Christian faith has an understanding of all three aspects, based not only upon man's efforts to comprehend intellectually, but even more upon his living experience. The New Testament is an assertion that the relationship between God and man is a living, vital thing—not something rigid and static, and furthermore this relationship is to be appreciated in the everyday affairs of human existence.

You and I understand that God is to be thought of primarily as loving Father, not because we have worked it out logically in a world where this is self-evident. As a matter of fact, there are moments which all of us know too well when this seems to be the very contradiction of the truth—since life is so often raw and difficult. We understand God to be like a loving Father because, when we come to see our own experience at home, in the business world and in contact with the larger affairs of men and nations, in the light of Christ, we know ourselves to be living in a world with purpose and meaning.

The Christian religion is an assertion that unless everything which concerns us is seen through the lens of the Cross, it is not accurately seen. The Christian religion is a claim that the Cross not only concerned Jesus on Calvary, but also concerns you and me with our wives, our fellow-workers and those whose actions affect our lives and whose lives we, in turn, influence.

Secrets of Reality

RETURNING to the original definition, "God, man, and the relation between them," as Christians we are saying that Jesus Christ provides the relationship between us and the deepest secrets of reality. On the one hand, in terms of this relationship we live in a fundamentally friendly universe which man's cruelty, greed and pride distort. On the other hand, again in terms of this relationship we are able to accept this understanding and live by it daily in the fellowship of those who share the same point of view in spite of the continuing frailty of our human nature and the confusion of the world.

The essential note of Christianity is this understanding of life's meaning, apprehended primarily by faith, and appreciated only as it is lived in the setting of a fellowship which shares the faith. Everything else about the Christian Church is to be valued in terms of whether it serves as a means of advancing the fundamental purpose of the religion. While some things may have a sentimental appeal on other grounds, and they may even have a certain secondary utility, they are not essential unless they are specifically and clearly related to the main task.

When we stop to think of the implications of what we have been saying, it will be obvious that although the basic principle is constant, it can only be appreciated in the context of our changing daily lives. The outreach of God's love to us with forgiveness, release and new power is reality itself. But the appreciation of its significance is a matter which living men and women have to work out continually in the course of their own advancing years and in the setting of the world circumstances in which they live.

No human institution can eliminate the necessity for ever-new appreciations of the heart of the Christian faith made concretely relevant to the situations of changing men in a changing world. The Church rather serves to provide the setting in which this ever-fresh application of the truth of the Gospel to the circumstances of daily life becomes a co-operative project as it is meant to be. The Church as an institution serves to provide a framework for the task, but it cannot perform it. The sacraments focus it and emphasize its importance, they are not machinery for doing it.

Evangelical Christianity

WHEN we talk of Evangelical Christianity, this is what we mean. There is a truth in which Whitehead's dictum that "religion is what a man does with his solitariness," is true—in that this relationship between God and man through Christ must be intensely personal if it is to be real. The point is missed, however, if solitariness is taken to mean isolationism. We do these personal tasks in fellowship with others who are engaged in the same personal tasks for themselves—and our effort binds us together in a unity which gives power to each of us for the continuing job, and without the unity, the work collapses.

Since Christianity is essentially a business of relating the reality of God's forgiving love to our actual strivings at home, in business, in our neighborhoods and in our reaction to world forces, nothing else can be allowed to obscure the job at hand. Rather, everything which we undertake in connection with the life of the organized Church has to be tested as to whether it is relevant or not.

Christian missions, for example, are a concrete means of making our acceptance of God's outreaching love concrete—by showing that we recognize our need for his forgiveness and that we place our real confidence in his purpose. But this can never be an abstract proposition if our recognition is underlined by our desire to share what we know to be of supreme value with others who need it just as we do. But the machinery of Christian missions can sometimes obscure the connection between the underlying faith and the resulting act.

Christian education, for another example, is the specific means of enabling those who are born into the families which comprise this fellowship to grow up to appreciate their heritage. It is also the means by which those who share the faith are enabled to explore more widely and more deeply its meaning and implications. It is not indoctrination. It is not the transmission of theoretical propositions. Poor machinery and an inadequate grasp of the function of Christian education can often obscure the connection between what people do and the faith which is supposed to underlie their actions.

The administrative apparatus of the Christian Church—our parochial and diocesan system, to take still another example, exists to be concrete, practical embodiments here and now of the very fellowship which we have been discussing. Without such concrete embodiments in space and time, the whole Christian understanding remains abstract. But the structure can be made to assume an unwarranted importance, as if it had value for its own sake, rather than as the means to a greater end.

First Things First

EVANGELICAL Christianity knows these things to be true, and insists upon putting first things first in the relative scales of values which individuals accept and in the corporate life of the Christian group. Unless first things are given their due priority, Christianity becomes a business of gears and wheels. The antiquity of the apparatus we use does serve to connect us with the struggles of those who have gone before us, and it does help us to profit by their experience, but antiquity by itself justifies nothing. The first consideration for a New Testament faith is whether I know God to be confronting me through the real circumstances of my daily life, with myself responding in fellowship with those who understand the issues in essentially the same way.

Such an understanding of the Christian religion sets a high value upon individual opinion. Men not only have the privilege, but rather they have the duty and responsibility to work out the implications of their religious convictions with "fear and trembling," and do it for themselves since no power on earth can do it for them. But as against a capricious individualism, this personal responsibility is subject to the searchlight of God's judgment and love as focused in the Cross, and it is also necessarily checked against and by the life of the fellowship.

A New Testament faith, however, will necessarily subject all institutions to questioning, and there is no institution which is exempt from scrutiny. Neither can any individual, regardless of his ecclesiastical office, stand in such a privileged relationship to central truth that his statements and opinions are beyond challenge. The fellowship has room in it for wide diversity. Indeed, the suppression of diversity is in itself the destruction of the New Testament kind of fellowship, because no longer are men bound together through faith in Christ Jesus, but are associated in a different way. Christians, then, are essentially free men who dare to question anything, and who respect each other's right to do the same thing on the same premises.

Christianity can only be the living faith of free men and women who, because they look at their own hearts through the lens of the Cross and appraise the world of human affairs by the same light, have a different relationship to God and to each other than anything else the world knows. The essential note of that relationship is freedom—a free acceptance of the judgment, forgiveness and restoring power of God, and a free acceptance of other people as brothers in Christ.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Personal Values

IN a world where so many mammoth forces tend to ignore personality entirely and to reduce men and women to things, this kind of Christianity is not an elective, but an obvious essential. Collectivization is not only a trend on the other side of the "iron curtain." It is not limited to Communism. In a real sense, the trend toward collectivization is part of the price western civilization is having to pay for its high material standard of living, since the organization of many people and great supplies of material is necessary to achieve and maintain such a standard. The control of this trend is not to be found in some fond hope, however, of setting back the clock of technology, but rather in an understanding of ourselves and our fellowmen in the light of Christian faith.

Christian institutions by themselves will not serve the purpose of maintaining the personal values which this world so desperately needs. While any fellowship in a real world must express itself in some kind of institutional life, the faith of the fellowship is the important thing—the faith of free men, who because they dare to look at life through the lens of the Cross cannot be made afraid by anything they see. This is what our modern world really needs more acutely than it needs either political peace or economic stability.

The Episcopal Evangelical Fellowship exists to foster this kind of an approach to life within the Protestant Episcopal Church. Our Fellowship believes this to be a historic Christianity, as found in the New Testament, as re-awakened in the Protestant Reformation, as continued down to our own day. Because we believe that only such a faith of free men in the fellowship of shared conviction can be relevant to the needs of our day or any other time, we are bound to resist any lesser form of Christianity within our Church. And above all we are bound to resist any attempt to suppress our right to question individuals and institutions on the part of those who prefer institutional harmony to vital faith.

Evangelical Education

BY
RANDOLPH CRUMP MILLER
Professor at Church Divinity School of the Pacific

IF the predominant theological flavor of today is neo-orthodoxy, there are going to be some real problems facing the division of curriculum development. The dilemma is frankly this: children learn naturally from their experience, and "doing what comes naturally" is considered a "passing stage." It is normal for children to be un-cooperative, or non-communicative, or little liars. On the other hand, our theology is frankly supernatural, and it is therefore sinful for these same children to act normally and within their childish capacities. So the little child who finds God in the bees and the flowers and who refuses to tell the teacher what he saw is both normal and sinful at the same time.

Or put the dilemma on a different basis. No child under ten can think historically, or under eighteen can think in abstract terms; and yet to be a Christian he must have faith in Christ who is revealed in a book written almost two thousand years ago, and to be a theologian he must accept the abstract concepts and symbols of the faith.

The best statement of this dilemma is by Mrs. Edith Hunter in "Religion in Life" (winter, 1950, 51), where she examines the materials of the new Presbyterian curriculum in an article entitled "Neo-Orthodoxy Goes to Kindergarten." She shows that all theories of learning are based on naturalistic theories about man, while the end-result is to be a neo-orthodox view of man which is too highly sophisticated for the kindergarten child. Both the articles for teachers and parents, and the stories for children, alternate between these two views, but there is no real reconciliation.

Our Problem

BUT if the Presbyterians have not solved the problems, as Mrs. Hunter suggests, can the Episcopalians do any better? The answer is threefold: First, Episcopalians will be more broadly evangelical, to include neo-orthodox, Anglo-Catholics, and Liberals. The new volume on "The Church's Faith," while not nearly so comprehensive as "Doctrine in the Church of England," does not sell out to any dominant theological view, although it is highly flavored with neo-orthodoxy.

Second, some members of our editorial staff, especially those who have been on the College of

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Preachers faculty, are acutely aware of this problem. By putting the emphasis on what Canon Wedel calls a "relationship theology," they have found ways of making theology relevant to the experience of the various age-groups. Prof. Reuel Howe, for example, is able to make clear the most profound aspects of sin and redemption in terms of the relationships of the kindergarten child to his mother. Mrs. Dora Chaplin shows how theology is relevant to the questions of the smallest child, although the answers will be provided by parental attitudes as much as by what is said, and this is illustrated on many age levels in her "Children and Religion."

Third, the study of the religious readiness of children is more thorough than that of the Presbyterians. It is here that the crux of the problem of the dilemma between naturalism and supernaturalism can be solved. If the four-year old's misbehavior is a "passing stage" we need to know what Christian resources are available to him at that time. The basic question is not, "When does a particular doctrine become applicable?" but, "What resources of Christian faith are relevant to the situation?"

The Episcopal Church began with the assumption that Christian faith is a religion of maturity. The first question it asked was, "What should a Christian know to his soul's health when he grows up?" That answer in brief is found in the six volumes of the "Church's Teaching Series." The problem of the relevance of Christian truth to adults is the primary theological question. Whether it be answered in terms of neo-orthodoxy or some other "doxy" is not the main point. A "relationship theology" is always in terms of the situation in which man finds himself; it is highly personal and social; it is not abstract in the philosophical sense at all, although it is subject to abstract analysis.

Religion of Maturity

NOW if Christianity is a religion of maturity, we can face the additional problem of how to relate it to the immature, so that they will grow up as Christians. Theology as such will drop into the background, and we will expect that children will grow in faith and grace, for these are attitudes by which every child is surrounded from the time he is born. His religion begins with his trust in his parents, and in their gracious love to him. It carries over into the life and worship and teaching of the Church, as he becomes capable of experiencing the relevance of Christian truth. There comes a time when his non-social behavior is no longer simply a "passing stage" and becomes his "willfulness" or "sin." There comes a time when he can think historically about Jesus and the Church, when the Bible takes on meaning, when he can worship sacramentally, when he can take responsibility as maturity approaches. But this is a long and slow process, and we cannot expect it to happen all at once in the kindergarten. The old idea of "nurture" implies a great deal of patience on the part of parents and teachers. Yet in the difficult process of growing up, more and more of Christian faith will become relevant in terms of genuine religious needs.

What then, happens to the dilemma of naturalism and supernaturalism? They grow together, for the difference is not so great as imagined. The purpose of revelation is always to illuminate the natural; we love men on the natural level simply because God loved us first from a transcendent perspective; and thus God is reaching down to the child at the same time as the child is reaching up to God. It is the proper understanding of the relationship of content to method in a religious framework which is the clue to Christian education.

The goals of such an educational program cannot be accomplished within the framework of the conventional Sunday school. If the Christian Gospel is relevant to the life of children and adults, it is an everyday affair. Thus, the place of parents and the family in the new educational program is of the greatest importance. An attempt will be made to have pre-marital and post-marital instruction along the lines of what it means to have a Christian family. Baptism will be considered in its functional aspects in the life of both home and Church. Parents will cooperate with the Church school program. All of this will take time, but the time for it will be allowed before the first Church school materials as such will be published.

Importance of Leaders

THE crucial element in any teaching program is the leaders. The program of the College of Preachers for the clergy has received enthusiastic acceptance and wide publicity. Off-setting the paucity of instruction in Christian education in the theological schools, these brief sessions are bringing the clergy face to face with their responsibility as Christian educators. Church school teachers and parents are already receiving instruction, and the leadership training division has a team touring the various dioceses, with another team about to be enlisted. By the time the first lesson materials appear, most of the leadership will have some training.

How does all this tie in with the avowed purposes of the Episcopal Evangelical Fellowship?

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Theologically, the Church's teaching series will satisfy most of the members, who are both liberal and neo-orthodoxy. Educationally, it will challenge them all to do a better job. And evangelically, the emphasis on a "relationship theology" means that no Christian education is complete until it brings the mature believer into a personal faith in the God of Jesus Christ. The membership of the E.E.F. on the division of curriculum development is representative, as is that of other points of view within the Church. The E.E.F., therefore, should be enthusiastic about the projected curriculum, and its members should take pains to acquaint themselves with all developments. The new curriculum is a big task, in terms of time, money, and personnel; and it needs the support of every segment of the Church. In the last analysis, the new curriculum will be no better than the people who write, edit, and teach it. We already know we can have confidence in the editorial staff and the division of curriculum development. We must develop leaders who are capable of using these materials to lead their pupils to faith in the living Christ in his Church.

Ecumenical Movement

From an Evangelical Position

BY

JAMES W. KENNEDY

Rector, Christ Church, Lexington, Kentucky

AN Evangelical is exactly what the name implies—one whose chief Christian concern is to live by and to make known that which belongs to, is contained in, is agreeable to, is in the spirit of, the gospel or the teachings of the New Testament. He seeks to know and to pass on, the relevant application of that which the Holy Scriptures contain, in contemporary terms, to the life of each generation.

It is this Reformation emphasis on the authority of the Bible which the Evangelical seeks to implement under the tuition of the Holy Spirit. While he values the Catholic heritage of the Church, especially as contained in the Book of Common Prayer, and holds to the continuity of that heritage found in Apostolic Succession, he never loses sight of the Prayer Book emphasis as to the fundamental meaning of this order (polity), namely, "Apostolic; because it continues steadfastly in the Apostles' teaching and fellowship." (page 291)

Quite naturally the Evangelical is interested in the modern ecumenical movement and that for which it is striving—the restoration of the Christian fellowship to oneness in the application of our Lord's teaching to the Church as the family of God on earth, as a fellowship of those who dwell in the household of the world; insisting on the recognition of this kinship, and acknowledging the relationship of all Christians who accept Christ as God and Saviour as children of the same Father.

The current emphasis throughout the world in the ecumenical movement, both among theologians, clergymen and laymen is on the themes of faith and order—in preparation for the third world conference on faith and order in Lund, Sweden, in 1952. A word about these themes and trends, as material for use by Evangelicals, where they live in their parishes and communities; for their avowed task is to spread this and all other good news in line with their Christian faith.

Meaning of Church

FOLLOWING the first assembly of the World Council of Churches, which met in Amsterdam in 1948, there has been the continuing struggle on the part of the theologians of the representative Churches to define the word "Church." *

For the Evangelical this subject is important because it touches on the main stumbling block to Church unity throughout the world, namely, order, the ministry, the method of continuity. The major emphasis, from the Evangelical point of view, is that "the Church is the body of all baptized people who believe in Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour"; that "non-episcopal ministries which have been manifestly used of Christ are true ministries of the Word and Spirit in the fellowship of the Catholic Church." So at least the Evangelical should zealously seek for a widespread understanding of the doctrine of the Church and the ministry, especially as found in the New Testament. One way to do this is to read the official statements on the subject, for example, two booklets already mentioned; and to sponsor study groups and make readily available literature which is easily understood by the average Christian. The simplest and most practical study approach obtainable on this subject is the new booklet, "Exploring Paths of Church Unity," published by the World Council of Churches for use at the grass roots level. (35c, or 25c in quantities of five or more copies).

Another major emphasis and concern follows

* See the leaflet issued by the Central Committee of the World Council last fall, "The Church, the Churches and the World Council of Churches." (5c). See also Chapter IV in the new study book by Oliver S. Tomkins, "The Church in the Purpose of God." (50c). Both may be procured from the office of the World Council, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

from this concept of Church and ministry, that is the highly controversial subject of intercommunion. It is not a simple question of "Yes, we'll have open communion" or "No, we won't." The Evangelical should recognize this and be as clear as possible in his statements on the Evangelical position, which is "open communion to all confirmed members and of those of other communions who have professed Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour."

To know of the difficulties involved in this issue an open minded study of the problems and the opportunities must be pursued. This is possible now in that new study booklet "Exploring Paths of Church Unity" just mentioned. The other theme of faith and order, "Traditions of Worship," is also dealt with in this same booklet.

The recent battleground between the so-called Protestant and Catholic emphases within the Anglican communion (the Episcopal Church) has been the vital tension on this point, and the sharp dagger point centers on the phrase "valid ministry." The Evangelical's job is to patiently seek to discern the Word of God for this generation of Christians, and to follow wherever the Spirit of God leads. The Holy Spirit may lead the Evangelical to maintain a position, which he holds uncompromisingly, tenaciously and boldly; but in each case the love of God must be manifest in his attitude and relationship, or how else can the Spirit of Christ enter to heal our unhappy divisions?

Witnessing to Others

BECAUSE the post-Reformation divergent lines of Protestantism are merging, and because the evidence of such merging and cooperating together must at last be manifest at the local level, Christians and Christian congregations everywhere must "commit themselves to the Lord of the Church in a new effort to seek together, where they live, to be his servants and witnesses among their neighbors." Here is where the Evangelical will furnish zealous leadership, for witnessing is his meat and drink, and the ministry of reconciliation is of paramount concern. The witness bearing of our more Catholic minded friends is based on the idea that we are the true Church because we have Apostolic Succession. There is often too much of condescension in this won't budge an inch, you-come-to-us approach. The Evangelical accepts the sincere and consecrated life of all Christians as outward and visible evidence of God's Holy Spirit at work within, and his concept of that which is "essential" is the commitment, the identification, of men with the Lord of life and the complete yielding in faith to his law and his will as revealed in the Bible. That is why there is a major concern with conversion as an absolute necessity. "When thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren." (St. Luke 22:32).

But Evangelicals as well as Catholics can err on the side of narrowness and closed-mindedness. The great purpose of the ecumenical movement is to draw together the extremes of both, and under the guidance of God's Holy Spirit, to seek together his will for his world and his Church today.

In the method of conference, the willingness to sit down together and expose the mind processes which lead to the several convictions, the holding to basic agreements while wrestling seriously, earnestly and humbly with wide disagreements, lies the hope of the Church unity. In the Church of South India we find an example of Catholic and Protestant fragments of the Body of Christ brought together, and by the grace of God staying together, as evidence of the miracle of organic union in a day which promises more and more of the same.

We as Christians have much in common, whether we be high, low, medium or broad Anglicans, Presbyterian, Methodist, Lutheran, or Orthodox. The ecumenical movement tries to high-light our common heritage and treasure. It holds to continuity, sacraments, creedal statements and liturgical worship on the one hand; while it holds to a spirit centered fellowship, prayer consciousness, the preaching of the Word and free worship on the other. But at the heart of both is oneness with Christ as Lord and Saviour, or as St. Paul's poem puts it:

"Christ, I am Christ's, and let the name suffice you . . . Christ shall suffice me for he has sufficed. Christ be the end for Christ was the beginning; Christ the King, for the end is Christ."

Rallying Points

FOR the Evangelical, the modern ecumenical movement, as found in the World Council of Churches and the newly formed National Council of Churches, with our own Presiding Bishop as the head, furnishes a rallying point, a vehicle, for furthering the cause of Christ in this generation and to help heal our divisions. So our immediate task is to be busy with study, and attempt to understand the other Christian's point of view and basis of faith. This works in every community where there are two churches of different traditions of worship, concepts of "Church," and disagreements over ministry and sacraments. And the Evangelical must be as busy learning about the opposite viewpoint in his own Church as with the differences and similarities of other communions.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Parishes Help One Another

BY
WILLIAM P. BARNDS
Rector of St. Matthew's, Lincoln

EVERY parish and mission should work and pray and give to keep itself strong and active. The diocese is strengthened as parishes and missions are strong. The Church as a whole in our nation is strong as the separate units within it are strong. This strength is obtained, however, not by a parish thinking only of itself, anymore than an individual develops strength by being overly self-centered. As our interest goes out to others, so do we ourselves grow.

As parishes and missions we are indebted to one another. Try this test and see. In your own parish, go over in your mind the list of the members of the vestry. How many of them were baptized within the parish where they are serving as vestrymen? How many were confirmed in the parish? How many were baptized in some other parish of the Episcopal Church, or in some other Christian body? How many were baptized and confirmed in some other parish, probably a long ways from your own, and have moved into yours? Try this same test so far as your Church school teachers are concerned, and the leaders in the Woman's Auxiliary. Was your rector married in the parish he now serves, or did he come from some other parish, and possibly from some other diocese?

These inquiries will probably reveal that a large percent of the leadership of any parish was not originally produced by that parish. Similarly, think of the people who have moved from your parish who are now leaders perhaps in some far-distant parish. This is very true of small missions, some of which show little numerical growth through the years, because so many of their members move to the cities, but it is out of small missions that some of the most eminent leaders in large parishes have come. All of this illustrates the fact that any individual parish has been helped by other parishes, and in turn has helped others.

We do not live to ourselves alone, but we depend upon one another. Since that is so, we ought to be concerned about the welfare of the Church as a whole, because when the whole Church thrives its individual units share in that health. Large parish churches should have a vital concern for the welfare of the little missions, mainly because such concern is just plain Christianity, and also because the missions are feeders for the large city parishes. The missions, too, should have a concern for the large parishes. It is due to fine financial help from the parishes that they are able to have priestly ministrations.

Work for strong parishes and missions but in doing so we must be generous towards others, for we depend upon one another, and we grow together.

Charity

BY
PHILIP H. STEINMETZ
Rector of the Ashfield Parishes

"WHY should I serve and obey God?" is a common question to which several answers have been given.

Some say if you don't serve and obey, you will suffer either here or hereafter or both. But much of the terror of that threat is gone these days.

Another answer proclaims that God will greatly reward those who serve him. It appeals to our selfishness as the motive for doing what is right. But if we do right only because it pays, we will not stick to it when it hurts. We'll be unprofitable servants as are all employees whose thoughts are on wages before work.

The right answer is that we serve and obey God because we love him. Love drives us to look for and do the things that please God and to find joy in the process.

Now the curious and wonderful fact is that the love which moves us is not of our making. It is God's gift for the taking. It is a distinctive mark of a Christian. Without it, however remarkable we may be, we are no good to God. For the only thing we can do for him that he cannot do for himself is to respond to his love, both directly and by expressing it for others of his creatures.

Love is the greatest of the three cardinal virtues. Faith ends in full knowledge. Hope is ultimately fulfilled. But love grows deeper in its consummation and is renewed by each act which expresses it. It is not surprising that we find this to be true for we know that, after all, God is love.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Enroll in Support of These Principles

THE EPISCOPAL EVANGELICAL FELLOWSHIP PROVIDES A MEANS BY WHICH PROGRESSIVE LAYMEN AND CLERGY CAN TAKE POSITIVE STEPS IN BRINGING MORE VIGOROUS LIFE TO THE CHURCH. THE FELLOWSHIP INVITES TO MEMBERSHIP ALL WHO VALUE THE PROTESTANT NATURE OF OUR COMMUNION EQUALLY WITH ITS CATHOLIC HERITAGE AND DESIRE TO SHARE IN ADVENTUROUS ACTION UNDER THE GUIDANCE OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

Some E.E.F. Objectives

To witness to the Gospel by interpreting it in contemporary terms and applying Christian ethical principles to every sphere of personal and social life.

To preserve permanently for our Church the positive principles of the Reformation and to provide encouragement, counsel and help to all seeking to forward the cause of Evangelical Christianity in faith, ethics and practice.

To uphold the doctrine, discipline and worship of the Protestant Episcopal Church as set forth in its Book of Common Prayer, the Articles of Religion, and the Constitutions and Canons.

To further understanding and cooperation with other Christian Churches and to promote the cause of organic union, whenever possible, but particularly at this time with our sister reformed Churches.

The Episcopal Evangelical Fellowship

THE REV. CHARLES D. KEAN
President

THE REV. E. FELIX KLOMAN
Second Vice President

THE REV. CHARLES F. PENNIMAN
First Vice President

THE REV. R. MALCOLM WARD
Secretary

MISS ELSIE C. HUTTON
Treasurer

The Rev. R. Malcolm Ward
313 East Wayne Street, Maumee, Ohio

☐ I would be interested to learn more about the Episcopal Evangelical Fellowship

☐ I am in agreement with the aims and ideals of the Episcopal Evangelical Fellowship and would like to be enrolled as:

Sustaining	$10.00
Cooperating	5.00
Active	2.00

The Rev.
Mr. .....
Mrs.
Miss

Address .....

Parish .....

"The Spirit of Evangelissm" by Bishop Neill and "Evangelical Faith in Action" by Bishop Nash may be procured from the Secretary at $5.00 for 100 copies.

PLEASE MAKE CHECKS PAYABLE TO THE EPISCOPAL EVANGELICAL FELLOWSHIP

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Schools of the Church

BARD COLLEGE
Formerly St. Stephen's
A Coeducational College of Liberal Arts and Sciences
FOUNDED 1860
For catalogue and further information write to The Director of Admissions, Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, New York.

DANIEL BAKER COLLEGE
BROWNWOOD, TEXAS
Established 1889. Operated under the auspices of the Diocese of Dallas. Co-educational senior college offering B.A. and B.S. degrees. Special opportunities in teacher training, music education, business administration. The only available undergraduate course in the Episcopal Church in Church Work Training. Member: Association of Texas Colleges.
REV'D W. A. CROSS, M.A., President
REV'D L. A. HASELMAYER, Ph.D., Dean

SAINT PAUL'S POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE
LAWRENCEVILLE, VIRGINIA
Approved by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. B.S. Degree with major in Trade and Industrial Education, B.S. Degree in Home Economics Education, B.S. Degree with major in Elementary Education, B.S. Degree in Secondary Education.
EARL H. McCLENNEY, President

VOORHEES SCHOOL & JR. COLLEGE
DENMARK, S. C.
Co-educational. Accredited by State Dept. of Education of S. C. and the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges. Under the two Dioceses of S. C. and The American Church Institute for Negroes. Expenses reasonable. Limited scholarship aid for worthy students. Apply:
CECIL D. HALLIBURTON, President

Okolona College
Okolona, Mississippi
Co-educational, Private, American Church Institute for Negroes (Protestant Episcopal Church) Established 1902
High School and Junior College - Trades and Industries - Music
For information write: W. MILAN DAVIS President
Today's Training for Tomorrow's Opportunities

St. Augustine's College
RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA
1867 — 1951
Accredited Four-Year College for Negro Youth. Co-educational. Music, Pre-Medical, Health and Physical Education, High School Teacher Training, Business, Pre-Social Work, Nursing Education in co-operation with St. Agnes Hospital.
HAROLD L. TRIGG, President

SAINT HELEN'S HALL
Portland 1, Oregon
Historic Pacific Northwest Episcopal resident and day school. Founded in 1869. Co-educational pre-school. Boys admitted to Lower School through grade III. Upper School girls only.
Write for catalog.
The RT. REV. BENJAMIN DAGWELL, D.D.
President, Board of Trustees
JANE ALLEN SAXTON,
HEADMISTRESS

The Cathedral Schools
National Cathedral School for Girls
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding department, grades 7-12
KATHARINE LEE, Principal
St. Albans
The National Cathedral School for Boys
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding Department, grades 8-12
CHARLES MARTIN, Headmaster
Address:
Mt. St. Alban, Washington 16, D. C.

St. John Baptist School
FOR GIRLS
Offers College Preparatory and General courses. Music, art, outdoor sports, and a happy home life, with character building extra-curricular activities for resident and day students, under the care of the Sisters of St. John Baptist. In the country near Morristown, New Jersey. Accredited.
For catalog address Box 556
The Sister Superior, Mendham, New Jersey

St. John's MILITARY SCHOOL
Salina, Kansas
Since 1887 St. John's has been perpetuating the cultural tradition of the Church by stressing sound scholarship in Christian atmosphere. Grades 3 through 12. Fully accredited.
COL. R. L. CLEM, Rector

ST. MARY'S HALL
SECONDARY BOARDING SCHOOL
Faribault, Minnesota
Close relationship of students and faculty in residence allows for a maximum of spiritual, academic, and social growth. Preparation for leading colleges. An extensive sports program, including riding.
PHYLLIS M. NEWMAN, M.A.
Founded 1866 Headmistress

IOLANI SCHOOL
Episcopal Church School for Boys
HONOLULU 17, HAWAII
A college preparatory church school for boys. Kindergarten through twelfth grade. Established 1862. Day tuition $225 to $275. Boarding $665 - $775. Summer session. Accredited.
REV. CHARLES A. PARMITER, JR. M.A., S.T.B., Rector

The MERRICOURT SCHOOL
(Episcopal)
A country boarding school for 40 boys & girls. Grades 1-8 (pre-preparatory). Home-like environment. Sports, extra-curricula program. 26th year. 8 weeks summer camp. For information: Visit, write, or phone 3-3209.
THE REV. M. W. WHITFORD, Hdm.
BERLIN, CONN.

ST. LUKE'S HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING
New York City
Offers a 3 year course in nursing to high school and college graduates. College graduates may be admitted with 9 months advanced credit allowance. For further information write to The Director of Nursing, St. Luke's Hospital, 421 West 113th St., New York 25, N. Y.

HARVARD SCHOOL
Diocesan School for Boys. 52nd Year. Fall term opens September 11, 1951. Grades seven through twelve. Fully Accredited. R.O.T.C. unit. For all information apply to
THE REV. W. S. CHALMERS
Headmaster
3700 Coldwater Canyon Rd.
NORTH HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

Cathedral School of St. Mary
An accredited Episcopal school for girls. Suburban New York City. Day-nursery to college. Boarding—fifth grade to college. Strong college preparatory course. Music, Dramatics, Art. Excellent sports program. Catalog on request.
MARION REID MARCH
Box W, Garden City, Long Island, N. Y.

ST. STEPHEN'S SCHOOL FOR BOYS
ALEXANDRIA, VA.
Grades 3 thru 12 (Day School). College Preparatory. Under the Church School System of the Diocese of Virginia.
Address
THE REV. EDWARD E. TATE,
Headmaster
2405 Russell Rd. ALEXANDRIA, VA.

ST. MARY'S HALL on the Delaware.
Episcopal boarding and day school for girls 8-18. Founded 1837. Thorough college preparation. Fully accredited. Separate lower school. College preparatory and general courses. Music, Art, Clubs, Sports, Dramatics. Near New York and Philadelphia. Catalogue.
FLORENCE LUKENS NEWBOLD
Headmistress
Burlington, New Jersey

DeVEAUX SCHOOL
Niagara Falls, New York
FOUNDED 1852
The Church School in the Diocese of Western New York. College preparatory for boys. Representative form of student government. Small classes. Reasonable charges. Grades 7 through 12.
For information address The Headmaster.

The Church Home and Hospital
SCHOOL OF NURSING
Baltimore 31, Maryland
A three year course of nursing. Classes enter August and September. Scholarships available to well qualified high school graduates.
Apply to Director of Nursing

ST. AGNES SCHOOL
An Episcopal Country Day and Boarding School for Girls
Excellent College Preparatory record. Special courses arranged for girls not contemplating college. Day pupils range from Kindergarten to College Entrance. Boarders from Grade 8 to College Entrance.
MISS BLANCHE PITTMAN, Principal
Albany New York

HOWE MILITARY SCHOOL
Thorough Academic Training in a Spiritual Environment. R.O.T.C. Accredited college preparatory, business courses. Junior School. Small classes. Every boy participates in sports. Balanced program. Episcopal. Established 1884. Summer Camp, boys grammar school age. Catalogue.
COL. B. B. BOUTON
13 Academy Place, Howe, Indiana

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

NEWS OF OTHER CHURCHES

PRESBYTERIANS HAVE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (north) meeting in Cincinnati adopted a record budget of $18,950,564 for 1952, with 85% for missions and education. In addition to the record budget, the Assembly approved a 30-month campaign for $12,000,000 for building churches in new areas and for improving theological seminaries.

Delegates adopted a report which recommends that the remarriage of a divorced person be allowed "when sufficient penitence for sin and failure is evidenced and a firm purpose and endeavor after Christian marriage is demonstrated." Another section of the report advised ministers against marrying divorced persons whose Churches prohibit such marriages. A committee on Christian marriage is to be established in each presbytery to aid clergy in their decisions. Euthanasia (legalized killing) was condemned on the ground that it is contrary to the sixth commandment.

Delegate J. P. Love, seminary professor, set off a burst of applause when he said that Church people should have the courage to tell both President Truman and General MacArthur: "A plague on both your houses." He described militarism as "the greatest enemy of the present age" and called upon pacifists and non-pacifists to "join hands within the Church to renounce once and for all the whole militaristic method as a way of trying to solve the modern problems of the world."

A pronouncement, similar to the pastoral of bishops of the Episcopal Church, was adopted at the closing session. It scored corruption in high places, condemned loyalty oaths "which stifle freedom of thought and inquiry" and which lay "the groundwork for a police society which would destroy the very freedom we seek to save."

CHURCH WOMEN MAP PEACE PROGRAM

President Truman was urged by the board of managers of United Church Women, meeting at Buck Hill Falls, Pa., to reaffirm his pledge that the US shall not become the aggressor in any war. They also ask the President to promise "that our resources will be used for the building of peace through all the channels at our disposal, including the UN." The board also adopted a program for peace which includes support of the UN; use of the country's resources as weapons for peace; creation of a "spiritual democracy" through living "democracy in their communities"; a strengthening of spiritual resources.

EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN BY NATIONAL COUNCIL

A country-wide evangelistic campaign will be launched by the National Council of Churches on October 7. It will last 15 months, with the nation's armed forces a major concern. Missions will be held in army camps, air and naval bases, with conferences planned with chaplains. Other special targets will be migrant workers, high school and college students and inmates of penal institutions. In local communities the campaign will include religious censuses, visitations, singing and preaching missions. Institutes are to be held to teach clergy how to be better preachers.

MINSTREL SHOWS RAISE ISSUE

A resolution condemning minstrel shows as offensive to Negroes was tabled by the conference of R. I. Congregationalists, meeting at Bristol, after the Rev. Frank Crook of East Providence urged that a committee prepare a "much stronger statement if we want to take a stand on social issues." No substitute was offered for the tabled resolution which said that "much misinformation comes from the sterotyped conception of the American Negro, a conception which is built up and passed on from generation to generation by such seemingly harmless means as a minstrel show."

If You Like This Number of

The WITNESS

You Will Like Every Number

•

All the important News of the Episcopal Church; News of other Churches, at home and overseas; Book Reviews; Stimulating Articles and other Features.

•

Our Price Remains Four Dollars
For a 24-Page Illustrated Weekly

Please use this form:

THE WITNESS TUNKHANNOCK, PA.

Enclosed please find $4 for which enter my subscription for a year.

Name .....

Street .....

City ..... Zone..... State.....

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

PEOPLE OF THE CHURCH

CLERGY CHANGES:

WILLIAM B. SCHMIDGALL, rector of the Wyoming County, Pa., churches, has accepted the rectorship of St. Stephen's, New Hartford, N. Y., effective August 1.

FRANCIS R. BELDEN, formerly rector of St. Andrew's, Akron, O., is now assistant at Christ Church Cathedral, Hartford, Conn.

THOMAS V. BARRETT, chaplain at Kenyon, whose acceptance of the rectorship of the Robert E. Lee Church, Lexington, Va., was previously announced in this column, is also to be chaplain to Episcopal students at Washington and Lee University and the cadets of the Virginia Military Institute.

GORDON G. NAKAYAMA of Coaldale, Alberta, Canada, has been loaned to the Episcopal Church by the Church of England in Canada to work in the Okinawa mission field. He did evangelistic work there two years ago and is familiar with the people and the language.

M. LEWIS MARSH, vicar of the Transfiguration, Evergreen, Colo., is now also rural dean of the diocese of Colo.

STANLEY FULLWOOD, field officer of the National Council stationed at Omaha, Nebr., has accepted the rectorship of St. Paul's, Riverside, Ill.

R. A. KIRCHHOFFER JR., formerly in charge of Christ Church, Tracy City, Tenn., is now rector of Christ Church, Whitehaven, Tenn.

LIONEL E. BEAUDET, formerly vicar of St. Andrew's, Harris, R. I., is now rector of St. Mary's, Warwick Neck, R. I.

WALTER L. F. HAYLOR, formerly in charge of Grace Church, Lyons, N. Y., is now rector of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, Newport, R. I.

HAROLD N. ARROWSMITH, for 35 years canon in charge of the Cathedral of the Incarnation, Baltimore, Md., has resigned effective Aug. 31. He plans to take a parish in the diocese with less exacting demands.

BOYD R. HOWARTH, rector of Memorial Church, Baltimore, Md., has accepted the rectorship of St. Mark's, Gastonia, N. C.

ORDINATIONS:

WILLIAM A. GLENN was ordained deacon May 16 by Bishop Heistand of Harrisburg at St. Luke's, Washington, D. C. He is to do missionary work in Costa Rica.

EDMUND S. MATHEWS was ordained deacon by Bishop Peabody on June 2 at Christ Church, Sackets Harbor, N. Y. He is to work in the northern district of the diocese of Central New York.

ORGANISTS:

ANGUS R. DAVIDSON has been appointed organist and choirmaster of St. John's Church, Chicago.

HONORS:

ROBERT M. REDENBAUGH, rector of St. Thomas Church, Denver, has been elected president of the Colorado Clericus, an organization of all the clergy in the state.

PERCY G. HALL, head of the National Council's army and navy division, was elected first area vice-president of the Military Chaplains Ass'n at their meeting in San Francisco, May 15-17.

POSITION OFFERED: A woman as Director of Religious Education, or an unmarried clergyman as assistant in a New Jersey suburban parish. Evangelical Churchmanship. Box T, WITNESS, TUNKHANNOCK, PA.

NOTICE

The firm of J. M. Hall, Inc., 14 West 40th St., New York 18, N. Y., in order to give all employees a well-earned rest, will be closed from August 3d to August 20th, 1951.

ST. JAMES LESSONS

A nine course series of instruction for Episcopal Church Schools including illustrated work books — 150-250 pages (60c each) and teachers' manuals I, II, III 40c each, IV through IX 60c each).

No Samples - Payment with orders

St. James Lessons, Inc.

865 Madison Ave., Dpt. 5, N. Y. 21, N. Y.

CASSOCKS

Surplices — Choir Vestments
Eucharistic Vestments
Altar Hangings and Linens

Prices Sent on Request

J. M. HALL INC.

14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.

Tel. CH 4-3306

VESTMENTS

Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves
Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries
Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars
Custom Tailoring for Clergymen

1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951

COX SONS & VINING, Inc.

131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

Everything for the Episcopal Church

Ammidon & Company

HORACE L. VARIAN

31 S. Frederick St. Baltimore 2, Md.

R. GEISSLER, INC.

28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.

Church Furnishings

IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS

Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY

Over 1,500,000

SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS

Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.

SANGAMON MILLS

Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

Exquisite

IRISH LINENS

BY THE YARD

From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States, I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values; unsurpassed quality, imported direct from Ireland. Also transfer patterns, linen tape, and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 3 inches at 75c, 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.00.

MARY MOORE

Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

THE BISHOP WHITE PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY

Founded by Bishop White 1833

Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.

PEW SIZE

The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)

Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

FINEST PURE IRISH LINEN

Buy linen now from complete stocks personally selected in Ireland. Also Cassock Cloth, Vestment patterns. Embdy. designs and instruction books.

Samples Free

MARY FAWCETT COMPANY

BOX 386 CHILLICOTHE, MO.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

ZOHORA ISMAIL, M.D.
Laywoman of New York City

There may come a time when I stop having opinions. However The Witness of May 10 arrived so I laid aside all else while I perused it. My feeling is that Margot the Social Worker married a dumb-bunny and is having hysteria over it. The article about St. Stephen's, Philadelphia, was excellent. I've detected on more than one occasion that The Witness goes in for bombastic writing, sarcasm, good humor and bad humor. I don't know whether sarcasm and satire should be a part of Christian writing—its definitely a weapon—but the end results very often lead to the same thing—more sarcasm. It's nice for the laity to know about the inner workings of many things, but I wonder if one should expose them to knowing too much about the misguided among the clergy. I think there should be at least one devotional piece in each issue.

A. A. CARRIER
Layman of Detroit, Michigan

Is it to be understood from the recent interchange of interest and concern between Screwball and Wormwood in The Witness (March 1) that the Episcopal Church is really desirous of removing all partitions between the white and Negro races? Are we, besides working with him, bowling with him, and traveling with him, to have him at the house for Sunday dinner? It is difficult to draw the line between a general and an intimate social contact.

There are basic differences in the races which both divine and natural law have ordained and which should not be transgressed. Failure to observe certain distinctions in these regards may lead to serious evils, and miscegenation is scarcely the least of them!

Artemus Ward has said that though the colored person may be our "brother," he is not also our "aunt, sister, wife, grandpa and every other relative that certain overly enthusiastic whites want to make him." John Wilkes Booth also had some pregnant words to say about the white-Negro relationship in the brief diary he kept following the Lincoln assassination even tho' that dire deed was prompted by his own fanaticism.

Fielding has said that "men are fire and women tinder." For that reason, social relationships with Negroes must be restricted; intimacy beyond a certain point is dangerous. We cannot properly have them in our living-rooms or at our dinner-tables. Had William Lloyd Garrison had daughters, he would not have been so ardent an abolitionist!

WILLIAM JOSEPH BARNDS
Clergyman of Lincoln 2, Neb.

Since Lent, 1948 I have been collecting pictures of bishops of the American episcopate. Because your readers helped me with this collection I have pictures of all of the 507 bishops. Now I am expanding my collection by collecting autographs of the bishops. I have autographs of 209 of the bishops including all but two who are now living. If any of your readers have autographs or signatures of any bishops who are not living which they will give me for my collection, I will appreciate receiving them. 2325 South 24 St., Lincoln 2, Nebr.

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL
Coeducational Episcopal Day School
Prepares for leading secondary schools. Sound academic training. Kindergarten thru 8th grade. French and Latin emphasized. Complete testing program. Est. 1894. Music, drama, arts & crafts, sports. Bus service. Hot lunch. Tel: AL 4-2000
E. ALLISON GRANT, Headmaster
88 E. Fourth Ave. (11th St.), N. Y. 3

THE PATTERSON SCHOOL for BOYS

Episcopal School in Blue Ridge Mountains of Western No. Carolina. Accredited. Grades 6-12. Gymnasium, sports, 42nd year. 1300-acre estate. Board and tuition, moderate.
GEORGE F. WIESE, Supt.
COLLEGE PREPARATORY — Legerwood, N. C. — HEALTH EDUCATION
CHARACTER BUILDING

FORK UNION MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

SCHOOLS

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof buildings.
REV. EDRIC A. WELD, RECTOR
Box W — Plymouth, N. H.

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

The Hannah More Academy
Est. 1832, Episcopal school for girls, grades 7-12. Outstanding preparation for leading colleges, also General Academic Course, Music, Art, Athletics and Riding carefully supervised. Eighteen miles northwest of Baltimore. Moderate rates. Catalogue.
ELIZABETH N. HARVEY, M.A.
Headmistress, Reisterstown, Md.

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. City 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE-MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

"The Church HISTORICAL MAGAZINE (is) one of the foremost journals of scholarship in Christendom."—Editorial in THE WITNESS, January 25, 1951.

Twentieth Year! Twentieth Volume!

HISTORICAL MAGAZINE

June 1951

The S. P. G. 250th Anniversary Number—1701-1951

THE Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts was chartered on June 16, 1701, and is still working effectively all over the world. This special number is edited by Frank J. Klingberg, Associate Editor of Historical Magazine; Professor Emeritus of History, the University of California, Los Angeles; noted authority on British humanitarianism; and the teacher of a remarkable group of younger scholars working in this field. All of the contributors of this number took their doctorate under Dr. Klingberg's direction. Four of them contributed to the notable volume, British Humanitarianism: Essays Honoring Frank J. Klingberg, published by the Church Historical Society (Philadelphia, 1950) pages x, 254. $4.00.

EDITORIAL ..... By Frank J. Klingberg

THE FOUNDATION AND EARLY WORK OF THE SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL IN FOREIGN PARTS ..... By Samuel Clyde McCulloch, of Rutgers University

PROBLEMS OF A COMMISSARY: THE REVEREND ALEXANDER GARDEN OF SOUTH CAROLINA ..... By Quentin Begley Keen, of the University of California, Los Angeles

THE S. P. G. AND THE FRENCH HUGUENOTS IN COLONIAL AMERICA ..... By William A. Bultmann, of Arkansas State Teachers College

A STRUGGLE FOR RELIGIOUS LIBERTY: AN ANALYSIS OF THE WORK OF THE S. P. G. IN CONNECTICUT ..... By Maud O'Neil, of the College of Medical Evangelists, Los Angeles

THE S. P. G. AND BARBADIAN POLITICS, 1710-1720 ..... By J. Harry Bennett, Jr., of the University of Texas

THE ESTABLISHMENT OF S. P. G. MISSIONS IN NEWFOUNDLAND, 1703-1783 ..... By Ruth M. Christensen, of the University of California, Los Angeles

PUBLISHED QUARTERLY: $1.25 the Copy. $4 the Year
Order from: 5 Paterson St., New Brunswick, N. J.

"We congratulate the Historical Magazine of the Episcopal Church . . . upon the 20th anniversary of that scholarly periodical. It is a publication of which Churchmen may well be proud . . . To date it has published 7,192 pages of history and biography; but it is the quality of its contents rather than the quantity that deserves special commendation. It is not too much to say that the Historical Magazine is a rich treasury of the memories of the Church's past, and a keen stimulus to even greater achievements in its future."—Editorial in THE LIVING CHURCH, April 8, 1951.

THE

Witness

10¢ A COPY

June 28, 1951

CANON CHARLES RAVEN

Addresses Christians on War and Peace

The Episcopal Pacifist Fellowship

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 8 (and 9 Holy Days ecept Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 7:45, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues.-Thurs., Prayers—12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C.—11:45 Fri., Organ Recital—12:30.

THE HEAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10 a. m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a. m.
Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 11 a. m.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes Jr., Rector
8 a. m. and 9 a. m., Holy Communion.
11 a. m., Morning Service and Sermon.
Weekdays: Holy Communion Wednesday at 8 a. m.
Thursdays and Saints' Days at 10:30 a. m.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a. m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a. m., Church School; 11 a. m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p. m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a. m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a. m., Holy Communion; 11 a. m., Morning Prayer—1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a. m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a. m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a. m., Holy Communion; 11 a. m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p. m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a. m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

☆

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

☆

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

☆

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

☆

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a. m., 4:00 and 7:30 p. m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean; Rev. Leslie D. Hallett; Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon. Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D., Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a. m., 7:30 p. m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p. m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p. m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 — 4:30 p. m. recitals.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a. m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a. m., Morning Prayer; 8 p. m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat. 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a. m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a. m.
Thursday, 7:30 a. m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a. m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 12:15; 11, 1st S. Family, 9:30; M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Week-day, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a. m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p. m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a. m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p. m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p. m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services: 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. William W. Lumpkin, Rector; Rev. Eugene M. Chapman; Rev. E. Laurence Baxter.
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacColl, 3rd, Rector
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 24 The WITNESS JUNE 28, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 135 LIBERTY ST., NEW YORK 6, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Episcopal Pacifist Fellowship Puts Principles to Work

Various Projects Sponsored in Communities At Home and in Foreign Fields

★ This week some forty scattered members of the Episcopal Pacifist Fellowship are exploring summer opportunities for volunteer service on social frontiers, implementing their belief that pacifism is not a negative attitude but a positive principle of human relations. In response to a recent letter to members which stressed the need and urgency of putting the principles of Christian love into action, the office of the general secretary of the Fellowship has had among other requests inquiries about service projects in the Far East, in France; for high school and college students; and for community display. Projects recommended by the E.P.F. include those of the American Friends Service Committee and the World Council of Churches, at home and abroad, the Delmo homes project of the Episcopal and Congregational - Christian Churches, in Missouri, and the interracial workshops of the Fellowship of Reconciliation.

In stressing this aspect of the program, the Rev. William K. Russell, chairman of the Episcopal Pacifist Fellowship, said: "Today is a time of deep spiritual agony in which those who seek 'peace on earth, good-will toward men' often feel frustrated and helpless in the face of world problems. Sacrificial action of this kind not only provides a constructive outlet for spiritual energy, but more important, undergirds our belief that 'peace on earth' comes through 'good-will toward all men'."

The annual summer conference of the Fellowship, to be held at Seabury House, Greenwich, Connecticut, will have one session devoted to a discussion of how service of this kind may be made a permanent part of the program. At this conference the Rev. Andre Trocme, of Paris and Le Chambon, France, secretary of the International Fellowship of Reconciliation in Europe, will be the leader and the Rt. Rev. William Appleton Lawrence, Bishop of Western Massachusetts, honorary chairman and co-founder of the E.P.F. will be the chaplain.

Another important activity of the E.P.F. is the financial support of three foreign projects, two in Germany and one among Japanese war prisoners in Asia. Through Paul Sekiya F.O.R. secretary in Japan, Episcopal pacifists are contributing to work with the war prisoners, of whom there were on March 15, 2,057. Seventy-seven had received death sentences and await execution unless their sentences are commuted; sixty of these are in Muntinlupa Prison, near Manila, in the Philippines; eleven of them are Australian prisoners in Manus Island; two are U.S.A. prisoners in Sugamo Prison near Tokyo. 407 prisoners have been sentenced to life imprisonment and 1,564 to penal servitude for various terms of years. Many of these are in prisons outside Japan where visits from their families or friends are virtually impossible. The Episcopal Pacifist Fellowship and the Fellowship of Reconciliation have been interested in ameliorating the lot of these men, in trying to have all death sentences commuted and all prisoners returned to Japan where there can be contact with their families and reduction of prison sentences and parole.

Acknowledging the receipt of a gift sent recently, Mr. Sekiya wrote, "The gift from the Episcopal Pacifist Fellowship is most welcome. Part of it will be used for Christian books to be sent to those who have received death penalties in Manus Island, as well as to the Christian group in Tokyo."

In Germany, gifts are being sent for the youth work carried on by Professor Siegmund-Schultze in Dortmund, one of the worst bombed cities of the war, where a welfare school cares for 100 students, many from Russian prison camps, and for wandering homeless youth from Eastern Germany and Eastern Europe.

The E.P.F. continues to support Pastor Menschning's Freundschaftsheim near Petzen, a training center for peace volunteers.

CALIFORNIA MEETING ON EDUCATION

★ A conference on education, led by the travelling team of Canon Wedel, Mrs. Dora Chaplin and the Rev. Walter Williams, was held at Santa Monica, Cal., June 8-10, attended by 55 men and women from the diocese of Los Angeles and six from Arizona.

Bombers or Butterflies

BY
ELEANOR M. JEWETT
A Laywoman of the Church

★ What shall we teach our children? How shall we teach them—we who believe that war is not God's way, never his will under any circumstances? We are faced at the start with a pattern of life that is completely paradoxical and at the mere thought of explaining it to our children we throw up our hands in despair. Nobody wants war, all the glamour and romance of it went out long ago. Most people admit that force does not accomplish very much, and a fight, even a private one, never gains anything. Yet look at the toys for small boys in every ten cent store and big store toy department. Nine-tenths of them direct the young imagination to fighting, destroying, killing. To be sure (and thankfully!) the child in cowboy boots flourishing a pistol does not carry his imagination to that logical end. Nevertheless his playthings and, all too early, his acquaintance with movies and the inevitable comic magazines stir his excitement pleasurably with a fight. The resourceful gangster, the "righteous" and gallant outlaw, the group or individual for which sympathy and admiration are built up, almost invariably lands in a grand and glorious battle with lethal weapons. How are we going to combat this pattern which is being continually printed on the impressionable minds of our boys and girls? We can't stem the tide. We can't keep our children out of it all—done up in cotton wool. That never works. Is there a possibility of a subtle and continuous substitution?

During the war our small town library decided, after much discussion, that we would buy no books for the children's room that had to do with combat in war—either fiction or non fiction. They were getting war from radio, movies, newspapers, talk, in school and at home. Whether we believe in war or not we would try to make the children's library a little island of peace where the lovely and abiding things in life would be stressed and always available. One day an eager eyed red headed eight year old came to the desk.

"I want a book about bombers," he said.

We told him we hadn't any. For a moment he looked crestfallen, then he brightened.

"Well then, I would like one about butterflies; that will be just as good."

Bombers or butterflies! Fortunately there will always be butterflies! And, in books at least, one will never fail to find adventures and excitement, stimulation and interests that are fine and true and in no way connected with destruction. Let us first of all see that books of such character are not only available to our children but close at hand. Let us also be quick to catch any constructive interest they may show whether in butterflies or steam engines, postage stamps or hunting birds—without guns! Surely such interests will emphasize the togetherness of people, the tastes and projects that many otherwise different human beings have in common, and so help to lay a foundation in the young mind of a willingness to understand and cooperate in a common cause.

If you want to know how one family pursued constructive interest and sought the lovely things in life together—mother and father (mind you!)—entering into it all with the children, read Annis Duff's "Bequest of Wings" (Viking). Those fortunate youngsters must certainly have found happy substitutes for the excitement of destruction!

From the earliest reading years and right on through childhood one can teach, indirectly through story books, the fact that the people of other nations, other races, very different from us, are just folks, thinking, feeling, fearing, playing much as we do. The idea of respecting other peoples ways and opinions is of course of paramount importance. School books, educational stories of how people live in the rest of the world, are good, and quite plentiful, but they leave the emotions untouched. The child needs to feel imaginatively the way the Chinese or Jew or European or South Sea Islander or what-have-you feels and thinks, as well as what he does and how

F. SIEGMUND-SCHULTZE confers with Muriel Lester at conference of the international Fellowship of Reconciliation

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

he lives. To follow a "foreigner" in a story means that the young reader vicariously lives his life, feels with him, understands him.

To develop "a loving understanding," a willingness to see and respect the point of view of some one "foreign" and different—if we could teach our children that, is it too much to hope that they will grow up unscathed by our world-pattern of violence?

Any children's room in a public library can supply books to the child with a special interest and hobby. As for the story books in which children of other and different nations or races figure and command the interest, that requires a little searching but there are many. (At the end of this article I will append a few titles). And Annis Duff's book mentioned above has a good short bibliography of fine and lovely books for children to feed and grow on.

Learning From Life

It must be not only in books, but in life, of course, that our children learn this attitude. In arguments, quarrels, disagreements we must try to make them see, little by little, that heat, bitterness, fighting, never really win a point; that there are two sides to almost every difference of opinion and one of them is never entirely right.

"Look here, son, giving Johnny a black eye didn't convince him, did it? You haven't gained a thing except a bloody nose for yourself!"

When it comes to retaliation and self defense, what are we going to say? The Friends—the fine old wonderful type of Quakers who stick by their principle, come what may — teach their boys never to hit back. And, paradoxical as it may seem, Quaker boys seem rarely to find themselves in a position where self defense might be considered necessary. A boy who never picks a fight and is truly friendly seldom gets into one. Perhaps that is something that can only be learned by experience, but it is a truth worth pointing out!

To wait, to listen, to be always ready to understand the other fellow's point of view, if children see that attitude in their parents, they quickly appreciate the practical value of such a method rather than trying to settle differences with their fists.

As the children grow older it would seem that a saner and truer interpretation of the world's conflicts and misunderstandings could be pointed out to them. To be sure, history books have ceased to be a record of one glorious war after another with one side completely right and the other side altogether wrong. But much more could be done by talk and discussion in the family group. If there had been a little more patience, a greater desire on the part of the nations involved to understand each other, to sit down quietly and listen to each other's grievances—if, above all, both sides had been willing to sacrifice a little selfish material interest—then war might not have been. The history books rarely stress or even mention the aftermath of war—which might thus have been prevented — the wasted lives, mutilated bodies, the want and desolation, the long lived hatred and bitterness.

Slowly ideas take root and come to fruit. And teaching children what we are most eager they shall learn is sometimes a discouraging process. However, the indirect teaching, the guiding of a young mind at odd moments, in the home, much more than in school, does bring heartening results. Family ideals and opinions, constructive interests shared and fostered, and books at hand that will give a child understanding and fellow feeling with those who are different from himself—these, please God, may help a little.

The family, the home! Back we come to the old much reiterated truths about the strength and life-long value of that which a child learns from his parents in the security of his own home. We are so apt to leave the education of our children entirely to other people, in Sunday school as well as in day school. Yet we know in our hearts we cannot, without grave loss, so completely shift the responsibility of teaching our sons and daughters. From us, mothers and fathers, they must learn first and all the time, to love our Lord, how to pray to him and what he taught —about good will toward one's enemies among other things, about agreeing with one's adversary, and about the gentle, understanding, relationships between man and man brought about by the love of God within. These, of course, are an old, old story not new things for a new atomic age, but never in the history of the world, perhaps, has a young generation had greater need to be definitely taught these truths, to know them and to live them.

E. P. F. MEMBERS confer at Seabury House. Commencing second from left: Mrs. John Moors, Mrs. John Nevin Sayre, the Rev. George L. Paine, Canon Raven and Muriel Lester

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

A few story books about children of other lands or races.

For little children

Stone Soup: Marcia Brown. Scribners (Russia)
Bright April: Marguerite de Angeli. Doubleday (Negro)
Ricardo's White Horse: A. G. Kelsey. Longmans (Puerto Rico)

The ten to twelve year olds

The Singing Tree: Kate Seredy. Viking (Hungarian)
The Secret of the Porcelain Fish: Mary Evernden. Random (China)
The Bells on Finland Street: Lyn Cook. Macmillan (Finland)

COMMENCEMENT AT BERKELEY

★ Bishop Budlong, retired of Connecticut, told those attending the commencement at the Berkeley Divinity School that the clergy and lay people of the Church must support each other in meeting their solemn responsibilities. He also had things to say about the delicate problems of the rector's wife. Bishop Gray presented degrees or diplomas to a class of twenty. Honorary doctorates went to Bishop Hatch, Prof. Massey H. Shepherd Jr. of Episcopal Theological School and Witness columnist, and Archdeacon Jack Townsend of Panama. At a luncheon following it was announced by Dean Percy Urban that a drive would be launched to complete payment for the rebuilt chapel and to provide choir stalls.

RECTOR AND WIFE SURPRISED

★ John S. Wellford was ordained deacon on June 8, 1926 and that same afternoon he was married to Harriet Penn. Now the rector of Emmanuel, Covington, Va., they figured on observing the double 25th anniversary by having a confirmation visit from Bishop Phillips, with a reception in his honor afterwards. But the anniversary business had gotten "norated around" so, to their utter surprise, the reception turned out to be one for them as well as the bishop. There was a nice check and other presents. It wasn't very long ago that a group in the parish presented them with a new car.

PRESCOTT CHURCHES GET TOGETHER

★ The men's club of St. Luke's, Prescott, Ariz., was host to 215 men of all churches of the city recently when Governor Howard Pyle was the guest of honor at an inter-church banquet. The specially printed menu was original to say the least. It read: Christian Science cocktail, Inter-denominational salad, Congregational beans, Lutheran potatoes, Southern Baptist ham, Adventist sauce, Catholic rolls, LDS butter, Baptist water, Episcopal coffee, Assorted doctrine relishes, Methodist pie.

ELECTRONIC ORGAN AT HEADQUARTERS

★ Presiding Bishop Henry K. Sherrill dedicated a new electronic organ in the chapel of the Church Missions House on June 15. It is of the latest design and has a set of chimes that can be played from the console. Russell E. Dill, treasurer of the Council, played the hymns at the service and later there was a recital by Robert Owen, organist at Christ Church, Bronxville.

SURVEY MADE OF SPOKANE

★ The convocation of Spokane heard the Rev. Clifford Samuelson of the town-country division of the National Council, and Prof. Joseph Moore of Seabury-Western, say that the rapid growth of population in the area makes imperative a greatly expanded program of Church activity. Both are members of a national survey team which will make a more complete report in the fall.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S HAS SCHOOL

★ Prof. Charles F. Whiston of the Church Divinity School of the Pacific led a school of religion on five successive evenings recently at St. Bartholomew's, New York. We did not see what the papers did with the story sent out by the press agent of the parish, but it might well have been grist for the mill of some reporter short of copy. The lecturer was described as the "fifty, gentle, graying professor of moral theology" who "recharged the batteries of a group of spiritually hungry New Yorkers" at "imposing St. Bartholomew's Protestant Episcopal Church on Manhattan's Park Avenue."

"Employing an eloquent minimum of gestures," the press agent continued, "pointing to his chest to indicate the inwardness of true religion, putting a finger

PASTOR WILHELM MENSCHING, noted German Pacifist, outside his historic church

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

to his lips to suggest words of courage or prayer and bidding his listeners stand and look up when praying, the tall, contemplative Professor Whiston opened his simple discourse with a talk called 'Beggars or Adorers,' in which he suggested that the mood of prayer always be one of offering worship, not a mood of asking favors."

At the conclusion of the three page release, we are told that "such is the hunger for instruction in prayer that he (the 'kindly Whiston' this time) spends many weeks each year in schools of religion. He is annually invited to fashionable All Saints in Beverly Hills where many Hollywood stars attend."

We are sure Charlie Whiston deserves better treatment and so would suggest that, if there are to be press releases in the future, that he read them over before they are sent to papers.

OKLAHOMA ELECTS DEAN POWELL

★ Dean Winslow Powell of Trinity Cathedral, Omaha, was elected coadjutor of Oklahoma at a special convention meeting at Tulsa, June 5-6. He led in all three ballots, receiving 19 clergy and 81 lay votes on the final one. It is the first time that Oklahoma has elected its own bishop, Bishop Casady having been elected by the House of Bishops when it was a missionary district. It became a diocese under his leadership and during the 24 years of his episcopacy the communicant strength has more than doubled.

CHARLESTON PARISH CELEBRATES

★ St. Michael's, Charleston, S. C., opened the celebration of its 200th anniversary on June 14 with a celebration of holy communion by the rector, the Rev. DeWolf Perry, in the morning and an address by the Rev. Edgar L. Pennington, historiographer of the Church and rector of St. John's, Mobile, Ala., at an evening service. During the anniversary period the parish will be host to the convention of the diocese. There will also be a teaching mission Nov. 25-30 conducted by the Rev. Roland F. Palmer of the Cowley Fathers. The anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone will be observed Feb. 17, 1952 when Dean Albert R. Stuart of New Orleans, a former rector, will celebrate and Bishop Oliver J. Hart of Penna., a former assistant at St. Michael's, will preach.

COMMENCEMENT AT PACIFIC

★ A surprise award at the commencement of the Church Divinity School of the Pacific was a doctorate to the former dean, Bishop Henry H. Shires of Cal. He has been asked to give the commencement address but was not aware that he was to be honored until it was conferred by Bishop Gooden, president of the trustees. Bishop Watson of Utah also received a doctorate. Bishop Rhea of Idaho was elected president succeeding Bishop Gooden. Twelve men were graduated.

GENERAL SEMINARY COMMENCEMENT

★ Forty-seven men were graduated this year from the General Seminary, representing 26 dioceses and 32 colleges. Honorary doctorates were conferred on Bishop Burrill, suffragan of Dallas; Bishop Campbell, coadjutor of W. Va.; Bishop Athenagoras T. Kokinakis of Elaia; Bishop Lichtenberger, coadjutor of Mo.; Bishop Smith of Iowa; the Rev. Frederick R. Meyers of Detroit; the Rev. Thomas L. Small of Oil City, Pa.; Prof. Charles F. Whiston of the Church Divinity School of the Pacific.

MISSIONARIES ARE COMMISSIONED

★ Presiding Bishop Henry K. Sherrill recently commissioned the following outgoing missionaries at a service at Seabury House: the Rev. Gordon Charlton, Alaska; the Rev. Norman Elliott, Alaska; the Rev. Stephen Kim, Honolulu; the Rev. Howard Laycock, Alaska; the Rev. William Glenn, Costa Rico; the Rev. Alanson Brown, Mexico. On June 10th all of them were preachers in churches in Connecticut.

PARISH DAY SCHOOL IN GEORGIA

★ Trinity Church, Columbus, Ga., is to open a parish day school in the fall under the direction of the rector, the Rev. Colin R. Campbell. It is made possible by C. F. Williams of the city who gave to the parish the full use of a house which is located in the heart of the residential section on three and a half acres. It has been fully equipped with class room facilities and part of the gardens have been converted into a playground. Sharing the use of the building will be a speech school for children with impediments.

ROPING CHURCHWARDEN IN TEXAS

★ We do not necessarily associate rodeo riders with Churchwardens, but we have at least one instance where the combination works out wonderfully. Ted Harper is warden of St. Paul's, Marfa, Texas, and he is also a winner at calf roping. His wife, Frances, is right along with him, as she is quite noted as a fancy rider. The two of them have won many a rodeo prize. Their two girls, eight and five, are being reared in true

A. J. MUSTE, leader of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, and Paul Sekiya of Japan at a conference on world peace rodeo style. They learned to ride before they learned to walk—or so they say—and can stick on anything that grows horse hair.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Mainly, Ted raises and trains Palominos, quarter horses and cow ponies. He is also raising some Brama calves for rodeo work. He says that Herefords are too smart to be good rodeo cattle. They soon learn that if they run, they will be roped and thrown, but if they don't run, nothing happens. So they don't run. However, Bramas never learn.

The shepherd's crook has long been a symbol in the Church, especially with reference to the pastoral staff used by the bishops. But in this cow country, it doesn't seem too far off the beam for us to substitute a rope as more symbolic of the country —and of Churchwardens.

RECTOR AND WIFE ARE HONORED

★ The Rev. and Mrs. Hedley G. Stacey were honored at a reception at Christ Church, Dearborn, Mich., when they were presented with $6,000. He is to retire on August 31 to be succeeded by Canon Edward Green of Detroit's cathedral staff.

ANTI-SEMITISM CONDEMNED

★ Over 500 ministers have signed a document, issued by the Council Against Intolerance, warning of Christian responsibility for anti-Jewish feeling in America. It was drafted by Harry A. Atkinson, head of the Church Peace Union, and a number of Church leaders, including Bishop Lawrence of W. Mass.; Prof. Bowie of Virginia Seminary, and the Rev. David Hunter, head of education of the diocese of Mass.

It suggests that frightful as has been the ordeal of anti-Semitism to the Jewish people, "it may be that the injury is even more terrible to the Christian world unable to prevent it, and tempted to offer excuses or disclaim responsibility." It urges that the Christian world must take account of what happens to its own fellowship and the spirit of its own people when they foster anti-Jewish feelings, condone them, or are unable to prevent their terrible consequences.

The appeal points out that one of the most subtle and powerful influences in arousing anti-Semitic feeling is the careless or unwise use of Christian source materials, even including the New Testament. The Bible itself may be unwittingly used with harmful results if there is not a clear understanding of its origin and background. Thus, The Gospel of John, the statement points out, was written around the end of the First Century A. D. when the antagonism between Jew and Gentile had developed to unhappy proportions. The statement goes on to say: "In the synoptic tradition of Mark, Matthew and Luke, there are scarcely more than a half-dozen references to the Jews. John multiplies this ten-fold."

The statement contends that the Jewish people have precisely the same faults and virtues possessed by Gentiles. If there is any difference, the Jew can boast of longer cultural heritage, but the primary reason that Jews have suffered discrimination and persecution is that they were a minority. "They have never been strong enough to prevent other people yielding to the baser motives of discrimination." The statement makes an appeal for the closer unity of all peoples and religions, because this unity is the one hope of overcoming the evils which threaten Jew and Gentile alike.

Episcopalians to sign are Bishop Dun of Washington, Bishop Hobson of Southern Ohio, Bishop Moulton, retired of Utah, Bishop Gilbert, retired of New York, Dean Sweet of St. Louis, the Rev. William Munds of Wilmington, the Rev. George L. Paine of Boston, the Rev. Gardiner M. Day, the Rev. F. B. Kellogg and Prof. Joseph F. Fletcher of Cambridge, the Rev. Eric Tasman of South Orange, the Rev. Wilbur Caswell of Yonkers, the Rev. Charles B. Ackley of New York, the Rev. Guy Emery Shipler, editor of the Churchman and the Rev. Roscoe T. Foust, editor of The Witness.

NEW WINDOWS AT ST. MARK'S

★ The narthex of St. Mark's, San Antonio, completed before the centennial celebration last year, has now been enriched with stained glass windows depicting the history of the Prayer Book from its inception to its use in St. Mark's, since one of the medallions pictured Bishop Gregg and Robert E. Lee laying the cornerstone of the present St. Mark's in 1859.

NEW CHURCH IN PHOENIX

★ Trinity Cathedral, Phoenix, Ariz., is a true mother church. In the past year it has aided St. Paul's, North Phoenix, in a successful building program. Now, the cathedral is matching $24,000 toward the building of a parish house for new All Saints Church, Phoenix. Cost of the 10-acre lot where it will be constructed is $35,000, most of which has been paid. The Rev. Richard L. Sumner, formerly curate at St. Philip's, Tucson, is in charge of All Saints.

NEW DIRECTORS OF FOUNDATION

★ Charles S. Garland of Baltimore, former president of the investment bankers association of America, and Ethan A. H. Shepley, lawyer of St. Louis, have been elected directors of the Episcopal Church Foundation. As is the case with all of the directors, both have extensive banking and business connections.

TOLLIE CAUTION MADE TRUSTEE

★ The Rev. Tollie L. Caution, secretary of Negro work of the National Council, has been elected a trustee of the Philadelphia Divinity School.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EDITORIALS

The Peacemakers

PEACE might be described as tension in tranquillity. We will never eliminate the tension from life. We may achieve the tranquillity. That is our task as citizens of the world and as members of the Christian Church.

Two things are necessary, improved machinery and renewed men and women. We cannot expect to maintain the tensions that are an inevitable part of life in anything like tranquillity unless we have some kind of machinery by which we can create order. There is no peace in a household without some kind of orderliness which is voluntarily accepted by the members of the family, and by which the conflicting interests of the various members are reconciled and held in restraint. There could be no peace in the United States without the constitutional machinery of courts and laws and administration.

We are now engaged in creating a similar piece of machinery which will be able to hold the far greater tensions of the world in a similar state of tranquillity. The task is not an easy one and it is not likely to be accomplished in our generation. We have already made several false moves the cost of which we are still paying. The important thing is that we keep moving and not lose heart.

The Church itself cannot make the machinery. Its principal task is to give to the people who do make it the incentive and the will to keep moving in the right direction.

Important as the machinery is, renewed men and women are still more important. No matter how carefully the rules of a household may be worked out or how meticulously they are applied, unless the members of the family want to get along together conflict will prevail.

Here is where the Church can be the greatest help. It can keep before men and women the quietness of Jesus. In him there was no disquietude, restlessness, hysteria or panic. Why? He wanted so little for himself. He cared nothing about personal recognition, put no price on prestige, had no desire for wealth, and no thirst for glory. Consequently, he was imperturbable in the midst of the most raging disturbances of his time. He was sure of himself, not with the cocksureness of a self-made man, but with the quiet sureness of a self-dedicated man. He was sure that love was the way, the only way. It was the hard way, often the unrewarded way, leading to pain and death. But it was the only way. Because he was sure of that, he was sure of himself with a quietness and serenity that men call the peace of God.

We cannot have his peace unless we have the roots from which it grows. If we continue to want so much for ourselves, to be sure of nothing, not even of ourselves, we will not have his peace. Certainly we will never have it by striving for it. We will have it only by dwelling in him and he in us. His quietness still breathes through the centuries and it rests here and there on people who are open to receive it. They become the new men and women who are able to make peace in their time.

"Quotes"

I HAVE wondered why the Churches have not acted (to stop war). For nearly 2,000 years they have cleared land, taught farming as well as plain reading and writing. If asked whether they were helping Russia or hurting her, they could answer that they were acting under orders of Jesus Christ and were prepared to take whatever consequences might follow. But unless they were prepared to make the Great Proposal in such a form that Moslems and Buddhists could accept it, I doubt if they would get much help. Are they prepared to do that?

—STRINGFELLOW BARR
Episcopal layman and former president of St. John's College

Challenge of John

THE birthday of St. John Baptist was celebrated last Sunday. It is therefore appropriate for Christians to meditate at this time on the significance of that austere character who was the forerunner of our Lord.

The Baptist created a sensation in his day and succeeded in putting the fear of God into the hearts of his hearers. His fiery castigation of sinners awakened sleeping consciences in various classes of people, so that they asked: "What shall we do, then?" And he gave to each one an order for action that should be the appropriate fruit of his repentance. The gist of John Baptist's message was that a sense of sin, followed by atoning action, is the one prerequisite to any live membership in the Kingdom of God which the Messiah was to create in this world for his creatures.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

This is a timeless message, pertinent for all eras and for all sorts and kinds of people and nations. The Kingdom of God has long since been created, but it is, even now, struggling to remain alive and to gather into itself all peoples and nations and languages. Christians believe that the risen and ascended Christ is continually present with power in this little world he redeemed, as the very heart of this Kingdom, and that ultimately "the kingdoms of this world shall become the Kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ and he shall reign forever and ever." But it is true now, as it was true when John Baptist spoke, that neither individuals nor races nor nations shall enter into that supreme fellowship until they have been convinced of their own peculiar sins and begun to bring forth fruits worthy of repentance.

A striking feature of our present world of hysterical fears and continual threatenings of possible enemies is the nearly complete absence of any national sense of sin. It is only the other nation or race or culture that is sinful and outrageous and a threat to the peace of the world. In America we carry on investigations galore of corruption in city governments and in the halls of Congress, of juvenile crime, of race persecutions and legal lynchings, but it all leaves us as a nation strangely complacent and undisturbed. It is so much easier to look across the world to discover abominations and outrages, quite as it was in John Baptist's day for respectable, self-satisfied Jewry to see in the Gentile world all that was unworthy. In America today we need so desperately some courageous prophet, sensitive to sin, clear of thought and plain of speech to call us to repent of our sins on every level of life—economic sins, political sins, diplomatic sins and to bring forth fruits worthy of that repentance; fruits of a regenerated foreign-policy, of economic behavior that shall no longer require production for slaughter to assure all our people a decent abundance of the good things of life, of a political character that shall no longer put a premium on corruption or require twelve million Negro Americans to remain second-class citizens because their traditional oppressors have great political power to trade with.

This courageous prophet that we need ought to be the united Christian Church. She might well be the John Baptist of America today. But so far she has refused the role. She is, officially, too closely bound to the chariot-wheel of the status quo. High finance can be too valuable in building churches and cathedrals and in financing missionary work of sundry sorts. Will she, we wonder, continue indefinitely to forget that she was born in revolution and that she has never been so beloved and blessed of mankind as when she has challenged and fought corruption and self-satisfaction in high places and scorned the second-best as a solution for the ills and sufferings of men?

It was in these eras that she wielded a dominant influence in the affairs of men and in the chancelleries of nations. Today all must admit, whether scornfully or sadly, that her influence is slight. This is a picture which Christian leaders should gaze at steadily, humbly and with prayer and contrition. And will there, perhaps, be one among them who will then call upon Christian people to rise up and turn the Church into a John Baptist that will convince mightily of sin and declare to all and sundry precisely what they shall do to be saved and to bring this disillusioned and fearful world to peace and righteous fellowship?

Canon Raven Speaks To the E. P. F.

Reported by OSCAR SEITZ
Professor at Bexley Hall

A SURVEY of the theological background against which Christian pacifism stands reveals that just as theology and science were approaching a reconciliation, a reaction set in on the continent of Europe in the form of Barthianism, or so-called neo-orthodoxy. Historically this reaction was brought on by a reawakening to the fact of evil, particularly as manifested in the first world war, and to the need for redemption. Theologically it is the result of a one-sided emphasis upon sin and a neglect of illumination; a false antithesis between Greek and Hebrew thought—this world versus the next.

No theology which leaves out the necessity of taking up the cross, because Jesus has already done it for us, can be true to the Gospel. There is no other way of overcoming evil except by self-giving to the uttermost. But no Christian theologian can identify the sacrifices demanded by modern war with this way of Christ. Logically, acceptance of war leads step by step to the acceptance of mass-bombing, atomic weapons and every other new form of destruction.

The Christian community is that of a people exalted to fellowship with God at the price of the breaking of self and the cross is inescapably identified with the crown. True Christian love, agape, is neither proprietary, nor sentimental. It cannot be said sufficiently often that the Christian pacifist witness is part and parcel of the continuous witness the Church must bear to an un-Christian world; it is representative of the stand Christians take in regard to all social issues.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

But the courting of martyrdom is not Christian and Jesus was not suicidal. Foreseeing the cross, he nevertheless went up to Jerusalem on the great adventure to challenge his nation with the will of God, refusing either to fight or to flee. Martyrdom is simply the constant readiness to bear witness to Christ, let come what may. The acknowledgment of God in Christ has transformed men's outlook on nature and history, and on the attributes of God himself. Although other insights were not wanting in the Old Testament, for the greater part of it God was the Lord of hosts and of battles, the God of the law, the God of Israel. The revelation of God in Christ created a New Testament often radically different from the old. For their testimony to God as love, Christian pacifists have sometimes been accused of the Marcionite heresy of rejecting the Old Testament and their opponents have even suggested that there are situations in history to which the love of God does not apply. But this is apostacy. The New Testament knows of no exception to the affirmation that God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself.

Dual Consciousness

MAN is endowed with a dual consciousness of solitariness and of communion, and Christ leads us to maturity, through obedience to the "sublime law of sacrifice" that life develops as life is laid down. Even God's own Son was "made perfect through suffering." Those who are troubled by some supposed conflict between the evolutionary process and the biblical story of creation would do well to read and ponder the climactic eighth chapter of Romans, where Paul rises from the confession of power of sin, to his affirmation of the power of the Spirit, showing what light this throws on the whole history of creation.

He lays down four propositions: (1) creation is subject to frustration, the failure to fulfill its purpose; (2) this frustration is comparable to birth pangs of a new order, the manifestation of the sons of God; (3) God himself is involved in and shares the suffering, the Spirit intercedes for us; (4) God, who is love, makes all things work together for good to those who love him, for nothing can separate us from his love in Christ. This faith is the necessary antidote to the pessimistic, and indeed heretical "new theology" which attempts to divorce nature from grace, and calls the way of love "utopianism."

Basis of Pacifism

THE crux of the matter is this: Christian pacifism is based upon the historic resolution of Jesus neither to fight nor to flee, enduring the cross, and upon two corallaries: God's nature as love, and the community of the Holy Spirit. The sequel of the mission of Jesus and its end-product was the integration of the men and women who had first followed and then forsaken him into an organic society, living the shared life of the Spirit.

The effects were catastrophic, as the good news of "Christ crucified" was carried from an obscure province to the palace of the Caesar's and Nero's persecution was met with a fortitude which made even the hardened Roman populace take notice. How was such a community constituted? The New Testament shows us how Jesus trained his followers to become alive by extending their range of sensitiveness, and assuming that every man has a soft spot that can be stabbed awake. He brought them on, by revealing the eternal meaning hidden in common things, until they could see the supreme revelation, himself. The vision cannot be kept in some secret chapel of the soul, but as the fourth evangelist insists only by doing the will. The disciples who had quarreled over who should be greatest even as they followed Jesus to Jerusalem were not fit for Pentecost until they had been broken by the realization of their own impotence and sin. The new fellowship was the result of the conviction that they were to go into all the world to proclaim, not themselves, but Christ and that he would still use them, transform and equip them for further service.

Our Obligation

WHAT can and should we do? If at this time we can take up the invitation of Amsterdam to state clearly our Christian pacifist faith, that would be very important, for if the Church commits itself to unlimited war then all belief in love as the ultimate power fails, and the Church will forfeit its right to be heard as a witness to God as revealed in Christ. We are obligated by our loyalty to the Church to present our case now. This is the specialist's task. For the rest of us there is the matter of our own self-discipline. There is the matter of giving the best possible advice to young men facing conscription. It is the business of older pacifists not to interfere with youth's freedom to make up their own minds, but to help them analyze the situation and come to a clear view. The cause of Christian pacifism is best served by the largest possible measure of cooperation with near-pacifists.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

As members of the Episcopal Pacifist Fellowship do not wash your hands of responsibility for conscientious objectors and C.P.S. camps, as if this were the government's business. Magnify what you have in common with fellow-churchmen who are not pacifists, avoiding a pacifist schism. We also have a responsibility as citizens of a democracy to try to influence the state to develop an alternative policy to war, which is a one-way road leading to destruction. The best way to check the spread of communism is not blitzes which prepare the soil for chaos and revolution. A redemptive and healing ministry like that of the Society of Friends, if carried on by all the Churches could go a long way toward changing the current. The obstacles to peace are not insuperable and, for the Christian, the resources are infinite.

A Pacifist Witness In a College

BY

DAVID W. YATES

Rector of The Chapel of the Cross, Chapel Hill, N. C.

JOHN WOOLMAN, a Quaker in the early days of North Carolina, said that he went about raising issues. That is one of the principal businesses of a person ministering to college students, in fact, of any Christian minister. People grow morally and spiritually only by exercising the power of choice, and so also are outward conditions improved. Yet the power of choice will not be exercised unless people are confronted with the issues and the principles involved in deciding them.

Here is one great value of a pacifist witness in a college community. Many students have never seriously considered that war may be contrary to the Christian religion. Some say that the possibility has not even occurred to them. Few have ever had the case against participation in war fully presented to them, possibly because the view is not often held, perhaps because it is an unpopular subject. The majority have just accepted war as inevitable. Having in most instances only a superficial knowledge of Christianity, they have justified war in their minds chiefly on a "common sense" basis and on prudential factors.

A presentation of Christian pacifism forces students to think more deeply about the true nature of their religion and its implications for living. They see that deciding whether to take part in war is not such an easy and self-evident choice as they had supposed. They are compelled —at least some of them feel the compulsion—to seek the principles behind all Christian conduct. From there they may be pressed even farther back to the fundamental truths of theology from which those principles are derived, to the Incarnation and the Atonement, to the character of God and the nature and destiny of man.

The result could be two-fold, first, the deepening of the student's personal religion, and second, a firmer basis for all his ethical living. Whatever decision he makes, as a consequence of facing the issue and trying to think it through in the light of Christian truth, he will be more aware of what Christianity is and teaches, he will have a better grasp of its application to life, and will know more clearly why he chooses as he does in all moral questions that arise.

A second value of a pacifist witness on the campus is to strengthen and encourage those whose consciences lead them to be Christian pacifists. They often need support. They are usually people of strong individuality. Yet they are comparatively few in number and sometimes feel like lonely islands in a sea of contrary opinion. They may feel overborne by sheer weight of numbers and have misgivings about their own position that are due to a feeling of isolation. It is heartening and strengthening to have a well-grounded testimony to the truth of Christian pacifism placed before them.

Further Understanding

A FURTHER service rendered by such a witness is to make those who do not hold it more understanding of this position and more sympathetic toward those who hold it. People who are not themselves pacifists are sometimes inclined to be impatient with those who are. They do not realize upon what strong grounds in Christianity their pacifism is based. They may even impugn their motives and leap to the conclusion that they are unpatriotic or lacking in courage. When they know the reasons for such a stand and recognize the sincerity of those who take it, they are much slower to condemn people whose convictions are just as firm and at least as much warranted by Christianity as their own.

Freedom of conscience is another value furthered by a pacifist witness. The mass movements and mass thinking of our time have obscured this fundamental right of every individual and its necessity for a healthful society. There is danger that independence of thought and a sense of personal responsibility may go into a decline that would be disastrous. There is too much shirking of both in these days. People may be recalled to their duty by seeing others discharge this obligation. Even the right of freedom of conscience is often not recognized. The idea that the individual's importance is secondary to that of the state is not confined to countries with totalitarian governments. The taking of an unpopular stand by a person and his insistence upon his right to do so can be a striking witness to the freedom of conscience that is not only a privilege but an imperative for a Christian and for anyone who would be a real person.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Conscientious Objectors

AN aid to this testimony is to make known to people, from the chancel at the announcement period, on the bulletin board, or in other ways, that blanks have been provided by our National Council's department of Christian social relations for Episcopalians who are conscientious objectors to fill out and file with the department. This registration can be cited to draft boards as a means of substantiating the right of a member of the Episcopal Church to be a conscientious objector, similar to, but not as well known as, the right of a member of the Quakers, the Mennonites, or the Church of the Brethren. The registration blank begins with these words: "Both by official resolution and by statement in Pastoral Letters, the Protestant Episcopal Church has recognized the right of freedom of conscience for those who, though willing to risk their lives in non-combatant service, are unwilling for conscience' sake to take human life in war." This opening statement is worthy of being read to all congregations, for the great truth that it contains as well as the authority that is behind it.

One other value of a pacifist witness is the maintenance of freedom of speech. Many people seem to construe this constitutional right as permission to speak freely, provided that you say what they want to hear. If we are to retain this right, it must be exercised in matters on which people disagree and even where disagreement may be costly. Then alone would it mean anything. The best way to keep a freedom is to use it. A by-product of a pacifist witness is that it reminds people of the importance of freedom of speech and of the danger that it may be lost.

Incidentally, it may also increase people's respect for the Church. If it is the Church whose minister or member speaks out in spite of opposition, and whose officials recognize his right to do so, people may awaken to a renewed realization that the Church and Christianity still constitute the greatest bulwark of truth and freedom.

Conscientious Objectors

BY

JOSEPH K. ATKINS

An Episcopal Layman

"RENDER therefore unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's."

On its surface the reply was sharp enough to send the questioners away confounded; but there was and is more to it than that. As a quick answer to the catch question of whether or not to pay tribute to an occupying power it did very well. As a permanent blanket answer to the problem of the relation of the individual to the state it was no answer at all, but a challenge to re-think the problem from the beginning.

The problem rises in a hundred ways today, but in no form more poignantly than in the question of service to the state in its role as warmaker. Certainly, render unto the state those services which it has the right to claim from its citizens! But is cooperation in killing fellow human beings one of those rightful services?

The conscientious objector to war says no. The religiously based objector says that here is a clear case of the obligation to render unto God the things that are God's—obedience to the law against killing, and, even more searchingly, obedience to the two great commandments. The objector who disclaims a religious basis for his stand arrives by humane and biological arguments at the complementary conclusion: The individual's conscience is not one of the things that are Caesar's.

The present conscription law in the United States (the selective service act of 1948, extended in 1950) recognizes the right of the religious objector at least to state his case—after he has already passed under the yoke of conscription by registering as a potential unit of manpower. If a young man has arrived at his decision to take no part in warmaking by way of his own observations, however, without the conscious guidance of specific religious training, he cannot claim the status of CO. Indeed, the law explicitly forbids any consideration of objection to war based upon "a merely personal moral code."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Interim Device

THE Congress nevertheless intended to be fair to anyone who "by reason of religious training and belief is conscientiously opposed to participation in war in any form . . . Any person claiming exemption from combatant training and service because of such conscientious objections whose claim is sustained by the local board shall, if he is inducted into the armed forces under this title, be assigned to noncombatant service as defined by the President, or shall, if he is found to be conscientiously opposed to participation in such non-combatant service, be deferred."

Deferment, of course, is an interim device, a mere evading of the problem posed by the CO whose right to object is legally admitted. It works a rather special psychological hardship on the objector, since it exposes him, on the one hand, to the raised eyebrows of his contemporaries and, on the other hand, to the unpredictable future action of the Congress when and if it makes up its mind what to do about him.

No such uncertainty attaches to the case of the young man whose thinking has driven him all the way back to the underlying assumptions of conscription, spoken or unspoken, who refuses to register.

The conscientious non-registrant, regardless of the depth and sincerity of his religious beliefs, has no rights under the law whatever. The act provides that he may be imprisoned for as long as five years and fined as much as ten thousand dollars, and within the past three months both maximum prison terms and maximum fines have been imposed. There are some who take a gloomy view of the contrast with the past. Back in the years of the shooting war, under the 1940 act with identical permissible penalties, very few maximum prison sentences were given, and no substantial fines levied. The average length of term was eighteen months. In the present panic mood of the country at least one judge has found it emotionally possible to send a nineteen year old boy to prison for ten years, by dividing up the charges and sentencing separately for (a) refusing to appear for physical examination and (b) refusing to appear for induction—all this after the boy had already served a term for initially refusing to register!

It is true that in this case—that of Robert Michener—the judge, the Honorable Delmas Hill, sitting in federal court in Topeka, Kansas, some weeks after the original passing of sentence reduced its severity by allowing both five-year terms to be served concurrently; but there remains the moral and legal question of whether the whole case is not one of double jeopardy, of persecution rather than legitimate prosecution.

Considering how deeply insane wars and the war system are, it is probably not surprising that the treatment of conscientious objectors to war is frequently confused. Those who fall within the narrow definition of the legally permissible type are subject to harassment and lack of understanding by the local draft boards. Those who fall outside this definition—the non-religious objector and the conscientious non-registrant, religious or not—can expect nothing better than to be treated as criminals.

Issues Need Clarifying

WHAT is surprising is the poor job the Churches have done in clarifying the issues of war and peace. Not only have we failed to make the logic of the Christian pacifist position clear to those outside the Church; we have even failed to make our own members aware of the excellence of this position as a living witness of the reality of their faith. The current wave of vindictive prosecutions and harsh sentencing began this past winter in a court where the United States attorney publicly and plaintively admitted he "did not understand" the non-registrant he was prosecuting, and the judge indignantly demanded to know of the young prisoner, "What would happen if everybody felt the way you do?" The attorney is a fairly prominent Roman Catholic layman, and the judge is extremely active in the affairs of his Protestant Episcopal diocese.

Clergy and laymen alike would profit by a lively re-reading of the New Testament and of the early history of the Church. Since the days of Constantine, at least, the Church has often been suspiciously eager to render unto Caesar all the things that are Caesar's and some of the things that are God's. The little pinch of incense in the votive flame before the emperor's statue has seemed such a trifling gesture of conformity, such a small price to pay for the blessings of order and civic stability . . . The rough practical psychologists of the secular world have understood so well the importance of controlling men's minds and the trick of getting control by little secret acts of surrender. The pinch of incense in Nero's day, the "heil!" of Hitler's day, the "Be as religious as you like my boy, only admit the state's ultimate power and majesty by registering" of our day.

Many priests of our Church insert into the prayer for the absent a special phrase for those in the service of their country. It should include those in the service of their God in prison for conscience's sake.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Some day we hope the Church will return to its pre-Constantine position of taking no part in war—the position stated by him whom we call the Prince of Peace in the Sermon on the Mount:

"Blessed are the peacemakers; for they shall be called the children of God.

"Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth:

"But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil; but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also."

"Peace still waits to be freed by men of good will who are brothers to all men because they are sons of God," wrote Dr. Foust in The Witness, March 22, 1951.

The Ministry of Reconciliation

BY

JOHN YUNGBLUT

Rector of St. Thomas Church, Terrace Park, Ohio

ONE of the fundamental principles of the Protestant tradition is the inherent priesthood of all believers. We have thought of this potential ministry largely in negative terms, insisting on our prerogative of direct access to God without the mediation of any others. This is true; but the priesthood of all believers must be expressed in an active, positive, vital ministry, a ministry of reconciliation. This is the command of the Master: "Be ye ministers of reconciliation."

We shall distinguish between three phases of this ministry: the reconciliation of individuals with themselves, with other individuals, and with God.

In the first place you will exercise this ministry by helping others to be reconciled to themselves, to discover and to develop in their own lives "the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace." For this ministry you will require a heightened sensitivity, an unfailing patience, a deep and abiding compassion. You will need to develop your capacity for empathy—the capacity to project yourself vicariously into the position of another so that you share the other's joys and sorrows, see the other's problems from his point of view, experience his aspirations and his discouragements. You recall the pathetic plea of Emily in Thornton Wilder's "Our Town." "Oh Mommy, please look at me just once as if you really saw me." This is the unspoken reproach of many with whom we live every day. Ministers of reconciliation learn to look at individuals as if they really did see them—because that is precisely what they long most to do—to see them as they see themselves—from within—insofar as this is possible for another.

My responsibility is to try to understand and then to encourage what is best in another. A mere gesture of courtesy and respect at the proper moment can be of untold value to a distraught soul. Oscar Wilde says somewhere that he was lifted out of deepest despair because someone tipped his hat to him on the street and thereby unconsciously restored his self-respect. Looking back on our own lives we could all report times when we have been helped to find our way by the timely understanding and encouragement of a friend. A great physician, Dr. Trudeau, set for himself a standard which ministers of reconciliation who aspire to be physicians of the soul might well make their own: "To cure sometimes, to relieve often, to comfort always."

Man and Man

SECOND, there is the work of reconciliation between man and man. One of the Epistles of John says bluntly: "He that saith he is in the light and hateth his brother, is in darkness." The Sermon on the Mount makes clear the importance of reconciliation between man and man: "If thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee, leave there thy gift before the altar and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift."

How is this service for men to be performed? It must be done quietly, unobtrusively, so that others are not even aware that it is going on. You have experienced the process, though the actual mechanics are enshrouded in mystery. You have seen two individuals at swords' points, tense in their mutual antagonism. And you have seen the antagonism miraculously dissolved by the mediation of another who has apparently done nothing; his presence alone seems to work a spell on them. There are individuals who have this wonderful capacity to reconcile. Partly it is that the two who are at enmity suddenly find common ground in mutual admiration of another. But it is more than that. The mediator has so well understood what each is striving for, what is the actual source of the misunderstanding and conflict, that he is in a position to interpret each to the other and hence to heal the wounded pride on either side. You have known mothers who could do this for their children. Still more beautiful, you have known children who could do this for their parents. And all of us have experienced the way in which a private or public meeting, rapidly deteriorating into an impasse of opposing factions, can be redeemed by one minister of reconciliation. You are called to be that minister.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

If you will respond to your Lord's commission in this kind of ministry, you will be surprised how frequently you will be provided in daily life with an opportunity to perform the sacrament of reunion. You will become oblivious to gossip, impervious to the sharp tongue, so that scandal will meet in you a stone wall. You will learn how to absorb invective without returning it in kind. At the same time you will develop a hunter's eye for the right occasion for a timely word of commendation and the opportunity to interpret someone to another in his absence without entering into the quarrel. If you will consecrate yourself for this ministry you will learn how to establish even among those who tend to clash with each other a "unity of the spirit in the bond of peace."

Men and God

FINALLY, this ministry calls upon you to reconcile men to God. This phase of the work cannot be distinguished altogether from the responsibility of reconciling men to themselves and to each other, for to do either is to reconcile men to God. Yet we must remember that these relationships to one's self and to others have meaning and value only because of the ultimate relationship to God. You will experience natural reticence in speaking of God to others. You are not called upon to wear your religion upon your sleeve. But opportunities for personal testimony and direct evangelism do arise. The minister of reconciliation becomes sensitive to the receptivity of others. He knows that an ill-timed and injudicious defense of the gospel can repel rather than attract; but an opportunity missed is still more grievous failure.

A simple witness on the part of a layman of the power of God through the Holy Spirit as he has experienced it in his own life can do more than many sermons to draw another to God. But how often we fail to bear witness. When we were baptized we were signed with the sign of the cross as the pastor said, "in token that hereafter he shall not be ashamed to confess the faith of Christ crucified." How few of us live up to that vocation! How often our very silence betrays him whom we would serve! How often we have merited his word, "He who is not for me is against me"!

But effective as may be the spoken word at the psychological moment, of still greater significance is the silent witness of a life lived close to God. It is said of some of the followers of Jesus in the New Testament that men took knowledge of them that they had been with Christ. Would God that word might be said of us! Men saw in the face of Jesus Christ the "light of the knowledge of the glory of God." Jesus could say, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." We are to live so close to the Master that we are to reveal something of his spirit in the power of our lives. So shall we be ministers of reconciliation.

Talking It Over

BY
W. B. SPOFFORD SR.

CAREY McWILLIAMS, whom many will remember as a CLID forum speaker at the Kansas City General Convention, has written an eye-opener in the June 16 issue of the Nation. It is about strife in Englewood, N. J., with the obvious conclusion that what is happening in that suburban town can happen anywhere, and probably will.

A forum that featured middle-of-the-road speakers has been put out of business by a man named Frederick G. Cartwright with the help of the Catholic War Veterans; an unsuccessful attempt was made to prevent Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam from speaking at a high school commencement because of his connection with the Planned Parenthood Federation which, according to the objectors, has helped create "more prostitutes"; United World Federalists and the United Nationists have been denounced for "communist front activities."

Others who have been publicly attacked have been Prof. George S. Counts of Columbia; James Carey, secretary of the CIO; Mrs. Roosevelt; General Marshall; General Eisenhower; Louis Bromfield. Mrs. Dwight Morrow, described by McWilliams as the first lady of Englewood, was called "communistic" at the conclusion of a telephone call. The highlight of the whole affair, to me, was the distribution of a leaflet warning "all true Americans" to stay away from the Presbyterian Church because the preacher was to be President Henry P. Van Dusen of Union Seminary. The fact that Dr. Van Dusen was an adviser to Governor Dewey in the last presidential election was not enough to clear him of the charge of being dangerously red.

A bright spot in the sorry business was a sermon preached by our own Arch Mitchell, rector of St. Paul's, who said: "A negative attitude is not enough. Labeling people with whom we happen to differ politically as 'Communists,' and denouncing them, does not really harm communism; it harms only democracy . . . Denying individuals a right to earn a living by the smear technique and character assassination is not only malicious but a denial of the first principle of Anglo-American jurisprudence — the assumption that 'a man is innocent until he is proved guilty'."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

You better read the whole piece. But let me set down the author's conclusion: "No clearer blueprint of the fake 'anti-Communist' movement which seeks to rise to power in this country could be found than in Englewood's civil brannigan. To call the movement 'anti-Communist,' even in quotes, is to misname it. It is anti-international, anti-World Federalist, anti-intellectual. Clearly authoritarian, it is based on a pathological hatred of democracy. It threatens the independence of the public schools and uses fear and hatred as stepping-stones to power. It has the support of powerful veteran, nationalist, and religious groups; it ties in with the China lobby; it has important spokesmen in Congress; it uses the House Committee on un-American Activities to intimidate its opponents. To equate this movement with democratic opposition to communism is to permit anti-Communist sentiment to be exploited for authoritarian purposes."

The whole thing also brings to mind a statement made by Martin Niemoeller to a few Americans as far back as 1937, just three days before he was carted off to prison: "Remember that if you stand by while other people lose their freedom, the time will soon come when you will lose your own."

ATTENTION PLEASE

The editorial office of The Witness is now located at

12 West 11th Street
New York 11, N. Y.

However, since Dr. Foust is to be in Europe this summer to gather material for a number of articles on conditions there, particularly in relation to the issue of war or peace, we ask that all correspondence, news, magazine exchanges, etc., be sent to our office of publication:

The WITNESS
Tunkhannock, Pa.

There Before All Wisdom's Pure Thought

BY
CARA B. DAWSON
Churchwoman of Kirkwood, Missouri

CHRISTIANS!
Take up the hands,
Take up the cold, dead hands,
Take up the cold, war-dead hands.

CHRISTIANS!
Bring them home,
Bring home the cold, dead hands,
All the war-emptied hands,
Bring them home.

CHRISTIANS!
Hands of friend, hands of foe,
Fold them there, all the hands,
On the spotless, adorned altar,
Below the saving Crucifix.

CHRISTIANS!
Place them on the white fair linen,
All the silent, lost-love hands.
Place them there for our Creator,
And His Invitation minding
Let us, waiting, Judgment find there.

CHRISTIANS!
There before all Wisdom's pure thought,
We must relate how our sure thought
Made War's terror our mature thought,
Cursed this earth with our impure thought.

CHRISTIANS!
In the dust before Him crying,
We must tell Him without lying
Why we turned, His love denying,
Why we sinned, His strength defying.

CHRISTIANS!
Take up the hands, the cold, dead hands,
Bring them home, all the war-emptied hands.

CHRISTIANS!

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT
Book Editor

Morals Since 1900. By Gerald Heard. Harper. $3.00.

Always original if not always sound, Heard has here made a penetrating study of the decline of morals in the west and so its loss of prestige. Changed attitudes in regard to the use of force, sex, wealth, probity and thought have had degenerating effects. In such fields as law, education and health technical advance has failed to increase true values. He hopefully looks to pure research in cosmology, biology, anthropology and psychology to turn the tide. An absorbing and significant book.—J. H. T.

A Fresh Approach to the New Testament. By H. G. G. Herklots. Abingdon-Cokesbury. $2.00.

A very simple elementary study of the New Testament from the missionary point of view—which is certainly the right point of view for at least 60 percent of the New Testament. Like Professor Dibelius' book with a similar title, it throws a flood of light upon the early history of the church, and its earliest literature.

That They May Have Life. By Daniel T. Niles. Harper. $1.50.

A really fresh book on evangelism, coming out of the life and thought of one of the "younger churches"—the Methodist Church in Ceylon.

ST. LUKE'S SCHOOL
Episcopal Day School under the direction of Trinity Parish
Nursery, Kindergarten, Elementary Grades. After School play groups. Coeducational. Moderate tuition. For catalogue and further information communicate with
THE REV. PAUL C. WEED, JR.
Headmaster
Hudson & Grove Sts., NEW YORK 14, N. Y.
Phone WAtkins 4-5960

Sudbury CHURCH WORSHIP AIDS
Have your dealer show you the wide variety of well made church appointments we produce
FOR COMPLETE CATALOG SEND TO
SUDBURY BRASS GOODS CO.
55 SUDBURY STREET, BOSTON 14, MASS.

TO RENT FOR SUMMER
Old New Hampshire farmhouse, no modern improvements, quiet, secluded. 1 mile from lake for boating, fishing, swimming. Children welcome. Rent reasonable.
Addresss
BOX B, THE WITNESS, TUNKHANNOCK, PA.

BEAVERBROOK
POCONO PINES, PA.

Enjoy Real Fun, Gay Informality, Congenial Companions at this beautiful 2000 acre estate "Atop the Poconos." All Sports and Entertainment facilities. Lake. Beach. Riding. Tennis. Swimming. Boats and Canoes. Latest movies. Country Dances. You'll like the fine Christian fellowship. Protestant Services. $38 Weekly.
N. Y. Office, 11 W. 42nd St. (Room 1274)
"A CAMP FOR ADULTS ONLY" LO 5-1550

CHURCH BULLETINS
Every progressive church should use Winters' De Luxe Bulletin Board. Dignified, effective, and economical. Over 7,000 IN USE. Increase attendance, interest and collections. Write today for Illus. Catalog H. E. Winters Specialty Company, Davenport, Iowa.

Scriptural—Artistically designed
WORSHIP FOLDERS
Large assortment—Self Selection
Lithographed—Special Days—General use
Ecclesiastical Art Press
Dept. W Louisville 12, Ky.
FREE CATALOG

Theological School Commencements

- The ten seminaries of our Church have had a total enrollment of over 1,000 students this year.
- May and June will see a record number of trained men graduated, ordained and assigned to their tasks in the ministry of the Church.
- The work of the seminaries goes on, with increasing responsibilities and continued need for the prayers and help of the people.

* * * *

Berkeley Divinity School, New Haven, Conn.; Bexley Hall, Gambier, Ohio; Church Divinity School of the Pacific, Berkeley, Calif.; Divinity School of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia; Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass.; The General Theological Seminary, New York City; Nashotah House, Nashotah, Wis.; School of Theology of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.; Seabury-Western Theological Seminary, Evanston, Ill.; Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Episcopal Pacifist Fellowship

Founded 1939

Honorary Chairman
The Rt. Rev. William Appleton Lawrence

Chairman
The Rev. William K. Russell

An organization of members of the Protestant Episcopal Church who seek to emphasize Christ's way of love and reconciliation in international, economic and social issues, and who subscribe to the following statement:

In Loyalty to the Person, Spirit and Teachings of Jesus Christ, my conscience commits me to His way of redemptive love and compels me to refuse to participate in or give moral support to any war.

Membership applications and requests for information are welcomed.

EPISCOPAL PACIFIST FELLOWSHIP
9 East 94th Street
New York 28, New York

☐ I wish to receive further information about the E. P. F.

☐ I subscribe to the above statement and wish to become a member of the Episcopal Pacifist Fellowship.

☐ I contribute $..... to the work of the E. P. F.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

ASCENSION CONTINUES MUSIC AWARD

★ Continuing its efforts to aid in the increase of fine contemporary Church music, the Church of the Ascension, New York, will conduct its fifth annual competition for the Ascension day festival service of 1952. Composers are invited to submit a work, not previously published or performed in public, for solo voice with organ and one solo instrument. Further details may be had by writing the Ascension, 12 West 11th Street, New York 11, N. Y.

YONKERS PARISH TO BUILD

★ The church and other buildings of St. John's, Yonkers, N. Y., are to undergo extensive repairs and remodeling in the early fall so as to enlarge its activities. One of the great needs is for additional facilities for the Church school where 414 of its more than 600 members received awards on June 10th for faithful attendance.

SEABURY-WESTERN GETS INCREASE IN GIVING

★ Seabury-Western Seminary received $20,417 from 489 parishes for the theological education offering this year. In 1950, 255 parishes gave $12,631.

CHAPLAIN SOWERS REPORTS

★ Chaplain Kenneth M. Sowers reports from the base at Leavenworth, Kan., that in a recent month 1,483 pupils attended weekly sessions of the Church school which has a faculty of 65. During the past year he has presented 105 for confirmation.

STUDENTS WORKING WITH MIGRANTS

★ The Rev. Alexander J. Grant of New York City is the director of the summer work camp for Christian college students among migrant workers at King Ferry, N. Y. The camp, July 1-August 31, is sponsored by the diocese of Central New York with the cooperation of other Protestant groups. It serves the recreational, educational devotional needs of 1,000 Negro laborers who work in vegetable fields. Mr. Grant, a Canadian, is an instructor at Union Seminary. The chairman of the work camp committee is the Rev. Walter N. Welsh, rector of Grace Church, Syracuse.

SEABURY-WESTERN GETS BEQUEST

★Seabury - Western Seminary has received a bequest of $25,000 by the will of the late Mrs. Mary J. Johnson, a former resident of Evanston who died on May 1 at the age of eighty.

I Want to Contact New WRITERS

who are interested in cashing checks of $1 to $100, offered every day. The easiest way to write for pay. No previous experience necessary. Send for FREE DETAILS. No obligation.

SAUNDERS M. CUMMINGS
468 Indep. Bldg., Colorado Springs, Colo.

Mitchell FOLD-O-LEG tables

The strongest, handiest folding table made. For banquet, church and school use. Write for descriptive folder.

MITCHELL MFG. COMPANY
2748 S. 34th St., Milwaukee 7, Wis. Dept.W

100 Imported Dutch BLOOMING SIZE GLADIOLUS

To get acquainted, we offer 65 beautiful rare varieties. CARDINAL SPELLMAN, GENERAL EISENHOWER, ROOSEVELT'S MEMORY, LEOPOLD STOKOWSKY, SNOW PRINCESS, SWEET SEVENTEEN, SILHOUETTE, etc. all magnificent. GUARANTEED TO BLOOM FIRST YEAR. Size 1½ to 2¼ in circumference. They'll grow stately and tall. This rainbow of bright reds, clear whites, flaming orange, etc. gladiolus Beauty bulbs. Send now! For 1¢ extra we include 100 bulbletts. Rush a dollar with name and address before they're sold out.

99¢ yours for 99¢ for 100

IMPORTED BULBS, P. O. BOX 15
(Dept. 48 Cooper Sta., New York 3

MATERNITY DRESSES WRITE FOR FREE CATALOG

Shop by mail and save! Exclusive maternity style house offers fashions by top designers, $2.95 to $22.50. Morning, afternoon, sports and formal wear; maternity suits, corsets and lingerie. (Catalog mailed in plain envelope.) Spring styles.

CRAWFORD'S
Dept. 49, 729 Balt. Ave. Kansas City 6, Mo.

Immediate delivery on Honor Rolls, Service Flags, American and Church Flags. Literature free.

Also "RODEX" note-books, Record Systems, Tape Recorders, Bulletin Boards, Addressers, Duplicators, Filing and Indexing Systems.

Specializing in Church Equipment for Twenty years

DONALD F. ROSSIN CO.
423-I So. 5th St., Minneapolis 15, Minn.

ST. JAMES LESSONS

(I) The Lord Jesus and Children; (II) Jesus, Lord of Heaven and Earth; (III) Friends of The Lord Jesus; (IV) The House of The Lord Jesus; (V) Christian Virtues; (VI) The Lord and His Servant; (VII) The Lord and His Church; (VIII) The Lord Jesus Reveals God; (IX) How God Prepared for The Coming of Jesus.

Illustrated

These books are printed attractively, illustrated and include well- executed hand work. Pages and type are large, clean and uncrowded; they cover 33 lessons plus suggested reviews. Based on the Episcopal Book of Common Prayer. The cost by reason of generous subsidy and production in large quantity has been kept within reach of all Churches and Missions.

A teacher's manual accompanies each course. The teacher's manuals for the first three lessons are forty cents each, all other books, pupils and teachers are sixty cents each—post paid in U.S.A. Checks must accompany orders—No books sent on approval. All orders will receive prompt attention.

St. James Lessons, Inc. Dept. 5, 865 Madison Ave. New York 21, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

PEOPLE

DEATHS:

GEORGE ALLEN BEECHER, 83, Bishop of W. Nebr., 1910-1943, died June 14. His autobiography, "A Bishop of the Great Plains," was published last year by the Church Historical Society.

MARJORIE E. THOMPSON, for 30 years social service worker at Calvary, Pittsburgh, Pa., died June 2 after a short illness.

CLERGY CHANGES:

LYLE S. BARNETT, rector of Christ Church, West River, Md., becomes rector of Trinity, Lander, Wyo., Sept. 1.

ERIC A. WELD, rector of Holderness School, Plymouth, N. H., has resigned and is to be addressed at Dublin, N. H.

RICHARD FOSTER, ass't at the Messiah, Detroit, is now in charge of churches at Brandon and Forestdale, Vt.

G. ALEXANDER MILLER, formerly rector of St. John's, Plymouth, Mich., is now rector of Christ Church, Flint, Mich.

GEORGE W. H. TROOP has resigned as rector of St. Martha's, Bronx, N. Y. C. effective Sept. 1.

ORDINATIONS:

RICHARD O. HARIG was ordained priest in the university chapel of Bowling Green on May 19 by Bishop Tucker. He is rector of St. John's, Bowling Green and St. John's, Napoleon, O.

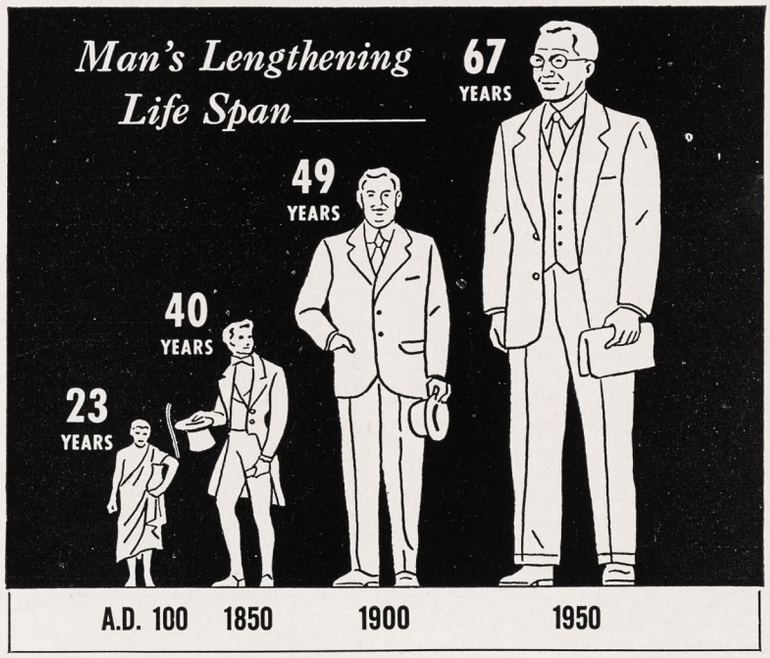
ALFRED W. JARVIS was ordained priest at Trinity, Toledo, May 20 by Bishop Tucker. He is rector of St. Mark's, Sidney, O.

EDWIN J. MOSHER was ordained priest on June 9 by Bishop Higley at Zion Church, Windsor, N. Y., where he is in charge.

DONALD H. MARSH and HOWARD C. RUTENBAR were ordained deacons on May 27 at St. Thomas, Hanover, N. H., by Bishop Hall. The former is in charge of the Redeemer, Rochester, N. H. and the latter curate at Christ Church, Stratford, Conn.

S. C. LINDSEY, ROBERT C. MARTIN and PAUL M. VAN BUREN were ordained deacons June 6, the first two by Bishop Hobson of So. O., and the latter by his grandfather, Bishop Matthews, retired, of N. J. Lindsey is in charge of St. Andrew's, Washington Court House, O.; Martin is in charge of St. Luke's, Marietta, O.; Van Buren is to do graduate study at Basel, Switzerland.

ROSWELL O. MOORE was ordained deacon June 15 by Bishop Higley at St. John's, Alburn, N. Y. He will be ass't chaplain to Episcopal students at Syracuse.



JOHN A. CRANSTON JR. was ordained deacon June 11 by Bishop Lawrence at St. John's, N. Adams, Mass. He is a tutor at the General Seminary.

HONORS:

EDWARD M. PENNELL, rector of St. Francis, San Francisco, was elected a vice-president at large of the Military Chaplains Ass'n.

RAMBUSCH
for PAINTING
DECORATING
ALTARS
LIGHTING FIXTURES
STAINED GLASS
RAMBUSCH
40 W. 13th St. ~ New York 11, N.Y.

THE GREATEST NEWS
IN 1900 YEARS!

Longer life is yours today—thanks to modern science!

Here is the amazing record—

Since the turn of the century, over 18 years have been added to a man's average life span!

In the days of the Roman Empire, the average length of life was 23 years. In the United States it climbed to 40 years by 1850, to 49 years by 1900. Now the average life span here is over 67 years and life expectancy is still increasing.

This tremendous increase in life expectancy gives us many more years to enjoy the blessings of the earth. But—we cannot be completely happy in those later years unless we enjoy good health.

Learn how you can best enjoy the longer life that science gives you today. Get your copy of a fascinating new 24-page illustrated booklet filled with tips and pointers on how to get more out of life in the later years.

OVALTINE
The Protecting Supplementary Food Drink

Send for this
FREE BOOKLET
"LONGER LIFE . . . and Better Health To Enjoy It!"

OVALTINE-L2
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 1, Ill.

Please send me a FREE copy of your illustrated booklet, "Longer Life . . . and Better Health To Enjoy It!"

Name.....
Address.....
City.....State.....

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

CLINTON S. QUIN
Bishop of Texas

I thought maybe you would like to have a first hand report of the Prayer Vigil in the Diocese of Texas, which has gone on every minute of every hour of every day and night in one of our churches in this Diocese since August 6th, for the cessation of war and for peace.

It has been explained clearly that what we are asking for in these continuous prayers is to find out, first of all, what God's will is in the matter, and then what our job is as those who promised to follow Jesus Christ as our Lord and Saviour to bring peace.

The second purpose, after we get our directions, is to get up off of our knees and go out on our feet and do whatever it takes to stop this killing of men around the world.

We thought perhaps you might be interested in such a Prayer Vigil going on anywhere in the Church at such a persistent gait. When we get enough people who call themselves Christians to do something about this war business, I have enough faith to believe that we can bring the nations into line on the basis of a real Christian understanding, and when I say nations, I include Russia as well as the other satellite states. I always have believed in the impossible and still do.

Now, if you know all about this, or it does not make news, skip it, but you are quite at liberty to make any use of this something that is going on here in the Diocese of Texas in any way that you see fit. So far as I know, we have not missed a minute in this schedule since the 6th day of August 1950.

ARTHUR J. BLISS
Layman of Hartford, Conn.

A distinct public service was rendered to the community by the Connecticut Council of Churches when it set apart the last Sunday in May as Peace Sunday. It was celebrated by sermons on peace by the pastors of many Protestant churches. There is certainly no subject of more vital importance to our churches today than world peace.

Since the undeclared war started in Korea the cost of living has jumped at least 25%. This affects the clergyman and his family as well as the layman. It makes the task of operating a church more difficult. Perhaps even more vital is the danger that if the Korean war continues it will probably develop into World War III. With the use of atomic weapons on both sides untold destruction and loss of life would result. Like other buildings, churches would undoubtedly be leveled to the ground. Such unhappy possibilities should arouse us to activity for the cause of peace. The Truman administration should be urged to call a conference of the Great Powers including China at which peace terms should be discussed and a settlement arrived at. The soundest considerations demand such action.

BURDETTE LANDSDOWNE
Priest of Massachusetts

Congratulations to the editors of The Witness for printing the challenging address by the Rev. J. L. Hromadka (June 7). Our daily newspaper would not have touched it. I

ASSISTANT
for
LARGE EVANGELICAL PARISH
IN MIDWESTERN CITY
Good Salary and Attractive Apartment. All replies will be kept confidential.
Box G, The Witness, Tunkhannock, Pa.

CASSOCKS
Surplices — Choir Vestments
Eucharistic Vestments
Altar Hangings and Linens
Prices Sent on Request
J. M. HALL INC.
14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.
Tel. CH 4-3306

VESTMENTS
Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves
Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries
Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars
Custom Tailoring for Clergymen
1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951
COX SONS & VINING, Inc.
131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

GOWNS
• Pulpit and Choir •
Headquarters for
RELIGIOUS SUPPLIES
Church Furniture · Stoles
Embroideries · Vestments
Hangings · Communion
Sets · Altar Brass Goods
CATALOG ON REQUEST
National CHURCH GOODS SUPPLY COMPANY
821-23 ARCH STREET, PHILADELPHIA 7, PA.

Everything for the Episcopal Church
Ammidon & Company
HORACE L. VARIAN
31 S. Frederick St. Baltimore 2, Md.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER
FABRICS + WINDOWS

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS
Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS
Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.
SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

Exquisite
IRISH LINENS
BY THE YARD
From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States, I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values; unsurpassed quality, imported direct from Ireland. Also transfer patterns, linen tape, and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 3 inches at 75c, 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.00.
MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

THE BISHOP WHITE
PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833
Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.
PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)
Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

FINEST PURE IRISH LINEN
Buy linen now from complete stocks personally selected in Ireland. Also Cassock Cloth, Vestment patterns. Embdy. designs and instruction books.
Samples Free
MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
BOX 386 CHILLICOTHE, MO.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

wonder why? Is it because certain selfish interests exert considerable influence? But will the Christian Churches listen to his challenge or will they continue to remain silent or take refuge in empty legalistic formulas and pious phrases. What have the official Churches of the Western nations done to bring about a peaceful solution of the Far Eastern tension? From the World Council of Churches we should expect to have some guidance on the question.

AVIS Y. BROWNLEE
Churchwoman of San Francisco
Member D.A.R. & American Legion

I do wish that our Episcopal churches would come to some agreement as to how to display the American flag. You may visit half a dozen or more of our churches and find the American flag in half a dozen different places. The flag code which is strictly adhered to by our armed forces and by patriotic organizations, distinctly provides that the flag of the United States of America must be carried in procession on the right of any other flag and that it must be at the right of a platform or chancel, at the right of the speaker as he faces the audience. Roman Catholic churches, almost without exception, place the American flag on the gospel side, their Church flag on the left. Perhaps this is because that Church is ruled from Rome. But they are correct and most of our churches are wrong in placing the flag of this country on the epistle side of the altar during a service.

ANSWER: We have dealt with this question a number of times. The commission of General Convention charged with the responsibility of determining the answer to this question, has on a number of occasions informed us that the Church flag belongs on the gospel side, and if there is to be a flag of any nation in the chancel it should be on the epistle side.

CHARLES E. HILL
Clergyman of Williamstown, Mass.

Your editorial on Town and Country brings up questions. I believe that last year our theological schools turned away almost 500 young men. Perhaps 200 of them were quite impossible but could not we do something with the 300? A rector nearby, not at all favoring Rome, said Rome would have found a place for them. I know that Bishop Keeler has a system of training men. Bishop Brent had the DeLancey School where I taught for awhile, and he said it supplied him with men for his diocese.

It does seem as if something should be done to gather a lot of young men and proceed to train them as well as we can. Thorough teaching in the English Bible, the Prayer Book, Church history, leaving aside the critical theories but teaching them how to conduct services and to preach. All delightfully vague I suppose.

Shattuck School

FOUNDED 1858

Shattuck integrates all parts of its program: religious, academic, military and social to give high school age boys an environment in which to grow "in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man." Summer School-Camp.
Catalogue

REV. SIDNEY W. GOLDSMITH, JR.
RECTOR AND HEADMASTER
Box W, Shumway Hall
SHATTUCK SCHOOL FARIBAULT, MINN.

CENTRAL SCHOOL OF RELIGION
(A Correspondence Institution)
6030 Lowell Ave., Indianapolis 19, Ind.
College level courses since 1896. Bible, Theology of O. & N. T., Pastoral Psychology, Church Publicity, Religious Education, etc. Complete interrupted studies at home. Excellent faculty. Reasonable. Write to Secretary for further information NOW.

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL
Coeducational Episcopal Day School
Prepares for leading secondary schools. Sound academic training. Kindergarten thru 8th grade. French and Latin emphasized. Complete testing program. Est. 1894. Music, drama, arts & crafts, sports. Bus service. Hot lunch. Tel: AL 4-2000
E. ALLISON GRANT, Headmaster
88 E. Fourth Ave. (11th St.), N. Y. 3

THE PATTERSON SCHOOL for BOYS

Episcopal School in Blue Ridge Mountains of Western No. Carolina. Accredited. Grades 6-12. Gymnasium, sports, 42nd year. 1300-acre estate. Board and tuition, moderate.
GEORGE F. WIESE, Supt.
COLLEGE PREPARATORY Legerwood, N. C. HEALTH EDUCATION CHARACTER BUILDING

FORK UNION
MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

SCHOOLS

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof buildings.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth New Hampshire

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

The Hannah More Academy
Est. 1832, Episcopal school for girls, grades 7-12. Outstanding preparation for leading colleges, also General Academic Course, Music, Art, Athletics and Riding carefully supervised. Eighteen miles northwest of Baltimore. Moderate rates. Catalogue.
ELIZABETH N. HARVEY, M.A.
Headmistress, Reisterstown, Md.

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. City 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE-MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE Witness

10¢ A COPY

July 12, 1951

ST. LUKE'S, LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA

(Story on Page Three)

Open vs. Closed Communion by Chad Walsh

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 8 (and 9 Holy Days ecept Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 7:45, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers – 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. – 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital – 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m. Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a.m. Holy Communion
11 a.m. Morning Service and Sermon
Weekdays: Holy Communion Tuesdays at 12:10 p.m.; Wednesdays at 8 a.m.; Thursdays at 10:30 a.m.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer – 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon.
Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D.,
Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 – 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m.
Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School. 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.–High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. William W. Lumpkin, Rector;
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacCall, 3rd, Rector
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 25 The WITNESS JULY 12, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Perry Austin Leaves St. Luke's After Great Ministry

Long Beach Parish Has Record of Service That Extends Far Beyond City

★ The Rev. Perry G. M. Austin has resigned as rector of St. Luke's, Long Beach, Calif., after serving the parish for 28 years —longer than any other clergyman now active in the city. There is nothing newsworthy ordinarily about a rector resigning but there is when he is Perry Austin and the church is St. Luke's.

It was started as a mission in 1897 with 15 communicants in a town of 1500. The work was carried on by the Rev. W. F. Jacobs, a missionary of the old school who rode his circuit on horseback. The first church was built three years later and was soon placed in charge of the Rev. Charles T. Murphy as vicar. The town had grown to 3,500 by 1905 and St. Luke's could boast 163 communicants that year when it was made a parish. Two years later, Robert B. Gooden, later to become suffragan bishop of the diocese of Los Angeles, was made rector, to be followed in 1912 by Arnold G. H. Bode who, over a long ministry in England, Australia and Switzerland, as well as the U. S., has distinguished himself not only as a pastor but also as an organist and composer. One of his hymns, 432, is in The Hymnal, 1940.

Perry Austin

Perry Austin came to St. Luke's as the fourth rector in 1923. He had served for a year as a curate at St. Timothy's, located in an iron-and-steel mill district of Philadelphia. Then after a stretch overseas in world war one as a chaplain he became rector of St. Luke's, located in a textile mill district of Philadelphia. Here he learned to love people who were "nobodys" in the eyes of the world—a thousand of them with 600 in the Sunday school. Most of these people worked in rug or stocking mills, mostly Anglo-Saxons from England, Scotland, Ireland who battled machines all their lives. Their rector fought through to some basic imperatives in this mill district which resulted in his turning down a cushy parish on the Main Line, where he was offered five times the salary, a rectory with five bathrooms, and assurance of proper leadership among the proper people of proper Philadelphia. He preferred to stick for awhile with his workers who had everything but the cream of polite culture and were honest with honest sweat after a hard day's work.

Returning Home

The call to St. Luke's was like a call to come back home since his family had lived in Santa Barbara for over 100 years—a long time on the coast. The parish had at the time about 500 communicants in a city which had grown rapidly to about 100,000. He made up his mind in accepting that he would stay for an extended period so as to earn the confidence of people, convinced that it is only on this basis that a thorough job could be done. The fact that the parish now has 1,300 communicants and over 2,000 connected with the church is but one proof of his success. More important is the fact that St. Luke's has an influence in the community which is felt by all who look to the parish for leadership in the spiritual things that make for fair play and that gives one the approval of conscience, and that sense which seeks the qualitative riches which the world—apart from religion—can neither give nor take away.

Other Achievements

St. Luke's lost everything, materially, when the 1933 earthquake destroyed in ten seconds the $60,000 church property. But a year later, almost to the day, a beautiful new St. Luke's was dedicated.

For twelve years the church had the first broadcast of a full service every Sunday morning over a powerful station with a radio congregation which stretched from Mexico to Canada. These people were minis-

PERRY G. M. AUSTIN

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

tered to by mail as well as radio.

Out of St. Luke's have been born four independent congregations: All Saints in East Long Beach which became an independent parish in three years; St. Thomas, started in the Lakewood district in 1946; two navy chapels which owe a good deal of their impetus to St. Luke's.

After 25 years as director of the Red Cross and a similar period as director of the city's largest hospital, Austin was recently asked to be the official chaplain at another hospital to establish the faith of patients in the intuitive religious principle in the healing process.

Entering the ministry from St. Luke's are five men who have made names for themselves in the ministry: Bishop Heber Gooden, son of the second rector, who is distinguishing himself as bishop of Panama; Dean Sturgis L. Riddle of the Holy Trinity Pro-Cathedral, Paris, France; the Rev. George L. Potter, vicar at St. Mary's, Lompoc, Calif.; the Rev. John P. Phillips, teacher at Multnomah College, Portland, Ore.; the Rev. Robert L. Bonhall, rector of St. Peter's, Santa Maria.

The Choristers

In 1930 the St. Luke's Choristers, a church professional choir was inaugurated under a musical genius, William Ripley Dorr, who is well known through national music journals. This choir of 60 boys and men (over 300 since its start have been qualified members) is the only Church choir that has in history sung in over 80 moving pictures —notable among which are Midsummer Night's Dream, with the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra; Tale of Two Cities, Boys' Town, Bells of St. Mary's, Mrs. Minniver, The Song of Love (life of Schumann), The Corn is Green. In addition, they have done four albums of choir music —including "Christmas Carols" which are "sung" all over the world and over the radio at Christmas season—through the recordings. The records are being used in Wuchang, China and in Boone University in the music department, to teach breath control to the Chinese students —also in an American Indian school, similarly, in Minnesota. The Choristers some years ago was made a member-choir of the English School of Church Music of which the Archbishop of Canterbury is head and most of the Cathedral choirs of England are chapter members. There are three American choirs who have this distinction.

The best of this influence which has radiated far and wide from this parish is the record of "non-delinquence" in the character of over 300 boys who are grounded in the knowledge of love of God and in a Christian sense of responsibility towards their fellows. The choir's motto is Better boys—Better music, and in that order!

So, briefly, is the record of a parish which has won the confidence of a community of now over 300,000 and has extended its influence throughout the world, and has done so without a show of money or by pulling the brass of ecclesiastical authority. With great credit to his three predecessors for these accomplishments, most of it is due to the unusual ministry of Perry Austin who is now returning to his native Santa Barbara "to do a little teaching and a lot of writing."

BUSINESS MEN TRAIN FOR MINISTRY

★With the ordination to the priesthood of the Rev. Edward P. Denzter, assistant minister at Grace Church, Kirkwood, and vicar of Christ Church, Affton, the first of a group of Missouri men who are entering the ministry from business life completes his training. He comes to the ministry after experience in the food and shoe businesses, and serving as an infantry captain in world war two.

Arthur R. Steidemann, a civil engineer, is lay assistant at Emmanuel Church, Webster Groves, while pursuing his studies for ordination. Roy J. Schaffer is lay vicar of Trinity Church, St. Charles, while doing the same thing. Mr. Schaffer is resigning this summer from the staff of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch to give full time to his studies and church work. J. Maver Feehan, a manufacturer's agent, will begin full-time study in the fall, but will continue in his business until ready for ordination. He is lay reader at St. John's, St. Louis.

All of these men, including Mr. Dentzer, are doing their theological work under the direction of the examining chaplains and with the cooperation of Eden Theological Seminary, Webster Groves, of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, where they are taking their courses in Bible, systematic theology, apologetics and ethics.

Still another former business man, Joseph T. Swift, until two years ago assistant general passenger agent of the St. Louis-San Francisco Railroad, is studying at the Virginia Theological Seminary. He is from Grace Church, Kirkwood.

NEW MISSION IN PONTIAC

★ A parochial mission of All Saints, Pontiac, was established July 1 to be known as All Saints Chapel. The congregation is meeting in a community center for the present. Services are conducted by the Rev. Bert Ede, assistant at All Saints Church, whose rector is the Rev. Ivol I. Curtis.

PRESBYTERIAN SERVICE IN MANCHESTER

★ The Lord's Supper was celebrated by a Presbyterian minister according to the Presbyterian rites in Grace Church, Manchester, N. H., recently at the Sunday family service. The purpose according to the announcement made by the rector of Grace Church, the Rev. Bradford Young, was "to help the Sunday school children and their parents to meet Christ in the Holy Communion as observed by a sister Church, so that they will know by their own experience the universality of both Christ and his Church." Since it was not practical to take the whole congregation to the Presbyterian church for communion, the rector lent his church to the minister of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, the Rev. John Hendrickson, and his four elders. A communion table was provided on the level of the congregation as required by Presbyterian law and as practiced by many Episcopal churches during the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries and also by churches of the first century. About 150 young people and adults received.

This service was one of a series on "Know your Christian neighbor." The unit began after Easter and included talks or interviews about other churches of the city. It brought out points of similarity and differences from the Episcopal and taught the children about their own Church while learning about other Churches. To visualize the special emphasis within the general catholicity of each Church, each was connected with some article of the church furniture: the Roman Catholic with the altar; the Greek Orthodox with the stained glass windows (ikons); the Lutheran with the cross (faith in Christ alone); the Presbyterian with the Bible; the Congregational with the pew; the Methodist with the hymnal; the Baptist with the font; the Episcopal with the Prayer Book. The series ended with an interview on the local, state, national and world councils of churches and color pictures of their activities and also of the local churches.

Rev. John Hendrickson with his elders

RECTORS' WIVES WANT EASIER SUNDAY

★ "Easy Sunday Dinners" was the major subject considered by ministers' wives at the joint meeting of the Episcopal town and country conference and the Penn State college conference June 18-22. Headliners were Dad Dennis on the Church at work, Charles G. Hamilton of Mississippi on the rural radio, Maxwell Brown of Michigan on Roanridge, and Shelby Walthall on ministers and organizations.

New president of the Rural Workers' Fellowship is the Rev. Shelby Walthall of North Texas, with Wilbur A. Cochel of Roanridge as honorary president. New vice presidents are the Rev. Howard S. Trask of South Dakota and the Rev. Samuel Keys of Southern Ohio. Mrs. John Philbrick of Roanridge was reelected secretary. A large number of eastern clergy enjoyed the meetings, and it was proposed to hold future elections by mail.

FRANCIS B. SAYRE IN LONDON

★ Dean Francis B. Sayre Jr., recently installed at Washington Cathedral, and the Rev. Luther D. Miller, former chief of chaplains and now a canon at the cathedral, took part in a special service on July 4th at St. Paul's Cathedral, London. King George and General Eisenhower were present at this service when a silver altar cross and a pair of candlesticks were presented by the king to Washington Cathedral.

GIRLS' FRIENDLY MEETS

★ About 300 teen-age girls took over the national assembly of the Girls' Friendly Society meeting in New London, Conn., June 25-30. They came from thirty-six dioceses, including Haiti and the Virgin Islands, with a visitor from Germany and another from Japan. An additional 200 juniors, 7 to 14, were there for junior day.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EDITORIALS

Is This Segregation?

WE view with distinct reservations the four conferences for "Church workers among Negroes" being held this summer. And the agenda of the first, at St. Augustine's College, Raleigh, N. C., does nothing to reassure those who look for the destruction of anti-Christ racial barriers in the Church.

The Supreme Court has judged that "separate but equal" higher educational facilities are not possible. In recognition of this finding, South Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Texas, Louisiana, and others have opened the doors of their schools to all persons regardless of race.

But we find nothing in the agenda of the St. Augustine's meeting to suggest the Church intends to drive ahead to the obliteration of second class citizenship in education, or in society at large, to say nothing of the Church itself. There is a great deal about things which ought to be discussed in general non-racial conferences; and we see no reason for their place in these conferences, in these days, other than an acceptance of segregation and jim crow.

On the other hand, all fellowship in Christ's name is good, especially when it ignores the racial taboos of Raleigh, Denmark, S. C., Lawrenceville, Va., and Okolona, Miss. And that we applaud.

But granted the good fellowship, couldn't these conferences turn themselves to probing how the need for segregated schools has changed? Couldn't they discuss ways and means of making the American Institute for Negroes an institute for all Christians? Couldn't those conferences address themselves to the techniques and methods to be used to break down segregation—rather than how to make jim crow function more smoothly?

This is no time for a racial "Judenrat" to be discussing how to build more firmly the jim crow ghetto wall which we all abhor. Instead the Church should lead in tearing it down.

"Quotes"

THE most beautiful and most profound emotion we can experience is the sensation of the mystical. It is the sower of all true science. He to whom this emotion is a stranger, who can no longer wonder and stand rapt in awe, is as good as dead.

To know that what is impenetrable to us really exists, manifesting itself as the highest wisdom and the most radiant beauty which our dull faculties can comprehend only in their most primitive forms—this knowledge, this feeling, is at the center of true religiousness.

—ALBERT EINSTEIN

The Parish Eucharist

HERE is a twenty-two page booklet which succeeds in relating the life and work of a parish in terms of the Holy Eucharist. It is valuable because it proceeds along the lines of what is best in the Liturgical Movement. It is described as one of a series, which, if this be representative, should be a useful and enriching aid to common devotion.

The teaching is sound, emphasizing the "common action of God's people." The Holy Eucharist is divided into Preparation, Offertory, Consecration, Communion and Thanksgiving. Each part is treated under three headings as follows: the action, the meaning, and the way in which the Church helps us carry them out. The comments are terse, but admirably complete. In this respect alone, it looks like one of the finest booklets for instruction in the Holy Communion that has been published so far. Yet it is also instruction in parish life. This is its strength: parish life and the liturgy are presented as being one.

Appropriate black and white drawings illustrate the text. They are given almost as much importance as the text. This is a mixed blessing. Certainly the ideas of the drawings go with the text, but the execution of the drawings fails the spirit of the booklet as a whole. Soon, we pray, the Liturgical Movement will touch off in our Church a display of arts newly refined and invigorated.

The effort has been made to appeal to all types of usage in the service. For instance, one illustration depicts the celebrant wearing a chasuble, and in another the sacrament is being administered by one wearing a cassock, surplice and stole. There can be but little objection on the basis of Church manners.

The important feature of the work, however, is not manners or illustrations. It is concerned with those who "are united in a holy fellowship with God and one another at the Holy Eucharist" and who are intended to carry that fellowship into every area of life. The predominance of this note makes it an exceptionally fine piece of work which has been greatly needed. Every confirmed member of the Church, and particularly those about to be confirmed, should be given the opportunity to have a copy. "The Parish Eucharist" is available at 35c a copy from Associated Parishes, Inc., 6 North Carroll St., Madison 3, Wisconsin.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Cut-Rate Answers:

Open vs. Closed Communion

BY CHAD WALSH
Professor at Beloit College

THE Battle of the Lord's Table, which was fought in the Church magazines and even the daily press last year, has subsided a trifle. Nothing has been settled, of course, but the tensions, which seemed to be stretching the highly elastic Episcopal Church to the snapping point, are for the moment less evident. While waiting for another cause celebre to set off the whole controversy again, it might be useful to utilize the lull for as calm a look as possible at the whole problem of whether and when Episcopalians ought to break sacramental bread with Protestants.

The problem is really a cluster of related questions: Should an Episcopal priest administer communion to the occasional Protestant who comes to the altar rail, unconfirmed and not "ready and desirous to be confirmed?" Should he go further and extend a general invitation to "all Christians" or "all baptized Christians?" Should he invite Protestant ministers to assist in the service? Should he take part in interdenominational "joint communion services?" And should any Episcopalian, lay or clerical, receive communion in Protestant Churches?

Let me make my viewpoint clear. I believe the whole problem is impossible to solve as long as the Church universal remains divided into fragments. Every solution that has been proposed is wrong. The only solution which can combine honesty with charity is to re-unite the shattered fragments of the Church, or—at the very least—to establish a federation of intercommunion, based on explicit agreement as to basic dogma, and the nature of the ministry and sacraments.

Either of these goals lies far in the future, and meanwhile the problem—which cannot be solved—remains. My quarrel with both the open-communers and the closed-communers is that both have tried to find an easy way out: they want some pet answer, like the last chapter of a mystery story, and are determined to bypass the agony and contrition that the divided state of the Church universal ought to produce in everyone when the question of the divided altar brings it to a focus.

Closed Communion

THE closed-communers, for the most part, take refuge in a harsh legalism. "Read the rubric in the confirmation service," they say. And on a strictly legalistic basis, I think they have the best of the argument. Whatever the famous rubric may have meant when it was first inserted in the Prayer Book, it has been retained through subsequent revisions, and there is no reason to believe that the revisers had in mind anything other than the literal meaning of the blunt statement. The open-communers did themselves no good when they turned Philadelphia lawyer in self-defense and indulged in far-fetched casuistry (a polite name for double talk) in order to make the rubric mean what it obviously doesn't mean.

Friends of open communion would have done better if they had honestly admitted that they thought the rubric was un-Christian, and that therefore they would ignore it and eventually try to have it removed.

I am not concerned with the semantics of the rubric here. The larger question is more important, and it boils down to an inescapable impasse: how to be honest and charitable at the same time.

The spiritual dangers of the closed-communion viewpoint have been pointed out so much that I hardly need dwell on them. The rigid attitude of no bread-breaking with Protestants leads easily to pride, arrogance, and a disregard of the plain fact that Christianity is not a monopoly of those Churches that cherish the apostolic succession. A hard, self-righteous legalism is death to the spirit of a religion whose key word is love.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Less noticed is the fact that the open-communion answer points toward a gradual watering down of the faith, toward a common denominator sort of ethical culture, and the eventual loss of the distinctive beliefs of the complete Christian religion. Consider the wide variety of doctrine held among Protestants. Everything from firm trinitarian orthodoxy to a vague praise of the golden rule and admiration of Christ as merely "a great moral teacher" can be found. More particularly, the interpretation of the Eucharist varies all the way from the Lutheran belief in consubstantiation—much the same as the Anglican doctrine of the "real presence"—to the more common Protestant attitude that the Lord's Supper is mainly a memorial meal, with no idea of the literal presence of Christ involved. The casual way that Holy Communion is celebrated in many Protestant churches is evidence of a relative unimportance of the sacrament there.

Differences Matter

TO pretend that these differences of belief and attitude make no difference is an offense against honesty. All Christians are not one big happy family; their points of disagreement need to be examined as closely as their points of agreement. Otherwise, no firm foundations will ever be built for genuine Church reunion. The open-communers, who move forward in a happy haze of good fellowship, are really working against healing the divisions of Christendom. You cannot heal divisions unless you take them seriously.

It comes down to this. We need more agony and fewer answers. Whatever the individual Episcopalian decides to do in an individual situation, he ought to be unhappy about it. He ought to feel a deep-set contrition for the divided state of the Christian Church: he ought to make his decision in a humble awareness that though it may be partly right it is also sure to be partly wrong. The closed-communers with their self-righteous legalism and the open-communers so full of the milk of brotherly love but so blind to the necessity of preserving truth as well as expressing love —both fall into the same pit of complacency. "I have found the real McCoy 100% Christian solution. I thank God that I am not like that Anglo-Catholic (or Broad Churchman) over there."

There is no solution as long as the Church universal is divided. But the problem is one that crops up time after time; even though it cannot be solved it must be dealt with. From what I have observed, most Episcopalians who are not professional open-communers or closed-communers manage to achieve a rough balance between honesty and love by meeting each situation as it comes along. I know very few priests, even of the most Catholic variety, who will repulse the stray Protestant who wanders up to the altar rail. But if he begins to make a habit of it they get him aside and tell him about the Church and suggest that he be confirmed. In other words, the majority of priests will treat the matter as primarily a pastoral one, to be handled on an individual basis, with due regard to the particular persons involved.

As for "joint communion services," they constitute a well-intentioned display of the unity that underlies the different Christian denominations. But each man must decide for himself whether or not the supreme act of unity—the Lord's Supper—should be deferred until actual, visible unity is first achieved. The marriage vows ideally precede the marriage bed. There is danger that joint communion services, however well motivated, will leave the participants with a cozy feeling that all is well, and they can now return to their denominational habitats and not bother to work hard and intelligently for genuine Church reunion.

Sin of Division

THE average Episcopalian tries to avoid occasions where it will be an offense against charity if he refrains from taking Protestant communion. And yet there are exceptions here. I have a friend, a very ardent Anglo-Catholic, who went to a Protestant church with his parents and unhesitatingly received communion out of love and respect for them.

I have not tried to outline a "policy" here. To have done so would be to fall into the trap of looking for a painless answer to a painful problem. What I have tried to do is describe how the average Episcopalian behaves when he cannot avoid facing the situation in its various forms. I do believe that the unwritten usage I have sketched here achieves a closer balance of honesty and love than the pat answers given by the extremists. But I add again—every way of meeting the problem is wrong.

So I return to my argument. Each time we come up against the need to decide, we should suffer. The suffering should lead to a deepened awareness of how very sinful is the divided state of the Church. This in turn leads us to throw ourselves on the mercy of God and ask his strength and guidance in working to end the problem by the only way it can be ended: the deliberate reunion of fragmentated Christianity. To offer any cure short of this, is to become a hawker of patent medicines.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Vacation Church School

BY

SCHUYLER LAWRENCE
Layman of Towanda, Pa.

PENDING a churchwide plan for vacation schools, a satisfactory interim program, interdenominational, is already available from the International Council of Religious Education, Chicago 4, Ill. This year ICRE is celebrating the first fifty years of daily vacation Bible schools. Episcopal parishes wanting to enter the vacation church school field might do well to go down the line with this overall program.

About half our parishes appear to be in the town-country classification. For them we need a specially angled manual on how to set up a simple Episcopal vacation school, how to recruit and train a staff, what Episcopalian materials to use, tentative schedules, suggestions for games, funsongs, charades, handcrafts, notebooks, etc., and finally how to make graduation night not merely a time to display what the children have made and learned, but also an opportunity to build some team spirit and support in the parents looking forward to the Sunday school's new academic year in September. This ought to be all together in one pamphlet. The conscientious VCS director today has to acquire quite a library to be sure of proper planning.

For parishes where a strictly Church school is desired, a small school can be set up this way: Children who cannot read are placed together (ages about 3-6); those who can read are classified roughly as primary or junior with separate teachers but a uniform curriculum. This last group then can have joint sessions for story telling, audio-visual aids, dramatics, etc. A small vacation school is better than none and is not hard to handle on this basis with only three teachers and a trained supervisor aiding each group with specialties. Helpers or extra classes should be added if the teaching load is above seven or eight per teacher. Small classes are more effective, even though large groups look more successful to proud parishioners.

Since emphasis this year is on the Church, a trial one-week VCS could tackle episodes in Acts, dividing up some of the events into materials for five sessions, e.g., the story of St. Stephen; St. Paul (several days); the First Council at Jerusalem, etc. The charades used every day can be accumulated for graduation into a series of tableaux held together by a narrator.

The vacation part of the program should not be forgotten. Besides games, singing can be made cheerful with funsongs, like "Old MacDonald Had a Farm" and more recent novelties. A piano and hymnals are not essential. Actually young children may learn new songs more quickly and completely by rote, unaccompanied. "Saviour, teach me day by day," "Advent tells us Christ is near" and "For the beauty of the earth" and hymns that may be brand-new to the group. It is surprising also how few children know by heart the first verses of standard hymns such as "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "Fairest Lord Jesus," and with what uninhibited fervor they yell them out once they are not distracted by the printed page. Children just don't seem anymore to read easily and comprehendingly. It is better not to slow down a VCS group to the level of its poorest readers: Instruction requiring high reading skills should not be stressed.

The tested schedule that follows might provide a rough framework: informal games on arrival (to wear down a little exuberance), formal chapel (20 minutes: based on Morning Prayer, very short address, no offering—leave that for graduation), flannelgraph or filmstrip presentation of the narrative of the lesson, classes, formal games, handcrafts, charades, new hymns and funsongs learned, and final assembly with the kindergarten, separate up to this point, joining in at the last.

Things to watch out for: rigidity (if it's indicated, be ready to scrap or change anything that doesn't work out), rainy days (have a special schedule ready), competing with scout camps or other community projects (choose a free period), and giving the unchurched a lop-sided view (if the curriculum is based on St. Paul, teach it in terms of St. Paul preaching Jesus Christ, so that St. Paul cannot seem to overshadow his master.)

The big decision to be made is to have a vacation school. Once this be taken, the actual details can be made to work out with the materials now available. There is still time to promote a vacation school for this summer in Episcopal parishes where the VCS tradition should be a part of parish mobilization.

The IRCE's poster this year reads: "50th Birthday Vacation Church School. Bible stories—games—worship—songs—activities. 1901—Fifty Years and a Future—1951." Episcopal parishes can share in this promotion and its benefits by going to work now.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

PEOPLE OF THE CHURCH

ORDINATIONS:

EVERETT F. ELLIS was ordained deacon on June 8 at Trinity, Boston, with four bishops attending: Nash of Mass.; the Presiding Bishop; Peabody of C. N. Y.; Whittemore of W. Mich. Ellis is to be vicar of the Redeemer, Salmon, Id. Others ordained deacons and their charges: DON P. JOHNSTON, ass't at Trinity, Haverhill, Mass.; ALBERT R. LYNCH, curate at St. Paul's, Pawtucket, R. I.; CLINTON T. MACY, in charge of St. Peter's, Salem, Mass.; GEORGE L. PEABODY, associate at Grace, St. Louis; WILLIAM A. PERKINS, curate at St. Paul's, Dayton, O.; EDGAR D. ROMIG, curate at Trinity, Boston; MILTON SAVILLE, curate at Grace, Medford, Mass.; EDMUND K. SHERRILL, curate at Christ Church, Cambridge; ARTHUR E. WALMSLEY, curate at the Holy Apostle, St. Louis; JAMES R. WHITTEMORE, curate at Christ Church, Grosse Pointe, Mich.; MASON WILSON JR., in charge of the Messiah, Woods Hole, Mass.; HIKARU YANAGIHARA of Japan, to do graduate work at Union Seminary.

SMITH L. LAIN was ordained deacon June 14 by Bishop Higley at Christ Church, Wellsburg, N. Y. He is with the Tioga County mission.

BRENDAN GRISWOLD, curate at St. Mark's, New Britain, was ordained priest on June 15 at Christ Church Cathedral, Hartford, at a service conducted by Bishop Gray and Bishop Hatch. Others ordained: priests, RICHARD B. KALTER, curate at St. Mary's, Manchester; John W. McCANN, vicar of St. Andrew's, Hartford; PETER B. TOMKINS, vicar of St. Philip's, Putnam. Acting for the bishop of N. C., FRANKLIN W. YOUNG, prof. at Yale Divinity School.

WEBSTER G. BARNETT was ordained deacon by Bishop Keeler June 22 at Grace, Wabasha, Minn.

D. ROBERT HUNT and JOHN J. HOWARD were ordained deacons on June 11 by Bishop Phillips at St. John's, Roanoke. The former is in charge of St. Andrew's, Clifton Forge, Va., and Howard is in charge of churches at Bluefield and Pocahontas, Va.

GEORGE P. DONNELLY was ordained deacon June 9 by Bishop Lawrence at the Good Shepherd, Clinton, Mass. He is ass't at Christ Church, Needham, Mass.

HOMER C. CARRIER was ordained deacon by Bishop Keeler at St. Matthew's, West Concord, Minn., where he is in charge. He also has charge of churches at Pine Island and Kasson.

EDWARD P. DENTZER was ordained priest June 17 by Bishop Lichtenberger at Grace Church, Kirkwood, Mo., where he is ass't and also in charge of Christ Church, Affton.

WILLIAM K. TIBBETT was ordained deacon on June 20 by Bishop Lichtenberger at Emmanuel, Webster Groves, Mo. He is ass't at the Ascension, St. Louis.

HENRY H. BREUL was ordained deacon at Christ Church Cathedral, Hartford, on June 15 by Bishop Gray assisted by Bishop Hatch. He is vicar of St. Andrew's, Devon, Conn. Others ordained deacons at the service: ROGER G. DISSELL, curate at St. Luke's, Darien; NORTON G. HINCKLEY, vicar at Pine Meadow and Riverton; CHARLES R. NIELSEN, curate at St. John's, Stamford.

MALCOLM E. McLENAGHAN was ordained priest by Bishop Tucker, June 12, in the chapel of Bexley Hall. He is rector of St. Paul's, Toledo, O.

HOWARD W. BLACKBURN, former Methodist minister, was ordained deacon June 16 at Washington Cathedral by Bishop Dun. He is assisting at Trinity, Washington. Others ordained at this service: DAVID W. HARRIS, ass't at St. Luke's, Washington; HARRY MAYFIELD, ass't at Epiphany, Washington; CHARLES W. SHIKE, ass't at St. Alban's, Washington; H. HOWARD SURFACE JR. ass't at St. Paul's, Rock Creek; W. DONALD TAYLOR, in charge of St. Mary's, Washington; WILLIAM A. WENDT, to work in New York City. WILLIAM J. COULTER and JOHN BIANCHI were ordained priests at the same service: the former is now rector of the Redeemer, Glen Echo, Md. and the latter vicar of St. Monica's, Washington.

WILLIAM M. BAXTER was ordained deacon at Emmanuel, Webster Groves, Mo. by Bishop Lichtenberger and is to be ass't at St. Michael and St. George, St. Louis.

HARVARD WILBUR was ordained deacon at Virginia Seminary by Bishop Goodwin, acting for Bishop Hunter of Wyo. He is in charge of the Hanna field in Wyo.

EDWARD F. MASON JR. was ordained deacon in the chapel of Bexley Hall, June 12 by Bishop Tucker, assisted by Bishop Burroughs. He is ass't at Our Saviour, Akron. Also ordained deacons at the same service: THOMAS E. VOSSLER, ass't at Grace Church, Mansfield, O.; IRA M. CROTHER JR. in charge of St. Mark's, Cleveland; LESTER B. THOMAS JR. to work in W. Mich.; H. IRVING MAYSON, assigned to St. Philip's, Akron.

JOHN L. THOMPSON 3rd was ordained deacon at St. John's, Youngstown, O., by Bishop Tucker on June 16. He is ass't at St. Mark's, Toledo.

ROBERT L. LENGLER was ordained priest by Bishop Peabody, June 20, at Gethsemane, Sherrill, N. Y., where he is in charge.

ALLAN R. WOLTER was ordained deacon on June 18 at St. Paul's Cathedral, Los Angeles, by Bishop Bloy. He is in charge of All Saints, Vista. Others ordained deacons at this service: ROBERT STELLAR, to continue his studies at Yale in the fall; ROGER STREM, in charge of St. Michael's, El Segundo; JOHN L. POWELL, to continue as director of education at St. Edmund's, San Marino.

ROBERT H. CUMMINGS was ordained deacon by Bishop Lawrence, June 17, at Trinity, Melrose, Mass. He is vicar of Grace Church, Chicopee, Mass.

LAY WORKERS:

The following Windham House students, having received their master's degrees in education, have taken positions as follows: EDITH DALY, college worker at Trinity, Iowa City; ELINOR M. ECCLES, director of education at the Incarnation, Dallas; JOYCE MacDONALD, director of education at St. Peter's, Auburn, N. Y.; MARY McNULTY, director of education at Christ Church Cathedral, Hartford; MARGARET J. PEARSON, college worker at the Good Samaritan, Corvallis, Ore.; DOROTHY B. VAUGHN, director of education at Calvary, N. Y. C.; ELAINE BETTS will assist her husband, who is chaplain to Episcopal students at Columbia University.

MALCOLM BOYD, a partner with Mary Pickford and Buddy Rogers in TV and radio productions, has resigned to study for orders and will enter a seminary this fall.

RUBY LEE has resigned as field worker for the dept. of missions of the diocese of Michigan.

LUTHER WILLIAMS was commissioned a capt. in the Church Army April 9 by Bishop Hobson. He is in charge of St. Mark's, Cincinnati.

(Continued on Page 14)

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SCHOOL IN LIBERIA CELEBRATES

★ St. John's School at Robertsport, Liberia, held its first founder's day program in June. It was opened in 1878 by Bishop C. C. Penick as a school for the Vais and Golas, tribes living in the area. Recently the old students association was re-established, one of its purposes being to provide scholarships for worthy students. The speaker at the celebration was H. Boakai Freeman, supervisor in the western province for the department of public instruction of the Liberian government. He was a former St. John's student and taught there for a number of years.

DEVALL GWATHMEY IS HONORED

★ The Rev. Devall L. Gwarthmey, rector of St. John's, Wytheville, Va., was honored on June 24 when members of the congregation and others marked his 30th anniversary as rector. He was presented with a watch and a silver teapot by the parishioners. With characteristic modesty he responded with: "Too much fuss. Too much fuss." In the diocese of Southwestern Virginia he has been a member of the board of examining chaplains since the first council of the diocese in 1920, and chairman since 1936. He has also been a deputy to three General Conventions.

FORT VALLEY HAS NEW DIRECTOR

★ The Rev. Odell G. Harris has been appointed chaplain-director of the Fort Valley, Ga., College Center, filling the vacancy caused by the death of the Rev. John H. Brown. Mr. Harris has been the archdeacon for Negro work in Southern Virginia for the past four years.

OUTDOOR SERVICE IN MICHIGAN

★ Over 10,000 people from the entire southeastern part of Michigan and from Canada joined in an outdoor service on June 24 at Belle Isle. It was part of the Episcopal commemoration of Detroit's 250th birthday. Parishes of the city, 57 in the metropolitan area, transferred their regular morning services to the corporate one. There was also present representatives of fourteen parishes in the Windsor area, with their choirs. There was a choir of 850 voices. Bishop Hubbard conducted the service and Bishop Emrich preached. He spoke of the origin of the Episcopal Church in the area, mentioning the Rev. Richard Pollard who paddled his canoe across the river from Canada to conduct the first service.

MARQUIS CHILDS HITS CHURCH

★ Marquis Childs, syndicated columnist, told those attending the summer conference meeting at Hood College, Frederick, Md., that the Church is still geared to an 18th century pattern which claims only two hours a week of the average churchgoer. He said that the Church faces "a fantastic array" of competition from movies, television, sports, books and secular organizations, all of which are pulling people in other directions. Mr. Childs is a vestryman of All Saints, Washington, D. C. and a member of the executive committee of the diocese.

DETROIT CHURCH CHANGES NAME

★ St. Bartholomew's, Detroit, was changed to St. Martha's on July 1. The congregation is meeting at present in a borrowed building with Walter Keip, lay reader, in charge.

INDIANAPOLIS CHURCH RECEIVES GRANT

★ A gift of $27,245 has been made to St. George's, Indianapolis, from the Lilly Endowment. Last fall Bishop Kirchoffer asked the clergy of Christ Church to take responsibility for the services at this south side mission. Now the bishop and trustees of the diocese have turned complete responsibility

"I thought there must be Something Wrong

about a cassock for only $15.00. So I hesitated for months to order one. Now I'm wearing it with complete pleasure and satisfaction. But I still can't understand how you can price it so low." (From an Iowa Clergyman). If you too, have been puzzled and sceptical of Hopkins' values, there really isn't any mystery about it. By large direct mill purchases — by economical specialization on one style — and by dealing directly with you — we have actually shaved $10.00 off the normal price of this fine, Everyday Cassock. (And similarly with shirts and albs). Best of all—you don't take our word for it, or risk a penny. Simply examine critically, at your own convenience. If delighted and convinced, let us bill you in the usual way. Otherwise, just return, for any reason whatever, and owe us nothing. Which of these remarkable values may we send you now?

Everyday CASSOCK

(Value $25.00) $15.00

Combed, mercerized poplin. Fast color. Washable and Sanforized. Full cuffs and pleated back. Back and shoulders fully lined. Please give size (34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48) and height.

Genuine Irish Linen

ALBS - $15.00

Fine count, pure imported Irish Linen. Generously cut and painstakingly tailored. Launders perfectly. Please specify: Small, Medium, or Large.

Black

BROADCLOTH SHIRTS

(clerical neckband) 3 for $15.00

Superbly tailored in fine-count, combed, mercerized broadcloth. Sanforized and color-fast. French cuffs, breastpocket, fly-front. Please give neck size and sleeve length.

HOPKINS CO., Dept. W7
422 Washington Bldg., N.W.
Washington, D. C.

for the mission over to Christ Church for three years and the Rev. Earl L. Conner became the vicar on July 1.

The money, handled by trustees headed by the Rev. John P. Craine, rector of Christ Church, is to be used for three purposes: to rehabilitate the church and parish house; to renovate the vicarage and convert it into a two-family house so that the sexton may also live there; to provide the salary of the vicar on a devolutionary scale, being reduced one-third each year with the assumption that the congregation will be able to carry their own program at the end of three years.

St. George's is the only Episcopal church in the vast south side area and will provide not only the usual church activities but also community facilities for those in the neighborhood.

SHATTUCK RECEIVES $10,000 GIFT

★ Shattuck School, Faribault, Minn., has received a gift of $10,000 from the Whitehall Foundation of New York.

DELAWARE PARISH CELEBRATES

★ St. Anne's, Middletown, Del., observed its 246th anniversary in June, with guests from Washington, Philadelphia and New York, as well as from all parts of Delaware, joining in the service. The sermon was by the Rev. Thorne Sparkman, rector of the Redeemer, Bryn Mawr, Pa. Kenneth E. Clarke, rector, conducted the service, with Bishop McKinstry giving the absolution and blessing.

NEW PARISH HOUSE AT PENN WYNNE

★ The Chapel of the Holy Apostles, Penn Wynne, Pa., dedicated a new parish house with Bishop Hart officiating and preaching. The service was attended by 400 persons including a number of clergy of the diocese. It is the latest of five chapels begun or substantially aided by the Church of the Holy Apostles and the Mediator, Philadelphia. The vicar is the Rev. Robert M. Baur. A committee has been named to raise funds to retire the mortgage and to proceed with the building of the church.

FORBES URGES STAND FOR PEACE

★ The Rev. Kenneth Forbes, executive chairman of the Church League for Social Action and a Witness editor, addressing the American People's Congress meeting in Chicago, urged the people of this country to join in the world-wide movement for peace, civil rights and social change.

The PARISH
COMMUNION

An illustrated Booklet on the Holy Communion and its relation to the life and work of a Parish.

35c a copy, postpaid

25c a copy for orders of 50 or more

Address:

ASSOCIATED PARISHES, Inc.
6 North Carroll St.
Madison 3, Wisconsin

"THE TASK WHICH THE SECULARIZATION OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS PRESENTS TO THE CHURCH"

by the Reverend James A. Pike, LL.B., B.D., J.S.D., Chaplain and Head of the Department of Religion, Columbia University.

A reprint of Dr. Pike's Alumni Day address at The General Theological Seminary in May 1951.
Copies of this address may be ordered, at 25c each, from

The Recording Secretary
Associate Alumni
175 Ninth Avenue
New York 11, New York

An early order is suggested, since only a limited number of copies is available

Vestment

Morehouse-Gorham

New York 17
14 E. 41st Street

Chicago 2
29 E. Madison Street

Light-Weight Cassocks

A selection of cassocks for use during the summer months. Anglican or Latin styles.

LATIN CASSOCK

All Rayon Oxford Tropical $44.50
Cincture 10.50
80% Wool—20% Rayon Tropical $57.50
Cincture 11.50
Mohair $62.50
Cincture 12.00
Imported Alpaca $75.00
Cincture 14.00
China Silk $75.00
Cincture 14.00
Pure Worsted $76.50
Cincture 15.00
White Imported Wool Cashmere $78.00
Cincture 15.00
Mozetta, $15.00 additional

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT, Book Editor

The Song at the Scaffold. By Gertrude von Le Fort. Tr. by Olga Marx. Sheed and Ward. $2.25.

Written in the form of a letter from a friendly observer to an unnamed person, this fictional account of the life of one of the sixteen Carmelite sisters of Compiegne who were executed during the French Revolution is a tale of power in weakness. It is perhaps an artistic expression of the religious experience of the contemporary German novelist, who has become a Roman Catholic convert. There is no pious declamation to mar the sincerity of meditation or the depth of psychological penetration, and the reader cannot fail to appreciate the delicacy of feeling which underlies the story.—Sarah Terrien

A History of the Crusades. Volume I. The First Crusade and the Foundation of the Kingdom of Jerusalem. Cambridge Univ. Press. $5.

This is the beginning of a three-volume history of the Crusades, written with all the fascination of a historical novel, beautifully printed and illustrated. This is the way history should be written. It is a great mistake when it is treated as if it were dull, because history itself is the most fascinating subject in the world. The author has ample authority for his statements. His bibliography is nineteen pages long.

The opening paragraph is an unforgettable description of the entrance of the Caliph Omar into Jerusalem in 638, accompanied by the defeated Patriarch Sophronius. That was the event which led, centuries later, to the Crusades. Considering the immense importance of the Middle Ages for all later history, and especially for the history of the church, this valuable work should have very wide reading.

Books Received

The Oxford Group. By Walter Houston Clark. Bookman. $3.50.
A very interesting history of the "groups," studied from a neutral angle, and seeking to discover why the groups appeal, and what we can learn from they.

Strength for Service to God and Country. Ed. by Arthur Sterling Ward. Abingdon-Cokesbury Press. $.90.

Primer for Protestants. By James Hastings Nichols. Haddam. $.59.
Reprint of an outstanding, ably written book.

Our Hope of Survival in an Age of Crisis. By George L. Murray. Baker. $1.50.

Wake Up or Blow Up. By Frank C. Laubach. Revell. $2.00.

Sons of Adam. By Samuel M. Zwemer. Baker. $2.00.
Pen sketches of Old Testament characters.

The Significance of Jesus. By W. R. Maltby. Finding God. By A. Herbert Gray. Macmillan. $.75.
Two new booklets in the excellent "Viewpoints" Series.

Christian Faith and My Job. By Alexander Miller. Haddam. $.59.

The High Green Hill. By Gerald Vann. Sheed and Ward. $2.25.

Paul and His Interpreters. By Albert Schweitzer. Macmillan. $3.50.
Reprint of a classic.

Stepping Stones to Sanctity. By Lawrence G. Lovasik. Macmillan. $2.25.

The Polished Shaft. By W. E. M. Brown. Macmillan. $1.50.
Studies of three religious writers of the eighteenth century, James Hervey, William Cowper, and William Gilpin.

A Better Hope and Other Sermons. By Charles Ray Goff. Revell. $2.00.

Roads to Radiant Living. By Charles L. Allen. Revell. $2.00.

The Wisdom of Evelyn Underhill. Compiled by John Stobbart. Morehouse-Gorham Co. $0.45.

The Church Pension Fund

and its subsidiaries

administered for the benefit of the Church

The Church Hymnal Corporation

Publishers of The Hymnal; Hymnal 1940 Companion; Book of Common Prayer; A Prayer Book for Soldiers and Sailors; Book of Offices; Stowe's Clerical Director.

The Church Life Insurance Corporation

Offers low cost insurance and annuity contracts to clergy, lay officials and active lay workers of the Church, either voluntary or paid, and their immediate families. Services include individual insurance programming and assistance to parish officials in preparing and establishing plans for retirement of lay employees.

The Church Fire Insurance Corporation

Low cost fire, windstorm and extended coverage insurance on property owned by or closely affiliated with the Church, and on the residences and personal property of the clergy.

Further information available by addressing any of the above at

20 Exchange Place New York 5, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

ASSISTANT
for
LARGE EVANGELICAL PARISH
IN MIDWESTERN CITY
Good Salary and Attractive Apartment. All replies will be kept confidential.
Box G, The Witness, Tunkhannock, Pa.

Mitchell FOLD-O-LEG tables
The strongest, handiest folding table made. For banquet, church and school use. Write for descriptive folder.
MITCHELL MFG. COMPANY
2748 S. 34th St., Milwaukee 7, Wis. Dept. W

FINEST PURE IRISH LINEN
Buy linen now from complete stocks personally selected in Ireland. Also Cassock Cloth, Vestment patterns. Embdy. designs and instruction books.
Samples Free
MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
BOX 386 CHILLICOTHE, MO.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

VESTMENTS
Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves
Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries
Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars
Custom Tailoring for Clergymen
1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951
COX SONS & VINING, Inc.
131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

CASSOCKS
Surplices — Choir Vestments
Eucharistic Vestments
Altar Hangings and Linens
Prices Sent on Request
J. M. HALL, INC.
14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.
Tel. CH 4-3306

ST. JAMES LESSONS
A nine course series of instruction for Episcopal Church Schools including illustrated work books — 150-250 pages (60c each) and teachers' manuals I, II, III 40c each, IV through IX 60c each).
No Samples - Payment with orders
St. James Lessons, Inc.
865 Madison Ave., Dpt. 5, N. Y. 21, N. Y.

Church Furniture
FOR EVERY NEED AND BUDGET
Pulpit and communion sets, fonts and lecterns available for early delivery. Chancel furniture, carvings, Bodiform Pews, folding chairs, tables and Sunday School furniture also available.
Write Department 133
AMERICAN SEATING COMPANY
901 Broadway N.W., Grand Rapids 2, Mich.

PEOPLE

CLERGY CHANGES:

O. M. LANGLEY, formerly rector of St. John's, Havre de Grace, Md., is now rector of St. John's, Mankato, Minn.

FREDERIC S. FLEMING, rector of Trinity, New York City, has resigned effective October 1 because of illness.

H. AUGUST KUEHL, rector of St. Mary's, Reading, Pa., becomes rector of Our Merciful Saviour, Penns Grove, N. J., Aug. 7.

ARTHUR WALMSLEY, recently ordained deacon, is ass't at the Holy Apostles, St. Louis.

ROBERT L. DARWALL, formerly vicar of St. Barnabas, Arroyo Grande, Cal., is now ass't at St. Alban's, Los Angeles.

EDWARD T. BROWN has resigned as rector of St. Mark's, Palo Alto, Cal.

CHARLES F. SCHREINER, formerly ass't at St. John's Cathedral, Wilmington, is now rector of St. James, Newport, Del.

JOHN W. KNOBLE, formerly ass't at Trinity, New Haven, Conn., is now chaplain to Episcopal students at the U. of Minn. and rector of Holy Trinity, Minneapolis.

RICHARD S. BAILEY, formerly rector of the Holy Comforter, Drexel Hill, Pa., is now rector of All Saints, Rehobeth, Del.

DONALD O. WILSON, vicar of St. Simon the Cyrenian, Springfield, Mass., becomes vicar of St. Matthew's, Wilmington, Del., Sept. 1.

HONORS:

ALICE SWEET of N. D., RUFUS MORGAN of N. C. and FRANCIS ALLISON of Bethlehem received the Rural Workers Fellowship awards for 1951.

JOHN M. BURGESS, chaplain to Episcopal students at Howard University, has been made a canon of Washington Cathedral. He will continue his university duties but will, as one of eight canon, officiate at cathedral services.

JOHN B. LYTE, rector of All Saints, Providence, R. I., received a doctorate June 16 from Rhode Island College.

ROBERT J. PARKER, rector of St. James, Clinton, N. Y., received a doctorate June 17 from Hamilton College.

CHARLES C. FISHBURNE JR., rector of Christ Church, Martinsville, Va., received a doctorate June 7 from Washington and Lee University.

Everything for the Episcopal Church
Ammidon & Company
HORACE L. VARIAN
31 S. Frederick St. Baltimore 2, Md.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS
EST. 1917

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS
Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS
Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.
SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

Exquisite
IRISH LINENS
BY THE YARD
From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States, I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values; unsurpassed quality, imported direct from Ireland. Also transfer patterns, linen tape, and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 3 inches at 75c, 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.00.
MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

THE BISHOP WHITE
PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833
Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.
PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)
Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

GOWNS
· Pulpit and Choir · Headquarters for RELIGIOUS SUPPLIES
Church Furniture · Stoles
Embroideries · Vestments
Hangings · Communion
Sets · Altar Brass Goods
CATALOG ON REQUEST
National CHURCH GOODS SUPPLY COMPANY
821-23 ARCH STREET, PHILADELPHIA 7, PA.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

CHARLES L. McGAVERN
Rector of the Holy Cross, Tryon, N. C.

It is most discouraging to read such a letter as that of A. A. Carrier in the June 14th Witness. When a Christian layman indulges in generalization in a field which is so critical, it is time for all of us to stop and think.

Mr. Carrier says "it is difficult to draw the line between the general and an intimate special contact." No proof whatsoever is offered, and in my experience I do not find this to be the case. He says further, "there are basic differences to the races which both divine and natural law have ordained and which should not be transgressed." What are these differences? What is the proof of their divine ordination?

The reference to John Wilkes Booth is again a generalization without any application, and what Artemus Ward's statement has to do with the problem is beyond me.

However, the greatest objection I find to Mr. Carrier's letter is the amazing quotation from Fielding which says that "men are fire and women tinder." How in the world a Christian layman can have such an attitude regarding women certainly amazes me. It is insulting to say the least, and completely contrary to the teaching of the Church regarding men or women.

Finally, what right has Mr. Carrier to read William Lloyd Garrison's mind, and what earthly relationship can there be between the freedom of a Negro and miscegenation? If Mr. Carrier's position is a Christian one then I am surely not a Christian.

OLIVE H. ARMSTRONG
Churchwoman of Philadelphia

As a regular reader of The Witness, may I make my initial entry into your magazine? I was greatly elated to learn that our Episcopal Church is to experience an old-fashioned revival. Also that all forms of gambling, chances, etc., have been forbidden. However, until our service can be standardized, we are still far short of what we should strive to be. We are the Protestant Episcopal Church, and until our bishops unite, and give to our clergy specific laws concerning what they may and may not permit in their churches, we will still have individual clergy who advocate prayers to the Virgin Mary, the teaching of transubstantiation, incense, and other Roman teachings. The Confessional is also a stigma on our Church.

ERNEST MILLER
Layman of Lansing, Mich.

I would draw the attention of Mr. A. A. Carrier who in Backfire, June 14th stated: "We cannot properly have them (Negroes) in our living rooms or at our dinner tables" to two facts which must be unknown to him.

1. Our Lord loved the Negro with whom Mr. Carrier feels he cannot dine, so much that he died for him.

2. What we do or leave undone for the least of humankind is precisely as though we did it or left it undone for our Lord himself.

ST. LUKE'S SCHOOL
Episcopal Day School under the direction of Trinity Parish
Nursery, Kindergarten, Elementary Grades. After School play groups. Coeducational. Moderate tuition. For catalogue and further information communicate with
THE REV. PAUL C. WEED, JR.
Headmaster
Hudson & Grove Sts., NEW YORK 14, N. Y.
Phone WAtkins 4-5960

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL
Coeducational Episcopal Day School
Prepares for leading secondary schools. Sound academic training. Kindergarten thru 8th grade. French and Latin emphasized. Complete testing program. Est. 1894. Music, drama, arts & crafts, sports. Bus service. Hot lunch. Tel: AL 4-2000
E. ALLISON GRANT, Headmaster
88 E. Fourth Ave. (11th St.), N. Y. 3

THE PATTERSON SCHOOL for BOYS

Episcopal School in Blue Ridge Mountains of Western No. Carolina. Accredited. Grades 6-12. Gymnasium, sports, 42nd year. 1300-acre estate. Board and tuition, moderate.
GEORGE F. WIESE, Supt.
COLLEGE PREPARATORY — Legerwood, N. C. — HEALTH EDUCATION
CHARACTER BUILDING

SCHOOLS

FORK UNION MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth — New Hampshire

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield — Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

FOUR NOTABLE VOLUMES
For Summer Reading

British Humanitarianism

Essays Honoring FRANK J. KLINGBERG

Edited by
SAMUEL CLYDE McCULLOCH
Rutgers University
[Pages x, 254]

Publication No. 32 — The Copy $4.00

THIS VOLUME of ten essays illuminates the work of the Anglican Church through the S. P. G. and is a striking corrective of that school of historians which ignores religion and the Church in their historiography.

"It would be invidious to single out from the volume individual essays. Of these four deal directly with the activities of the S. P. G. in America; the other six deal with the convict system in Australia, early factory legislation, the organization of the Anglican Church in America before 1688, James Ramsay as a humanitarian essayist, the attempts made before 1833 to modify chattel slavery, and education and children's hymns in eighteenth century England.

"Several ideas seem to be implicit in all these studies. These are, first, the significance of Christian tenets as the inspiration of the humanitarianism of the time, and, secondly, the important part taken by organized religion in the transmission of culture between England and her colonies. As a kind of reverse reaction, many of the details introduced by the authors, showing the obstacles against which reformers worked, build up a picture of overwhelming inhumanity and callous cruelty in eighteenth century society . . . It is beautifully printed and put together by the Church Historical Society."—Professor F. C. DIETZ, the University of Illinois, in The American Historical Review.

The General Convention Offices and Officers 1785-1950

By The Reverend C. RANKIN BARNES, D. D.
Secretary of the House of Deputies

[Pages viii, 148]

Publication No. 33 — The Copy $3.00

THE GENERAL CONVENTION, as the supreme legislative organ of the American Episcopal Church, is the evidence and test of this Church's autonomy.

This book expounds, as no other ever written has done, the development over a period of 165 years of its principal offices—that of the Presiding Bishop, of the President of the House of Deputies, of the Secretary of the House of Bishops, of the Secretary of the House of Deputies, and of the Treasurer of the General Convention.

It contains 87 biographical sketches of the servants of General Convention, of whom 19 were bishops, 54 were presbyters, and 14 were laymen.

It is illustrated with eight pages of portraits. A Book List of the writings of the principal persons named in this study, a Bibliography, and an Index complete the volume.

The Catholic Movement in the American Episcopal Church

By the Reverend GEORGE E. DeMILLE, M. A.
[Pages ix, 219]

Publication No. 12 — The Copy $3.00

A NEW REVISED, and enlarged edition of the standard work on the subject.

"A more fair-minded and judicious history of this very controversial question could not be written . . . He gives lively—and by no means hagiographic—pictures of such leaders as Seabury, Hobart, Doane, Whittingham and John Henry Hopkins. Taking the whole record into account . . . it does not appear to the author, or to this reviewer, that the 'Catholic movement' is a Romeward movement or likely to become one."—The Christian Century, the leading Protestant journal.

Anglican Evangelicalism

Edited by the Reverend ALEXANDER C. ZABRISKIE, S. T. D.
[Pages xv, 283]

Publication No. 13 — The Copy $3.00

"THE CHURCH HISTORICAL SOCIETY has once again given us a really valuable volume. Let it be said right off that it is such. Conducted throughout on a high plane, with adequate scholarship, sweet reasonableness, and here and there rising to genuine heights of fervor in presenting evangelical truths, this book should be widely read and pondered."—Holy Cross Magazine.

"The doctrinal section is possibly the strongest in the book, including as it does two challenging essays dealing with Christian anthropology and Evangelical ecclesiology respectively . . ."—F. W. DILLISTONE, in The Record, the Church of England's oldest newspaper.

• Send for a copy of THE HISTORIOGRAPHER, 1951, the Society's organ, which contains a complete list of the Society's publications, and includes an illuminating essay, "The Critical Period in the History of the American Episcopal Church," by Dr. Walter H. Stowe. 25c.

The CHURCH HISTORICAL SOCIETY

4205 SPRUCE ST.
PHILADELPHIA 4

THE

Witness

10¢ A COPY

July 26, 1951

BISHOPS TUCKER AND BURROUGHS

At Ordination Service at Bexley Hall

AN ARTICLE BY IRVING P. JOHNSON

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 8 (and 9 Holy Days ecept Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 7:45, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers – 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. – 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital – 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m. Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a.m. Holy Communion
11 a.m. Morning Service and Sermon
Weekdays: Holy Communion Tuesdays at 12:10 p.m.; Wednesdays at 8 a.m.; Thursdays at 10:30 a.m.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer – 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon. Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D.,
Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 – 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m.
Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. William W. Lumpkin, Rector;
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacCall, 3rd, Rector
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 26 The WITNESS JULY 26, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

S. P. G. Anniversary Year Opens With London Celebration

Bishop Hudson of Newcastle to Visit States In Fall to Speak in Parishes

★ "The continuing spread of its missionary work after these two hundred and fifty years is the most significant fact of the present anniversary celebrations of the Church of England's Society for the Propagation of the Gospel," the Rev. Dr. C. Rankin Barnes states on his return from London. There, as representative of the Episcopal Church and secretary of the National Council, he took part in the initial ceremonies of this anniversary year, preaching at evensong in Westminster Abbey and addressing a missionary rally of seven thousand people which packed Royal Albert Hall the next evening.

Missionary bishops and other representatives from distant dioceses, including Huron, Gambia, Lebombo, Zuzuland, India, Pakistan, Australasia, were present to express the gratitude of their fields for the long-continued assistance of the society. Countries into which the S.P.G. has gone were shown by a procession of thirty-eight national flags, led, as it happened, by that of the United States for the United States, or rather, the American colonies seventy-four years before the United States came into existence, were the first field entered by S.P.G. missionaries. The charter given by King William III is dated June 16, 1701. On April 28, 1702, H.M.S. Centurion sailed from Cowes, Isle of Wight, arriving in Boston on June 11. S.P.G. missionaries were in Newfoundland the following year, and thereafter new countries were steadily added to the society's widening responsibilities.

One of the most notable features of the present celebration, Barnes reports, is the modern Centurion, a half-size (80-ton) replica, built and rigged on the lines of the older ship although powered, as the older ship certainly was not, by two diesel engines. Barnes was one of a procession of six, the Archbishop of Canterbury and five other clergy, who marched from Lambeth Palace across Lambeth Road while the traffic waited, and down to Lambeth Pier where the Centurion was moored. The little ship was commissioned and dedicated, and then moved off under her own power, dressed with the thirty-eight flags, to anchor again, opposite the Houses of Parliament, as part of the Festival of Britain. She is not merely for show, however. She is spending the summer visiting English sea-side resorts for evangelistic and missionary work.

Between 1702 and 1783, the S.P.G. sent more than 300 missionaries to the country which then became the United States, and established 202 mission stations here.

Dr. and Mrs. Barnes were the only American guests at the annual state dinner at Mansion House by the Right. Hon. Sir Denys Lowson, lord mayor of London, in honor of the Archbishops and Bishops of the Church of England. The Lord Mayor, knighted earlier in the month by King George, is a prominent Churchman now serving as a Church commissioner.

While in England Barnes conferred with the Rt. Rev. Noel Baring Hudson, Bishop of Newcastle, on the itinerary which he will carry out in the United States in September and October as an "episcopal envoy" of S.P.G. Bishop Hudson, who was the official representative of the Church of England to the General Convention of 1940, will visit certain parishes of S.P.G. foundation from Massachusetts to Delaware.

RELEASED TIME IS UPHELD

★ The court of appeals of New York state has upheld the constitutionality of New York City's released time religious education program, under which children are excused one hour a week to attend religious classes off school premises. Episcopalian Charles H. Tuttle, chairman of the committee supporting released time, said: "This decision means that the plan for released time, which has been in successful operation in this state for twenty-five years, violates no provision of either the state or the federal constitution. This decision should put an end to advocacy of the reactionary, dangerous and totalitarian principle that children in the public schools become the creatures of the state and are subject to exclusive education regimentation by state secularism, irrespective of the religious convictions of their parents."

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

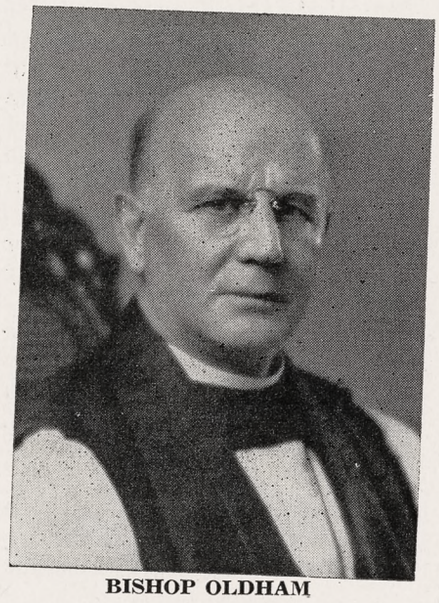
THE PICTURE ON THE COVER

★ Bishop Beverley Tucker of Ohio raises his hand in blessing on six ordinands and their presenters in a posed picture after the service following the commencement exercises of Kenyon College and Bexley Hall, Gambier. Five were ordained to the diaconate and one to the priesthood.

From background to foreground: Lester Thomas, from the diocese of Michigan and the Rev. Donald V. Carey of Grand Rapids, Michigan; Edward F. Mason of Dayton, O., and the Rev. Dayton B. Wright, rector of St. James', Painesville, O.; Henry Mayson of New York, and the Rev. John C. Davis, rector of St. Andrew's, Cleveland; Ira Crowther of Willoughby, O., and Dean Corwin C. Roach of Bexley Hall; Thomas E. Vossler Jr., of Findlay, O., and the Rev. Arthur L. Kenyon of Trinity, Findlay; and the Rev. Malcolm E. McClenaghan, deacon in charge at St. Paul's, Toledo, O. and the Rev. Alexander J. J. Gruetter, rector of St. Andrew's, Toledo.

Standing with Bishop Tucker is Bishop Nelson M. Burroughs of Ohio.

NEW CHURCHES IN MICHIGAN



★ Three new churches have recently been dedicated in Michigan by Bishop Emrich, each built with the help of the diocesan building fund. One is Trinity, Belleville where the Rev. J. B. Guinan is in charge, and another is St. James, Detroit, in charge of the Rev. C. W. May. The last to be dedicated is St. Andrew's, Rose City, the Rev. S. T. Coulter, vicar.

PHILADELPHIA OFFERS DIRECTED READING

★ More than a year ago in response to letters from missionaries in isolated places it was decided by the faculty of the Divinity School in Philadelphia to offer a number of "Directed Reading Courses." These were not to be correspondence courses for the training of men for the ministry, but rather opportunity for men unable to attend graduate courses in any available school to pursue their studies under direction and to have the benefit of contact with the faculty of a seminary. Since that time a number of men in various places have enrolled and done some reading and study. In no case is credit given toward a degree. The program is in charge of Rev. C. Edgar Young.

BISHOP OLDHAM IN EUROPE

★ Bishop Oldham, retired of Albany, is now in Europe attending a conference of the commission of the churches on international affairs, meeting July 30-August 1 in Switzerland and the continuation committee of the conference on faith and order meeting there August 14-18. Between the conferences he and Mrs. Oldham will visit their daughter in Austria where she is employed by the international refugee organization.

BISHOP OLDHAM

LAYMEN DISCUSS EDUCATION

★ Five dioceses of the 6th province were represented by sixty men and women at a conference on education meeting at Carleton College, Northfield, Minn., June 29-July 1. Bishop Keller, in welcoming the group, said that he had not been enthusiastic about the program of the department until he attended a conference of bishops in Washington. He came away convinced that it was a matter of vital concern to everyone in the Church and that he meant to forward it in every way he could.

The leaders were the Rev. Walter Williams, Canon Theodore O. Wedel and Mrs. Dora Chaplin.

DAVIS RICHARDS CONSECRATED

★ The Rev. Davis E. Richards was consecrated suffragan bishop of Albany on July 19 at All Saints Cathedral. The Presiding Bishop was the consecrator and the co-consecrators were Bishop Barry of Albany and Bishop Campbell, retired of Liberia. Bishop Boynton, suffragan of New York, preached.

NORTH CAROLINA MAKES SURVEY

★ The diocese of North Carolina is making a survey to learn how the Church can meet opportunities offered by the growth of the state. Bishop Penick has announced that the information will be made available to all denominations.

CHURCHMEN VISIT ALASKA

★ Ninety churchmen, mostly from eastern parishes, have returned from a three week tour of the northwest and Alaska, sponsored by Forth. There was a bus tour of Yellowstone Park; a visit to St. Andrew's, Livingston, Mont.; a tour of Seattle, including St. Mark's Cathedral. Stops were made at Canadian ports as well as Ketchikan, Juneau and Sitka, Alaska, where the party was entertained by people of the churches. The itinerary also included a trip over the famous White Pass and Yukon Railroad as far north as Carcross, Yukon. Returning to the States stops were made at Vancouver, Lake Louise and Banff.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CHURCH BUILDING IN MISSOURI

★ Considerable church and parish house building has been going on in the diocese of Missouri. Bishop Lichtenberger recently dedicated a parish house at Holy Cross Church, Poplar Bluff, and a new church for the Holy Communion, University City. Grace Church, Kirkwood, is now building an addition to the parish house and Christ Church, Rolla, plans to dedicate a new church in the fall. St. Andrew's, Normandy, a suburb of St. Louis, is also building a church.

NEW SEMINARY IN TEXAS

★ The diocese of Texas, faced with a large number of postulants seeking seminary education, is launching a new seminary at Austin this September. The seminary will work in cooperation with the Austin Presbyterian Seminary which is an accredited member of the American Association of Theological Schools.

Several courses of the Austin Seminary will be taken by the Episcopal students. In addition, other courses will be offered by clergy of the diocese of Texas teaching at nearby state universities who will commute to Austin for these courses. Supervision of the work will be given by Bishop John E. Hines, coadjutor of the diocese.

It is expected this seminary will meet the growing need for more adequate facilities for education for the ministry in the fast-growing southwestern area of the United States. Presently, the nearest Episcopal seminary is one thousand miles from Austin. Located, as it will be, next to one of the great state universities in the southwest, opportunity will be afforded students in residence to take additional work according to their particular needs and interests.

Since this seminary is begun to meet pressing needs of postulants unable to gain admittance to any of our seminaries, a one-year course is all that is planned for 1951-52. This will be the equivalent of first-year courses offered in our other seminaries. (See Editorial, page six).

SERVICE LEAGUE CONFERENCE

★ The conference for women sponsored by the Church Service League of Mass., was held at the diocesan center at Meredith, N. H., July 9-13. Leaders were Prof. Thompson of Wellesley, Bishop Heron, Mrs. Hobart Holly of Braintree, Sister Mary Martha, the Rev. Norman Goehring, rector of St. Michael's, Milton, who is director of the center. Leaders at forums were the Rev. Rollin Fairbanks of the Episcopal Theological School, Mrs. Allan K. Chalmers of Boston and the Rev. F. C. Lawrence of Brookline.

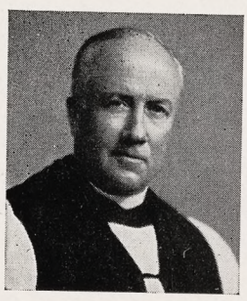
CONFERENCE IN MID-WEST

★ The travelling team on education held a conference at Norman, Okla., July 6-8, attended by 157 lay leaders from nine dioceses.

PHILADELPHIA SCHOOL TO BUILD

★ At the Philadelphia Divinity School commencement Bishop Hart of Pennsylvania, as president of the trustees, announced that the decision was made to go forward immediately with the erection of the new memorial classroom and dormitory building. The cost will be about $275,000, of which the greater part has been obtained or pledged. The erection of this building will provide much needed class rooms and 20 additional dormitory rooms. Recent growth of the school has made this building a necessity.

Diplomas and degrees were granted in course to 18 men. The honorary degrees of Doctor of Divinity were given to the Rev. Elmer Burton Christie, the Rev. Jacob Jarden Guenther, the Rev. Clarence Henry Parlour.



BISHOP KENNEDY IN KOREA

★ Bishop Kennedy of Honolulu, serving as bishop of the Pacific area by appointment of the National Council, is visiting Japan and Korea this summer for conferences with chaplains and for confirmations. He is also visiting Okinawa, now a part of his district.

ABILENE PARISH RAISES FUND

★ The Heavenly Rest, Abilene, Texas, has raised over $300,000 to build a plant consisting of four units: a parish house now under construction; a church, a chapel, a tower.

CHURCHMEN IN THE NEWS: The Rev. Rollin Fairbanks speaks at summer conference; Bishop Keeler urges support for new program of education; the Rev. Rankin Barnes tells of plans for S.P.G. celebration

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EDITORIALS

Theological Education

A PLAN to establish a new theological seminary in the diocese of Lexington was recently reported in the Church press. To date we have seen no comments on the announcement, and yet it is of interest and concern to the entire Church. Our own reaction was one of question and doubt. Does the Episcopal Church really need another seminary? Already there are no less than seven east of the Mississippi, most of them struggling to make both ends meet.

At the moment, of course, all theological schools are overcrowded and many have waiting lists. This condition is largely the result of the war, but is it necessarily a permanent one? There is already some talk of a surplus of ordained ministers in the near future if post-war enrollments hold up much longer. We rejoice in the number of men seeking ordination, but does this alone justify still another seminary? Several questions would seem to require an answer before we rush in and wind up with another liability on our hands. For example, would it not be wiser to improve and enlarge some of the schools already in existence? Or are we well enough supplied with competent scholars to staff another faculty? It does not strike us that all our present seminaries are up to par in this respect. And perhaps something should be said to rectors and bishops on the score of making it harder to get into the ministry. The number of misfits in orders is appalling, men who should never have been let in or out of a seminary. We should prefer to see the stress put on quality rather than quantity. Why not also consider sending more of our candidates to non-Episcopal schools, schools like Union or Yale to mention but two of the greatest?

Most of our existing seminaries started out as diocesan institutions, and so the Bishop of Lexington is within his right to establish one more. And yet surely this is a matter of more than diocesan concern. The graduates of such a school will not all remain in Lexington: they will emigrate far and wide. Hence it seems to us that this proposed scheme should be put before the committee on theological education of the General Convention or made the subject of wider study and discussion. We hear much of the sin of parochialism. Perhaps there is also such a thing as diocesanism, that is, a diocese coming to regard itself as a separate entity and end unto itself. We hope the Lexington proposal will be submitted to the Church at large rather than handled as a private matter.

"Quotes"

O GOD our heavenly Father, whose blessed Son came to bring mankind into one family in thee; we pray for the unity of the Church in all the world. Help us to seek to heal the divisions which keep us from one another and weaken our efforts to extend thy kingdom in the earth. Give us understanding of other people's points of view; save us from prejudice; and grant that as we see clearly our Saviour's will that his Church may be one, so we may labor in love to bring it to pass; through Jesus Christ our Lord.

—Forward, summer 1951

Wedding Experts

THE other day we heard of a parish priest who always turns over wedding rehearsals to a professional "consultant." "It's much easier that way, and relieves me of a lot of trouble," said he in reference to big society weddings with numerous attendants.

If this is a growing tendency in the Church, we certainly deplore it. The service of holy matrimony is a religious one as much as any other in the Prayer Book. It is not primarily a social event for which Emily Post is the authority and the modern wedding consultant the local arbiter. To hand the marriage service over to this new type of expert is simply to surrender one more thing to contemporary secularism. Presently marriage will be taken altogether away from the clergy except as officiants called in to perform a fancy ceremony. Has this not already happened with the burial of the dead? The undertaker has long since moved in, and the funeral parlor with its open casket and cosmetic treatment is now all the fashion. This probably happened because the Churches refused to take a stand and the clergy abdicated their authority.

A church wedding is an act of worship and a sacramental rite. Priests are ordained to conduct such services, and should know how to instruct a bridal party. If they don't, it's high time they learned rather than letting persons manage them whose real interest is one of putting on a show. After all, there should not be anything so complicated about getting a few people to walk from the back of a church to the chancel steps and altar rail. Even the humblest cleric should be capable of such directions.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Let notice be served: wedding rehearsals in this Church are in charge of the clergy, and "consultants" are requested to remain away!

Sects and Insects

BY

IRVING P. JOHNSON
Founder and First Editor of The Witness

TIME was when society was shaken to its foundations by religious controversy. Religion was the one vital issue. The great parish church was the outstanding building in the community; the rector was the parson, or the person, to whom the people turned for help and counsel; the service at the high altar was the great event of the week and the anathema of the Church was more dreaded by princes than was the revolt of the people.

Unquestionably men abused the privileges of their high office, and prelates were not always distinguished by humility or spirituality.

Then arose certain men who disputed with these great men as to their credentials, and there was war in the Kingdom of God.

The prophet rose up against the priest and the power of the Church was broken.

The principle of strife and dissension replaced that of confident assertion.

Great sects arose, which agreed neither with the Church, nor with one another.

Calvin and Luther and Zwingle put forth their confessions of faith, and the world rejoiced because the Church was no longer the dominant force that it had been. Not that the world fared any better. With all of its faults, the Church was a lenient landlord and she was ever kindly to the poor.

Her leaders were but men, and when those men who were born to leadership, threw off the mantle of religion, they became even less kindly and more brutal than they were before.

Under the Georges, England was still ruled by men, irreligious men, and the sordid brutality of the times was unrelieved by pious princes or kindly priests.

And after the Georges came the age of Saurian corporations and Simian aristocracy and sordid politicians.

In truth, the world was still ruled by men and the absence of religious domination did not produce more kindly masters nor more contented masses.

Sinful Men

THE sects went their way and soon fell into the habits which they had dethroned. The post-reformation period did not produce kindly pastors or charitable courtesy.

After all, whether the world leaders have been Christians, Turks, atheists, sectarians, or politicians, they have all been men and have in their day illustrated the principle that "man being in honor hath no understanding but is compared to the beasts that perish."

When we say that the Church was to blame or the state was to blame, or the sect was to blame, it isn't so. We are merely assuming an alibi for the real culprit. Man is to blame—selfish, sinful, silly man, who ignores God and deceives himself.

Whether he be priest, preacher, professor, politician, or prince, he is prone to be a tyrant when he finds himself clothed with power.

Having found the guilty man, let us see what has happened. When the Church was a big thing it produced big men. They may not always have been kindly men, but there were kindly men among the host that filled the churches.

It would be hard to find a St. Francis today; it might be worth while to put up with an occasional pompous prelate if we only could produce the other thing as well.

There have always been plenty of honest men and virtuous women and beautiful children in every age, thank God; but there haven't always been big men and there haven't always been great saints. These are worth as long a journey as to the Yellowstone to see.

Small and Petty

IT is almost a truism to say that when the Church ceased to be big, the Christian world began to be little.

Each sect, being a fraction of the whole, attracted to leadership men who were proper fractions.

For a sect is a segment of the whole, and the whole is greater than any of its parts.

But the principle of subdivision went on indefinitely until the sects became smaller and smaller, and men's vision grew pettier and pettier.

The grace of God became confined to a small section of the civilized world, or the truth of God to a small segment of the whole truth; and the

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Church which had been hated, usually by wicked men, because it was big and powerful, now came to be despised, often by decent men, because it was small and petty.

This process of devolution has continued until the spirit of the sect has become the spirit of the insect, and the world is filled with small folks, who buzz and bite and poison; they infuriate large mammals and destroy the charms of a peaceful valley.

Formerly Church leaders went out valiantly to battle with lions. Now one hesitates to assume leadership in either Church or state because these bands of insects buzz around the head of the vulnerable hunter.

A big hunter told me once that he would like to visit the headwaters of the Amazon, but he couldn't put up with the chiggers, for they had invalided him on a previous trip for several years.

Squirrel Guns

THE situation reminds me of an anecdote of Sam Jones: He had gone to hold a revival in a large Canadian city, but the revival lacked pep. He could not account for the failure of the thing to go until he discovered that certain local leaders had spread the information that Sam smoked, and because of this foible in his character, they refused to be charmed by his eloquence. Whereupon, Sam told the following fable at the next revival meeting:

"Once upon a time, as a traveler in the far west approached a certain village, he met several big bears carrying little children off to their dens. He was intensely excited, and when he arrived at the village, was met by the fathers of the children, just returning from a squirrel hunt. Whereupon, he berated them roundly for their callous indifference to the loss of their children. Their reply was that they would like to go and kill the bears, but unfortunately the only weapons which they possessed were squirrel guns, so they must content themselves with shooting squirrels, while the bears continued their depredations."

"These villagers," said Mr. Jones, "are like the leaders in this revival. You have nothing bigger than squirrel guns, so you go out to shoot my peccadiloes, while the children of the city are being carried off to dens of vice."

The political and religious atmosphere today is full of swarms of petty people, whose sole claim to virtue consists in their ability to sting the man who is trying to accomplish something.

Grace of Charity

IT ought to be evident to the smallest mind that one cannot produce character in one's self by destroying it in others. The consciousness of our own sins should cause us to be charitable toward the faults of others, and to be kind and helpful to sinners.

When Christians forget to be kindly they cease to fulfill the law of Christ.

But when people become petty they cease to be kindly.

Malicious assertions about men who are trying to do big things is the order of the day, and it is based upon a failure to grasp the bigness of Christ's gospel, which was not so much concerned with the faults of the sinner as it was with the kindliness of the saint.

The Pharisee who posed as a pious man was lacking in that very thing. The Christian world lacks it today. It lacks the grace of charity and it lacks it because charity can be developed only in a large room and the Christian body is cut up into small compartments.

The sect spirit makes for zeal and destroys charity.

The mosquito is zealous, but most pestiferous.

Talking It Over

BY

W. B. SPOFFORD SR.

USHERED into the office after an impressive wait, I was greeted by the credit manager with a frowning, "What do you want?" The temperature being close to boiling, I was dressed for comfort rather than to impress so he could be excused if he wrote me off. Anyhow I explained to him that The Witness is now operating its own printing plant; that we were in immediate need of paper and that I hoped to get enough outside printing eventually to require considerable quantities and so wanted to get our credit established with his firm.

"Never heard of the paper. Is it incorporated?"

I assured him that it was as the Episcopal Church Publishing Co., an Illinois corporation.

So he wrestled with a Dun and Bradstreet as big as a medium sized safe, thumbed through various pages and then: "Can't find you listed. Your credit can't be very good. Let's see a copy of the paper."

He was interested chiefly in the masthead. "Don't seem to ever heard of any of these people and I've been an Episcopalian all my life."

So I told him that Roscoe Foust had been chaplain at West Point, then dean of the cathedral at Bethlehem and now rector of the Ascension, New York. Dr. Grant, our book editor, I explained, was a professor at Union, and had been dean of Seabury-Western and Bexley Hall prior to that. And so I went on down the list, bearing down particularly when I ran into a bishop among our contributing editors.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

"Funny, never heard of any of 'em, and, as I say, I've been an Episcopalian all my life. One time I was treasurer of six different organizations in my parish and have been a vestryman for many years. Ran the every member canvass too a number of times. We also have a fair every year and I'm chairman. We generally do OK. And of course I am always a delegate to our diocesan convention."

Then I inquired if he was familiar with any of the other Church weeklies, handing him "Parish Helps, 1951-1952" where the Church papers are given a boost on page fourteen. He read the page carefully and then: "Seems to me I have heard of the Churchman but none of these others —and as I say, I've been an Episcopalian all my life. Course I see the Bethlehem Churchman."

I could have told him that it was published but six times a year and was hardly adequate for a churchman of such importance. But maybe that was not necessary for his next question, after turning the pages of Parish Helps, was: "What is this National Council?" No kidding—that is exactly what he asked. So I said: "The sign says 'only twenty minutes parking' so I'd better get going. I'll have the bank write you about our credit. Meanwhile think over that caption on page fourteen of Parish Helps: 'Alert Churchmen Read At Least One Church Paper'."

PRINTING

We solicit printing of every description. Our shop is equipped to do weekly or monthly publications, pamphlets, leaflets, parish bulletins, job work of all kinds.

Quality Work - On Time - At a Saving

Write of your needs and we will send an estimate promptly

The* WITNESS

Tunkhannock Pennsylvania

The Bat That Wouldn't Squeak

BY

PHILIP McNAIRY

Dean of St. Paul's, Buffalo

THERE was once a bat who lived in a large cavern. The cavern was so spacious that he seldom needed to use his built-in radar equipment. As you know, the bat family are completely blind, but God has provided them with a better than average sense of hearing plus a high-pitched squeak or cheep. By cheeping and listening to the reverberation of sound, Mr. Bat can navigate around fine wires and through small openings in complete darkness. His perception of objects he cannot see is uncanny. His skill at night-flying surpasses that of the best trained pilot in the world. His equipment is built in, so that very little can go wrong with it.

The bat in our story, lived in a large chamber where the need for his radar equipment was minimized. He knew the area so well that he sometimes found it unnecessary to squeak in order to find his way around.

One day he was in very poor voice. He got to thinking that squeaking might be necessary for some bats, but it was certainly an unnecessary precaution for such a fine bat as he.

He didn't show up for work all that day. The next morning a searching party was sent out to look for him. His battered form was discovered on the floor of the cave just beneath a stalactite. After a thorough investigation the coroner recorded the following: "Accidental death due to collision with a stalactite while flying to work."

For some reason there's a question in my mind about that verdict. Was it really "accidental death" or was it "suicide?"

There is a close parallel between the "bat that wouldn't squeak" and "the man who wouldn't pray." How often we find men and women, within the church, who do not, or will not pray. Such persons fail to realize that prayer is a form of radar, for it guides men around the barriers which are not seen by the naked eye: grief, mental suffering, heart-felt sorrow, the "suck and swish of silly sins."

God has revealed his purposes and given guidance to praying men in the past. He freely does so today.

And man who, like the bat in the parable, is too proud to use his radar for guidance, will ram his head into some unperceived barrier. The resulting concussion may be the spiritual death of him; or might we more properly call the collision "spiritual suicide."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT, Book Editor

The Church of Rome: A Dissuasive. By Richard Hanson and Reginald Fuller. London: S.C.M. Press. 8s 6d.

A "Dissuasive" is a book designed to show that there is no advantage in an Anglican going to Rome. He has much to lose, nothing to gain. Such books were common in the seventeenth century, but have not been common of late. There is certainly need for such books, in order to meet the steady propaganda of the Roman Church, which thinks, apparently, that it does God service when it leaves off the attempt to convert heathen and secularists and goes after Episcopalians—especially those who are fairly prominent and "in the papers." The news is certainly "in the papers" if they win one!

This is the best book of its kind and scope since Bishop Gore's "Roman Catholic Claims," now a generation old. The authors do not minimize the real virtues of Rome, and recognize what Rome has to give in a reunited Church. But the fatal weakness of present-day Rome, with its power-complex, its association with totalitarianism, its espionage and "thought control," its refusal to take biblical research seriously, its strange standards of historical truth (e.g. the claim that the dogmas of the Immaculate Conception and the Bodily Assumption of the B.V.M. rest upon sound tradition) — all these defects are brought out into the clear light of day.

The trouble with many of us is that we substitute feelings and individual preferences for thought-out reasons; we cannot stand up and say clearly why we do not submit to Rome. Moreover the anti-intellectual slump we are in at present, in all the Churches, encourages the lazy attitude. And above all we are such everlasting "good fellows," and so warmly dislike to say anything anyone would disagree with — commercial ethics have triumphed in every quarter of American life!—that we just don't want to "criticize our Roman Catholic neighbors." The consequence is that Rome walks off with the show. For Rome is not afraid to state her reasons, in words that are unmistakable.

Here is a book that ought to be widely read in the U.S.A. as well as in England. It will provide material for discussion ten-fold more potent than the wearisome "separation of Church and state" talk, or the perennial school question—in which we simply play into the hands of secularists most of the time.

His Servants the Prophets. By Eric William Heaton. Macmillan. $1.50.

This thin volume (117 pages plus notes and index) is most suggestive as an aid to an understanding of the prophets. The promise given in the opening chapter is very high, for the author calls for a reinstitution of the prophetic spirit which will bring about within the Church "a rethinking of its doctrine, a rediscovery of terms and modes of action, a re-examination of its liturgical tradition and a ruthless eradication from its practice of all that is merely superstitious."

Unfortunately the volume is too brief to fulfill such high expectations. In the chapters that follow the prophetic teaching is well placed in the perspective of its own age and situation, but little attempt is made to apply the same sort of prophetic vision to the Church of our day. One might have wished that the Dean of Gonville and Caius College of Cambridge had used a little more space in order to bring the light of the prophetic vision to bear upon the Church of our day. —Sydney Temple

Free to Grow. By Blanche Carrier. Harper. $3.00.

This is a book with a program: "New ways to a revitalized Church; Christian commitment and growth through group therapy, teaching, and fellowship." But it is a religion that has lost its sparkle, and is the same old dull plan of self-improvement, therapy, and mutual benefit through fellowship. One wonders how much of the problem of this type of liberal Protestantism has been produced by the Protestant religion itself, with its subjectivism, its man-centeredness, its concern with sin and conversion rather than with the worship of God, and the whole substitution of theological theory for a vital religious life. The problem is surely not going to be solved by "taking a leaf" from Catholic practices of devotion, but only by a total revamping of the "Protestant" outlook.

The Four Councils. By J. W. C. Wand. Morehouse. $1.05.

The Bishop of London can explain an ancient theological argument in terms which will persuade the laity of that argument's relevance to ordinary Christian living.

The great Councils fought to maintain both the reality of Christ's divinity and the reality of his humanity, and to determine the exact difference between "person" and "nature." Dr. Wand is, of course, fully aware that all the problems of Christology have not yet been met satisfactorily.

The American churchman will be pleased to note how carefully the Canons of the Episcopal Church were drawn to conform to the ancient models adopted by the great Councils, but Americans in general will be interested to study the grounds for ecclesiastical Primacy set up by Chalcedon. ". . . he did not find it easy to make those concessions without which public business cannot be transacted at all."

"The world-wide Church . . . gave a favorable verdict, not because they were ordered but because, in its considered opinion, they were true."—Edward N. West

Good-bye to My Generation. By Bishop Walter Carey. Morehouse. $3.15.

A book "waging war against the stiffness, academic exclusiveness, aloofness of the average English church," this small volume is full of the good bishop's prowess at rugby and boxing. His work as chaplain on the "Warspite," as Bishop of Bloemfontein, and as chaplain of Eastbourne College, leads on to his convictions. The use of the Eucharist and the Church Year would complete the church life of non-conformists; there must be abbreviated forms of matins and evensong for seamen; "education is character, knowledge, independent thinking; in that order." The book is interesting, disjointed, and far too expensive.—H. M. G.

Training in Prayer, Guidance in the Art of Prayer for People of Different Ages and Conditions. Ed. by Canon Lindsay Dewar. Morehouse. $1.50.

The late Archbishop Temple's preface is absolutely accurate, "There is no more urgent need than that which this book sets out to meet . . . many a parish priest realizes this . . . this little book will not give him all he needs . . . but he will find here what he needs most, and the way to learn more."

This is the wisest, most practical book possible to put into the hands of parents, teachers and others honestly interested in learning how to pray and how to teach others to do so; for the clergy and for seminarians it should be required reading. One wishes that an American edition might be issued in which the Prayer Book references applied specifically to our own book, and in which a number of modern British colloquialisms were translated into their American equivalents.—Edward N. West

Reviews by Dr. Grant unless otherwise signed

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

TREASURER DILL REPORTS

★ Russell E. Dill, treasurer of the National Council, in a recent statement points out that "the financing of the general Church program requires a steady flow of funds to meet monthly expenditures on a world-wide basis. The monthly outgo is approximately one-twelfth of the annual budget—the income should match this—one-twelfth each month. During the first five months of 1951 the National Council was required to provide approximately five-twelfths or 41.66% of the budget for the year. During the same time only 36.27% of expectations was received."

SUMMER PROJECT IN MICHIGAN

★ Twenty young men and women, mostly from colleges and seminaries are now at work in the diocese of Michigan for the summer. Their work varies from court assignments to conducting Bible schools and services in small parishes and missions that are either without a minister or on vacation. A conference for their training was held at Parishfield, diocesan conference center, led by Bishop Emrich, Canon C. D. Braidwood of Lapeer, who is in charge of the group, and the directors of Parishfield, the Rev. Francis O. Ayres and the Rev. Gibson Winter.

EPISCOPAL CHAPLAIN AT RUTGERS

★ The Rev. Clarence W. Sickles of Fairlawn, N. J., will become curate at Christ Church, New Brunswick, N. J. on Sept. 1, with his chief task that of ministering to the 400 students of the Episcopal Church who attend Rutgers University. The Rev. Walter H. Stowe, rector of the parish, told his congregation in making the announcement that this was the first time a curate at Christ Church has served in a dual capacity. Half of Sickles' salary, house rent and expense allowance is being paid by the diocese through the diocesan foundation and the Proctor Foundation of Princeton which is chartered to undertake work with students of the Episcopal Church at colleges outside Princeton. A survey is now being made as to the possibility of establishing work at the Camden campus of Rutgers as well as the work at New Brunswick.

BISHOP PARDUE HOLDS LONDON MISSION

★ Bishop Pardue of Pittsburgh is now in London where he is conducting a mission at St. Martin-in-the-Field. It opened on July 8 and continues through the 13th. He is preaching twice daily and in addition is speaking each day over the British broadcasting system. In addition to these services Bishop Pardue preached July 15 at Westminster Abbey and at Holy Trinity Cathedral, Paris, on the 22nd.

ARCHBISHOP OPENS FESTIVAL

★ One of Britain's most notable achievements has been the building of "a way of life in which Christian ideas are a vital part of the framework of our society," Geoffrey Francis Fisher, Archbishop of Canterbury, declared at a service in St. Paul's Cathedral which marked the opening of the Festival of Britain which will continue until September 30. The service was attended by King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

"A stock-taking such as the festival presents is valuable," he said. "Its only weakness could come from a spiritual emptiness through concentrating on material things. To do this would be to deny the past and frustrate

Scriptural—Artistically designed
WORSHIP FOLDERS
Large assortment—Self Selection
Lithographed—Special Days—General use
Ecclesiastical Art Press
Dept. W Louisville 12, Ky.
FREE CATALOG

CHURCH FURNISHINGS
Distinctive, hand-carved pulpits, altars, lecterns, baptismal fonts, tables, seats—in authentic period designs.
Beautiful altar sets and communion services.
Stained glass memorial windows made to order.
Handsomely engrossed Books of Remembrance with repositories, resolutions, rolls of honor.
Send for our free catalog.
WHITTEMORE ASSOCIATES, INC.
16 ASHBURTON PLACE, BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS

Here's to LONGER LIFE
. . . may yours be healthy and happy!

Longer life is yours today—thanks to modern science. And life expectancy is increasing by leaps and bounds. But longer life means little unless you have good health to enjoy it.

As people grow older, proper nutrition becomes increasingly important. Thus a supplementary food such as Ovaltine is proving of very great value, because it supplies generous amounts of the needed food elements that are so essential in the diets of older people.

Get your copy of a new 24-page illustrated booklet filled with tips on how to get more out of life in the later years.

MAIL COUPON TODAY
Get your copy of
FREE Booklet
"Longer Life . . . and Better Health To Enjoy It!"

OVALTINE-L3
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 1, Ill.
Please send me a FREE copy of your illustrated booklet, "Longer Life . . . and Better Health To Enjoy It!"
Name.....
Address.....
City..... State.....

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

the future. Our past is bound up in our Christian beliefs. Our future must maintain those beliefs, for it is clear that civilizations which reject them become vain, violent or vile. As a nation we have much to be proud of, but we have achieved it with the help of God. That is the message and the challenge of the festival."

Following the service, King George was escorted to the steps of the cathedral where he formally opened the Festival.

GERMAN CHURCH SENDS THANKS

★ Appreciation for the aid given by Churches in the U.S. has been received from the Evangelical Church in Germany. Addressing the Episcopal Church specifically the letter said: "You have during the past years continuously entrusted us with your gifts and donations for those in need among us and have cooperated with us in a united effort to overcome distress and are still granting us your helping hand. Please express to all our sincerest thanks and gratitude."

COMMITTEE ON NARCOTICS IS APPOINTED

★ Bishop Donegan of New York has appointed a committee of clergy and laity to study how the Church can help in dealing with the narcotic problem.

NEW RECTORY FOR ST. ALBAN'S

★ A fund of $50,000 is now being raised by St. Alban's, Washington, D. C., to build a new rectory as a memorial to the late rector, the Rev. Charles T. Warner. The present rector is the Rev. Felix Kloman.

LEON McCAULEY JOINS STAFF

★ Leon McCauley, head of the religious book department of Oxford University Press, has been named as manager of the publications division of the department of education of the National Council. He will be located at the newly acquired publications building in Greenwich, Conn., where all books and study courses of the department will be published. He will also be responsible for building up sales distribution of publications. He starts the new job on Sept. 1.

I Want to Contact New WRITERS

who are interested in cashing checks of $1 to $100, offered every day. The easiest way to write for pay. No previous experience necessary. Send for FREE DETAILS. No obligation.

SAUNDERS M. CUMMINGS
468 Indep. Bldg., Colorado Springs, Colo.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS
EST. 1877

CHURCH BULLETINS
Every progressive church should use Winters' De Luxe Bulletin Board. Dignified, effective, and economical. Over 7,000 IN USE. Increase attendance, interest and collections. Write today for Illus. Catalog H. E. Winters Specialty Company, Davenport, Iowa.

SELL EXCLUSIVE Sunshine CHRISTMAS CARDS

EARN ALL THE MONEY YOU NEED
Among friends, neighbors. Smart Sunshine Boxes and Imprints sell on sight. America's leading 21 folder Christmas Ass't. Many DECORATIVE LINED ENVELOPES $1. 100% Profit. $1,000 Cash Sales Contest. Special Money-Making Plan for Organizations. SAMPLES ON APPROVAL.
SUNSHINE ART STUDIOS, Dpt. LG8
115 Fulton St., New York 38, N. Y.

MAKE EASY MONEY
Sell Religious Christmas Cards
Cash in on big demand for Religious Christmas Cards. 21-Card best-selling Midwest Christmas assortment sells for $1—pays you up to 50c. Each card with Scripture quotation and appropriate illustration. Samples on approval start you selling immediately . . . without experience. Also get FREE Samples of Name-Imprint Christmas Cards, 50 for $1.25 and up.
CASH for Church & Club Groups
Get your club group started earning immediately. Show big line of Christmas and Everyday Cards including "Secret Pal" Assortment, Stationery, Novelties. It's fun—and an easy way to raise extra money. Special Party Plan. Write for details and samples today.
Get FREE Samples
MIDWEST CARD CO., Dept. L54
1113 WASHINGTON AVENUE, ST. LOUIS 1, MISSOURI
NAME _____
ADDRESS _____
CITY _____ STATE _____

Free Yourself FROM Tobacco Habit
If you want to stop smoking and just can't, try world-famous NO-TO-BAC Lozenges. See how quickly NO-TO-BAC may help stop your craving for tobacco. Rush $1 to NO-TO-BAC, for 7 days supply. (For heavy smokers—16 days' supply—$2.) Satisfaction guaranteed or money back. Write:
NO-TO-BAC CO.
DEPT. LG HEWLETT, NEW YORK

Here It Is! The Easiest MONEY You Ever Made!
Sell Christmas Cards
Make easy spare time CASH! Call on friends, take orders for Christmas Cards. You'll be amazed at your earnings! 21-card $1 Deluxe Christmas Assortment, 35 others, pay up to 100% profit. Personal Christmas Cards with name, 50 for $1.25. Personalized Stationery, Napkins, Matches and many other fast selling money-makers. Plan for organizations, too. Write for Assortments on Approval and Personal Samples FREE!
FRIENDSHIP STUDIOS, INC.
613 Adams St., Elmira, N. Y.
Please send the Friendship Earning Plan, Assortments on Approval, Personal Samples FREE.
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ Zone ___ State _____

"THE TASK WHICH THE SECULARIZATION OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS PRESENTS TO THE CHURCH"

by the Reverend James A. Pike, LL.B., B.D., J.S.D., Chaplain and Head of the Department of Religion, Columbia University.

A reprint of Dr. Pike's Alumni Day address at The General Theological Seminary in May 1951.
Copies of this address may be ordered, at 25c each, from

The Recording Secretary
Associate Alumni
175 Ninth Avenue
New York 11, New York

An early order is suggested, since only a limited number of copies is available

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

PEOPLE OF THE CHURCH

CLERGY CHANGES:

J. J. M. HARTE, formerly rector of All Saints, Austin, Texas, is now ass't at St. Paul's Cathedral, Erie, Pa.

R. M. CARMICHAEL, director of education of the Council of Churches, Buffalo, N. Y., becomes canon of St. John's Cathedral, Wilmington, Del., Sept. 8, where he will be in charge of education.

J. M. BROWNLEE, formerly vicar of St. Andrew's, Darien, Ga., is now vicar of St. Paul's, Altus, Okla.

OSMOND H. BROWN JR., recently ordained deacon, is now vicar of St. Mary's, Augusta, Ga., and St. Augustine's, Aiken, S. C.

JOHN PORTER, formerly in charge of St. Gabriel's, East Detroit, is now in charge of St. Peter's, Monroe, Conn.

HARVEY MARKLE, formerly ass't at St. John's, Detroit, is now rector of St. Andrew's, Detroit.

GEORGE W. BEALE, rector of Trinity, Rocky Mount, Va., becomes rector of St. John's, Bedford, Va., Sept. 1.

JOHN R. GREEN has resigned as rector of the Advent, Lakewood, O., to study psychiatry and serve as a chaplain in a hospital in Washington, D. C.

EDWARD L. CARTER, formerly ass't at St. John's, Williamstown, Mass., is now chaplain to Episcopal students at the University of Cal.

ROBERT L. DARWALL, formerly vicar of St. Barnabas, Arroyo, Cal., is now ass't at St. Alban's, Los Angeles.

ELVIN W. SMITH, formerly vicar of St. Simon's, San Fernando, Cal., is now rector of St. Peter's, Los Angeles.

CHARLES E. FRITZ, formerly rector of Trinity, Menlo Park, Cal., is now in charge of Christ Church, Los Angeles.

JOHN F. MANGRUM, former rector of St. James, Albion, Mich., is now rector of St. Peter's, Detroit, and supt. of St. Peter's boys home.

W. C. HEWITT, formerly in charge of St. John's, Sandusky, O., is now a chaplain in the Canadian air force.

S. R. HAMMOND, formerly vicar of St. Luke's, Los Angeles, is now in charge of Our Saviour, Mill Valley, Cal.

JOHN W. DUDDINGTON, formerly vicar of St. Mark's, Solvang, Cal., is now rector of Holy Trinity, Manila, P. I., and prof. at St. Andrew's.

DEATHS:

JULIA A. CLARK, deaconess, 62, died in Pasadena, Cal., July 2. She went to China in 1914 and worked there for over 35 years. In Feb., 1938, with Witness correspondent, John Foster, and two others, she visited the headquarters of the red army in Shansi to present clothes and medical supplies. Their experiences were featured in a series of articles that ran in this paper at the time.

JOHN MOORE WALKER, 63, bishop of Atlanta, died July 16. He was a leader who contended that the Church should take leadership on social and political issues.

BERT F. A. EDE, 59, ass't at All Saints, Pontiac, Mich., died July 4.

WOODWARD LANPHEAR, 65, on the mission staff in China since 1917, died July 4 in Shanghai.

JOHN D. SKILTON, 84, retired rector of St. Peter's, Cheshire, Conn., died July 9.

WILLIAM H. TALLMADGE, 77, formerly rector at Columbus, Nebr., died July 1 at his home in Flandreau, S. D.

The Difference Must Be Made Up

It costs the Seminaries just about $1,400.00 per year per student to train men for the ministry.

Last year the students were able, on the average, to pay about $460.00 of this cost.

That leaves a much bigger gap than endowments are able to bridge. The schools listed below are immediately dependent, therefore, upon parish offerings and individual gifts.

* * * *

Berkeley Divinity School, New Haven, Conn.; Bexley Hall, Gambier, Ohio; Church Divinity School of the Pacific, Berkeley, Calif.; Divinity School of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia; Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass.; The General Theological Seminary, New York City; Nashotah House, Nashotah, Wis.; School of Theology of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.; Seabury-Western Theological Seminary, Evanston, Ill.; Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

NURSES WANTED

General staff nurses and one nurse anesthetist eligible for registration in Colorado, a 144 bed Church Hospital located in Southern Colorado, near mountain resorts. Forty-four hour work week, liberal personnel policies, including Social Security. For information—write Director of Nurses, Parkview Episcopal Hospital, Pueblo, Colorado.

CLERGY RETREAT, Adelynrood, So. Byfield, Mass., Sept. 4-7, auspices Brotherhood of the Way of the Cross. Conductor, Rev. Robert C. Smith, S.S.J.E. Charges $8.40. Apply to Rev. Sherrill B. Smith, Superior, F.V.C., Swansea, Mass.

FINEST PURE IRISH LINEN

For all Church uses

Just received from Belfast a new fine lightweight linen for Surplices in 39"—1.65 per yard. Also qualities and width for Albs, Fair Linen, etc., Patterns and Supplies, Books.

Samples Free

MARY FAWCETT COMPANY

BOX 386 CHILLICOTHE, MO.

(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

Sudbury CHURCH WORSHIP AIDS

Have your dealer show you the wide variety of well made church appointments we produce

FOR COMPLETE CATALOG SEND TO

SUDBURY BRASS GOODS CO.

55 SUDBURY STREET, BOSTON 14, MASS.

VESTMENTS

Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves
Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries
Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars
Custom Tailoring for Clergymen

1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951

COX SONS & VINING, Inc.

131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

CASSOCKS

Surplices — Choir Vestments
Eucharistic Vestments
Altar Hangings and Linens

Prices Sent on Request

J. M. HALL, INC.

14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.

Tel. CH 4-3306

ST. JAMES LESSONS

A nine course series of instruction for Episcopal Church Schools including illustrated work books—150-250 pages (60c each) and teachers' manuals I, II, III 40c each, IV through IX 60c each).

No Samples - Payment with orders

St. James Lessons, Inc.

865 Madison Ave., Dpt. 5, N. Y. 21, N. Y.

PEOPLE

ORDINATIONS:

G. C. ESTES was ordained deacon by Bishop Quin at All Saints, Austin, Texas, July 3. He is in charge of Trinity, Jasper, Tex. Also ordained deacons: W. W. MAHAN, in charge of St. George's, Austin; DAVID B. REED, missionary in Panama; M. P. RIKER, in charge of St. Michael's, LaMarque, Tex.

HAYWARD B. CREWE was ordained deacon June 29 by Bishop Emrich and is in charge of St. Timothy's, Jackson, Mich.

WILLIAM S. LOGAN was ordained deacon June 30 by Bishop Emrich at St. Joseph's, Detroit, and is now ass't at Christ Church, Detroit.

NORMAN ELLIOTT was ordained deacon June 30 at St. Andrew's, Detroit, by Bishop Hubbard and is now in charge of St. Mark's, Nenana, Alaska.

GEORGE M. CRUM JR., was ordained deacon June 28 by Bishop Carruthers at the Redeemer, Orangeburg, S. C. He is in charge of the Holy Communion, Allendale, and St. Alban's, Blackville, S. C.

THOMAS L. CRUM was ordained deacon July 3 by Bishop Carruthers at St. Philip's, Charleston, S. C. He is in charge of St. Paul's, Meggett, and Christ Church, Adams Run, S. C.

ELMER A. KEISER was ordained priest June 8 by Bishop Heistand at St. Luke's, Mount Joy, Pa., where he is now rector.

DONALE M. WHITESEL was ordained deacon June 11 by Bishop Heistand at St. Luke's, Altoona, Pa., and is now vicar of St. Mark's, Northumberland and All Saints, Selinsgrove, Pa.

MARK E. WALDO was ordained deacon June 24 by Bishop Barnwell at St. John's, Savannah, Ga., and is now vicar of St. Andrew's, Douglas, and St. Matthew's, Fitzgerald, Ga.

C. M. HENDERSON JR. was ordained priest June 29 by Bishop Stoney at St. James, Clovis, N. M. and is now in charge of St. Mark's, Pecos, and St. Stephen's, Ft. Stocton, Tex.

PAUL A. CLARK was ordained deacon by Bishop Roberts on June 29 at Wakpala, S. D., and has been assigned as ass't at the Pine Ridge Mission. Made deacons at the same service were RAYMOND R. TAYLOR, in charge of St. Philip's, Dupree and ass't at the Cheyenne River Mission and ROBERT B. LUCENT, ass't at the Rosebud Mission.

Make Money WITH EXCITING New CHRISTMAS CARDS

Mail COUPON FOR Samples TODAY!

Show friends, others, lovely LOW-PRICED Name-Imprinted Personal Cards—shipped direct to customer —and big Album DeLuxe, higher-priced Personals. PLUS 40 Christmas and Everyday Asst's. including sensational 21-card "Feature" Assortment. Sells $1—your profit up to 50c. Religious, Humorous, Etchtone, Gift Wrappings. New Red Velvet Ass't., Currier & Ives Ass't., giant value Ribbon Assortment. (80 yards for $1). Stationery, others. Fast selling Gift Items. FREE Samples Personal Cards: "Feature" Assortment on approval. Rush Coupon TODAY! WALLACE BROWN, INC. 225 Fifth Ave., Dept. A54, New York 10, N.Y.

CASH IN ON YOUR SPARE TIME

SELL WONDERFUL REGAL CHRISTMAS CARDS NOT OBTAINABLE ELSEWHERE

Here's the big money maker. Marvelous Christmas cards exclusive with our agents. 25 sell for 1.00. Also 50 for 1.25. Name handsomely imprinted. 150 other boxes with profits to 100%. Bonus. Free samples. Kit on approval.

REGAL GREETING CARD CO.
Dept. LG-7, Ferndale, Michigan

MEMORIAL WINDOWS

DESIGNERS AND MANUFACTURERS STAINED & LEADED ART GLASS

Lloyd's Stained Glass Studios

215 MORELAND AVE. N.E.

PHONE AL. 7372 ATLANTA GA

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS

Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY

Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS

Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.

SANGAMON MILLS

Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

Exquisite
IRISH LINENS
BY THE YARD

From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States, I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values; unsurpassed quality, imported direct from Ireland. Also transfer patterns, linen tape, and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 3 inches at 75c, 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.00.

MARY MOORE

Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

THE BISHOP WHITE
PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY

Founded by Bishop White 1833

Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.

PEW SIZE

The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)

Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.

Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

A. F. GILMAN
Layman of Chicago

Chad Walsh in his article "Open vs. Closed Communion" (July 12) is trying to ride a horse in two directions and getting nowhere. What we want to know is what does God say about it. There is no use turning to the Prayer Book which under the bungling of our clergy has become hash and subject to change without notice. The only place I know to look is what Christ said about it and he seems very clear to me: "whenever two or three are gathered together in my name there am I in the midst of them" and again "come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden." He didn't specify Protestant Episcopalians or Catholics and if there is anything to the idea that Christ is nearer to man in the sacrament than any other place why shouldn't all men be privileged to come near to him there?

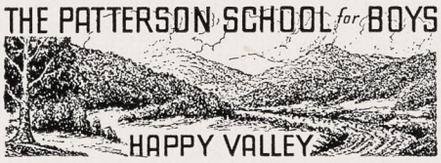
In this connection I am reminded of an old clergyman who came from New York to preach at St. Paul's, Minneapolis. He was a true evangelical if there was one. He took his soapbox to a busy corner one evening each week to preach and sing hymns. In celebrating holy communion he said something like this: "Holy Mother, the Church, never refuses her blessing to a child of God."

It seems to me that it is time the Church paid attention to another saying of Christ's: "Judge not." That is a job God has reserved for himself.

WALTER D. SPANGLER
Lutheran Pastor of Park Ridge, Ill.

In your issue of The Witness of June 7, 1951 on page 7 in your Editorial "Marvelous Doctrine" in the first paragraph you include the Lutheran Churches among those dating the last half of the Church Year as "after Whitsunday."

I have been a pastor of the United Lutheran Church for more than 36 years and we always have called the Sundays after the Festival of the Holy Trinity "Sundays after Trinity" up until the end of the Church Year, to the Sunday just before the First Sunday in Advent.



CENTRAL SCHOOL OF RELIGION
(A Correspondence Institution)
6030 Lowell Ave., Indianapolis 19, Ind.
College level courses since 1896. Bible, Theology of O. & N. T., Pastoral Psychology, Church Publicity, Religious Education, etc. Complete interrupted studies at home. Excellent faculty. Reasonable. Write to Secretary for further information NOW.

ST. LUKE'S SCHOOL
Episcopal Day School under the direction of Trinity Parish
Nursery, Kindergarten, Elementary Grades. After School play groups. Coeducational. Moderate tuition. For catalogue and further information communicate with
THE REV. PAUL C. WEED, JR.
Headmaster
Hudson & Grove Sts., NEW YORK 14, N. Y.
Phone WAtkins 4-5960

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL
Coeducational Episcopal Day School
Prepares for leading secondary schools. Sound academic training. Kindergarten thru 8th grade. French and Latin emphasized. Complete testing program. Est. 1894. Music, drama, arts & crafts, sports. Bus service. Hot lunch. Tel: AL 4-2000
E. ALLISON GRANT, Headmaster
88 E. Fourth Ave. (11th St.), N. Y. 3

Shattuck School
FOUNDED 1858
Shattuck integrates all parts of its program: religious, academic, military and social to give high school age boys an environment in which to grow "in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man." Summer School-Camp.
Catalogue
REV. SIDNEY W. GOLDSMITH, JR.
RECTOR AND HEADMASTER
Box W, Shumway Hall
SHATTUCK SCHOOL FARIBAULT, MINN.

THE PATTERSON SCHOOL for BOYS

Episcopal School in Blue Ridge Mountains of Western No. Carolina. Accredited. Grades 6-12. Gymnasium, sports, 42nd year. 1300-acre estate. Board and tuition, moderate.
GEORGE F. WIESE, Supt.
COLLEGE Legerwood, N. C. HEALTH
PREPARATORY EDUCATION
CHARACTER BUILDING

SCHOOLS

FORK UNION MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth New Hampshire

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-help system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.SC., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Schools of the Church

BARD COLLEGE
Formerly St. Stephen's
A Coeducational College of Liberal Arts and Sciences
FOUNDED 1860
For catalogue and further information write to The Director of Admissions, Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, New York.

DANIEL BAKER COLLEGE
BROWNWOOD, TEXAS
Established 1889. Operated under the auspices of the Diocese of Dallas. Co-educational senior college offering B.A. and B.S. degrees. Special opportunities in teacher training, music education, business administration. The only available undergraduate course in the Episcopal Church in Church Work Training. Member: Association of Texas Colleges.
REV'D W. A. CROSS, M.A., President
REV'D L. A. HASELMAYER, Ph.D., Dean

SAINT PAUL'S POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE
LAWRENCEVILLE, VIRGINIA
Approved by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. B.S. Degree with major in Trade and Industrial Education, B.S. Degree in Home Economics Education, B.S. Degree with major in Elementary Education, B.S. Degree in Secondary Education.
EARL H. McCLENNEY, President

VOORHEES SCHOOL & JR. COLLEGE
DENMARK, S. C.
Co-educational. Accredited by State Dept. of Education of S. C. and the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges. Under the two Dioceses of S. C. and The American Church Institute for Negroes. Expenses reasonable. Limited scholarship aid for worthy students. Apply:
CECIL D. HALLIBURTON, President

Okolona College
Okolona, Mississippi
Co-educational, Private, American Church Institute for Negroes (Protestant Episcopal Church) Established 1902
High School and Junior College - Trades and Industries - Music
For information write: W. MILAN DAVIS President
Today's Training for Tomorrow's Opportunities

St. Augustine's College
RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA
1867 — 1951
Accredited Four-Year College for Negro Youth. Co-educational. Music, Pre-Medical, Health and Physical Education, High School Teacher Training, Business, Pre-Social Work, Nursing Education in co-operation with St. Agnes Hospital.
HAROLD L. TRIGG, President

SAINT HELEN'S HALL
Portland 1, Oregon
Historic Pacific Northwest Episcopal resident and day school. Founded in 1869. Co-educational pre-school. Boys admitted to Lower School through grade III. Upper School girls only.
Write for catalog.
The RT. REV. BENJAMIN DAGWELL, D.D.
President, Board of Trustees
JANE ALLEN SAXTON,
HEADMISTRESS

The Cathedral Schools
National Cathedral School for Girls
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding department, grades 7-12
KATHARINE LEE, Principal
St. Albans
The National Cathedral School for Boys
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding Department, grades 8-12
CHARLES MARTIN, Headmaster
Address:
Mt. St. Alban, Washington 16, D. C.

St. John Baptist School
FOR GIRLS
Offers College Preparatory and General courses. Music, art, outdoor sports, and a happy home life, with character building extra-curricular activities for resident and day students, under the care of the Sisters of St. John Baptist. In the country near Morristown, New Jersey. Accredited.
For catalog address Box 556
The Sister Superior, Mendham, New Jersey

St. John's MILITARY SCHOOL
Salina, Kansas
Since 1887 St. John's has been perpetuating the cultural tradition of the Church by stressing sound scholarship in Christian atmosphere. Grades 3 through 12. Fully accredited.
COL. R. L. CLEM, Rector

ST. MARY'S HALL
SECONDARY BOARDING SCHOOL
Faribault, Minnesota
Close relationship of students and faculty in residence allows for a maximum of spiritual, academic, and social growth. Preparation for leading colleges. An extensive sports program, including riding.
PHYLLIS M. NEWMAN, M.A.
Founded 1866 Headmistress

IOLANI SCHOOL
Episcopal Church School for Boys
HONOLULU 17, HAWAII
A college preparatory church school for boys. Kindergarten through twelfth grade. Established 1862. Day tuition $225 to $275. Boarding $665 - $775. Summer session. Accredited.
REV. CHARLES A. PARMITER, JR. M.A., S.T.B., Rector

The MERRICOURT SCHOOL
(Episcopal)
A country boarding school for 40 boys & girls. Grades 1-8 (pre-preparatory). Home-like environment. Sports, extra-curricula program. 26th year. 8 weeks summer camp. For information: Visit, write, or phone 3-3209.
THE REV. M. W. WHITFORD, Hdm.
BERLIN, CONN.

ST. LUKE'S HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING
New York City
Offers a 3 year course in nursing to high school and college graduates. College graduates may be admitted with 9 months advanced credit allowance. For further information write to The Director of Nursing, St. Luke's Hospital, 421 West 113th St., New York 25, N. Y.

HARVARD SCHOOL
Diocesan School for Boys. 52nd Year. Fall term opens September 11, 1951. Grades seven through twelve. Fully Accredited. R.O.T.C. unit. For all information apply to
THE REV. W. S. CHALMERS
Headmaster
3700 Coldwater Canyon Rd.
NORTH HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

Cathedral School of St. Mary
An accredited Episcopal school for girls. Suburban New York City. Day-nursery to college. Boarding—fifth grade to college. Strong college preparatory course. Music, Dramatics, Art. Excellent sports program. Catalog on request.
MARION REID MARCH
Box W, Garden City, Long Island, N. Y.

ST. STEPHEN'S SCHOOL FOR BOYS
ALEXANDRIA, VA.
Grades 3 thru 12 (Day School). College Preparatory. Under the Church School System of the Diocese of Virginia.
Address
THE REV. EDWARD E. TATE,
Headmaster
2405 Russell Rd. ALEXANDRIA, VA.

ST. MARY'S HALL on the Delaware.
Episcopal boarding and day school for girls 8-18. Founded 1837. Thorough college preparation. Fully accredited. Separate lower school. College preparatory and general courses. Music, Art, Clubs, Sports, Dramatics. Near New York and Philadelphia. Catalogue.
FLORENCE LUKENS NEWBOLD
Headmistress
Burlington, New Jersey

DeVEAUX SCHOOL
Niagara Falls, New York
FOUNDED 1852
The Church School in the Diocese of Western New York. College preparatory for boys. Representative form of student government. Small classes. Reasonable charges. Grades 7 through 12.
For information address The Headmaster.

The Church Home and Hospital
SCHOOL OF NURSING
Baltimore 31, Maryland
A three year course of nursing. Classes enter August and September. Scholarships available to well qualified high school graduates.
Apply to Director of Nursing

ST. AGNES SCHOOL
An Episcopal Country Day and Boarding School for Girls
Excellent College Preparatory record. Special courses arranged for girls not contemplating college. Day pupils range from Kindergarten to College Entrance. Boarders from Grade 8 to College Entrance.
MISS BLANCHE PITTMAN, Principal
Albany New York

HOWE MILITARY SCHOOL
Thorough Academic Training in a Spiritual Environment. R.O.T.C. Accredited college preparatory, business courses. Junior School. Small classes. Every boy participates in sports. Balanced program. Episcopal. Established 1884. Summer Camp, boys grammar school age. Catalogue.
COL. B. B. BOUTON
13 Academy Place, Howe, Indiana

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE

Witness

10¢ A COPY

August 9, 1951

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL

Builds Half Million Dollar Plant

AN INVITATION TO ROMAN CATHOLICS

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 8 (and 9 Holy Days ecept Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 7:45, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers – 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. – 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital – 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m. Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a.m. Holy Communion
11 a.m. Morning Service and Sermon
Weekdays: Holy Communion Tuesdays at 12:10 p.m.; Wednesdays at 8 a.m.; Thursdays at 10:30 a.m.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer – 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High).
Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon.
Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D., Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 – 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m.
Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. William W. Lumpkin, Rector;
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacCall, 3rd, Rector
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 27

The WITNESS

FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH

AUGUST 9, 1951

PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Flood Catastrophe Described By Eye-Witnesses

Church Leaders Play Important Roles In Caring For Refugees

BY

W. B. SPOFFORD JR.

Staff Member of Town-Country Church Institute

★ Churchmen in the Kaw and Missouri River valleys, along with thousands of residents of 'bottom-lands' in eastern Kansas and Missouri, gave thought to the words of the 93rd psalm this past month: "The floods are risen, O Lord, the floods have lift up their voice; the floods lift up their waves. The waves of the sea are mighty, and rage horribly; but yet the Lord, who dwelleth on high, is mightier."

Following thirty days of penetrating and practically ceaseless down-pour, tributary creeks and minor rivers grew into forty-foot, crested rivers which spread over land and became the costliest flood in United States history.

There is never a complete picture of such a catastrophe. Today, some one week after the recession of the waters, highways are still blocked and communication with hard-hit towns in Kansas, such as Lawrence and Manhattan, is tenuous. Word trickling through from the west has it that the Rev. C. R. Davies, rector of St. Paul's, Manhattan, had to evacuate his family from the down-town rectory early in the morning, while the Kaw swept up, and through, both the rectory and the church. Mr. Davies played a leading part in relief and rehabilitation work in this hard-struck city, carrying on his pastoral work from a substitute rectory and the bow of a boat.

In Topeka, Dean John Day, and the members of Grace Cathedral, were active, day and night, in helping to evacuate some of the 10,000 refugees and in providing them with shelter, food and clothing.

In Kansas City, Kansas, where the Kaw surged through the Armourdale and Argentine industrial districts, members of St. Paul's, under the leadership of rector, George L. Evans, provided food for approximately 1,000 refugees, lodged in the municipal building. The scout troop of the parish served as messengers for the disaster relief headquarters, while individual members of the parish, who possessed boats and trucks, were instrumental in helping to evacuate victims from the submerged sections of the city. The Rev. Joseph L. Wright, rector of the Church of the Ascension in Kansas City, Kansas, reports that his parish was appointed as an emergency clothing repair and dispersement depot.

Students Pitch In

Students at the National Town-Country Church Institute, Parkville, Mo., received an unbargained-for summer experience as a result of the flood. Under the leadership of the Rev. Norman L. Foote, one team of students took the Roanridge Farm truck and spent a night helping to evacuate families from North Kansas City when word came, via radio, that the levees surrounding the city were due to break at any moment and that the city was being placed under martial law. Another team of students spent the night loading and placing sand-bags on weak spots on the levee, thus helping to keep the flood out of North Kansas City and away from the Kansas City municipal airport. The following days, the Institute students were responsible for a broad clothing drive whereby much-needed garments were rushed to flood victims. Girl students were instrumental in providing food and coffee to flood workers.

In Kansas City, Mo., Grace and Holy Trinity Cathedral, of which the Very Rev. Claude Sprouse is dean, served as an emergency civilian defense station. For four days and nights, seemingly interminable crews of volunteers came out of the stock-yard bottoms of the city, where they had been helping to buttress the dikes, to receive food and coffee, and some rest, in the cathedral. Approximately 5,000 sandwiches and fifty gallons of coffee were made each day by a hard-working crew of fifty, while, on Sunday, members of the Young Peoples' Fellowship and Canterbury Club went right home from church to don jeans and report for dispensing duty on the dikes. The Rev. Canon William Hargis headed up this phase of the activity.

Meanwhile, the Rev. R. G. Baker, rector of Trinity, Atchison, was called up as chaplain to the Kansas national guard and served several days as a sand-bagger and counselor to the weary relief and reclamation crews in Kansas City, Kansas.

The crests of the Kaw and Missouri rivers passed Kansas City at 3 a. m. on Saturday, July 14, sweeping with power into central Missouri. Left behind was desolation and a tremendous clean-up task—and an almost universal feeling that all of this catastrophe had something to do with a doctrine known as 'stewardship of God's creation'. Politicians are now flying out to the flooded areas continually; meetings are being held and voices are raised for some real action. This morning, the Missouri and Kaw are placid, lethargic, muddy streams. Churchmen, like others, are meditating on the power of creation as never before.

The Kansas Flood of 1951

BY

JOHN W. DAY
Dean of Grace Cathedral,
Topeka, Kansas

★ Forty-eight years ago Topeka, Kansas, and the other cities along the Kaw River Valley, suffered a terrible flood. Over a hundred people were drowned at Topeka and property loss could not be estimated. It ran into the millions. Old Indians tell us there was a greater flood in 1844, when the river stretched from bluff to bluff, and everything was engulfed.

The 1951 flood is like that of 1844; its waters stretch from bluff to bluff; in some cases, like at Lecompton, 18 miles east of Topeka, the water extended from five to ten miles in width.

We had been having torrential rains through most of the month of June. There was a little let-up for a few days in the early part of July; then the rains set in again, and they reached their peak during the week of July 8th. On July 11th, the mayor of Topeka, through the police department, using radio and mobile P.A. systems, ordered everyone to leave North Topeka where there is a population of about 10,000. By the evening of the 12th, the dikes began to give way and the waters took over in North Topeka and threatened the east side of the city, known as Oakland and East Topeka. By July 13th, these two sections of the city had been added to the inundated areas. Altogether, about 14,000 people were driven from their homes in this city.

On July 12th, about 10,000 had found refuge in the homes of friends and relatives. Another 4,000 were housed in the municipal auditorium, the Masonic temple, and several churches in the city, including Grace Cathedral.

At 6 o'clock on July 12th, I was called from Red Cross headquarters and asked to take 125 refugees in guild hall, the new parish house and Wolfe hall. By midnight, we had received our quota. The Red Cross provided the cots and bedding and all necessary supplies, including food. We set up a kitchen crew to manage the food, and by 8 o'clock Friday morning we were feeding 125 persons on the main floor of our guild hall because the floor of our dining room in the basement was covered with water. Most of our guests were Mexicans with several white and two Negro families. So far there has been no racial complications.

At Topeka, the highest flood stage was 36 feet, 4 inches, which was three feet above the highest mark of the devastating flood of 1903. There was no record of the 1844 flood, but it is generally thought that the 1951 high water mark exceeded that of 1844.

Manhattan, although not nearly so large in population, suffered more acutely than Topeka because the electric, gas and water systems were put out of commission by high water. At one time, that city was supplied with water from only two wells, and it all had to be boiled.

Ottawa, which is about twenty-five miles south of the city of Lawrence, was completely submerged in water. The current was so swift, most of the buildings in the flooded area were moved from their foundations and many floated away down the Marais des Sygnes River. Our church in Ottawa, a new building, was not inundated, although there was much water

CHURCHMEN IN THE NEWS: Dean John Day describes the Kansas flood; the Rev. Louis W. Pitt announces building plans; the Rev. W. B. Spofford Jr. gives an account of the flood in Missouri in the basement. Practically all the other churches were flooded. I talked with a member of our parish who was in Ottawa yesterday who said the destruction was indescribable.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

North Lawrence was inundated, but very little of the city south of the river. Only three church families were flooded out.

In Kansas City, Kansas, the destruction from high water and fire was terrific. The number of people who were driven from their homes runs into the thousands. None of our churches in the Kansas cities was in the flooded areas and only four families of our church people were driven from their homes.

Further west on the Kaw River, Fort Riley and Junction City were inundated, and parts of Abilene and Salina. No damage was done to the church properties in these places but 30 families were flooded out in Salina.

The parish house, church and rectory in Manhattan were in the flood area. There will be a great deal of expense in rehabilitating the property. Our church in Manhattan was hit worse than any other along the Kaw River Valley.

Red Cross Work

As usual, the Red Cross has done and is doing a superb piece of work in disaster relief. Every day food and other supplies have been shipped to us here at the Cathedral in Topeka and there has been no shortage of anything up to the present time. Most of the supplies have been flown in by the air force, which has done a wonderful piece of work. All railroads have been crippled. Members of the Cathedral parish have provided clothing in great quantities; also food and other things which we have requested. The church people in this parish have gone on shifts to help serve the food and make the refugees comfortable. We make especial mention of several members of St. Simon's Colored Mission here in Topeka, who have taken over the cooking of all the food served to the refugees in guild hall. They have been on duty now for a week and deserve a great deal of credit for their loyalty and long hours of unselfish service.

Thirty-one families of the Cathedral parish suffered from the flood and found refuge in the homes of friends and relatives. The Seymour Packing Company of Topeka, and the Perry Packing Company in Manhattan, which are managed by Mr. James A. Perry, of the Cathedral parish, have suffered much loss in destruction of property.

We were delighted to have a telegram from the Presiding Bishop offering his sympathy and whatever help the Church can give.

Dramatic Episode

The most dramatic episode of the flood was keeping the Topeka water plant from being inundated. Altogether, more than 5,000 men, civilians and soldiers from Forbes air base, sandbagged the pump house and other buildings on a 4-hour, around-the-clock schedule. Mobile P.A. systems went about the city appealing for 500, 200 or 100 men periodically. At 3 o'clock one morning there was an appeal for 150 men. It was interesting to note that many of the refugees sleeping in guild hall rose from their beds to answer the call. The sandbags were filled at the fair grounds and transported about four miles to the water plant. It was not until many hours later that the plant was secure; around it on three sides a new dike was raised, made of sandbags, and thousands of bags were used to control sand boils inside the dikes.

The power plant at Tecumseh, five miles east of Topeka on the Kaw River, was saved by employees raising a dike of coal around the plant and keeping it from being breeched. Because these two plants were kept from inundation, the city at all times has been able to have light, power and water. The gas company has been having its hands full shutting off mains in the affected areas and keeping people out of homes until buildings can be examined and found gas-free. This service was maintained throughout areas not affected by the flood waters.

Sixteen years ago a plan to control the flood waters of the Kaw River and its tributaries was suggested by one of the departments of our federal government. It included a large dam

CUTTINGTON COLLEGE, Liberia, provides fine residences for members of the faculty, thanks to the generosity of American churchmen across the Kaw River seven miles west of Topeka, creating a lake forty miles long and several miles wide. Farmers and other affected groups in the area protested against the plan and nothing was done. If it had been carried out, the present disaster would not have taken place. Those of us who have seen the destruction feel that something will be done in the next few years to harness the raging waters of the flooded Kaw. The tragedy of the situation is that little or nothing of real importance had been done since the great flood of 1903.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

KANSAS CITY CHURCH UNDAMAGED

★ Supplementing information as to conditions in Kansas and West Missouri, word has been received from the Rev. Richard M. Trelease, rector of St. Paul's Church, Kansas City, Mo., that the churches in Kansas City were away from the flooded area. Two members of St. Paul's were drowned, and many families suffered serious business losses, "but they have a fine spirit and will build back."

Dean John W. Day of Grace Cathedral, Topeka, Kansas, reports that St. Paul's Church, Manhattan, Kansas, was badly flooded and then a truck hit the side of the church with such force that the walls may have to be rebuilt. Besides this, sixty families of the parish were evacuated and many lost all household goods.

SUCCESSFUL CONFERENCE ON CHURCH MUSIC

★ The first conference on Church music, sponsored by the province of Sewanee, was held at DuBose conference center, Monteagle, Tenn., July 17-26. Fifty-four organists and choirmasters from eleven dioceses attended. The response to the sessions was so enthusiastic that it was unanimously agreed by all concerned to make this conference an annual feature of the life of the province.

The provincial committee that called the conference was headed by Bishop Barth, coadjutor of Tennessee, and included representatives from each of the fifteen dioceses of the province and also the diocese of Arkansas, appointed by their respective bishops. The committee on arrangements for this first session consisted of the music committee of the diocese of Tennessee: Mr. Adolph Steuterman, F.A.G.O., organist - choirmaster of Calvary, Memphis, chairman, who also served as director of the conference; Mr. Thomas Alexander, organist - choirmaster, St. Paul's, Chattanooga, registrar; and Mr. M. B. McGrew, organist - choirmaster, Good Shepherd, Memphis, secretary.

Courses of instruction were given on the Prayer Book and the Hymnal by the Rev. Massey H. Shepherd Jr., Witness columnist and professor at Episcopal Theological School; on chanting by Mr. Robert L. Hobbs, organist-choirmaster of St. Mark's, Louisville, Ky.; and on choir-training and service music by Mr. Robert L. Van Doren, organist-choirmaster of Trinity, Columbia, S. C. The conference chorus was directed by Dr. Lyman P. Prior, choirmaster of St. John's Cathedral, Jacksonville, Fla. The chaplain of the conference was the Rev. Cyril N. Sturrup, rector of St. Paul's, Winter Haven, Fla. Also assisting in the devotional life of the conference were Bishops Dandridge and Barth of Tennessee and Bishop McElwain, retired, of Minnesota.

At the conclusion of the conference, on St. James' Day, the members of the conference sang a festival service of choral evensong in All Saints' chapel, Sewanee, with Bishop Barth as the preacher. Other high-lights of the conference session were the visit to St. Paul's, Chattanooga, for the Sunday service on July 22nd, followed by a picnic on Chickamauga Lake, and the concert of the Cumberland Forest music festival at Sewanee.

The aim of this conference was to assist our church musicians, especially in the smaller parishes and missions, to use simple music of good quality and liturgical fitness in the corporate worship of the Church. Hymns, service music, and anthems, chosen for study by the conference, were all selected to this end. The response of those attending the sessions was so overwhelmingly favorable, that it is expected that next year the registrations for the conference will be greatly increased.

SHATTUCK AIDS VICTIMS

★ Shattuck School has sent a check to Bishop Fenner of Kansas to aid flood victims. The money came from the "campus chest" which is raised annually by the student vestry for charity.

EPISCOPAL FILM GETS AWARD

★ Against stiff competition, the National Council's motion picture of Church work in the Navajo country, "Window on the Sky" has won the Cleveland Film Council's award for the best religious film of the year.

The award, considered one of the most important in film evaluations, made through audience selection, was in open competition with pictures submitted by the Protestant film commission, the Swedish travel office, Schauffler College, the Presbyterian Church, the Encyclopedia Britannica and the Methodist Church.

The film was made for the National Council by Alan Shilin, young independent producer, and is a completely professional production. It is in full color, with sound, and the actors are Navajos and members of the Navajo mission staff. Much of the action centers at the Good Shepherd mission to the Navajo Indians, Fort Defiance, Arizona, and the Rev. David W. Clark and Mrs. Clark show the actual ministry of the mission, and its never-ceasing service to the Navajo people.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EDITORIALS

Nobel Candidate

THE WITNESS for March 13, 1947 featured an article "The Treatment of Germany" which we have many times thought should be reprinted. It was a warning against the very thing our government seems determined to do—resurrect Prussianism. The author was Frederick William Foerster, now in his 82nd year, and one of twenty-eight world figures to be nominated for the 1951 award of the Nobel Prize for Peace which will be awarded next month. We boast a little for being the first to present him to an Episcopal Church audience.

Upon receiving his doctorate, he became in 1894 the editor of Ethical Culture magazine. There Foerster fearlessly criticized the spirit of the Wilhelminian era, denouncing Prussianism and its leaders. For this he was given a jail sentence for criticism of the state. Soon after his release he wrote (January, 1896):

"Is there anyone who doubts that we owe our inner demoralization to the general worship of success which has overawed our people in view of the splendor of Blood and Iron? Once the sense of the deeply rooted solidarity of the world of culture is devaluated, once the idol of national might has been placed on the altar, moral idealism disappears from the spiritual life of the nation. . . . Mere national might is not an ennobling goal. It keeps constantly awake within us the beast of rape. It dulls us toward the need for harmonious happiness with others and brings brutal covetousness into all human relations."

These words, written over fifty years ago, are the basis of Foerster's ethics, and at the same time they explain why Bismarck's power-policies led, via the Kaiser, Ebert, Hindenburg and Hitler, right to today's catastrophe.

In 1897, denied an academic career in Germany, Foerster went to Zurich, Switzerland, where he lectured at the university on social and economic questions. His writings on ethics and education totaled hundreds of thousands of copies and were translated into almost all European languages. He won international recognition as an educator and could have easily made peace with the ruling power. But his conscience and love of his homeland, permitted no compromise.

During the first world war, speaking to overflow audiences at the University of Munich, Foerster denounced power-politics. "We must," he said, "abandon national egotism and join a new European cultural order." For this the faculty of the university protested that Foerster represented opinions which should "make every German ashamed." Soon all of his utterances were censored and ultimately they were forbidden as "damaging to the interests of warfare."

"Quotes"

I SAY that blind generosity toward nationalist Germany is not at all in the interest of the better part of the German nation. It paves the way to perdition. It goes beyond my capacity of mild patience to see the same blind and ignorant generosity, that resulted in world war two, again in full swing. My courageous friends in Germany, a small minority, are in real despair because they foresee that they are doomed to pay one day in blood for their trust in the earnest will of the victorious nations to put an end forever to German nationalist terror.

—FREDERICK W. FOERSTER
The Witness, March 13, 1947

Ambassador

AFTER the collapse of 1918, Kurt Eisner, prime minister of Bavaria, recognizing Foerster as the only German respected by the Allies, appointed him ambassador at Berne, Switzerland. Here whatever he asked for was granted; food for starving Germans; no partition of Silesia without a plebiscite; alleviation in the condition of prisoners of war. But he demanded not only concessions for Germany as well. He proposed to the Chancellor of the Reich, Bauer, that a few hundred thousand German volunteers aid in the reconstruction of Belgium and France. He intended to join the first volunteers. But the plan was turned down by the German government for fear that it might be construed as an admission of war guilt.

Foerster had been confident that defeat would lead the German people to reason; to amending their ways. With the idea of stirring up conscience he traveled from city to city, lecturing everywhere. Some success was achieved but reformation did not take place. Nationalist Germany organized behind the Weimar Republic and in 1923 Foerster was advised by a friend to take the next train for Switzerland. So again from beyond Germany's borders he called the attention of the German nation and of the world to the dangers in a recovery of militaristic Germany. He wrote in his magazine, Mankind, in 1927 that "The masters of Germany today need peace . . . in order to be armed at a time set by the weakness of her neighbors. This time will come between 1933 and 1938." His disclosures at the League of Nations, and how they were received, he related in his Witness article four years ago.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The people of Germany were not to be aroused. No one realized that here was a highly respected international figure who could have saved Germany. A proposal by the liberal editor, Helmut von Gerlach, that Foerster be the people's candidate for the Reich's presidency was in vain. In vain also was Maximilian Harden's statement that Foerster was towering "Himalaya-high" above all other candidates for the office. Prussian Germany stunned the world by electing Hindenburg and from then on the downward way was taken with increased speed.

Warns of Prussianism

TODAY Professor Foerster is warning us, as he did years ago, against illusions about the German mentality. Anyone who believes this man to be activated by hatred and bitterness does not know him. Out of a feeling of great responsibility, Foerster asks for firm determination for the solution of the German problem. In spite of privation and disappointment, the veteran of the German emigration has not become embittered or destructive. He has remained a great man, enduring his own hard lot with a smile. Friends have often said that it is shameful that a man of Foerster's standing should have to fight so hard. But this is not apt to deter future German historians from telling readers how "that scoundrel Foerster was carrying on the vilest propaganda against Germany from New York, for which, of course, he was abundantly paid by the enemy." They will probably have to do so for Foerster is too dangerous an accuser and they hate him for not condoning Germany's bad conscience. To them he never rated anything but "traitor"; one who fouls his own nest. To this he himself answered as early as 1923: "He does not foul his own nest who is conscious of the filth therein; who calls a spade a spade and tried to sweep it clean. The nest-fouler is the one who does things which blacken the honor of his people."

We cannot do better than to end this brief sketch by quoting from an address delivered in New York in 1944 by Jan Masaryk, foreign minister of Czechoslovakia and head of the delegation of that country to the San Francisco conference.

"For fifty years," said Mr. Masaryk, "Professor Foerster has been warning the world against the Bismarkian way of life; against Pan-Germanism and vulgar Prussianism. The world, with certain noble exceptions, was either deaf or hard of hearing. If my father were alive today, he would be among the first to think of Foerster with genuine friendship and great admiration. It is not generally known perhaps that the first president of Czechoslovakkia and Frederick W. Foerster cooperated closely and intimately for a generation. I remember many years ago my father telling me: 'If you want to understand Germany you must read Foerster' and I repeat it to you who are listening to us today: You must read Foerster. The intellectual architect of that quintessence of vulgarity, known as the Siegesallee in Berlin, hated Foerster. Their successors, whether inside or outside of Germany, hate him today. I know that he would be a very sad man if they started liking him.

"Today this patriarch of decent Germany is as hard at work as he was fifty years ago. We are honoring a man who for fifty years swam against the Pan-German stream. Foerster has been assailed by the different breeds of Teutonic knights of evil as a pacifist. Indeed he was a pacifist in the sense of fighting day in, day out, to destroy German goose-stepping militarism in order to bring about a decent European peace. He never for one minute belonged to the school of pacifists who oppose interference with evil. Indeed we need many more pacifists like Professor Foerster.

"Professor Foerster has had the doubtful satisfaction of being right for the past fifty years. I beg of you, listen to his voice of warning; read his books; believe in his absolute intellectual honesty."

PRINTING

We solicit printing of every description. Our shop is equipped to do weekly or monthly publications, pamphlets, leaflets, parish bulletins, job work of all kinds.

Quality Work - On Time - At a Saving

Write of your needs and we will send an estimate promptly

The WITNESS

Tunkhannock Pennsylvania

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

An Invitation to Roman Catholics

BY
ROBERT S. TRENBATH
Rector of Trinity, Washington

THIS attempts to tell you briefly what the Protestant Episcopal Church has to offer you. It is not an attempt to explain why we severed our connections with Rome. This is told elsewhere. We believe the break was necessary. When it came in the year 1534, the Church of England did no more than to say that from now on the bishop of Rome (the Pope) was not to be considered as having any authority over the Church of England. The king was made head of the Church but claimed no ecclesiastical power to ordain or control the sacraments. The real religion of the people remained the same with, as the years passed, some important clarifications and truths which the Reformation had brought to light.

The Episcopal Church therefore has kept the great Catholic truths. Some of these are:

(1) The faith as expressed in the Apostles' and Nicene Creeds and the first seven general Church councils, all of which were representative of Latin and Greek Christianity.

(2) The three-fold unbroken orders of ministers (bishops, priests and deacons) who are in the same apostolic succession as any Roman priest today.

(3) The two great sacraments of the Church—baptism and holy communion, with the Catholic interpretation that they are "outward and visible signs of an inward and spiritual grace." Episcopalians believe in the real presence at holy communion, but interpret this spiritually. The other five "commonly called sacraments" we believe were not specifically ordained by Christ.

(4) The Church calendar year which teaches the truths about Christianity through the nine seasons (Advent, Christmas, Epiphany, Pre-Lent, Lent, Easter, Ascension, Whitsunday, Trinity). We also observe other important holy and saints' days.

(5) The emphasis on the arts to express through painting, stained glass, music, Church architecture and symbolism the glories of God and the truths of our religion.

(6) The monastic life. Provision is made through various orders of monks and nuns in the Episcopal Church for those who feel called to take vows and join such a community.

Fundamentals

IN addition to these Catholic truths, the Episcopal Church has emphasized certain fundamentals which we believe Christ meant us as a Church to have, and because the medieval Catholic Church had lost these, the Episcopal Church "protested" and reaffirmed them.

(1) All services should be in a language understood by the people (English to Americans, Italian to Italians, Indian to Indians, etc.) The services are simplified so that people can follow them by using "The Book of Common Prayer."

(2) Salvation is a matter of the gift of God to those who have faith and is not something earned by anyone. Nothing is necessary for salvation except what is found in, or based upon, clear scriptural authority. Therefore we emphasize the study and reading of the Bible and the importance of sermons by priests to explain the Bible through the ministry of the word.

(3) We have communion in both kinds, i.e., bread and wine, for we believe Jesus meant that it should be administered this way. We have denounced the doctrine of transubstantiation as not based on scripture.

(4) We believe in and practice the councilior method of government for the Church which was how the early Church was governed and is more democratic than Rome. Laymen play a vital and active part in all our Church councils. Laymen have the voice in the calling of a rector to minister to the ordinary parish.

(5) We believe in marriage for our priests if they be so inclined, for the idea of a celibate (unmarried) priesthood is based on a theory of there being a "double standard" in the Christian life, one for clergy, one for laymen, which has no basis in the Bible.

(6) We provide means for dealing with any moral corruption of our clergy through a system of courts which act effectively.

(7) We emphasize the clear light of reason and have done away with superstition, so that we find no place for images and relics in our Church which excite people to superstitious beliefs.

(8) We extoll the worship of Christ high above the veneration of worship of the Virgin Mary, feeling that the living Christ can be spoken to, and can speak to us, today without any intermediary.

We cordially invite you to talk with your nearest Protestant Episcopal clergyman about these principles of our Church which we cherish so highly.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT, Book Editor

Systematic Theology. By Paul Tillich. Vol. I. University of Chicago Press. $5.00.

This is volume I of the long-awaited Systematic Theology of one of the world's greatest systematic theologians. It will be read for many years by experts, and generations of students will make use of it. But it should also be known by the rank and file of thoughtful Christians. Characteristic of Tillich's theology is his outspoken acceptance of biblical criticism: here is no fundamentalist "double-talk," pretending to be orthodox and critical at the same time, and really hoping to be understood in the "orthodox," i.e. old-fashioned literalistic sense, even though not really meaning it! (Such "double-talk" is the curse of some types of "orthodoxy" at the present day). Moreover, the great central doctrine of Tillich is the Pauline, New Testament one: The "new being" in Christ. Finally, he accepts the contributions to scientific theology of modern history of religions, psychology of religion, and history of culture — something quite different from the "neoorthodox" denial of all human values.

John Wesley's Journal. Abr. by Nehemiah Curnock. Philosophical Library. $3.75.

Here is Wesley himself, Wesley the Anglican, the enthusiast, the evangelist, the scholar and preacher, the reckless advocate of utter reality in religion, the temperamental, the genuine--all abridged from the long four volumes of "Extracts" which the world knows as Wesley's "Journal."

Men and Gods. By Rex Warner. Farrar, Straus, and Young. $3.00.

One more retelling of the ageless myths of Greece and Rome, by an English poet and novelist. The form of the tales is taken from Ovid, and the diction and style are superb. Only a poet or a novelist should ever tell them!

The Shorter Oxford Bible. Abr. and ed. by G. W. Briggs, G. B. Caird, and N. Micklem. Oxford Uni. Pr. $1.85.

The Oxford shortened edition of the Bible is not just another edition, but a textbook Bible issued for a particular purpose. By the Education Acts of 1944 and 1946 it has been required that there be two forty minute periods of religious instruction in all schools in England; day and boarding, independent and county, classical and technical schools are included. There is truly Universal Religious Education in England. Many textbooks for this purpose have been issued by County Councils of the schools and by the several publishing houses. This new edition of the Bible has been edited by the Canon of Worcester, the Professor of New Testament at McGill University, Montreal, and the Principal of Mansfield College, Oxford, for use in such instruction.

The edited text is divided into short sections which are titled for classroom use and introduced by brief introductory paragraphs. A syllabus to guide the use of the book with children of varying ages is given in the back. The volume should be useful in Released Time Bible Classes and Independent School courses here in America, as well as helpful to the average adult who would like to read the Bible.—Sydney Temple

Muhammadan Festivals. By G. E. von Grunebaum. Schuman. $2.50.

Another volume in the series on the great religious festivals. It studies the Muhammadan festivals from their origins down to the present day as cultural streams that have merged to form Islamic civilization. The volume is attractively illustrated.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL EXPANDS

★ Grace Church, New York, started this summer an extensive remodelling and construction program in connection with its parish day school. The announcement of plans to modernize and enlarge Grace Church School was made by the Rev. Louis W. Pitt, rector of the church.

"The philosophy and purpose of Grace Church School remains the same," said Dr. Pitt. "There has never been any question in my mind," he continued, "that a church set down in a metropolitan community has, as part of its ministry, the responsibility of providing for boys and girls an education with an ethical and religious basis. It must also be the aim of such a school to give a secular education equal to that of the best public and independent schools; graduates of our school are successfully preparing for college at leading public and private high schools. Now that there is the assurance of adequate physical facilities, I believe that our parish can make an even more notable contribution to future citizens through the medium of our school. I am grateful for the inspiring leadership of Allison Grant, the headmaster, and his devoted staff. They have worked patiently in crowded buildings during these last years, and I am confident that the provision of the new facilities will give them the necessary impetus to move forward in the educational task for which they have proven their aptitudes and skill."

The Hon. Robert McCurdy Marsh, chairman of the building committee, outlined the plans for the proposed expansion of the school's facilities. "The building at 86-88 Fourth Avenue, now occupied by the school, will be completely remodeled," said the Judge, "and the foundation will be laid for a new six-story building to be constructed on the plot of land directly to the south. This new structure will be erected as soon as funds become available. The estimated cost of the total project will be approximately $500,000, of which more than half has been secured through special contributions or has been advanced from parish funds by action of the vestry.

"New classrooms will permit enrollment to be increased from the present 160 to about 200 children. There will be rooms especially designed for music, science, art and crafts. There will be space for clay modeling and a kiln for pottery-making. There will also be rooms for the school nurse, and the psychologist, and for parent-teacher conferences. The facade of the new building will preserve the feeling of the gothic architecture of the present structure. When the project is completed, there will be enlarged facilities for pre-school, kindergarten, first grade and the library, and increased enrollment."

ST. JAMES LESSONS

(I) The Lord Jesus and Children; (II) Jesus, Lord of Heaven and Earth; (III) Friends of The Lord Jesus; (IV) The House of The Lord Jesus; (V) Christian Virtues; (VI) The Lord and His Servant; (VII) The Lord and His Church; (VIII) The Lord Jesus Reveals God; (IX) How God Prepared for The Coming of Jesus.

Illustrated

These books are printed attractively, illustrated and include well- executed hand work. Pages and type are large, clean and uncrowded; they cover 33 lessons plus suggested reviews. Based on the Episcopal Book of Common Prayer. The cost by reason of generous subsidy and production in large quantity has been kept within reach of all Churches and Missions.

A teacher's manual accompanies each course. The teacher's manuals for the first three lessons are forty cents each, all other books, pupils and teachers are sixty cents each—post paid in U.S.A. Checks must accompany orders—No books sent on approval. All orders will receive prompt attention.

St. James Lessons, Inc. Dept. 5, 865 Madison Ave. New York 21, N. Y.

"THE TASK WHICH THE SECULARIZATION OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS PRESENTS TO THE CHURCH"

by the Reverend James A. Pike, LL.B., B.D., J.S.D., Chaplain and Head of the Department of Religion, Columbia University.

A reprint of Dr. Pike's Alumni Day address at The General Theological Seminary in May 1951.
Copies of this address may be ordered, at 25c each, from

The Recording Secretary
Associate Alumni
175 Ninth Avenue
New York 11, New York

An early order is suggested, since only a limited number of copies is available

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

KUEBLER & EMRICH VISIT JAPAN

★ Bishop Michael Yashiro, head of the Church in Japan, has completed plans for a nationwide welcome for two American churchmen. President Clarke Kuebler of Ripon College and member of the National Council arrived by air July 27 for a month's private visit around the Japanese Church. Bishop Richard S. Emrich of Michigan and Mrs. Emrich are scheduled for arrival September 6 after a visit to the churches in Hawaii and the Philippines. According to Bishop Yashiro, Bishop Horace W. B. Donegan and a party of churchmen of New York, and Bishop Karl Morgan Block of California are considering autumn visits to the Nippon Seikokai.

Kuebler's visit will be highlighted by his speech at the ground breaking service to begin the erection of the cathedral church at Maebashi City, the see city of North Kanto diocese, as a memorial to the late Bishop John McKim. Another significant feature of his trip here is participation in an educational conference at the Brotherhood of St. Andrew's center at Kiyosato, to be attended by all the Japanese bishops, heads of official Church educational institutions and National council heads.

The five million yen now in hand to begin the erection of the Bishop McKim memorial church to replace the bombed out prewar church property, was made possible by the efforts of Canon Gilbert Symons, former editor of Forward and by additional gifts raised by Japanese churchmen. The Maebashi site consists of a centrally located city block of ground and will eventually provide for a parish house, residences for the Bishop of North Kanto and the dean of the Cathedral, a small convent for the hoped for Japan house of the Sisters of the Transfiguration of Glendale, Ohio. Space is also reserved for the North Kanto St. Andrew's House to be erected by the Brotherhood of St. Andrew as a diocesan laymen's center and clubhouse.

Bishop Emrich's tour will include dedication on September 16 of the St. John's rural library-parish house unit of the Kiyosato rural center which was entirely contributed by St. John's Church, Detroit, through a committee headed by Mr. Ralph Burton. Another significant visit will be to the University of Michigan Japan research center at Okayama. He will preach at the ordination of two of Japan's newest missionaries — the Rev. William D. Eddy, at Osaka, September 22, and the Rev. William B. Parsons Jr., at Kyoto on September 23, where he will also preach at the 10th anniversary of the consecration of Bishop Jiro Sasaki of Kyoto. One of his final meetings will be a Japan reunion of Episcopal Theological Seminary graduates at the Central Theological College, Tokyo, which is being arranged by Dean Shunji F. Nishi.

Bishop Emrich's article on "Some Neglected Aspects of Communism," has been translated into Japanese by Tadao Kaneko, general secretary of the Japanese Brotherhood of St. Andrew and is being widely circulated among Japanese Churchmen here.

CONFERENCE ON THEOLOGY

★ A conference on theology in action is to be held at Adelynrood, center of the Companions of the Holy Cross, South Byfield, Mass., August 31-September 3. Leaders are the Rev. Charles W. Lowry and Chevy Chase, Md.; Ina May Greer and Dr. Louis Sanders, psychiatrists; the Rev. Clinton J. Kew, who is conducting healing services and consulting at St. Luke's, Montclair, N. J. and the Church of the Heavenly Rest, New York.

Have You These Significant Books?

By Eric Montizambert — THIS WE BELIEVE! $2.00

By William E. Purcell — FIVE MINUTES TO TWELVE $2.00

By George Parkin Atwater — THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH: Its Message for Men of Today $1.50

Postage Additional

Morehouse-Gorham Co.

14 E. 41st Street, New York 17, N. Y.

29 E. Madison Street, Chicago 2, Ill

NEWS OF CHURCHES OVERSEAS

NEW CHURCH MOVES IN ROMANIA

Plans are under way in Romania to establish a schismatic Roman Catholic Church. The Austrian Catholic press agency quoted an official Romanian press release as stating that 250 Catholic priests and laymen loyal to the government took part in a meeting at Klausenburg University which elected a presidium for a new "progressive Church movement." Purpose of the movement, the press release stated, is to bring the Church into harmony with the country's "peaceful reconstruction."

ANTI-VATICAN SECTIONS IN MOSCOW MUSEUM

Two anti-Vatican sections have been added to the museum of religious history in the Union Academy of Science in Moscow.

One of the sections is devoted to "the history of the papacy and the inquisition," while the other deals with "the Vatican in the service of imperialism."

The 2,000 exhibits in the new sections will show "the connections between the Pope and fascism" and demonstrate "the activities of the Vatican against the Soviet Union and the people's democracies."

The exhibits were reported to include photographs of documents used in evidence during the trial of Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty of Hungary, and of others showing "the espionage carried out by Vatican agents in China."

CZECHOSLOVAKIA HAS R. C. UNDERGROUND

A militant Roman Catholic underground, with its own weekly paper, is said to be operating in Czechoslovakia. It maintains that Joseph Beran, banished archbishop, remains "the representative not only of all Czechoslovak Catholics, but of all believers and, in fact, of all Czechoslovaks" and the government is warned of reprisals if he is in any way mistreated.

COUNCIL OF CHURCHES IN MONTREAL

Inter-church activities among Protestant churches in Montreal will result in the formation of a council of churches. An interim constitution has been drawn and delegates from the principal denominations are in the process of being elected. Anglicans, Baptists, Presbyterians and the United Church are cooperating in the effort which eventually will embrace other groups.

ARCHANGEL GABRIEL HAS NEW JOB

The Pope has issued an apostolic brief proclaiming the Archangel Gabriel as patron of telecommunications. Previously hailed in the R. C. Church as patron of postal employees, the Archangel is now also the patron of the telegraph, telephone, radio and television. Those having trouble with static and snow now know where to turn.

MONTREAL ANGLICANS BAR WOMEN

The synod of the Montreal diocese of the Church of England in Canada voted to bar women as delegates. The vote however was closer than ever before: clergy, 31-27; laymen, 57-44. Proponents of the legislation said they would introduce the same motion next year.

DISTRIBUTE BIBLES IN CHINA

Circulation of Bibles or portions of Scripture under the present government in China amounted to 718,977 volumes, according to the report of an officer of the American Bible Society.

The Church Pension Fund

and its subsidiaries

administered for the benefit of the Church

The Church Hymnal Corporation

Publishers of The Hymnal; Hymnal 1940 Companion; Book of Common Prayer; A Prayer Book for Soldiers and Sailors; Book of Offices; Stowe's Clerical Director.

The Church Life Insurance Corporation

Offers low cost insurance and annuity contracts to clergy, lay officials and active lay workers of the Church, either voluntary or paid, and their immediate families. Services include individual insurance programming and assistance to parish officials in preparing and establishing plans for retirement of lay employees.

The Church Fire Insurance Corporation

Low cost fire, windstorm and extended coverage insurance on property owned by or closely affiliated with the Church, and on the residences and personal property of the clergy.

Further information available by addressing any of the above at

20 Exchange Place New York 5, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

American Folding Chairs
NEW IMPROVED DESIGN

DURABLE—strong steel frame
SAFE—can't tip, pinch, snag
COMFORTABLE—extra-wide and extra-deep seats, backs
FOLD QUICKLY, quietly, snugly
SEAT STYLES—formed plywood, durably lacquered; or vinyl-plastic upholstered

Write Dept. 133
AMERICAN SEATING COMPANY
World's Leader in Public Seating
901 Broadway N. W., Grand Rapids 2, Mich.

NURSES WANTED

General staff nurses and one nurse anesthetist eligible for registration in Colorado, a 144 bed Church Hospital located in Southern Colorado, near mountain resorts. Forty-four hour work week, liberal personnel policies, including Social Security. For information—write Director of Nurses, Parkview Episcopal Hospital, Pueblo, Colorado.

CLERGY RETREAT, Adelynrood, So. Byfield, Mass., Sept. 4-7, auspices Brotherhood of the Way of the Cross. Conductor, Rev. Robert C. Smith, S.S.J.E. Charges $8.40. Apply to Rev. Sherrill B. Smith, Superior, F.V.C., Swansea, Mass.

FINEST PURE IRISH LINEN

For all Church uses

Just received from Belfast a new fine lightweight linen for Surplices in 39"—1.65 per yard. Also qualities and width for Albs, Fair Linen, etc., Patterns and Supplies, Books.

Samples Free

MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
BOX 386 CHILLICOTHE, MO.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

VESTMENTS

Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves
Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries
Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars
Custom Tailoring for Clergymen

1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951

COX SONS & VINING, Inc.
131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

CASSOCKS

Surplices — Choir Vestments
Eucharistic Vestments
Altar Hangings and Linens
Prices Sent on Request

J. M. HALL, INC.
14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.
Tel. CH 4-3306

SELL EXCLUSIVE Sunshine CHRISTMAS CARDS

EARN ALL THE MONEY YOU NEED
Among friends, neighbors. Smart Sunshine Boxes and Imprints sell on sight. America's leading 21 folder Christmas Ass't. Many DECORATIVE LINED ENVELOPES $1. 100% Profit. $1,000 Cash Sales Contest. Special Money-Making Plan for Organizations. SAMPLES ON APPROVAL.
SUNSHINE ART STUDIOS, Dpt. LG8
115 Fulton St., New York 38, N. Y.

PEOPLE

HONORS:

MALCOLM G. DADE, rector of St. Cyprian's, Detroit, received a doctorate at the commencement at Wilberforce College.

PHILIP J. DAUNTON, ass't at St. Clement's, Cal., and instructor at the Church Divinity School of the Pacific, received a doctorate at the commencement of the Pacific School of Religion.

AWARD:

CHARLES E. WELLER, ass't prof at Daniel Baker College, Brownwood, Texas, has been awarded a fellowship by the Ford Foundation to do research at the University of Chicago for a year.

ORDINATIONS:

W. B. LOCKE was ordained deacon on July 25 by Bishop Gesner at Calvary Cathedral, Sioux Falls, S. D. and is now in charge of the Redeemer and St. Mary's Chapel, Flandreau, S. D.

C. M. HENDERSON JR. was ordained deacon June 29 by Bishop Stoney at St. James, Clovis, N. M. He is vicar at Pecos and Ft. Stockton, Texass.

J. A. ERICKSON was ordained priest July 15 by Bishop Campbell at All Saints, Pasadena, where he is in charge of youth work and education.

J. W. SLATER and E. B. USHER JR. were ordained deacons July 14 by Bishop Emrich at St. Paul's, Lansing, Mich. Slater is ass't at St. John's, Saginaw, and Usher is in charge of churches at Corunna and Chesaning.

W. T. ELLIOTT was ordained deacon July 7 by Bishop Emrich at Grace Church, Detroit. He is in charge of churches at Gladwin and Standish.

HERBERT BARSALE was ordained deacon July 7 by Bishop Hubbard at All Saints, Pontiac, where he is ass't. J. J. HAMEL was ordained deacon July 8 by Bishop Hubbard at Christ Church, Cranbrook. He is ass't at St. Luke's, Ypsilanti.

ALANSON BROWN was ordained deacon July 6 by Bishop Jones at St. Paul's, Brady, Texas. He is a missionarry in Mexico.

L. T. JONES JR. was ordained deacon July 10 by Bishop Jones at Christ Church, San Antonio. He is in charge of Emmanuel, Lockhart, Texas.

Vestments
AND ACCESSORIES FOR YOUR CHOIR

You receive the benefit of our knowledge of denominational propriety, skilled tailoring and insistence upon perfection. We combine chorister's comfort with liturgical correctness. Choose from our selective styles and quality cloths.

CLERGY VESTMENTS
AND WARDROBE ACCESSORIES
Embroidered Superfrontals • Frontals • Stoles • Markers

Write for our latest catalog. Cloth swatches on request.

J. THEODORE Cuthbertson INC.
2013 SANSOM ST. PHILADELPHIA 3, PENNSYLVANIA

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS
EST 1917

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS

Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY

Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS

Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.

SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

Exquisite
IRISH LINENS
BY THE YARD

From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States, I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values; unsurpassed quality, imported direct from Ireland. Also transfer patterns, linen tape, and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 3 inches at 75c, 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.00.

MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

THE BISHOP WHITE
PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833

Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.
PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)
Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

CHARLES A. DUNHAM
Layman of Hartford, Conn.

To my mind a spirit of reverence should pervade every church service. There is no place for discordant sounds as they detract from a quiet, harmonious atmosphere. For this reason I wish to decry some of the music played as preludes and postludes in our churches. I have visited various churches of our denomination in New England cities and have found wide differences in the type of music played. In general the more modernistic organ music replete with dissonances is the more irritating. Among such composers are Vierne, Wider, Reger and Maleingreau. Their music is very much opposed to a quiet, reverential atmosphere. On the other hand we find the works of Bach, Francy, Gounod, Haydn, Handel, Guilmant and Rheinberger conducive to a proper church atmosphere. Members of a congregation will be inspired and uplifted by the right kind of religious music, or they can be irritated and depressed by discordant, modernistic compositions. Every rector should look into this matter in order that a suitable type of music may be rendered at the services.

E. A. CALLANAN JR.
Vicar of St. James, New Castle, Ind.

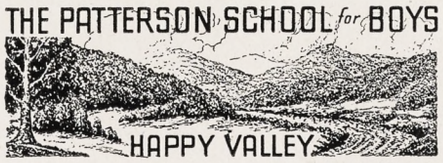
Three cheers and a hearty 'Amen' to Chad Walsh's splendid article on "Open vs. Closed Communion." He has answered in principle all of the problems relating to Church unity when he emphasizes that differences must be recognized realistically, and that we must feel the judgment of God upon us every time we are faced with decisions in this troublesome era. Please God that his words are taken seriously by all who are thinking and praying about the unity of God's Church.

JOHN COLE McKIM
Clergyman of Peekskill, N. Y.

One must admire the "non sine die animosus infans," but the sixteen students, whose wisdom is not guaranteed by Bexley Hall (Backfire May 17) seem to be barking up the wrong tree. Most of their questions should be addressed (if at all) to Protestant fundamentalists. However, question four, "are Christians bound to observe a rite of foot washing," seems to call for a word of kindly advice to these young men upon the threshold of their degrees. By all means observe it! It makes for the sort of social presentability which the parochial clergy would do well to cultivate.

MABEL ADAMS
Deaconess of Philadelphia

I have quite a full record of missions in Liberia from 1902 to 1915 taken from the Spirit of Missions. There are many pictures and were compiled for mission study. I would be glad to send them to any one who could use them. Address: The Leamy, Mt. Airy, Phila. 19. I am an enthusiastic reader of The Witness and hope to continue for a good while to come.



ADDRESS CHANGE

IN MAKING AN ADDRESS CHANGE, PLEASE SEND both THE OLD AND THE NEW ADDRESS AND ALLOW THREE WEEKS FOR THE CHANGE.

ST. LUKE'S SCHOOL
Episcopal Day School under the direction of Trinity Parish
Nursery, Kindergarten, Elementary Grades. After School play groups. Coeducational. Moderate tuition. For catalogue and further information communicate with
THE REV. PAUL C. WEED, JR.
Headmaster
Hudson & Grove Sts., NEW YORK 14, N. Y.
Phone WAtkins 4-5960

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL
Coeducational Episcopal Day School
Prepares for leading secondary schools. Sound academic training. Kindergarten thru 8th grade. French and Latin emphasized. Complete testing program. Est. 1894. Music, drama, arts & crafts, sports. Bus service. Hot lunch. Tel: AL 4-2000
E. ALLISON GRANT, Headmaster
88 E. Fourth Ave. (11th St.), N. Y. 3

THE PATTERSON SCHOOL for BOYS

Episcopal School in Blue Ridge Mountains of Western No. Carolina. Accredited. Grades 6-12. Gymnasium, sports, 42nd year. 1300-acre estate. Board and tuition, moderate.
GEORGE F. WIESE, Supt.
COLLEGE PREPARATORY — Legerwood, N. C. — HEALTH EDUCATION CHARACTER BUILDING

SCHOOLS

FORK UNION MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth — New Hampshire

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield — Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Schools of the Church

BARD COLLEGE
Formerly St. Stephen's
A Coeducational College of Liberal Arts and Sciences
FOUNDED 1860
For catalogue and further information write to The Director of Admissions, Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, New York.

DANIEL BAKER COLLEGE
BROWNWOOD, TEXAS
Established 1889. Operated under the auspices of the Diocese of Dallas. Co-educational senior college offering B.A. and B.S. degrees. Special opportunities in teacher training, music education, business administration. The only available undergraduate course in the Episcopal Church in Church Work Training. Member: Association of Texas Colleges.
REV'D W. A. CROSS, M.A., President
REV'D L. A. HASELMAYER, Ph.D., Dean

SAINT PAUL'S POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE
LAWRENCEVILLE, VIRGINIA
Approved by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. B.S. Degree with major in Trade and Industrial Education, B.S. Degree in Home Economics Education, B.S. Degree with major in Elementary Education, B.S. Degree in Secondary Education.
EARL H. McCLENNEY, President

VOORHEES SCHOOL & JR. COLLEGE
DENMARK, S. C.
Co-educational. Accredited by State Dept. of Education of S. C. and the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges. Under the two Dioceses of S. C. and The American Church Institute for Negroes. Expenses reasonable. Limited scholarship aid for worthy students. Apply:
CECIL D. HALLIBURTON, President

Okolona College
Okolona, Mississippi
Co-educational, Private, American Church Institute for Negroes (Protestant Episcopal Church) Established 1902
High School and Junior College - Trades and Industries - Music
For information write: W. MILAN DAVIS President
Today's Training for Tomorrow's Opportunities

St. Augustine's College
RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA
1867 — 1951
Accredited Four-Year College for Negro Youth. Co-educational. Music, Pre-Medical, Health and Physical Education, High School Teacher Training, Business, Pre-Social Work, Nursing Education in co-operation with St. Agnes Hospital.
HAROLD L. TRIGG, President

SAINT HELEN'S HALL
Portland 1, Oregon
Historic Pacific Northwest Episcopal resident and day school. Founded in 1869. Co-educational pre-school. Boys admitted to Lower School through grade III. Upper School girls only.
Write for catalog.
The RT. REV. BENJAMIN DAGWELL, D.D.
President, Board of Trustees
JANE ALLEN SAXTON,
HEADMISTRESS

The Cathedral Schools
National Cathedral School for Girls
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding department, grades 7-12
KATHARINE LEE, Principal
St. Albans
The National Cathedral School for Boys
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding Department, grades 8-12
CHARLES MARTIN, Headmaster
Address:
Mt. St. Alban, Washington 16, D. C.

St. John Baptist School
FOR GIRLS
Offers College Preparatory and General courses. Music, art, outdoor sports, and a happy home life, with character building extra-curricular activities for resident and day students, under the care of the Sisters of St. John Baptist. In the country near Morristown, New Jersey. Accredited.
For catalog address Box 556
The Sister Superior, Mendham, New Jersey

St. John's MILITARY SCHOOL
Salina, Kansas
Since 1887 St. John's has been perpetuating the cultural tradition of the Church by stressing sound scholarship in Christian atmosphere. Grades 3 through 12. Fully accredited.
COL. R. L. CLEM, Rector

ST. MARY'S HALL
SECONDARY BOARDING SCHOOL
Faribault, Minnesota
Close relationship of students and faculty in residence allows for a maximum of spiritual, academic, and social growth. Preparation for leading colleges. An extensive sports program, including riding.
PHYLLIS M. NEWMAN, M.A.
Founded 1866 Headmistress

IOLANI SCHOOL
Episcopal Church School for Boys
HONOLULU 17, HAWAII
A college preparatory church school for boys. Kindergarten through twelfth grade. Established 1862. Day tuition $225 to $275. Boarding $665 - $775. Summer session. Accredited.
REV. CHARLES A. PARMITER, JR. M.A., S.T.B., Rector

The MERRICOURT SCHOOL
(Episcopal)
A country boarding school for 40 boys & girls. Grades 1-8 (pre-preparatory). Home-like environment. Sports, extra-curricula program. 26th year. 8 weeks summer camp. For information: Visit, write, or phone 3-3209.
THE REV. M. W. WHITFORD, Hdm.
BERLIN, CONN.

ST. LUKE'S HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING
New York City
Offers a 3 year course in nursing to high school and college graduates. College graduates may be admitted with 9 months advanced credit allowance. For further information write to The Director of Nursing, St. Luke's Hospital, 421 West 113th St., New York 25, N. Y.

HARVARD SCHOOL
Diocesan School for Boys. 52nd Year. Fall term opens September 11, 1951. Grades seven through twelve. Fully Accredited. R.O.T.C. unit. For all information apply to
THE REV. W. S. CHALMERS
Headmaster
3700 Coldwater Canyon Rd.
NORTH HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

Cathedral School of St. Mary
An accredited Episcopal school for girls. Suburban New York City. Day-nursery to college. Boarding—fifth grade to college. Strong college preparatory course. Music, Dramatics, Art. Excellent sports program. Catalog on request.
MARION REID MARCH
Box W, Garden City, Long Island, N. Y.

ST. STEPHEN'S SCHOOL FOR BOYS
ALEXANDRIA, VA.
Grades 3 thru 12 (Day School). College Preparatory. Under the Church School System of the Diocese of Virginia.
Address
THE REV. EDWARD E. TATE,
Headmaster
2405 Russell Rd. ALEXANDRIA, VA.

ST. MARY'S HALL on the Delaware.
Episcopal boarding and day school for girls 8-18. Founded 1837. Thorough college preparation. Fully accredited. Separate lower school. College preparatory and general courses. Music, Art, Clubs, Sports, Dramatics. Near New York and Philadelphia. Catalogue.
FLORENCE LUKENS NEWBOLD
Headmistress
Burlington, New Jersey

DeVEAUX SCHOOL
Niagara Falls, New York
FOUNDED 1852
The Church School in the Diocese of Western New York. College preparatory for boys. Representative form of student government. Small classes. Reasonable charges. Grades 7 through 12.
For information address The Headmaster.

The Church Home and Hospital
SCHOOL OF NURSING
Baltimore 31, Maryland
A three year course of nursing. Classes enter August and September. Scholarships available to well qualified high school graduates.
Apply to Director of Nursing

ST. AGNES SCHOOL
An Episcopal Country Day and Boarding School for Girls
Excellent College Preparatory record. Special courses arranged for girls not contemplating college. Day pupils range from Kindergarten to College Entrance. Boarders from Grade 8 to College Entrance.
MISS BLANCHE PITTMAN, Principal
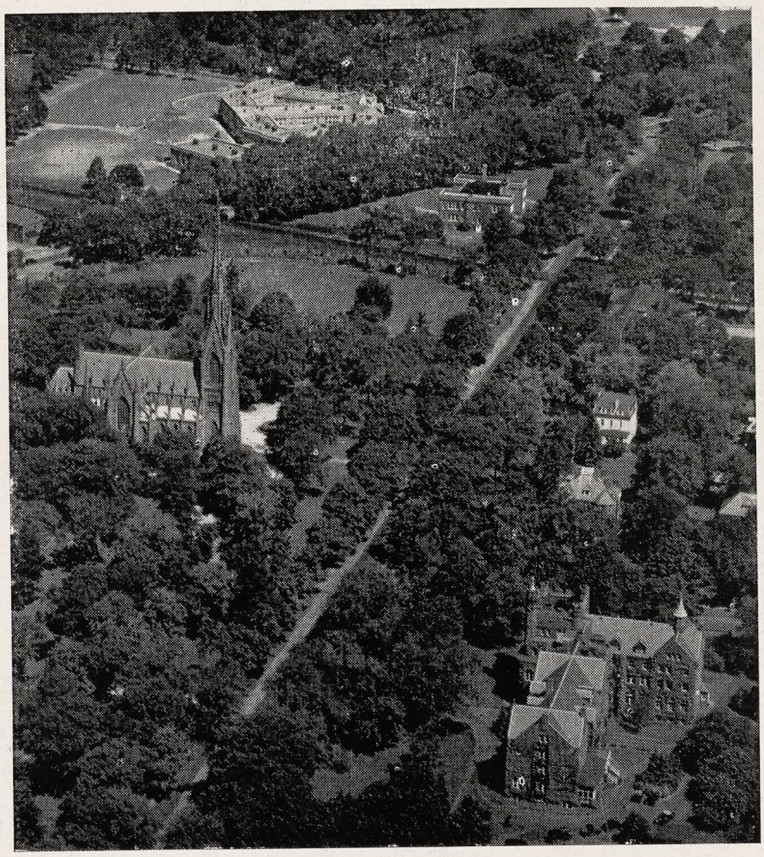
Albany New York

HOWE MILITARY SCHOOL
Thorough Academic Training in a Spiritual Environment. R.O.T.C. Accredited college preparatory, business courses. Junior School. Small classes. Every boy participates in sports. Balanced program. Episcopal. Established 1884. Summer Camp, boys grammar school age. Catalogue.
COL. B. B. BOUTON
13 Academy Place, Howe, Indiana



Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE

Witness

10¢ A COPY

August 23, 1951

CATHEDRAL SCHOOL OF ST. MARY

With Long Island Cathedral in Background

RACIAL AND CULTURAL RELATIONS

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 8 (and 9 Holy Days ecept Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 7:45, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers — 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. — 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital — 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m. Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a.m. Holy Communion
11 a.m. Morning Service and Sermon
Weekdays: Holy Communion Tuesdays at 12:10 p.m.; Wednesdays at 8 a.m.; Thursdays at 10:30 a.m.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer — 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon.
Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D., Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 — 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m.
Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Sei. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. William W. Lumpkin, Rector;
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacCall, 3rd, Rector
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 28 The WITNESS AUGUST 23, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

British Festival Revives Drama In Many Churches

Drama That Was Cradled on the Altar Steps Being Revived There in England

BY HUBERT GRIFFITH

Former drama critic of "The Observer" and "Sunday Graphic" (London); vice-president of Britain's Critics' Circle

★ The ideal place for staging a drama is a church or a cathedral. This is not being paradoxical—nor even original. The British drama was quite literally cradled on the steps of the altar. It began its life there in the early Middle-Ages and so continued for centuries, until, becoming more and more popular and secular, it was gradually pushed out into the market-place, and finally, about 1560 (as late as the time of Shakespeare's birth) began to build its own theatres.

That was long ago and the tradition is almost forgotten. But this year a remarkable revival has occurred during the Festival of Britain: there have appeared, in churches and cathedrals, a series of religious dramas, ranging from revivals of the celebrated medieval mystery and miracle plays to their deeply felt modern equivalents. Among cathedrals alone that are sponsoring these performances are Belfast in Northern Ireland, Coventry (among its war-time ruins), Salisbury, Tintern Abbey, St. David's in Wales, Chester, and Truro in Cornwall.

In London twelve separate productions in churches, often running for several weeks each, are being staged between May and late September, mostly centering round the Festival Church (St. John's, Waterloo Road), beautifully lighted and prepared, four of them in St. Thomas' near Regent Street, and one in Southwark Cathedral.

Performance in a Crypt

I have seen as many of the London performances as I could, though I unfortunately missed the unusual experience of seeing Milton's "Samson Agonistes" in the crypt of St. Martin's-in-the Fields. Christopher Fry, the young English playwright whose poetic dramas — including "The Lady's Not For Burning"—have been genuine popular attractions, wrote a specially designed piece, "A Sleep of Prisoners," which toured churches throughout England. It is ingenious, but, like so much that Christopher Fry writes, almost too ingenious. It concerns four prisoners-of-war interned in a church, who in their dreams become Adam and Cain and Abel and other Old Testament characters, with the mysterious stranger who may be representing Christ.

In the impressive interior of Southwark Cathedral (a few hundred yards from Shakespeare's original Globe Theatre) there is "Your Trumpets, Angels," again an honest and sincere version of a medieval mystery play; modern cockneys and "spivs" are introduced without the least irreverence into the austere and lovely surroundings. Other characters who may have walked in the precincts of the cathedral down the centuries appear in their appropriate costumes, and discuss their struggles and aspirations — summed up in a word, the struggles of the forces of love against the forces of hate. Appropriately, the strange detached Shakespeare threnody, "The Phoenix and the Turtle" is recited. Nobody knows exactly what this poem is about except that it is about some mystic and unfulfilled love—but it has a strange, unearthly loveliness. To hear it spoken, and beautifully spoken, under the arches of the great cathedral-nave, was a haunting experience.

The really outstanding feature in London so far has been the medieval "Everyman," a 15th century morality-play given in St. John's Church, opposite the Festival grounds, beautifully produced and staged. "Everyman" is a world-classic, and it is unfair to compare anything modern with it. It is stark and spare. Its language is the language of the Bible, and has the same rhythm. How many of the performers in it were amateurs and how many were professional actors I do not know. But the whole effect was profoundly moving. The church authorities, all credit to them, have used the aids of modern spot-lighting and carefully-chosen panotrope-music to heighten the tension.

The most celebrated of all the medieval mystery plays, those known as the "York Cycle," are being staged in York. Or rather, a selection from them is being produced—for there are 48 in all. They stretch, in time, from the Creation to the Crucifixion. We know they were being acted as late as 1672, and that Shakespeare himself either must have seen them or, with all other Elizabethan dramatists, been full of their tradition.

The effect that these medieval morality and miracle plays had on the whole of later English drama was—I almost used the cliche "incalculable," but I really mean strictly calculable. They did a certain and definite thing. They abolished once and for all the classic Aristotelian idea of the "unities" in English drama. The French drama remained dominated by the unities. Shakespeare and all his contemporaries, born at a time when the miracle plays were still a current tradition in England, took not the faintest notice of the "unities" (of time, and place, and action, as defined by Aristotle). "Of what meaning were the 'unities' to the Elizabethans, who had seen in their miracle plays, Rome, Galilee, the Court of Herod, the Crucifixion, and the Court of Constantinople, in the course of a single May morning?" The miracle-play took centuries in their stride.

Shakespeare built his own majestic unity in "Antony and Cleopatra"—also to be seen in London during this Festival season—out of 42 scenes, ranging from Rome to Alexandria, and aboard a ship, and covering a period of 12 years. "Macbeth," the shortest and most compact of his tragedies, has 35 scenes. English renaissance drama at its finest was the direct inheritor of the freedom of the medieval mystery and miracle tradition.

CANTERBURY MEETING AT TOPEKA

★ The executive commission of the National Canterbury Association will meet at Bethany House, Topeka, Kansas, August 25-31. Attending this meeting will be two students from each of the eight provinces who will represent the Canterbury Clubs and Canterbury commissions in their area. John Morris, chairman for 1950-51, will preside until the election of new officers. Also present will be the advisers to the NCA, the Rev. Roger Blanchard, executive secretary of the National Council's division of college work, Captain Leslie Richardson, Church Society for College Work, the Rev. David R. Cochran, chaplain at the University of Washington, Seattle. Several of the provincial secretaries for college work may be present.

The purpose of the meeting will be to evaluate the accomplishments of the association since its founding last December, and to plan for the coming year how it can best help the mission of the Church on college and university campuses. On the agenda will be the appraisal of a draft copy of a "Canterbury Manual." It is expected that this manual, when placed in the hands of members and leaders of local Canterbury Clubs and of Canterbury Commissions, will aid them in their work by giving suggested programs, etc. The executive commission will also consider publishing a national newspaper for Canterbury Clubs.

SOUTH FLORIDA PLANS CONSECRATION

★ The Rev. Martin J. Bran will be consecrated suffragan bishop of South Florida on September 21st at Holy Trinity, West Palm Beach. Bishop Wing will be consecrator and Bishop Mason of Dallas and Bishop Burton of Nassau the co-consecrators. Presentors will be Bishop Juhan of Florida and Bishop West, coadjutor of Florida. Attending presbyters will be the Rev. W. F. Moses of Lakeland, Fla., and the Rev. A. Bruce Lauenborg of Ocala, Fla. Bishop Bloy of Los Angeles will preach.

BISHOP GILBERT HONORED BY FRANCE

★ Bishop Charles K. Gilbert, retired of New York, received the Cross of Officer of the French Legion of Honor on July 31 at ceremonies at the residence of the French Consul General, Roger Seydoux. The award, one of the highest French decorations for civilians, was made in recognition of his service to Franco-American friendship.

The Council General in his citation spoke particularly of Bishop Gilbert's efforts "to improve human conditions in the world"; of his work for Church unity and "his everlasting efforts for the assimilation of the foreign born."

In a brief address of thanks Bishop Gilbert said in part: "We know that today France has its problems, as well as the other nations of war-stricken Europe. I have the feeling that, in our governmental policies and in the attitude of our people, we have not been as helpful as we should be. Some of us, I know, are greatly distressed by the reports of our increasing unpopularity among these nations that are struggling to re-establish themselves and to overcome some of the destructive influences that have been let loose upon our world.

"As a Christian and a servant of the Church I have always felt under solemn obligation to do all in my power to promote justice and peace and good will among people. I can only wish that there were something I could do now, or persuade others to do, that would help to create that better understanding, that more active concern, that would be of some real service to France and its people in dealing with the problems with which they are now confronted."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BUCKSTEEP MANOR BUSY PLACE

★ Bucksteep Manor, conference center of the diocese of Western Massachusetts, is a busy place in the summer. The conference for youth ended on August 11 and was followed the next day with one on social relations. Leaders were the Rev. Donald O. Wilson, formerly of Springfield, now rector of St. Matthew's, Wilmington, Del.; Miss Dorothy Stabler, national Woman's Auxiliary; Mrs. Franck C. Chace, president of the state parent-teachers association. Other leaders were Kathleen Thornton, director of a children's home in Springfield; the Rev. Myron Fowell, secretary of the legislative committee of the Council of Churches; the Rev. Sergei Kargay, Russian Orthodox priest; Mrs. Vladimir Gan, who spoke on displaced persons and their problems.

Other conferences being held there this month are the Girls Friendly Society; one for those that have attended previous youth conferences; one for choir directors and organists; one for church school teachers.

ACTING PRESIDENT FOR TRINITY

★ Dean Arthur H. Hughes becomes acting president of Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., in order to release Keith Funston for his new job as president of the New York stock exchange. Selection of a new president is under consideration by a seven-man committee of trustees but no immediate recommendation is expected.

DANIEL BAKER COLLEGE RAISES FUNDS

★ Daniel Baker College, Brownwood, Texas, has launched a drive for a statewide campaign for $2,500,000 to be raised in five years. The money will be used to increase the endowment and to renovate old buildings and construct new ones. The trustees also authorized the purchase of a building adjacent to the campus which will be a women's dormitory.

Fifteen seniors graduated at the Trinity term commencement on August 4th, three of whom are postulants for orders.

JOHN GASS IS DEAD

★ The Rev. John Gass, 61, died at his home in St. Augustine, Fla., on August 14th. He had been the rector of St. Paul's, Troy, N. Y. from 1941 until forced to retire in 1949 because of a heart condition. In 1935 he left St. John's, Charleston, W. Va., where he had a notable ministry, to become rector of the Incarnation in New York. Five years later he received nationwide publicity with a "man-bite-dog" story. He called together the vestry of this well endowed parish and told them that the church did not justify its existence, with its well paid rector and elaborate music. The parish did however maintain a notable work among the foreign born on New York's east side, so he proposed that the parish church be closed and the endowment turned over to the Chapel of the Incarnation.

The vestry unanimously agreed after considerable persuading on the part of John Gass, but did so with the assumption that he would take charge of the east side work. But that was not his idea: "The present vicar is doing a better job than I could ever do. I'm resigning. I presume eventually I can find another parish."

Thus John Gass gave up what was then considered one of "the best parishes" and did so with his own future and livelihood uncertain.

The sequel to the story is that his sacrificial act came to naught, in spite of the support of the vestry, since a number of the women of the parish rallied behind the leadership of Mrs. Delano Roosevelt, mother of the President, with the cry: "We must save our dear old parish," with the result that the new vestry rescinded the action.

John Gass graduated from the University of the South in 1914, where the funeral was held August 16th, and from the Episcopal Theological School the following year. In 1918 he married Alice D. Strait and their one child is now the wife of a physician at the Mayo Clinic. With Bishop Gilbert of New York and the Rev. W. B. Spofford Sr. he served as a trustee of the estate of the late Bishop Robert L. Paddock.

DONALD ALDRICH SERIOUSLY ILL

★ Donald B. Aldrich, dean of the Princeton chapel, is seriously ill in a hospital in Massachusetts. He is not yet allowed to receive visitors but he is progressing well and it is expected that he will be able to return to Princeton after a period of convalescence.

BISHOP ANGUS DUN IN SWITZERLAND

★ Bishop Dun of Washington is now in Switzerland to attend meetings of the World Council of Churches. Canon Theodore Wedel, warden of the College of Preachers, is also attending these meetings. He is also to preach at St. Paul's Cathedral, London, on August 19th.

EDITORIALS

Drama and Evangelism

IN earlier times, before the days of mass education, when most people were unable to read and there was no broadcasting or cinema, the Church used the drama as one of her main methods of education and evangelism. It is not unlikely that such will be the case again. No one would doubt that some of the best modern plays are definitely Christian in their values and, what is perhaps more surprising, are attracting the crowds. Even the more hard-baked critics can no longer shut their eyes to the fact that Christian dramatists have something to say which is worthy of their attention.

It is not our purpose to discuss the theme or production of the religious plays which have recently appeared; rather are we concerned to draw attention to the fact that the Church has here, if she will use it, a most potent instrument for evangelism. This is because religious drama does not depend for its power, in the last resort, upon highly polished acting, but upon the sincerity and utter dedication of those taking part in it. This was recently illustrated to perfection by the production, in a London church, of Mr. R. H. Ward's play, The Holy Family. The players were a team of young people from Sheffield who, for the most part, earn their livings in the great steel works of that city. The unique thing about this performance was that a group of Christians was communicating to the audience their experience of Christ. This was "preaching" in its purest form; the audience was confronted by the gospel.

But behind this is an even more interesting fact. Many of the actors who take part in these plays become Christians as a result of their participation in them. It is not a case of persuading the Church dramatic society to do a religious play, but of starting with a group of young factory workers in a youth club who have probably never been to church in their lives. Ironically enough, church dramatic groups often think that modern religious plays are highbrow and they tend to prefer the light comedy which is completely devoid of any intellectual or spiritual contest. What a wonderful chance is so often missed. Why should a church dramatic society not use its talents for the deepening of the spiritual life of its members as well as for the evangelization of its neighborhood?

Unique Methods

DRAMA is not only a method of evangelism; it is an excellent medium for Christian education. For some years a group of Christians has been working on a technique called "Religion through Drama" which demonstrates the educational use of drama. Instead of starting with a ready-made play and learning it by heart, this method begins with a theme on which research has to be done. The group proceeds to construct a play embodying the result of its reading of the subject and the play is then produced on the stage before an audience. The method has proved very successful with boys and girls in the higher forms of grammar schools. It calls for initiative and inventiveness as well as skill in the making of scenery and costumes. In return, the young people learn a great deal about the subject in hand. This method lends itself particularly well to historical and biographical subjects but it has also been used effectively for teaching the creeds and the comparative study of religion.

Drama, because it engages mind and emotions, is well suited as a method of religious education. Too often, the gospel is presented in dry intellectual terms which offer no emotional outlet. Those who react against this tend to present religion as an emotional appeal devoid of any mental content. Good drama is both intellectually stimulating and emotionally satisfying and is, in addition, an activity which calls for many and varied talents. It can occupy a team of young people, using the gifts of each one and yet teaching them to cooperate with one another. In addition drama

"Quotes"

FULL and free discussion has indeed been the first article of our faith. We have founded our political system on it. It has been the safeguard of every religious, political, philosophical, economic, and racial group amongst us. We have counted on it to keep us from embracing what is cheap and false; we have trusted the common sense of our people to choose the doctrine true to our genius and to reject the rest. This has been the one single outstanding tenet that has made our institutions the symbol of freedom and equality. We have deemed it more costly to liberty to suppress a despised minority than to let them vent their spleen. We have above all else feared the political censor. We have wanted a land where our people can be exposed to all the diverse creeds and cultures of the world.

—WILLIAM O. DOUGLAS
Justice of the Supreme Court

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

is outward-looking. The activity of the group is shared with the audience and so it is able to pass on to a wider circle something of its own enthusiasm. In some parishes, dramatic performances have been given in the open air and have attracted people which the more old-fashioned open-air service had failed to reach.

Festival Year

DURING the Festival year interest in religious drama has been particularly marked. (See Story of the Week, page three). The interesting and important question that has occurred to some minds is whether, from the evangelistic standpoint, the revival of ancient morality plays makes the most of the occasion. Fine though they are in message, presentation and language the audience may look upon them as mainly of historical and academic value. Religious drama should aim at bringing home to the people who see it their own spiritual predicament and their own need.

If drama is to be more widely used by the Church, a demand for more and better religious plays will be created. While it is quite true that some of our leading poets and play writers are now producing Christian plays, it is also true that many of these require, for their appreciation, a standard of education far beyond that of most of their fellow-Christians. On the other hand, many of the short plays, including nativity and passion plays, which are on the market, are unworthy of their great themes. The Church has an important responsibility in regard to the creative arts. While they must be of the highest quality, they must still be within the compass of the average churchgoer. Above all, they must be true and in no way distort the gospel which they claim to present. There has been some improvement of late in the hymns used in public worship; but the depths to which Church music was allowed to sink should be a warning to us when we consider the wider use of drama. In this connection, we would commend the work of the Religious Drama Society as well as the setting up, on a diocesan basis, of a panel of advisers in religious drama. It is but to acknowledge the power of the medium to realize the amount of harm that a poor play, indifferently produced, can do to players and audience alike.

—Church of England Newspaper

Racial and Cultural Relations

BY
KATRINA B. ANDERSON
Social Service Dept., Diocese of Massachusetts

HAVING just attended the institute on racial and cultural relations at Lincoln University, I am on fire to share this experience of real Christian fellowship with others. The five days I spent at this conference have made a profound impression on my life. God seemed very near as we lived in harmony with one another, and wrestled with the problem of bringing a more Christian brotherhood into our world today.

The delegates and faculty at the institute comprised persons from five denominations, and three races, with two persons from Germany, who had been brought to the United States by the National Council of Churches, which also sponsored the institute. They came from as far north as Vermont, and as far south as Florida, extending to Nebraska in the west—a truly ecumenical and intercultural fellowship.

The findings of the institute may be grouped under three main headings:—the local church, the layman and the community, and the clergyman and the community. J. Oscar Lee, executive director of the department of racial and cultural relations of the National Council, gave us the background of the problem, explaining how inaccurately the term race has been used, when in reality there are only three main races: the Caucasian, the Mongoloid, and the Negroid, with a fourth composite type. He explained that the problem is not one of a superior or inferior race, but how well an individual has reacted to the culture in which he lives. After discussing the main causes of prejudice, and describing the six divergent groups in the United States, he told us that each one of these groups (American Indians, Chinese, Negroes, Japanese-American, Jews and Spanish-speaking groups) had been denied full participation in our American society because of discrimination in regard to housing, employment, education, and business, transportation and hotel facilities, and other public services.

Experiments in making an integrated church, inclusive of all races and nationalities, were described by two clergymen who had been working in this field. Rev. Arnold Dahlquist, former rector of St. Mark's Evangelical Lutheran Church in Jamaica, New York, told of the steps he took to transform a weak parish of white communicants, located in a section where business was moving in and residents were moving to the suburbs, into a strong parish with Negro and white people participating in the worship and work of the church. A somewhat similar church was formed in the Mott Haven Reformed Church, New York, by Rev. Frederick Buttenbaum, where a new non-segregated housing project had been erected, with many Protestant Negro families moving in. By adding a young Negro associate minister to the staff, he was able to reach the people in this new addition to the community, and arouse the interest and cooperation of his white congregation to participate in the program of an inclusive church.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Leaders Role

IT was repeatedly brought out in the conference, where many clergy were delegates, that unless the leaders were committed to the task of bringing real brotherhood into the church and community, little could be expected. However, the laymen and women present were reminded that the church was composed of all persons who professed to follow Jesus Christ, and that therefore it was incumbent on them to assume responsibility in the matter of making Christian ideals live in the place where they resided. As Jesse Belmont Barber, former dean of Lincoln University, and the chaplain of the institute, said in his last vesper service, we must bring the Incarnate Lord into our daily living, and translate his ideals into everyday experiences.

Maurice Fagan of the Philadelphia commission mentioned some of the significant developments which have taken place in the past decade, stating that in 1941, no one had heard of the F. E. P. C., and that the whole concept of the problem has changed so that instead of labelling it a "Jewish," "Negro," or a "minority" problem, it is now called a community problem. He showed how the important Supreme Court decisions have opened the doors of all except five of our state universities to Negroes as well as whites, and how F. E. P. C. laws have been passed in more than twenty states and cities. However, he warned that there was still much to be done. For instance, after a member of a minority group has secured employment, what about his promotion, and up-rating? The question of private housing has hardly been touched, as shown by the Cicero outrage recently. Police practices are still discriminatory in many places, and the city of Washington, D. C., presents a tremendous problem to be tackled. Laws should be passed prohibiting filibustering so that progressive legislation can be enacted, and immigration bills must be watched. The private institutions of higher learning, such as the Church theological schools, and privately-endowed colleges and universities, private schools, hospitals, and homes for aged and orphans, all present a challenge.

Rev. Tollie L. Caution, secretary for Negro work of the Episcopal Church, gave a clear analysis of the conditions in our Church seminaries and private institutions for learning, and suggested concrete ways of attacking the problem.

Evil of Colonialism

ALMOST thoughtful and scholarly address was given by George Kelsey, of the National Council of Churches, on "Racism in relation to certain factors of western culture," in which he stated that colonialism, materialism and complacency on our part were responsible for much of the world's evil conditions today. We "preach what the people want to hear" rather than the Christian gospel of the brotherhood of man, according to Dr. Kelsey.

The president of Lincoln University, Dr. Bond, in welcoming the group, said to his mind racism was the most dreadful "disease" in the world today, a psychopathic disease, which only applied Christianity could cure.

The guidance of the institute was in the hands of William H. McConaghy, minister of the First Presbyterian Church in Syracuse, N. Y., who set the tone of fellowship, and wisely planned the program. His Scotch wit, and friendly attitude, did much to break down any barriers that we might have had at the start. The spirit of the whole conference was wonderful, and I wish everyone reading this could have joined in the singing! The last night, after Dr. Barber had urged us to "keep the faith," we sang "Climbing Jacob's Ladder," and as the voices mounted in "every rung goes higher, higher, Christian brothers," one felt the glory of the goal and the strength of the fellowship of kindred spirits working together to reach the goal!

In all the addresses, and in the democratic group discussions following them, the emphasis was on action, not just emotion in thinking of the problem of racism. Definite, concrete suggestions were made for each one of us, after we had acquainted ourselves with the problem in our local community. In the field of education, we were urged to see to it that representatives of minority groups were placed on the board of trustees of institutions of learning, as well as on the faculty, and to open the doors to all students, regardless of race or culture. Text books should be watched to see that undesirable material in regard to race be omitted. In housing, citizen groups should be organized to influence municipal and state authorities against segregation in public housing, and practical ways of helping individuals to secure private homes in desirable localities were given. We must see to it that F. E. P. C. is enforced, where it exists, and work to have it enacted where there is no F. E. P. C., and we must be very sure that the Church itself does not practice discrimination. Hospitals present a similar problem, and the boards of trustees, staff of physicians and nurses, as well as care of patients, should avoid discrimination.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Christianity the Key

AGAIN and again, it was stressed that the Christian religion furnishes the key to the problem, and we cannot expect to accomplish reforms without the help and power of God. Prayer is essential in this matter. If we ask God to help us to carry out the command of Jesus that they all be one, we will find that "we can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth us."

ALGER L. ADAMS, managing editor of the Bulletin of the diocese of New York and formerly with the Amsterdam News, is to present a series of reports for THE WITNESS, starting in an early number, on what dioceses and parishes are doing about discrimination and segregation

Consider the Cost

BY

PHILIP F. McNAIRY
Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Buffalo

THERE is a great gulf between a plan and its fulfillment. It is one thing to have a dream or a goal. It is another thing to make that goal a reality. The success stories that have been written, with few exceptions, record the long, difficult and costly effort that has gone into the achievement. There was once a thoughtless young man who approached our Lord with the question, "What good thing shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" The reply was devastating. "Sell all that thou hast and give it to the poor . . . and come, follow me." It was a deglamorized picture of discipleship which he received, with a high cost to be paid. To spare others such disheartenment, Christ said, "For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first and considereth the cost whether he have sufficient to finish it?" Life is full of intended steps which we cannot make until we consider the cost.

Graduations eclipse the heartaches of those who "didn't make it." The failures were not willing to face the reality of the price to be paid for a diploma—study and hard work. The highway of life is strewn with the wreckage of broken marriages simply because the contracting parties had their eyes on the stardust and failed to notice that the cost of happiness is self-sacrifice, sharing, the discipline of understanding, forgiveness and love.

Today the thunder of high explosives on battlefields is grim witness to the fact that the nations shall not have peace unless and until they are willing to pay the price of establishing it on some other basis than competition for world influence and access to materials, upon devaluated humanity and inflated currency. The price of peace is the will for peace implanted in the leaders of the nations; it is a spiritual ingredient which is not added to the surface of life, but which must be built, at a cost, into the fire of men.

Whether we are concerned with the proper use of knowledge, with the establishment of a home, or with a world fit to live in, the basic fact of our consideration must be character. The key to reliable, constructive character is Christian discipleship. It is at this point that the matter of cost is particularly relevant. The plan for Christian character has been ours in the ideal stage for centuries. Today it is the structure we need; but we did not consider the cost. A self-centered life is of no use when the need for prayer arises. A life that worshipped popularity or prestige is ill-equipped to worship God. An egotist who relied solely upon his own ingenuity and resourcefulness is at a loss to find help in faith when his own inadequacy finally overtakes him. The family whose little circle of contentment has excluded all other interests is dealt a lethal blow by the departure of the children or by the death of its head. How much of the emptiness might have been spared the remaining members had they all considered their relationship in the light of its spiritual implications. The life that is lived solely for today must look at its impending end with tremendous fear. How much it might have gained had it been directed toward eternal life, with each day, year and decade a milestone toward that supreme end, the presence of God. It is more than a riddle—"He that seeketh to save his life shall lose it." It is the key to our very existence. For there follows the price quotation and its consequence. "He that loseth his life for my sake, the same shall save it."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

RHODE ISLAND LAYMEN HAVE MEETING

★ Members of the laymen's missionary society of Rhode Island met July 15th at the conference center at Pascoag, with General John Lee, vice-president of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew the headliner, who gave a quiet talk on the spiritual values of life, based on prayer and service.

SOUTH CAROLINA PLANS CLERGY CONFERENCE

★ Bishop Everett Jones of West Texas is to be the leader of a conference of the clergy of South Carolina, September 11-13.

A TREE GROWS IN YONKERS

★ A three-foot tree was discovered the other day growing on the roof of St. John's, Yonkers, N. Y. It is believed that a bird dropped a seed on the roof.

NOTABLES VISIT CATHEDRAL

★ Celebrating the 50th anniversary of the choir, the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York had a special service, with former choir booys participating. Two of the ex-choir boys who held a reunion were Burgess Meredith who once played Peter Pan, and the singer who played his father, Lanny Ross.

THEOLOGICAL EDUCATION SUNDAY

★ The Presiding Bishop has named January 27 as theological education Sunday. He urges that sermons be preached that day on the importance of supporting our seminaries and that offering be taken for them.

COUNCIL OFFICIALS TO ATTEND SYNOD

★ Eight officers of the National Council are to attend the synod of the midwest province, meeting Sept. 18-20 at St. Andrew's, Ann Arbor, Michigan. They are Bishop Bentley, head of the overseas work; the Rev. George Wieland, head of home department; the Rev. Almon Pepper, head of social service; the Rev. John Heuss, head of education; Russell E. Dill, treasurer; Mrs. Arthur M. Sherman, head of the Auxiliary; Robert D. Jordon, head of promotion and the Rev. Roger Blanchard, director of college work.

Turn your spare time into easy, extra dollars! Show ARTISTIC Christmas Cards. 21-Card De-Luxe Assortment is a sensational on-sight seller at just $1. Popular Comics, Gift Wraps, Religious, Personal Stationery, and others add to your earnings. Also show FREE Samples of new Name-Imprinted Christmas Cards. You keep up to 50c per box cash profit! No experience needed.

SEND NO MONEY!

Drop us a penny postcard. We'll mail you new Christmas Assortments on approval and FREE Imprint Samples. Also details of our sensational $2500.00 CASH PRIZE CONTEST. Don't delay. Write Today!

ARTISTIC CARD CO., INC.
348 Way St., Elmira, New York

21-Card Bright Poinsettias Christmas Box

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
REPLACEMENT OR REFUND OF MONEY IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

Sudbury CHURCH WORSHIP AIDS

Have your dealer show you the wide variety of well made church appointments we produce

FOR COMPLETE CATALOG SEND TO
SUDBURY BRASS GOODS CO.
55 SUDBURY STREET, BOSTON 14, MASS.

CHURCH BULLETINS

Every progressive church should use Winters' De Luxe Bulletin Board. Dignified, effective, and economical. Over 7,000 IN USE. Increase attendance, interest and collections. Write today for Illus. Catalog H. E. Winters Specialty Company, Davenport, Iowa.

Mitchell FOLD-O-LEG tables

The strongest, handiest folding table made. For banquet, church and school use. Write for descriptive folder.

MITCHELL MFG. COMPANY
2748 S. 34th St., Milwaukee 7, Wis. Dept. W

MAKE QUICK EASY CASH! FREE SAMPLES!

SELL Empire CHRISTMAS CARDS

Big new line — sure fire sellers. Gorgeous $1 Christmas and All-Occasion Assortments. Metallic, plastic, comic cards. Surprise gift items. Top value name printed Christmas Cards 25 for $1 up. Animated children's books. Scented stationery. NO EXPERIENCE NEEDED—Costs nothing to try. Fund raising plan for churches and clubs. Special offers. Extra Cash Bonus. Write now for samples.

50 Name Printed Cards $1.25

Personalized STATIONERY Napkins - Coasters

100% CASH PROFIT! SEND NO MONEY

247 Fox St.
EMPIRE CARD CO. ELMIRA, NEW YORK

ENCYCLOPEDIA OF RELIGION

VERGILIUS FERM, Editor
with 190 Collaborators

"THIS encyclopedia of religion deserves a warm welcome. It is published at what, in view of its bulk and contents, must be regarded as a most modest price. In clear print it embraces tens of thousands of articles. All the significant religions of the world are included, Christian, Jewish, Moslem, Buddhist, Hindu and the rest. A truly great achievement."
—N. Y. Times

"There is every prospect that this will be a volume too frequently used to be allowed ever to get far out of reach."
—The Christian Century

Subjects Include:

- Religions of the World
- Protestant Denominations
- Biblical Terms
- Church History
- Founders of Religions
- Rituals and Religious Practices, etc.

900 Pages Limited Edition

-Special Order Coupon-

PHILOSOPHICAL LIBRARY, Publishers
15 E. 40th St., Desk 579, New York 16, N. Y.

Enclosed is $..... for ..... copy(ies) of the ENCYCLOPEDIA OF RELIGION, at $10 per copy.

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

(Expedite shipment by enclosing remittance)

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

ACCEPT RESIGNATION OF T. C. CHAO

★ The central committee of the World Council of Churches, meeting at Geneva, Switzerland, August 4-11, accepted the resignation of T. C. Chao of China as one of its six presidents. The letter from Dr. Chao gave as the reasons for his resignation the fact that the committee at its meeting in Toronto last summer had condemned North Korea as an aggressor and expressed doubts about the so-called Stockholm peace appeal.

Likewise during a discussion on international affairs, a representative of Bishop Albert Bereczky, ministerial president of the Hungarian Reformed Church, asked the committee to change the bishop's status at future session to that of "merely an observer." The request was based on the fact that the Hungarian Church objected also to the committee's statement concerning Korea.

Elected to fill the vacancy caused by Dr. Chao's resignation was Miss Sarah Chakko of India, a member of the Mar Thoma Church which claims to have been founded by the Apostle Thomas. After graduating from Queen Mary's College, Madras, she did graduate work at Michigan and Chicago universities.

Also elected a president was Archbishop Athenagoras of Greece, filling the vacancy caused by the death of Archbishop Germanos. He was for some time head of a Greek Orthodox college in Philadelphia and later became the bishop of his Church in Boston. He returned to Greece under appointment as Apostolic Delegate from the Ecumenical Patriarchate to the Hellenic Church in Athens. He returned again to the United States as Metropolitan of Philadelphia and early this year, on the death of Archbishop Germanos, he was appointed Archbishop of Thyateira and Exarch of the Ecumenical Patriarchate of Constantinople for central and western Europe, with residence in London.

Bishop Bell of Chichester, in his report as chairman of the committee, stressed the concern of the World Council over the growing intensity of international tensions. "All the members of the executive committee, as indeed all the Churches represented in the Council, loathe war. They realize to the full the ruinous consequences with which the world is threatened, should war break out. They therefore believe that the utmost efforts should be made at every point possible to prevent war starting. But peace is not a magic condition which can be conjured up by the stroke of a pen. The present international situation has lasted too long and it is too complex in origin to admit of a quick termination or of a simple solution. Nor are they true friends of peace who, while crying out for peace, create strife and so intensify division."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

NEWS OF OTHER CHURCHES

BAN BUILDING OF CHURCHES

A 60-day ban on starting new construction of churches, schools, hospitals and other institutional buildings has been ordered by the national production administration. Officials said it was necessary because of the shortage of steel and copper needed in the armament program. At the end of this period much stricter controls will be applied, with authorization required for any structure using more than two tons of steel or 200 pounds of copper. Prior to the ruling the administration had pointed out that what was probably the greatest volume of new church construction in history was started in July — more than $42,000,000.

SOCIAL CONDITIONS IN RURAL AREAS

Town and country churches should play a leading role in improving social conditions in rural areas several speakers told delegates to a rural church institute meeting in Raleigh, N. C. The dignity of labor, worth of the individual, world peace and social relations were among the subjects stressed.

OPPOSE TAX EXEMPTION FOR SCHOOLS

A referendum move to repeal a California law exempting non-profit parochial and private schools from taxation has been endorsed by the Presbyterian synod of the state. The law is supported by the Roman, Lutheran and Seventh-Day Adventists which have a large number of schools in the state.

BUSINESS MEN PROVIDE TRANSPORTATION

Four business men of Hot Springs, Ark., have begun what they hope will develop into a nationwide back-to-church crusade. They are paying the fares on street cars and buses to and from church for anyone who states that that is where he is going.

UNITED BRETHREN URGE SOCIAL ACTION

Protestants must guard against any tendency to look upon Christianity as "a cultural religion" rather than as "a faith that transcends and redeems history." This warning was contained in a report adopted by the committee on social action of the United Brethren. It stressed regarding "all men as equal before God"; warned that "in the clamor and clash of a hating world, people are forgetting moral values" and expressed doubt that "we can overcome the threat of Communism simply with military power" or that "problems can be solved by dropping A-bombs." The report also stated that efforts must be made to safeguard the rights of conscientious objectors.

RADIO FREQUENCIES REFUSED CHURCHES

A petition that churches and other non-profit organizations be permitted to operate low-power frequency modulation radio stations has been denied in a 4-2 decision of the federal communications commission. The majority stated that insufficient evidence had been presented of a need for the stations.

POINT IV PROGRAM THREATENED

Concern that the point four program for overseas economic and cultural development may suffer because of the large amount being allotted to foreign military aid was voiced at a conference of Quakers by Roy Bailey, secretary of the Friends committee on national legislation.

FIRST SOUTH DAKOTA MONASTERY

A 576-acre farm is being transformed into a monastery by the Benedictine Monks, first R. C. monastery in South Dakota. The abbey, built at a cost of $750,000, will serve as headquarters for mission work in the Dakotas and as a seminary for missionaries to the Indians.

CHURCH MEMBERSHIP PASSES 84 MILLION MARK

American church membership has passed the 84 million mark, according to a release by the Southern Baptists. Fifty Protestant groups with a membership of more than 50,000 each reported a total of 48,554,954 and the R. C. Church reported 27,66,144. The balance includes Jewish congregations, various Orthodox Churches and small sects.

CONSIDER PERMANENT SITE FOR NATIONAL COUNCIL

A committee of twenty-five Church leaders will meet in New York Sept. 20 to consider the city where the National Council of Churches will have its permanent headquarters. It is temporarily quartered in six different buildings in New York, with a midwest office in Chicago. Cities that have expressed an interest are Chicago, Springfield, Ill., Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Indianapolis, Fort Wayne, Evansville, South Bend, Wycoff, N. J., New York.

LUTHERANS SCORE SEGREGATION

Racial segregation in churches was scored at a conference of Lutherans with delegates attending from all parts of the country. Alvin W. Rose, professor of sociology at North Carolina College, told the delegates: "You know better than I that the church is America's most segregated institution. More than 96% of American Negroes and whites worship in segregated churches." (Note: the Rev. Alger L. Adams of the Witness editorial board is to present soon a series of reports on what dioceses and parishes are doing about discrimination and segregation).

EARN MONEY
GORGEOUS NEW PERSONAL
Christmas Cards
Show magnificent Low-Priced Personal Card Lines—name-imprinted—orders shipped direct to customers! Also big Album DeLuxe Personal Cards. Plus 40 Christmas & Everyday Asst's. including 21-Card "Feature" Box—sells $1.00—profit up to 50c—and Gift Wrapping Ensembles, Gift Items, others! Sensational DeLuxe Foil Christmas Assortment. Personal Card Samples FREE: "Feature" Assortment sent on approval. WALLACE BROWN, INC., 225 Fifth Ave., Dept. B54, New York 10

Scriptural—Artistically designed
WORSHIP FOLDERS
Large assortment—Self Selection
Lithographed—Special Days—General use
Ecclesiastical Art Press
Dept. W Louisville 12, Ky.
FREE CATALOG

I Want to Contact New WRITERS
who are interested in cashing checks of $1 to $100, offered every day. The easiest way to write for pay. No previous experience necessary. Send for FREE DETAILS. No obligation.
SAUNDERS M. CUMMINGS
468 Indep. Bldg., Colorado Springs, Colo.

FOR HIGH EXTRA EARNINGS... Sell HYCREST Christmas Cards!
Make money this easy way! Just show HYCREST Christmas Cards to people you know. EMBOSSED Christmas Cards with name sell on sight at 50 for $1.25 up. 35 other fast-selling Christmas Assortments. Make up to 100% profit. No experience needed. Write for FREE Imprint Samples, and Assortments on approval.
HYCREST CARD COMPANY, Dept. 918
78 CHAUNCY STREET, BOSTON 11, MASS.

CASH IN ON YOUR SPARE TIME
SELL WONDERFUL REGAL CHRISTMAS CARDS NOT OBTAINABLE ELSEWHERE
Here's the big money maker. Marvelous Christmas cards exclusive with our agents. 25 sell for 1.00. Also 50 for 1.25. Name handsomely imprinted. 150 other boxes with profits to 100%. Bonus. Free samples. Kit on approval.
REGAL GREETING CARD CO.
Dept. LG-8, Ferndale, Michigan

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT, Book Editor

The Word Lives On. Edited by Frances Brentano. Doubleday. $3.95.

There will always be anthologies! Those who like to make collections continue to assemble the material and publishers continue to issue the volumes, so people must read them. This collection includes such varied selections as excerpts from Alan Paton's Cry, the Beloved Country and Mark Twain's explanation that only novice angels try to fly with their wings, while the old hands know that they are only for decoration. The 64 selections are made on the widest basis of religious interest, regarding religion as "the passion for righteousness and the spread of righteousness felt as a cosmic demand."—Sydney Temple

Protestant Thought in the Twentieth Century. Ed. by Arnold S. Nash. Macmillan. $3.75.

This is a "survey" volume, covering the first half of the century, and endeavoring to appraise not only the "whence" but also the "whither." There are excellent chapters by experts in Old Testament, New Testament, Systematic Theology, Church History, Pastoral Theology, Reunion, and so on; and also an excellent introductory chapter by Professor Nash on "America at the End of the Protestant Era." It is a very "live" book, and will be useful to many besides theologians and theological students.

The England of Elizabeth. By A. L. Rowse. Macmillan. $6.50.

This is a big, beautifully printed, beautifully illustrated history of the age of Elizabeth, written by a scholar who knows the period and also knows how to write. His earlier books on English History, on Cornwall, and his own autobiographical "Cornish Childhood" have taught us what to expect from his pen. The sources are used with skill and discrimination. For example, what he says of Bishop Jewel and his point of view on p. 435: "As for the relation of the Church to the state, it was in essence a continuation of the medieval position in regard to the two spheres, spiritual and temporal, with the Papal ascendancy omitted." This was not something new, and England was not the only country to opt to rule its own branch of the Church. "It was in truth part of the secular movement of the Northern peoples away from the tutelage of Rome." Not only is this an excellent and well-balanced history; it is an extremely readable one.

Daily Prayer Book: Ha-siddur ha-shalem. Tr. and annotated by Philip Birnbaum. Hebrew Publ. Co. $3.50.

This is a beautiful new translation and annotated edition of the Jewish Prayer Book, using modern English except in direct address to God (where Thee, Thou, Thy are still used). This is the rule of the new R.S.V. New Testament, and seems sound. Too much of the Bible and Prayer Book, both Jewish and Episcopalian, is still in an archaic language, not understanded of the people. The book is beautifully printed and should be studied by every Christian interested in Judaism, liturgics, prayer and worship, comparative religion, or the background of the New Testament—since much in the Jewish Prayer Book is very old and traditional, much of it even pre-Christian.

Reviews by Dr. Grant unless otherwise signed

S. P. G. First; then Theological Seminaries

Two hundred and fifty years ago this summer the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel was founded to provide clergy for the building up of the life of the Church in this country.

After independence, the next great step in this direction was the establishment, beginning in 1817, of our own theological seminaries to train our own clergy.

Like the S. P. G., our seminaries have from the first been supported by the voluntary gifts and bequests of those who believe in the mission of the Episcopal Church.

* * * *

Berkeley Divinity School, New Haven, Conn.; Bexley Hall, Gambier, Ohio; Church Divinity School of the Pacific, Berkeley, Calif.; Divinity School of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia; Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass.; The General Theological Seminary, New York City; Nashotah House, Nashotah, Wis.; School of Theology of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.; Seabury-Western Theological Seminary, Evanston, Ill.; Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

I Have $50 For You!

Sell only 100 sensational value 21-card $1.00 Christmas Assortments! FREE Book tells you how to get big orders easily. Also show Gift Wraps, "Hoppie" and other Children's Christmas Books. Date and Address Books. Stationery and Gifts. Over 100 other fast-selling items for all members of the family. Name-Imprinted Christmas Cards 40 for $1.00 and up. Start earning with FREE IMPRINT SAMPLES. Assortments on approval. Extra Profit Bonus!

Write Now! Send No Money.

PHILLIPS CARD CO., 113 HUNT ST., NEWTON, MASS.

ST. JAMES LESSONS

A nine course series of instruction for Episcopal Church Schools including illustrated work books—150-250 pages (60c each) and teachers' manuals I, II, III 40c each, IV through IX 60c each).

No Samples - Payment with orders

St. James Lessons, Inc.

865 Madison Ave., Dpt. 5, N. Y. 21, N. Y.

MAKE EASY MONEY

Sell Religious Christmas Cards

Cash in on big demand for Religious Christmas Cards. 21-Card best-selling Midwest Christmas assortment sells for $1—pays you up to 50c. Each card with Scripture quotation and appropriate illustration. Samples on approval start you selling immediately . . . without experience. Also get FREE Samples of Name-Imprint Christmas Cards, 50 for $1.25 and up.

CASH for Church & Club Groups

Get your club group started earning immediately. Show big line of Christmas and Everyday Cards including "Secret Pal" Assortment, Stationery, Novelties. It's fun—and an easy way to raise extra money. Special Party Plan. Write for details and samples today.

Get FREE Samples

MIDWEST CARD CO., Dept. M54
1113 WASHINGTON AVENUE, ST. LOUIS 1, MISSOURI

FINEST PURE IRISH LINEN

For all Church uses

Just received from Belfast a new fine lightweight linen for Surplices in 39"—1.65 per yard. Also qualities and width for Albs, Fair Linen, etc., Patterns and Supplies, Books.

Samples Free

MARY FAWCETT COMPANY

BOX 386 CHILLICOTHE, MO.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

VESTMENTS

Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves
Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries
Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars
Custom Tailoring for Clergymen

1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951

COX SONS & VINING, Inc.
131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

CASSOCKS

Surplices — Choir Vestments
Eucharistic Vestments
Altar Hangings and Linens
Prices Sent on Request

J. M. HALL, INC.
14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.
Tel. CH 4-3306

PEOPLE

DEATHS:

ANNIE J. LOWE, a nurse of the China mission staff from 1910 until her retirement in 1937, died July 26 at Fairhaven, Mass.

ORDINATIONS:

WARWICK AIKEN JR., was ordained priest on July 27 by Bishop Gray at the Epiphany, Tunica, Miss., where he is in charge.

JAMES H. REES was ordained deacon on July 31 by Bishop Keeler at St. John's, Worthington, Minn., where he is in charge.

A. L. ZEPHIER and STEPHEN MOCCASIN were ordained priests by Bishop Roberts on July 31 at St. Katharine's, Martin, S. D. The former is ass't on the Corn Creek mission; the latter ass't on the Rosebud mission.

CLERGY CHANGES:

M. DENNIS LEE, formerly rector of Trinity, Seneca Falls, N. Y., is now rector of St. John's, Marcellus, N. Y.

L. B. RASMUSSON, formerly rector of the Atonement, Philadelphia, is now rector of St. Thomas's, Brooklyn.

H. C. McKEE, formerly rector of Christ Church, Bowling Green, Ky., is now rector of St. Martin's, New Orleans.

E. B. INLOW, formerly curate at St. Luke's, San Francisco, is now vicar of St. Mark's, Crockett, Cal.

M. M. MORRIS, formerly curate at St. Mark's, San Antonio, is now rector of All Saints, San Benito, Texas.

E. M. CHAPMAN, ass't at Calvary, Pittsburgh, becomes rector of St. John's, Plymouth, Mich., Sept. 15.

F. C. B. BELLISS, associate rector of All Saints, Pasadena, becomes rector of St. Luke's, Long Beach, Cal., Sept. 1.

W. H. CLARK, formerly in charge of St. Peter's, Monroe, Conn., is now rector of Trinity, Concord, Mass.

G. F. GILMORE, rector of All Saints, Appleton, Wis., becomes rector of St. Paul's, Yonkers, N. Y., Sept. 1.

LEWIS E. WARD, rector of St. Luke's, Jamestown, N. Y. since 1929, is to retire Sept. 1 and be rector emeritus of the parissh.

SAMUEL A. GLASGOW, recently a special student at Philadelphia Divinity School, is now ass't at Christ Church, Little Rock, Ark.

CURATE WANTED

A young man as assistant in Evangelical parish in the north midwestern states. An unusual opportunity for the right man for varied work in large parish. Must be able to take over the direction of large church school, and an unusually fine program for young people in high school, college and business. Good salary and attractive apartment. Write Box G of THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

Books of Remembrance

Record the life history of your church along with the names of those whose gifts have benefited your church.

Beautiful, hand-tooled leather books with hand-engrossed pages are exhibited in carved repositories.

Also, exquisite stained glass windows and church furnishings. Send for our catalog.

WHITTEMORE ASSOCIATES, INC.
16 ASHBURTON PLACE, BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS
EST. 1877

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS

Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY

Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS

Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.

SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

Exquisite
IRISH LINENS
BY THE YARD

From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States, I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values; unsurpassed quality, imported direct from Ireland. Also transfer patterns, linen tape, and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 3 inches at 75c, 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.00.

MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

THE BISHOP WHITE
PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833

Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.

PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)

Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

RICHARD R. PRICE
Rector at Hamilton, Mont.

Professor Chad Walsh's very fine article in your July 12 issue appears to ignore the invitation immediately preceding the confession (Prayer Book, p. 75). Who but the recipient himself and God can judge whether he meets the tests set forth in this invitation? How can a priest repeat those gracious and hospitable words, "Ye who . . . draw near with faith, and take this Holy Sacrament to your comfort . . ." and then refuse to give it?

The intent of the rubric following the confirmation office will continue to be debatable, one group following the letter of the law, the other holding that it was to prevent administering the communion to infants or others too young to understand. But, regarding a conflict between this rubric and the invitation, I cannot see but what the latter should prevail.

Urging indiscriminate participation of non-members I would oppose, but permitting under special conditions those not members of the Episcopal Church to be helped and strengthened by reception of the sacrament is desirable, and often of evangelical value. The depth of the experience impels many a person to seek confirmation and full membership. I like Bishop Slattery's idea of treating such with the courtesy one would extend to a "guest," with the hope that he may become a member of God's family. We should always remember that the sacrament is not the priest's but God's, and God's Son was by habit lavishly generous. If in doubt, let us yield to charity rather than legalism, while waiting, as Professor Walsh does, in sorrow, but may it also be in confidence, for the day of "deliberate union of fragmented Christianity."

I thought this number of your paper especially good.

NURSES WANTED

General staff nurses and one nurse anesthetist eligible for registration in Colorado, a 144 bed Church Hospital located in Southern Colorado, near mountain resorts. Forty-four hour work week, liberal personnel policies, including Social Security. For information—write Director of Nurses, Parkview Episcopal Hospital, Pueblo, Colorado.

ST. LUKE'S SCHOOL
Episcopal Day School under the direction of Trinity Parish
Nursery, Kindergarten, Elementary Grades. After School play groups. Coeducational. Moderate tuition. For catalogue and further information communicate with
THE REV. PAUL C. WEED, JR.
Headmaster
Hudson & Grove Sts., NEW YORK 14, N. Y.
Phone WAtkins 4-5960

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL
Coeducational Episcopal Day School
Prepares for leading secondary schools. Sound academic training. Kindergarten thru 8th grade. French and Latin emphasized. Complete testing program. Est. 1894. Music, drama, arts & crafts, sports. Bus service. Hot lunch. Tel: AL 4-2000
E. ALLISON GRANT, Headmaster
88 E. Fourth Ave. (11th St.), N. Y. 3

Shattuck School
FOUNDED 1858
Shattuck integrates all parts of its program: religious, academic, military and social to give high school age boys an environment in which to grow "in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man." Summer School-Camp.
Catalogue
REV. SIDNEY W. GOLDSMITH, JR.
RECTOR AND HEADMASTER
Box W, Shumway Hall
SHATTUCK SCHOOL FARIBAULT, MINN.

CENTRAL SCHOOL OF RELIGION
(A Correspondence Institution)
6030 Lowell Ave., Indianapolis 19, Ind.
College level courses since 1896. Bible, Theology of O. & N. T., Pastoral Psychology, Church Publicity, Religious Education, etc. Complete interrupted studies at home. Excellent faculty. Reasonable. Write to Secretary for further information NOW.

THE PATTERSON SCHOOL for BOYS

Episcopal School in Blue Ridge Mountains of Western No. Carolina. Accredited. Grades 6-12. Gymnasium, sports, 42nd year. 1300-acre estate. Board and tuition, moderate.
GEORGE F. WIESE, Supt.
COLLEGE PREPARATORY Legerwood, N. C. HEALTH EDUCATION
CHARACTER BUILDING

SCHOOLS

FORK UNION MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth New Hampshire

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Schools of the Church

BARD COLLEGE
Formerly St. Stephen's
A Coeducational College of Liberal Arts and Sciences
FOUNDED 1860
For catalogue and further information write to The Director of Admissions, Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, New York.

DANIEL BAKER COLLEGE
BROWNWOOD, TEXAS
Established 1889. Operated under the auspices of the Diocese of Dallas. Co-educational senior college offering B.A. and B.S. degrees. Special opportunities in teacher training, music education, business administration. The only available undergraduate course in the Episcopal Church in Church Work Training. Member: Association of Texas Colleges.
REV'D W. A. CROSS, M.A., President
REV'D L. A. HASELMAYER, Ph.D., Dean

SAINT PAUL'S POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE
LAWRENCEVILLE, VIRGINIA
Approved by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. B.S. Degree with major in Trade and Industrial Education, B.S. Degree in Home Economics Education, B.S. Degree with major in Elementary Education, B.S. Degree in Secondary Education.
EARL H. McCLENNEY, President

VOORHEES SCHOOL & JR. COLLEGE
DENMARK, S. C.
Co-educational. Accredited by State Dept. of Education of S. C. and the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges. Under the two Dioceses of S. C. and The American Church Institute for Negroes. Expenses reasonable. Limited scholarship aid for worthy students. Apply:
CECIL D. HALLIBURTON, President

Okolona College
Okolona, Mississippi
Co-educational, Private, American Church Institute for Negroes (Protestant Episcopal Church) Established 1902
High School and Junior College - Trades and Industries - Music
For information write: W. MILAN DAVIS President
Today's Training for Tomorrow's Opportunities

St. Augustine's College
RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA
1867 — 1951
Accredited Four-Year College for Negro Youth. Co-educational. Music, Pre-Medical, Health and Physical Education, High School Teacher Training, Business, Pre-Social Work, Nursing Education in co-operation with St. Agnes Hospital.
HAROLD L. TRIGG, President

SAINT HELEN'S HALL
Portland 1, Oregon
Historic Pacific Northwest Episcopal resident and day school. Founded in 1869. Co-educational pre-school. Boys admitted to Lower School through grade III. Upper School girls only.
Write for catalog.
The RT. REV. BENJAMIN DAGWELL, D.D.
President, Board of Trustees
JANE ALLEN SAXTON,
HEADMISTRESS

The Cathedral Schools
National Cathedral School for Girls
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding department, grades 7-12
KATHARINE LEE, Principal
St. Albans
The National Cathedral School for Boys
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding Department, grades 8-12
CHARLES MARTIN, Headmaster
Address:
Mt. St. Alban, Washington 16, D. C.

St. John Baptist School
FOR GIRLS
Offers College Preparatory and General courses. Music, art, outdoor sports, and a happy home life, with character building extra-curricular activities for resident and day students, under the care of the Sisters of St. John Baptist. In the country near Morristown, New Jersey. Accredited.
For catalog address Box 556
The Sister Superior, Mendham, New Jersey

St. John's MILITARY SCHOOL
Salina, Kansas
Since 1887 St. John's has been perpetuating the cultural tradition of the Church by stressing sound scholarship in Christian atmosphere. Grades 3 through 12. Fully accredited.
COL. R. L. CLEM, Rector

ST. MARY'S HALL
SECONDARY BOARDING SCHOOL
Faribault, Minnesota
Close relationship of students and faculty in residence allows for a maximum of spiritual, academic, and social growth. Preparation for leading colleges. An extensive sports program, including riding.
PHYLLIS M. NEWMAN, M.A.
Founded 1866 Headmistress

IOLANI SCHOOL
Episcopal Church School for Boys
HONOLULU 17, HAWAII
A college preparatory church school for boys. Kindergarten through twelfth grade. Established 1862. Day tuition $225 to $275. Boarding $665 - $775. Summer session. Accredited.
REV. CHARLES A. PARMITER, JR. M.A., S.T.B., Rector

The MERRICOURT SCHOOL
(Episcopal)
A country boarding school for 40 boys & girls. Grades 1-8 (pre-preparatory). Home-like environment. Sports, extra-curricula program. 26th year. 8 weeks summer camp. For information: Visit, write, or phone 3-3209.
THE REV. M. W. WHITFORD, Hdm.
BERLIN, CONN.

ST. LUKE'S HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING
New York City
Offers a 3 year course in nursing to high school and college graduates. College graduates may be admitted with 9 months advanced credit allowance. For further information write to The Director of Nursing, St. Luke's Hospital, 421 West 113th St., New York 25, N. Y.

HARVARD SCHOOL
Diocesan School for Boys. 52nd Year. Fall term opens September 11, 1951. Grades seven through twelve. Fully Accredited. R.O.T.C. unit. For all information apply to
THE REV. W. S. CHALMERS
Headmaster
3700 Coldwater Canyon Rd.
NORTH HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

Cathedral School of St. Mary
An accredited Episcopal school for girls. Suburban New York City. Day-nursery to college. Boarding—fifth grade to college. Strong college preparatory course. Music, Dramatics, Art. Excellent sports program. Catalog on request.
MARION REID MARCH
Box W, Garden City, Long Island, N. Y.

ST. STEPHEN'S SCHOOL FOR BOYS
ALEXANDRIA, VA.
Grades 3 thru 12 (Day School). College Preparatory. Under the Church School System of the Diocese of Virginia.
Address
THE REV. EDWARD E. TATE,
Headmaster
2405 Russell Rd. ALEXANDRIA, VA.

ST. MARY'S HALL on the Delaware.
Episcopal boarding and day school for girls 8-18. Founded 1837. Thorough college preparation. Fully accredited. Separate lower school. College preparatory and general courses. Music, Art, Clubs, Sports, Dramatics. Near New York and Philadelphia. Catalogue.
FLORENCE LUKENS NEWBOLD
Headmistress
Burlington, New Jersey

DeVEAUX SCHOOL
Niagara Falls, New York
FOUNDED 1852
The Church School in the Diocese of Western New York. College preparatory for boys. Representative form of student government. Small classes. Reasonable charges. Grades 7 through 12.
For information address The Headmaster.

The Church Home and Hospital
SCHOOL OF NURSING
Baltimore 31, Maryland
A three year course of nursing. Classes enter August and September. Scholarships available to well qualified high school graduates.
Apply to Director of Nursing

ST. AGNES SCHOOL
An Episcopal Country Day and Boarding School for Girls
Excellent College Preparatory record. Special courses arranged for girls not contemplating college. Day pupils range from Kindergarten to College Entrance. Boarders from Grade 8 to College Entrance.
MISS BLANCHE PITTMAN, Principal
Albany New York

HOWE MILITARY SCHOOL
Thorough Academic Training in a Spiritual Environment. R.O.T.C. Accredited college preparatory, business courses. Junior School. Small classes. Every boy participates in sports. Balanced program. Episcopal. Established 1884. Summer Camp, boys grammar school age. Catalogue.
COL. B. B. BOUTON
13 Academy Place, Howe, Indiana

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE

Witness

10¢ A COPY

September 6, 1951

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CLINTON J. KEW

Will Conduct Column on Religion and the Mind

ANNOUNCING NEW FEATURES FOR FALL

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 8 (and 9 Holy Days ecept Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 7:45, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers — 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. — 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital — 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m. Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a.m. Holy Communion
11 a.m. Morning Service and Sermon
Weekdays: Holy Communion Tuesdays at 12:10 p.m.; Wednesdays at 8 a.m.; Thursdays at 10:30 a.m.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer — 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

☆

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

☆

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon.
Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D.,
Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 — 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m.
Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. William W. Lumpkin, Rector;
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacCall, 3rd, Rector
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 29 The WITNESS SEPTEMBER 6, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Churches Play Important Role In Recent Cicero Riot

Statements Issued Calling Upon Christians To Stand Against Segregation

BY
FREDERICK H. SONTAG

★ The untold story of the Cicero, Ill. race riot, that took place earlier this summer, is the constructive part played by Episcopal leaders and the Church Federation of Greater Chicago.

The riot was caused by white Cicero residents who objected to a young Negro veteran bus driver, Harvey E. Clark Jr., moving his wife and children into an all-white apartment house. The Clark family had been unable to find a decent place to live, which was near the bus garage where Clark worked. The mobs which gathered at the apartment house smashed all the Clarks' furniture and personal belongings. After the national guard was called out, order was restored.

Clark announced late in August that he would not return to Cicero, but would move to Connecticut. Bishop Walter H. Gray of that diocese was one of several Episcopalians who wrote to Time magazine about the Clarks' wrecked personal belongings, and started contributions for their replacement.

A personal inspection of the Cicero riot scene and interviews of Chicago civic leaders convinced this writer that the riot was not altogether unexpected, and Church leaders were preparing for a similar outbreak.

A very useful booklet, "An Address to Christians and the Churches Concerning Race Relations," had been widely distributed by the Church Federation only a few months before. It discussed the basis for Christian race relations, the background for racial tension in the Chicago area, tension areas and what the Church can do about them (including housing, employment, education, recreation, restaurants and hotels, hospitals, cemeteries, social service organizations, and the prevention of civil disorders), membership policy and practices within the Church, and the Christian mandate.

Although the Episcopal diocese is not a member of the Church Federation, 5 of the 26 members of the committee on Christian race relations are Episcopalians. They are Suffragan Bishop Charles Street; Prof. Holt Graham, Seabury-Western; the Rev. Joseph Kitagawa, chaplain to Bishop Conkling for work among Japanese-Americans; the Rev. Samuel Martin, rector, St. Edmund's; and Mrs. Wendell Green, St. Thomas's.

A few weeks before the riot, the Rev. Daniel Kentwell, a Roman priest active in inter-racial work, prophesied the disorders in so many words.

Church leaders acted fast once the riot was underway. But their actions remain a deep dark secret from alert Chicago reporters. The mid-Atlantic states editor of a national newspaper known widely for its accurate reporting told this reporter that few if any Church actions had been brought to his attention. The failure of adequate public relations was rather obvious.

An immediate conference of Church leaders produced a unanimously adopted statement as guide for Chicago Churches and lay people. It said in part:

"We are not unmindful of the fact that the virus of racial hatred is in the minds and hearts of many people in other communities than Cicero and that wherever this terrible evil is to be found there is the potential threat of mob violence.

"In the name of God who judges us all, we confess our failure to live according to his law of brotherhood and love; we confess and accept our share of responsibility for this breakdown of basic morality in the community.

"We appeal to all religious people of whatever creed; to all citizens of good will, especially the city officials and other civic leaders of Cicero, as well as in Cook County, to recognize the law of our land, the very basis of American democracy and the very heart of our Christian faith, that men of all races, nationalities and creeds must live together in peace and good will.

"We commend our fellow Negro citizens for their restraint in a provocative metropolitan situation caused by mob violence against one of their families. We appeal to them to keep steady in the future and to avoid actions that in any way would place responsibility on their shoulders for this breakdown of morality in the community.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

"We urge strongly that all citizens of the white race recognize the constitutional right of every family of whatever race, color, creed or nationality, to establish its residence in any part of Cook County according to economic ability or need. This is a legal right and has been fully established by law, but it is a human right that is fully supported by the higher law of the Christian faith. These are demands made upon us by God's moral order which we cannot ignore in these perilous times."

As the underlying cause of the riot was that real estate values were of greater importance to Cicero residents than other considerations, Chicago Church leaders moved with extreme caution in their dealings with Cicero clergy.

Some years ago the ministers association of Cicero had been "busted" when it attempted to become active in civic affairs. Cicero is the former headquarters of Al Capone's mob. Since then the clergy have preached about God, and kept out of civic affairs. Accordingly, Chicago's Church leaders encouraged Cicero's non-Roman clergy to issue their own statement. This, 10 pastors finally did, and although it was much weaker in its condemnation of the whole affair than outsiders might have wished, it was more than would have come forth had Chicago not put on the pressure.

Behind the scenes, Federation leaders actively encouraged law enforcement officials, and cooperated closely with the Chicago Council against Racial and Religious Discrimination, which coordinated civic activities concerning the riot. The council's director, the Rev. W. H. Sharp, and the Rev. Leon Bailey of the Interracial commission supervised the collection of facts on the disturbance.

The Roman Catholic Church came out openly against the rioters. The Witness learned officially for the first time that the "Nerod Supplement," a Benedictine paper, was threatened by mobs who said it was lowering property values by its pro-Clark stand. After these threats, a Roman Catholic doctrine letter on the subject was published in the official diocesan paper, and the hierarchy placed itself squarely behind the Benedictines. Commonweal and other Roman magazines also blasted the rioters, for the area is predominently Roman.

Protestant lay leaders were not active in issuing statements on their position regarding the riot. However, 29 Roman lay leaders sent a letter to their Cicero neighbors "asking them to examine their consciences in regard to the riot," and asking further "has our attitude toward the Clark family moving into Cicero to find a decent place to live been pleasing or displeasing to God."

National organizations such as the Civil Liberties Union, and National Association of Colored People, showed their alertness by promptly bringing in outside fact finding representatives. Conspicuous by their absence were observers from the National Council of Churches, which according to its announced purpose is supposed to act as a clearing house for information.

All Chicago papers were entirely objective regarding the riot, and Federation leaders praised their fair coverage.

A trip through major middle west and eastern cities lead this observer to believe similar riots will take place elsewhere. Church leaders in cities facing racial problems might well consult the Chicago Church leaders now, while there is time.

An analysis of the Church leaders' actions in the Cicero affair point up the effectiveness of local Church council and diocesan leaders acting effectively within the first hours after the riot. The Chicago Christian leaders of the major faiths were active in a constructive manner according to this survey.

MEMORIALS DEDICATED AT ABINGDON, VA.

★ Bishop Phillips of Southwestern Virginia dedicated a reredos, bishop's chair and sedilia at St. Thomas, Abingdon, Va., August 12th. The original St. John's was consecrated in 1846 and before that the congregation had worshiped for a considerable time in the court house. It is the mother church of St. John's, Wytheville and St. Paul's, Saltville.

At one time Elliott Roosevelt, father of Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, was a communicant of St. Thomas and sang in the choir. He presented the church with a pulpit Bible which was destroyed when the church was burned in 1924. It was replaced in the new church by Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt as a memorial to her father and mother. The Rev. Roddey Reid Jr. is the present rector.

EPISCOPALIANS LEAD MINISTERS MEETING

★ The Rev. Charles G. Hamilton of Aberdeen, Miss., and the Rev. Sumner Guerry of Cleveland, Miss., were among the leaders at the Town-Country school held at Emory College, Atlanta, Ga., August 7-23. It was attended by over a hundred clergy representing ten denominations and seventeen states.

KENNEDY RETURNS FROM THE PACIFIC

★ Bishop Harry S. Kennedy of Hawaii, has returned from a five-weeks visitation in Japan, Korea and Okinawa. He saw all Episcopal chaplains in the areas except two. He held conferences and quiet days with chaplains of all faiths in Tokyo, Okinawa, Itazuke air base and Seoul, attended by practically all the non-Roman chaplains in the areas.

The Bishop confirmed two in Okinawa, presented by Chaplain Fenwick, and seven presented by the Church's missionaries there. In Taegu, Korea, nine were confirmed, and at Pusan 31.

The bishop visited also every military hospital, going from ward to ward visiting the wounded. He conducted many services, including one at St. Luke's Hospital chapel, Tokyo, and one at the general headquarters chapel, Tokyo. Other services conducted were at Yokohama army chapel, Yokosuka naval base, Itazuke air base. The bishop called officially on the commanding officers of all branches of the service. "General Matthew P. Ridgway was wonderful to me," the bishop wrote. They gave a dinner for him, and later a garden party.

Bishop Kennedy writes most enthusiastically of the work being done by our missionaries, Messrs. Godfrey, Heffner and Nakayama. "They have endeared themselves to the native people who have known them, and have captured the friendship of the military."

At Okinawa, a site has been purchased, and now it bears a large sign saying in English and Japanese that the first Seikokwai church will be built there. The Governor of Okinawa attended a service at which the new site was dedicated. The bishop blessed the bell which was given to the missionaries recently.

Bishop Kennedy in his report to the overseas department stressed the need for a residence for the missionaries as well as the new church, and parish hall. "These are musts," he said, "if our missionaries are to be able to carry on their program."

He stressed also the need for a native ministry, and considers the prospects helpful. Also the need for a woman worker, and another American priest to care for civilians and their dependents. More transportation is a crying need, at least another truck or suburban car.

At the Island of Izena Shema, Bishop Kennedy was visited by a delegation consisting of the principal of the school, and some natives, the purpose of the visit being to "beg us to bring them regular ministrations of the Church and do something to help train their children in the Christian way of life."

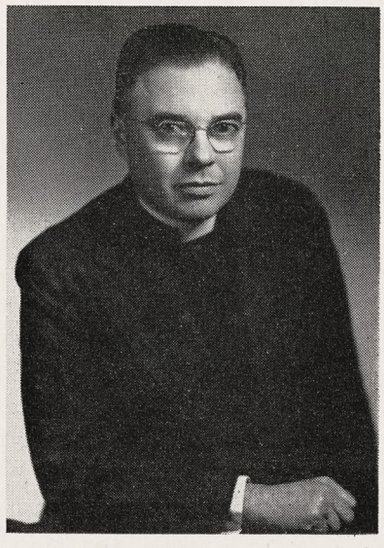
GEORGIA LAYMEN MEET

★ Laymen of the diocese of Georgia met at Camp Reese, diocesan center, August 10-12, when J. Osborne Morgan of Brunswick was elected president of the diocesan organization.

NEW YORKERS LEAD CONFERENCE

★ Chaplain James A. Pike of Columbia and the Rev. Shelton Hale Bishop, rector of St. Philip's, New York, are to be the leaders of a conference of laymen of Maine, meeting at Northeast Harbor, September 8-9. Bishop Loring is to be the chaplain.

MINNESOTA TO HAVE COADJUTOR



★ Bishop Keeler of Minnesota has called a special convention for October 1 for the election of a coadjutor. The announcement follows the resignation of Vernon Johnson as archdeacon to accept the rectorship of St. Paul's, Minneapolis. In 1950, after an elected suffragan had declined, the diocese set up a program for two archdeacons, one for white and one for Indian mission work.

The special convention will also initiate a conference on matters of diocesan advance work. On the 2nd the clergy will discuss public relations, with Gideon Seymour, editor of a Minneapolis newspaper, the headliner. There will also be a panel at which newsmen and radio commentators will take part. Religious education will be considered in the afternoon and in the evening Bishop Keeler will speak on work in the diocese.

The following day will be a quiet day conducted by Bishop Havard of St. Davids, Wales.

LAYMEN ARE TRAINED AT SEABURY

★ The first group of laymen to be trained to present the Church's program are meeting over this coming weekend at Seabury House. Coming from all parts of the country, these men will then return home to train others. Conference leaders are Dean Rose of the General Seminary; Humphrey F. Redfield, executive of the Episcopal Church Foundation; the directors of the various departments of the National Council.

HARRY S. LONGLEY is now the rector of Holy Trinity, Philadelphia. He comes from St. John's, Charleston, W. Va., where he was rector since 1939

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EDITORIALS

New Features

THE WITNESS returns to the every week schedule with the number for September 20, with each issue twenty-four pages. There will be a number of added features which we are sure will be well received. One of course is not new: the Living Liturgy column by Prof. Massey H. Shepherd Jr. of Cambridge Seminary, considered the foremost liturgist of the American Church today. Another feature indeed is old, the selection of articles that appeared in the Witness years ago written by our founder and first editor, the late Irving P. Johnson. Several of these were reprinted last Lent with a great many requests that they be continued. This note from Bishop Austin Pardue is typical: "Please keep digging up the old articles by Bishop Irving P. Johnson. No one in this Church today touches the pithy and direct simplicity of his writing. I suppose he wrote these twenty or more years ago, but they are as fresh and timely as a morning newspaper today. Thank you for giving more articles by the best writer the American Church has produced." So we did keep digging and will present this fall a number of articles which are all that the Bishop of Pittsburgh says of them.

Roscoe T. Foust, rector of the Ascension, New York, and our editor, has spent the summer in Europe to get the reaction of leaders there to the foreign policy of the U. S. and the chances of maintaining peace in our time. Certainly there is no greater problem and we are sure readers will read eagerly the findings of this keen observer.

Alger L. Adams, a new member of the editorial board, is the managing editor of the Bulletin of the diocese of New York and vicar of churches in Elmsford and Yonkers. Prior to that he was assistant to the editor and president of the Amsterdam News where he had the over-all administrative responsibility of the editorial department. And it was no accident that while he was with this nationally known paper the circulation nearly doubled. Last spring at one of our meetings of editors there was lengthy discussion of race relations and what the Church was doing and should do in this field. It ended with Adams accepting the assignment for a series of reports on what dioceses and parishes are doing about discrimination and segregation. As reported in our August 23rd number, Alvin W. Rose, professor of sociology at North Carolina College, told the delegates attending a recent Church conference: "You know better than I that the Church is America's most segregated institution." Whether it is or not will be answered in this series by Alger Adams who will present the good and the bad in factual reports which we suspect will stir up a good bit of discussion throughout the Church.

"Quotes"

O MY dear friends, it is a terrible thing when one's religion is too small for the world, and is always leaving great parts of the world's life unaccounted for, unilluminated, and is always dreading to have the world made any larger, lest this religion shall seem even more meager and insufficient. But it is a great thing when the world is too small for one's religion, and the soul's sense of the glory and dearness of God is always craving larger and larger regions in which to range. Then welcome all discoveries, all illuminations, all visions of the greatness of the world of God.

—PHILLIPS BROOKS

Lastly, as far as new features are concerned, we are happy to announce a column each week on Religion and the Mind by the Rev. Clinton J. Kew, also a new member of our editorial board. He is on the staff of St. Luke's, Montclair, N. J. and the Church of the Heavenly Rest, New York, where he has done notable work in this field. He is also on the faculty, with his twin brother, a psychiatrist, of The American Foundation of Religion and Psychiatry, organized by New York's Marble Collegiate Church. Work done by this twin-brother team has received nationwide attention by magazines and newspapers and we consider ourselves fortunate indeed to be able to present his column which will be conducted on a question and answer basis. The first will appear in the September 20th issue and is titled, Psychosomatic. The next three will be articles on Anxiety, A Sense of Guilt, The Lonely, with others to follow.

Former features will of course be continued. Each week there will be one or more articles by outstanding leaders of the Church, with one on The Future of Free Catholicism by Prof. Chad Walsh of Beloit appearing in two consecutive numbers soon. The popular short articles by Philip H. Steinmetz, and William B. Barnes will appear regularly, as well as articles by Dean McNairy of St. Paul's Cathedral, Buffalo, and Anson Phelps Stokes, rector of St. Bartholomew's, New York. Nor is the Rev. Mr. Entwhistle being forgotten. He recently returned to his seminary, telling Wife Isabel that "I need inspiration." What happened is reported by the Rev. Thomas V. Barrett in a forthcoming article.

Book Reviews will continue to be edited by the Rev. Frederick C. Grant; the Rev. George MacMurray will have a column on the Press where he will brief the editorial opinions of other Church papers on vital issues; People will give you the news of clergy changes, ordinations, deaths, honors—the things you want to know to keep up with your friends; there will be the popular Backfire department where readers have their say; and of course all the important news of the Episcopal Church, together with pages of news of Other Churches and Churches Overseas.

We are convinced that we are offering a large quality package at the extremely low price, for these days, of but $4 a year. Comparison with what you get in other Church papers for more money will, we think, convince the most skeptical.

We also urge readers, and particularly the clergy, to take bundles so that the Witness may be on sale each Sunday at the church. Orders for five, ten or more copies to one address will be billed quarterly at 7c a copy, the magazine to be sold for 10c. Or if you prefer to have copies sent directly to the homes of parishioners, merely send the names and addresses and we will bill quarterly at the same bundle rate.

We solicit your cooperation. The address of our publishing plant is Tunkhannock, Pa., where all subscriptions and bundle orders should be sent.

Christ at the Bargaining Table

BY MICHAEL BUDZANOSKI
Executive committeeman, District 5, United Mine Workers and vestryman, St. Mary's Church, Charleroi, Pa.

CHRISTIAN people are becoming more and more aware that there can be no amicable relationships in industry as long as Jesus Christ is left out of the equation. Against the concept of the mystical body, the Church should be a union that embraces the capitalist, the industrialist, and the laboring man. All groups in the present picture, however, have become victims of our secularized culture. In the social theory laid down by our Lord, each man is a member of every other man. The doctrine of the mystical body of Christ demands an intense personal relationship between all Christian people. In our society, this is lacking.

During our country's early history, most businesses belonged to individual people and in such a situation the owner had a direct relationship with his employees. Usually a personal bond was nurtured and matured into an amicable relationship between employer and employee. In the evolution of our American economy, our business concerns grew bigger and bigger, and as merger followed merger, the personal touch was lost with the result the employee, whether president or sweeper, became just a mere small cog in the huge machine.

The beginning of the twentieth century saw our industries assuming such proportions that the government was compelled to retard the trend toward monopoly. This same period saw an influx of immigrants into our country on an unprecedented scale. In the booming times, they were swallowed up by industry. On the whole, these people were untutored and inured to hardship in the old country. Their docility and strangeness in a new land made them easy victims of our secularized economy. Many did not expect and often did not receive what we would call the fruits of Christianity.

Labor Unions

THE turn of the century also saw the advent of the large labor unions, which were developed to take up the slack caused by the loss of the personal bond between employer and employee. Even the unschooled realized the need for organization as a counter irritant to big industry. Hence, for the greater part of our times, labor and industry have battled. We cannot say that one side has been completely good while the other was wholly bad. The modern historian knows that there have been selfish men on both sides. The pathetic fact about the situation is the tremendous loss for all concerned. If the teachings of Christ had been lived by all Christian people, industry would have gained to even a greater degree and labor would have obtained a standard of living commensurate with the wealth of our God-gifted country.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Toward the preservation of our American way of life, it is an absolute necessity for us to develop all-around amicable relationships. Even from the educational standpoint, the demand is urgent. A generation ago, the average supervisor in a steel mill or in a coal mine had less than a complete grammar school education. Today, the average young laborer is generally a high school and often a college graduate. The ideology of Communism, abroad, has had a much greater appeal than we care to admit. At home, we must make the ideology of Christianity attractive and effective.

Great Resources

OUR national wealth is so great that, in spite of defense spending, we can promise the laborer a decent wage for his work. We have the resources that will permit him to purchase all of the necessities and even some of the common luxuries of life. If American Christian people can be taught to work together, we need not worry about the decent hours of labor and good working conditions. In the body of Christ we can develop a lasting security for all.

From the Christian sociological point of view, what can be defined as living wage? Experience shows that no set wage can permanently be called decent. What may be good wage today may be totally inadequate in a future period of inflation. Suffice it to say that a living wage is one that compares favorably with that paid in other industries and is one that will permit an ever increasing standard of living as the wealth of our nation grows through scientific discoveries and the recapture of nature's resources by the labor of man. Another factor about which we must remain cognizant is the fact that technological advancements in an industry may require an adjustment of wage to compensate the more skilled employee required to do the work.

So too, decent hours of labor are dependent upon numerous factors. In normal times, the need of a product often has limitations. Overproduction has been a constant threat to our whole economic system. We are learning that it is foolishness to produce an article far in excess of demand. For the protection of both industry and labor, whenever there appears a risk of overproduction, the hours of labor in a given industry should be studied. The great depression of twenty years ago shows what will happen if there is production and the people do not have the means to bring about consumption. Hence, labor-saving devices should not only be considered as a means of profit but, for the welfare of industry itself, the good fortune ought to be shared by a possible reduction in the working hours of individual employees.

The past several decades have seen many industries endeavor to make their plants better places in which to work. This program not only increases efficiency but also removes much drudgery from hard labor. With a real return to a living Christianity, we can expect this trend to continue.

Human Solidarity

AS our system of living continues to grow more complex, the security of the individual employee and of his family is slowly leaving his own hands and is nestling little by little with the government and with industry as a whole. No longer are the maimed and the dead left by the wayside, the maimed to fend for themselves and the families of the dead to struggle as best they could. With the developing concept of human solidarity in Christ, we can look forward to more good will and greater security for all. Human beings possess a God-given conscience. Perhaps the greatest obstacle to industrial peace has been the neglect of this faculty by the battling groups.

The threat of Communism may be having beneficial results among us. We are being forced to make our Christianity into a living ideology. When Christ is permitted to sit down at the conference table with labor and industry, then the interest of each will become the interest of all. Human relationships must be supernaturalized or we must be ready to resign ourselves to a material dialectic. At one time, capital and industry may have the whip hand, and at other times, the whip may be held by labor, but the whip is not the answer. Christ must become all in all. This may sound like some visionary ideal order, but if we are going to preserve our historic American way of life, we must continually strive to make our ideals into an actuality.

An Invitation To Roman Catholics

By ROBERT S. TRENBATH

Rector of Trinity, Washington, D. C.

Reprinted as a leaflet at numerous requests

$3 for 100 copies

$2 for 50 copies

5c for single copies

Tunkhannock Pennsylvania

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Grounds For Hope

BY
ANSON PHELPS STOKES JR.
Rector of St. Bartholomew's, New York

ANY religion that is to be vital today must say something to a world that is in distress and perplexity. Thank God that the religion of the Old and New Testaments can do so, for it was born in difficult times. The great message of hope expressed by the prophets came out of days of national calamity; and much of the New Testament was written when it was dangerous to be a Christian. Our faith says five things to us in these anxious days.

In the first place, there is an answer to our problems in God's purpose. To so many people the events of our day are meaningless and frustrating. It gives us hope to know that God has not abdicated.

His answers, however, are not necessarily simple ones. He does not necessarily have one plan of action which is right. He calls on some to be conservatives and on others to be liberals. The whole truth is too much for any one man to understand, and often God brings about his purposes through the interplay of opposing ideas.

In the second place our faith tells us that the fundamental issue in the world situation is spiritual. George Sokolsky warned against the danger of America trusting in her productive capacity and technical skills, and pointed out the need of America having a philosophy of life which she can convey to others. Communism seems to capture men's imagination, even though its tangible benefits seems to be few. We as Christians must have a concept of life which will appeal to the latent yearnings of mankind. We must not speak too much about "Communism versus Capitalism," implying that we are engaged in a clash of systems, for something deeper than that is at stake—a concept of life. We are opposing tyranny, brutality, and the police state. If Russian Communism had not come upon the scene, evil would still be incarnate in some other forms. The vital issue is not the form of our organization but of the purpose of life. A moral rebirth is necessary if we are to have a message for the world.

In the third place our faith tells us that spiritual goals are related to material means. Christianity never marks a sharp line between matter and spirit. Ours is a sacramental world, in which outward and visible signs make real inward and spiritual grace. The spiritual must come first, but it must be expressed in terms that men can understand.

Today a large part of the world is hungry. That is not new; but what is new is that those persons are beginning to recognize that hunger is no longer something to be accepted fatalistically. They can see that western civilization has conquered much of nature, and they are no longer willing to be content with their lot. If a new spirit is to be aroused, it must be expressed in terms of a better life. We must do all we can to face the economic and social problems of our day. Political organizations have their place, for they too can influence human life; and military force has its place, for evil must be resisted. Spirit is primary, but it can be ministered to in material ways. The Christian religion reminds us that spirit does not stand alone.

The fourth thing that our faith says to us is that we are all bound together. We are coming more and more to recognize that. Capital and labor know that they are dependent one upon the other; and industry is recognizing the interrelationship of the world. You cannot have the good life in one land as long as another land lives in poverty.

While the truth of this has been forced upon us in the realm of economics, it is an ancient truth in the realm of the spirit. The Old Testament taught us that all men were made of one blood, and the Christian faith has emphasized that we are members one of another. Spiritually we must recognize our unity, as John Donne did when he lay upon his sickbed and heard the bell tolling for the funerals of others: "No man is an island entire of itself. Every man is a piece of the continent . . . Any man's death diminishes me because I am involved in mankind; and therefore never send to know for whom the bell tolls; it tolls for thee."

Finally, our faith reminds us that there is something for each of us to do. That brings us back to our first point. If the answer is in God's purpose, it is our duty spiritually to live close to him. We cannot do it by hastily turning to him or hectically poring over our Bibles. We can find his purpose only by a life quietly and consistently devoted to his will, a life of moral decency, of patience, and of prayer. If we do not turn to God and find in him the purpose of life, we are traitors to our country as truly as if we betrayed secrets to the enemy. For the need of our land is an understanding of life that can be shared with all others.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

NEW CHANCELLOR AT SEWANEE

★ Edward McCrady, chief of the biology division of the atomic energy commission, Oak Ridge, is now acting vice chancellor of the University of the South. He succeeds Boylston Green who gave his resignation to the board of regents at a meeting on August 16. No reason is given by either Dr. Green or Bishop Mitchell, chancellor, for the resignation, the official press release merely expressing the "regrets" of both. Green has headed the administration for but two years.

The new administrator was head of the biology department at Sewanee for ten years before taking a leave of absence in 1948 to take the job with the government.

Bishop Mitchell announced the following committee to select candidates for the position: Bishop Penick of North Carolina, chairman; the Rev. Robert H. Manning of New Orleans; Frank M. Gillespie of San Antonio; Coleman A. Harwell of Nashville. He also said that the trustees are the only body with power to elect and that their next meeting will be in June, 1952.

GEORGIA WORKSHOP ON EDUCATION

★ A workshop on education was held at Camp Reese, diocese of Georgia, August 13-19, with 40 women and two laymen present. The leaders were the Rev. H. E. Waller, diocesan chairman of education, the Rev. R. R. Baker, chairman of the department for the diocese of Virginia, G. R. Madson and Helen Wolfe, both of the diocese of Georgia.

BISHOP WELLES IN MAINE

★ Bishop Welles of West Missouri confirmed five at a service last Sunday at St. John's, Southwest Harbor, Maine . The candidates were presented by the vicar, the Rev. R. H. Thatcher.

The American Foundation
OF Religion and Psychiatry
(NON-DENOMINATIONAL)
57 Park Avenue, New York
(Organized by the Marble Collegiate Church)

Announces
Two Courses in Human Behavior
•
A Beginners' Course
and an Advanced Course
for Ministers and Physicians
•

BEGINNERS' COURSE: A basic course for ministers interested in counselling, and in the contributions that psychiatry makes to the religious life of the average person.

ADVANCED COURSE: Students who take this course must have equivalent of basic course. In certain cases graduate course may be taken at the same time as the Beginners' Course. Enrollment in Advanced Course is limited; emphasis on case histories for clinic discussion. Ministers, physicians and social workers may register for these courses. The lectures will begin on October 1, 1951. Beginners' Course on Mondays, 2:30 P.M. to 4:30 P.M. Advanced Course on Mondays, 8:00 to 10:00 P.M. The fee for each course of 15 sessions is $20.00.
Send applications to The American Foundation of Religion and Psychiatry, 57 Park Avenue, New York City.

FACULTY

Rev. Herman L. Barbery
Rev. Thomas J. Bigham, Jr.
Dr. Smiley Blanton
Dr. Iago Galdston
Dr. Myron Herman
Professor Clifton E. Kew
Rev. Frederick C. Keuther
Rev. Clinton J. Kew
Rev. John Large
Rev. Norman Vincent Peale
Rev. Otis Rice
Rev. David Roberts
Dr. Adelaide R. Smith and others.

VITAL QUESTIONS ARE RAISED

★ "How can we make the Woman's Auxiliary redemptive?" "Is our vestry concerned about religion?" "What is the difference between going to church and being the Church?"

These and many other questions were discussed by almost 100 lay men and women representing the dioceses of California and Sacramento and San Joaquin at a conference on education held at Mills College, Oakland, Cal. The group included church school teachers and superintendents, vestrymen, officers of the Woman's Auxiliary, key laymen appointed by the bishops of the three dioceses.

The state of our Church today, with many young people drifting out of relationship with the Church soon after confirmation, and with religion being just a meaningless form to many nominal members of the Church was presented vividly to the group by the Rev. Walter Williams. Mrs. Dora P. Chaplin gave an analysis of the needs of children, youth and adults and the ways in which the Church might be meeting these needs if we were more aware of our opportunities. She stressed especially the importance of the two Church families, the large family of the parish, which is often unaware of its family responsibilities, and the "little church" which is within each Christian home. The discussion and questions which followed her presentation, dealing with practical ways to restore family worship, and ways of helping parents in their task as the first religious teachers of youth, showed the concern of lay leadership of the Church in these areas.

Canon Theodore O. Wedel startled the group by announcing that they were all theologians, and then aroused interest by taking some of the theological teaching of the Church about sin, faith, judgment, propitiation, and atonement and translating them into terms of the everyday experience of everyone.

The women attending met for an hour with Mrs. Theodore Wedel, a member of the national executive board of the Woman's Auxiliary, to discuss the implications of the Church's program of education for the organized women's work in the Church.

BISHOP HENRY SHERRILL STRESSES SCHOOLS

★ Bishop Henry K. Sherrill, in his capacity as president of the National Council of Churches, pleads for increased emphasis on religious education in a statement urging the observance of Christian education week, September 30-October 7.

"As a chaplain in the first world war," he said, "I learned of the great ignorance of American youth of the simplest facts of Christian teaching. The failure lies first of all in the home. Our school system is so constituted that everything else is taught but religion. Many of our churches also are responsible, for church committees or vestries too often neglect to provide funds for adequate teaching of the youth of the parish."

Bishop Sherrill declared that the teaching function, "all too often underestimated, even neglected," is "central to the task of the Church."

The week will begin with rally day, Sept. 30, when the theme will be "Religion—the foundation of freedom." On the following days will be marked, successively, leader's day, family day, local church day, community day, youth day, and personal meditation day. The observance will close with world communion Sunday, Oct. 7.

BISHOP DeWOLFE VISITS HOLY TRINITY

★ Bishop DeWolfe is to visit the Church of the Holy Trinity, Brooklyn, the evening of September 23rd for confirmation. It is the first visit of a bishop of Long Island to the parish since the inception of the so-called Melish Case.

The Issues between Science and Religion... Faith and Reason... Discussed by Great Minds of Today

Christianity and Reason

SEVEN ESSAYS, edited by EDWARD D. MYERS, Professor of Philosophy, Washington and Lee University. In this vitally important contribution to modern thought, seven scholars and churchmen, all members of the Guild of Scholars, unite in an effort to explain Christianity and secularism, to promote true Christianity. The issues analyzed here between science and religion, faith and reason, natural and revealed theology, are basic to contemporary theological thought.

"The volume deals with the nature of theology, its purpose and value . . . Here is no easy reading. But it is reading that will provoke thought and will prove rewarding."
—CHARLES E. SCHOFIELD, Christian Advocate

"The publication of these papers offers to scholars and lay religious leaders alike, a great wealth of fundamental reasoning on the basic values of Christianty." — W. DEWITT MANNING, Rochester Democrat-Chronicle.

"The discussions of these seven scholarly minds have given a real contribution to modern thought. The book is relevant to our problems. Thinking people will do well to read it."
—REV. CONRAD MYRICK, Birmingham News. $3.00

At your bookstore

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
114 Fifth Avenue
New York 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT, Book Editor

The University of Chicago Round Table, Number 661. University of Chicago. 10c.

This issue contains the script of an NBC broadcast panel discussion between Ernest C. Colwell, Carl H. Kraeling, and Merrill M. Parvis, all of the University of Chicago, on the subject of the Dead Sea scrolls. Also included is the reproduction of a BBC broadcast by Herbert Butterfield, Professor of Modern History at Cambridge, on "Christianity and the Historian." The final item is a brief description of the project to prepare a new edition of the manuscript evidence for the text of the Greek New Testament.—Robert Hill

Father Paul of Graymoor. By David Gannon. Macmillan. $4.00.

Father Gannon writes of the Father Founder of Graymoor with charm and complete devotion. The very nature of Graymoor's foundation makes the anti-Anglican tendenz inevitable. Cardinal Spellman in his foreword wonders whether Father Paul "was anything else but a Catholic at heart even before his conversion." After reading the book, one suspects that, meaning what he does by the word "Catholic," this statement of the Cardinal's is quite correct.—Edward N. West Alcuin, Friend of Charlemagne. His World and His Work. By Eleanor Shipley Duckett. Macmillan. $5.

Those who are familiar with Miss Duckett's illuminating books on what has been erroneously called 'the Dark Ages' will need no prompting to acquire this biography of Alcuin. Scholars and general readers alike find her work interesting and rewarding. This present book is a sequel to her Anglo-Saxon Saints and Scholars (Macmillan, 1947). Actually it is a history of Christendom in the eighth century. Alcuin's work as a statesman, educator, theologian, liturgist, and churchman places him among the world's great architects of a Christian culture, and the foundations he laid still endure. As a recent French scholar put it, "Without Alcuin, one could say that Charlemagne would have been less great." Above all Alcuin was a representative of the finest type of Christian gentleman, humble, industrious, devout, with a great capacity for friendship, and a concern for the things that really matter. He loved both books and people, the ordinary pleasures of life—both the world of nature and of man—and the deeper things of the spirit. He is a true conservative of history. Though denied sainthood by the Church, innumerable generations have risen up to call him blessed. Miss Duckett's book makes him live again as our own teacher and friend and companion in the way of Christ.—M.H.S.

Christ and Culture. By H. Richard Niebuhr. Harper. $3.50.

This is one of the most substantial books on Christian ethics to appear in a long time. It is the fruit of many years of careful thought and constructive teaching. The main answers that have been given in Christian history are analyzed: Christ against culture, the Christ of culture, Christ above culture, Christ and culture in paradox, and Christ transforming culture. The

The Church Pension Fund

and its subsidiaries
administered for the benefit of the Church

The Church Hymnal Corporation

Publishers of The Hymnal; Hymnal 1940 Companion; Book of Common Prayer; A Prayer Book for Soldiers and Sailors; Book of Offices; Stowe's Clerical Director.

The Church Life Insurance Corporation

Offers low cost insurance and annuity contracts to clergy, lay officials and active lay workers of the Church, either voluntary or paid, and their immediate families. Services include individual insurance programming and assistance to parish officials in preparing and establishing plans for retirement of lay employees.

The Church Fire Insurance Corporation

Low cost fire, windstorm and extended coverage insurance on property owned by or closely affiliated with the Church, and on the residences and personal property of the clergy.

Further information available by addressing any of the above at

20 Exchange Place New York 5, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

final solution is the individual's answer to the problems—which is about as far as we can get in this age, perhaps in this world; though other ages have been more ambitious, and have identified Christ (or Christianity) with culture—i.e. civilization—either present or prospective. This is a book for everyone interested in or troubled by the problems, e.g. of the practicability of the Christian ethic, or of the Sermon on the Mount. A grand book to read along with Windisch's Sermon on the Mount, recently reviewed.

A History of the Cure of Souls. By John T. McNeill. Harper. $5.00.

Professor McNeill is one of the best ecclesiastical historians of our time. The study of the mediaeval Penitentials has been one of his chief interests: his work on the Mediaeval Handbooks of Penance has long been a standard treatise. The present volume studies the subject in its widest relations and from its earliest beginnings in Israel, Greece, and in the Eastern religions, and then stage by stage through the history of Christianity and in the various modern churches. Not only theologians and pastors who administer penance, but also the large and increasing number of persons who engage in personal counseling, in all the churches, will be interested in this book. So will historically minded Christians who wish to know what has been done in this realm since New Testament days. They will find that every phase of the subject has been treated with learning, candor, insight, and sympathy. Only a real historian can write with equal understanding of Roman, Anglican, and Quaker spiritual guidance! This is a book good for a generation and more, and is one that every clergyman and theological student should possess.

Paul and His Interpreters: A Critical History. By Albert Schweitzer. Macmillan. $3.50.

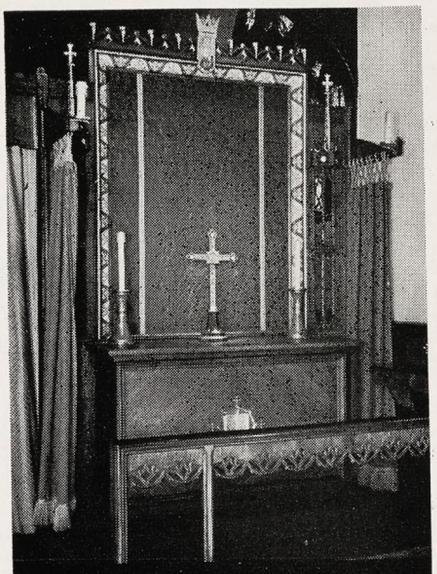
This is a reprint of the work first issued in 1912 as a continuation of The Quest for the Historical Jesus, and like that work shows how the positions taken by New Testament scholars varied in relation to the theological temper of their day. On the basis of the formulation of the problem with which this book concludes, Schweitzer went on to write The Mysticism of Paul the Apostle.—Holt Graham

The Meaning and Message of the Book of Revelation. By Edward A. McDowell. Broadman Press. $2.75.

This is a running exposition of Revelation, in full rapport with modern scholarship, stressing the genuine religious values of the book, and suitable for study by laymen as well as by theologians. It recognizes the apocalyptic character of the work—which belongs with Daniel, Enoch, and the rest of the "apocalypses"—and does not try to literalize (see p. 195, for example). The commentary is like all Dr. McDowell's work, and deserves to be widely known and used.

John Knox's History of the Reformation in Scotland. Ed. by W. C. Dickinson. Philosophical Library. Two vols. $15.00.

A superbly printed, fully documented, amply indexed edition of one of the classic works in the history of Protestantism and of Scotland. The editorial work is entirely satisfying, and the book can be relied on by students everywhere. This is one of the books we always meant to read. Many thanks, Philosophical Library!



The Significance of Jesus. By W. R. Maltby. Macmillan. $.75.

The author believes that the great gain of biblical criticism is the recovery of the real humanity of Jesus. Accordingly, he attempts to demonstrate the contemporaneity and relevance of Jesus, illustrating from the gospels the character of Jesus' faith, his reasonableness, and his ability to see life as a whole. Jesus becomes the timeless exemplar of excellence at the points where we need it.

This is the eighth edition of the book, revised as of 1948 for the Viewpoints Series.—Holt Graham

The Experiences of a Mental Hospital Attendant. Snake Pit Attendant. Edited by Jesse Walter Dees, Jr. Exposition Press. $2.50.

Dr. Dees is head of the Department of Sociology at the University of Tampa, Florida, and has made a thorough study of conditions in mental hospitals. His earlier "Flophouse" was a study of hoboes. Most of the cases in the present book are also human derelicts.

WOODWORK

Altars, screens, paneling and other furnishings, fashioned by Rambusch craftsmen, add to the beauty and dignity of these churches:

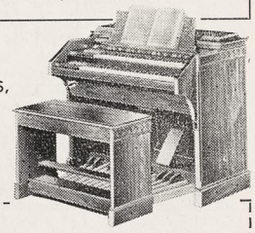
St. Bartholomew's Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.
St. James' Church, Hyde Park, N. Y.
St. John's Church, Sharon, Pa.
Trinity Church, Hewlett, N. Y.
Trinity Church, Paterson, N. J.

RAMBUSCH 40 W. 13th St. New York, N.Y.

World's leading church organ

The Hammond Organ offers a combination of features found in no other organ:

- A full range of true church tones
- Exclusive "reverberation control"
- Provides music of cathedral quality for the smallest church
- Never gets out of tune†
- Installed without structural changes



These are a few of the reasons why the Hammond Organ is the world's largest-selling Church Organ, selected by more than 20,000 churches.

PRICES START AT $1285*
For Spinet Model with tone equipment and bench

HAMMOND ORGAN
MUSIC'S MOST GLORIOUS VOICE

*f.o.b. Chicago; includes Federal excise tax, rebated to churches.
Concert Model has 32-note pedal keyboard built to AGO specifications and an additional †Pedal Solo Unit, tunable to preference by the organist.

COMPLETE LINE OF 2-manual-and-pedal HAMMOND ORGANS, including Church Model (shown at right)

FREE! TWO BOOKLETS

☐ "Are You Wondering About Organs?"
☐ "49 Tested Ways of Raising Money for a Church Organ"

Hammond Instrument Company
4231 W. Diversey Ave., Chicago 39, Ill.

Name.....
Street.....
City..... Zone..... State.....

© 1951, Hammond Instrument Company

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

ST. JAMES LESSONS

A nine course series of instruction for Episcopal Church Schools including illustrated work books—150-250 pages (60c each) and teachers' manuals I, II, III 40c each, IV through IX 60c each).

No Samples - Payment with orders

St. James Lessons, Inc.

865 Madison Ave., Dpt. 5, N. Y. 21, N. Y.

GOWNS

•Pulpit and Choir•
Headquarters for RELIGIOUS SUPPLIES

Church Furniture · Stoles
Embroideries · Vestments
Hangings · Communion
Sets · Altar Brass Goods

CATALOG ON REQUEST

National CHURCH GOODS SUPPLY COMPANY

821-23 ARCH STREET, PHILADELPHIA 7, PA.

EARN MONEY
GORGEOUS NEW PERSONAL
Christmas Cards

Show magnificent Low-Priced Personal Card Lines—name-imprinted—orders shipped direct to customers! Also big Album DeLuxe Personal Cards. Plus 40 Christmas & Everyday Asst's. including 21-Card "Feature" Box—sells $1.00—profit up to 50c—and Gift Wrapping Ensembles, Gift Items, others! Sensational DeLuxe Foil Christmas Assortment. Personal Card Samples FREE: "Feature" Assortment sent on approval. WALLACE BROWN, INC., 225 Fifth Ave., Dept. [illegible], New York 10

Write for SAMPLES

FINEST PURE IRISH LINEN

For all Church uses

Just received from Belfast a new fine lightweight linen for Surplices in 39"—1.65 per yard. Also qualities and width for Albs, Fair Linen, etc., Patterns and Supplies, Books.

Samples Free

MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
BOX 386 CHILLICOTHE, MO.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

VESTMENTS

Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves
Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries
Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars
Custom Tailoring for Clergymen

1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951

COX SONS & VINING, Inc.
131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

CASSOCKS

Surplices — Choir Vestments
Eucharistic Vestments
Altar Hangings and Linens
Prices Sent on Request

J. M. HALL, INC.
14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.
Tel. CH 4-3306

PEOPLE

CLERGY CHANGES:

JOHN C. LEFFLER, rector of St. Luke's, San Francisco, has accepted the deanship of St. Mark's Cathedral, Seattle.

ROBERT H. CHALLINOR, formerly in charge of churches at West Plains and Mountain Grove, Mo., is now curate at St. Andrew's Cathedral, Honolulu.

BEVERLEY M. BOYD, sec'y of the department of social welfare of the National Council of Churches, becomes rector of St. Philip's, Uvalfe, Tex., Oct. 1.

GURLEY, R. H., formerly rector of St. Martin's, Radnor, Pa., becomes vicar of All Saints, Fitchburg, Mass., Sept. 30.

ORDINATIONS:

K. C. EADE, W. M. FAY, J. F. POLITZER were ordained deacons by Bishop Block on Aug. 4 at Grace Cathedral, San Francisco. Eade is vicar of St. Thomas, Sunnyvale, Cal.; Fay is vicar of St. Stephen's, Orinda, Cal., and Politzer is ass't at St. Paul's, Salinas, Cal.

C. E. GUTHRIE was ordained deacon by Bishop McElwain, acting for the bishop of Texas, at Sewanee, Tenn., Aug. 12. He continues as an instructor in the Theological School of the University of the South.

EDGAR B. INLOW was ordained priest by Bishop Block at Grace Cathedral, San Francisco, Aug. 8. He is vicar of St. Mark's, Crockett, Cal.

DEATHS:

PHILIP J. McGEE, 56, vestryman of Christ Church, Woodbury, N. J., died suddenly Aug. 1. He was the son of Joseph E. J. McGee, verger of the Cathedral Church of Christ, Philadelphia.

JOHN N. DOBERSTINE, 68, rector of All Saints, Highland Park, N. J., died of a heart attack Aug. 18.

DEACONESS:

ALICE W. MAYER was set apart as a deaconess by Bishop Phillips, Aug. 6, at Grace House, near St. Paul, Va., where she continues to work among the mountain people of southwestern Virginia.

HOUSE FOR SALE at Keene Valley in Adirondacks Furnished or unfurnished; suitable for year-round living. 1st floor two bed-rooms and bath, attractive kitchen, hall and living-dining room with knotty pine paneling and fire-place. 2nd floor, 2 bed-rooms and bath. Basement, furnace-room, rooms suitable for workshop and laundry; 1 car garage. Oil-burner, hot-water heat. 2.1 acres of ground, mostly woodland, mountain view, trout-stream. BOX C, WITNESS, TUNKHANNOCK, PA.

CURATE WANTED

A young man as assistant in Evangelical parish in the north midwestern states. An unusual opportunity for the right man for varied work in large parish. Must be able to take over the direction of large church school, and an unusually fine program for young people in high school, college and business. Good salary and attractive apartment. Write Box G of THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

CASH IN ON YOUR SPARE TIME

SELL WONDERFUL REGAL CHRISTMAS CARDS NOT OBTAINABLE ELSEWHERE

Here's the big money maker. Marvelous Christmas cards exclusive with our agents. 25 sell for 1.00. Also 50 for 1.25. Name handsomely imprinted. 150 other boxes with profits to 100%. Bonus. Free samples. Kit on approval.

REGAL GREETING CARD CO.
Dept. LG-9, Ferndale, Michigan

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS
EST 1871

MAKE QUICK EASY CASH! FREE SAMPLES!

SELL Empire CHRISTMAS CARDS

Big new line — sure fire sellers. Gorgeous $1 Christmas and All-Occasion Assortments. Metallic, plastic, comic cards. Surprise gift items. Top value name printed Christmas Cards 25 for $1 up. Animated children's books. Scented stationery. NO EXPERIENCE NEEDED—Costs nothing to try. Fund raising plan for churches and clubs. Special offers. Extra Cash Bonus. Write now for samples.

50 Name Printed Cards $1.25

Personalized STATIONERY Napkins · Coasters

100% CASH PROFIT! SEND NO MONEY

247 Fox St.
EMPIRE CARD CO. ELMIRA, NEW YORK

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS

Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS

Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.

SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

Exquisite
IRISH LINENS
BY THE YARD

From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States, I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values; unsurpassed quality, imported direct from Ireland. Also transfer patterns, linen tape, and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 3 inches at 75c, 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.00.

MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

THE BISHOP WHITE
PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833

Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.

PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)

Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

ROBERT M. COOK
Curate at Trinity, Elmira, N. Y.

A man named Clifford Dawson hitchhiking with his wife, two-year-old son and baby, stopped here recently. He said he was a member of the Episcopal Church in Jessup, Ga. He was without funds and was looking for work. Failing in Elmira, he went on to Syracuse where the Rev. Walter N. Welsh helped him establish himself in a job and in lodgings. After four days at work he left without talking to anyone.

In his interview with a social worker here he revealed two incidents in which he showed immaturity. Three persons who have dealt with Mr. Dawson feel that while he needs material assistance he also needs help in personality adjustment.

We pass this information on so it may help any clergyman who meets Mr. Dawson.

CHARLES A. DUNHAM
Layman of Hartford, Conn.

The pursuit of peace in these trying times is an all-important aim of the Christian Church. There may be serious political differences between the communistic East and the capitalistic West but these differences can and must be resolved without further warfare. We are taught that all human beings are the children of God, regardless of their political and social ideologies. Such being the case, the terrible loss of life in the Korean war cannot but be the cause of sorrow to all religious minded people. And therefore all means of bringing this cruel warfare to an end must be the aim of all Christians. Our government and army must not be too proud or prejudiced to bargain fairly and honorably with our opponents. The continuation of the fighting might well result in World War III with consequent atomic destruction. Let us all exert our influence to ensure a peaceful settlement of the present struggle.

DOROTHY F. BURNS
Churchwoman of Alton, Ill.

I would like to tell you that I enjoy The Witness and think it is too bad that more of our people don't read it. I noticed particularly your editorial on theological education, and I am glad that some of our clergy are aware of the fact that we have been having too great a number of misfits in orders, and I don't understand why our bishops are not more demanding of a higher standard of man than some of our men. I quite agree with you that we need quality rather than quantity; and, like Mr. A. F. Gilman, the layman of Chicago, certainly we need more evangelicals and I don't think it would hurt one bit for them to use the soapbox on the busy corner more often than is done. It seems to me that in our, what I term, closed corporation 'high' Church diocese of Springfield, we have lost all evangelism and have far too much "churchianity' rather than Christianity.

ST. LUKE'S SCHOOL
Episcopal Day School under the direction of Trinity Parish
Nursery, Kindergarten, Elementary Grades. After School play groups. Coeducational. Moderate tuition. For catalogue and further information communicate with
THE REV. PAUL C. WEED, JR.
Headmaster
Hudson & Grove Sts., NEW YORK 14, N. Y.
Phone WAtkins 4-5960

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL
Coeducational Episcopal Day School
Prepares for leading secondary schools. Sound academic training. Kindergarten thru 8th grade. French and Latin emphasized. Complete testing program. Est. 1894. Music, drama, arts & crafts, sports. Bus service. Hot lunch. Tel: AL 4-2000
E. ALLISON GRANT, Headmaster
88 E. Fourth Ave. (11th St.), N. Y. 3

THE PATTERSON SCHOOL for BOYS

Episcopal School in Blue Ridge Mountains of Western No. Carolina. Accredited. Grades 6-12. Gymnasium, sports, 42nd year. 1300-acre estate. Board and tuition, moderate.
GEORGE F. WIESE, Supt.
COLLEGE Legerwood, N. C. HEALTH
PREPARATORY EDUCATION
CHARACTER BUILDING

SCHOOLS

FORK UNION MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth New Hampshire

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
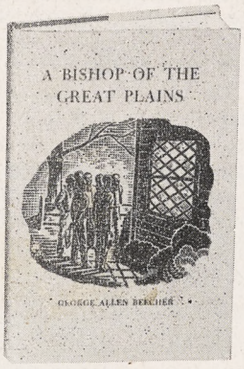
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota



ST. MARY'S-IN-THE MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

A Bishop of the Great Plains

By BISHOP GEORGE ALLEN BEECHER

BISHOP BEECHER died June 14, 1951, aged eighty-three years. The following editorial appeared in The Living Church, July 1, 1951. His autobiography tells how the Church was established "on a firm foundation, upon which later generations could build."

"In the death of the Rt. Rev. George Allen Beecher, D.D., retired Bishop of Western Nebraska, the episcopate of the Church loses its last surviving link with the 'Old West.' Bishop Beecher, friend of Buffalo Bill Cody and of Willa Cather, was a frontier parson, in the tradition of Bishops Kip and Kemper, Chase and Otey and Tuttle. At the time of his death, June 14th, he was the oldest bishop of the Episcopal Church in point of consecration, being nearly two years senior to former Presiding Bishop Tucker. His life and ministry spanned the period in which Nebraska and the Middle West grew from sparsely settled pioneer cattle country to a thriving industrial and agricultural area. He and his clergy and laymen established the Church on a firm foundation, upon which later generations could build."

Excerpts from a letter by Professor Frank J. Klingberg, noted authority on the history of humanitarianism, Los Angeles:

"My letter grows out of my delight with the Beecher book. I can't tell you exactly why it is so fine. I could not put it down. I chased members of the household and read to them aloud. I show it to callers, and, if they are non-readers, I show them the pictures. Every one mentioned in the volume comes to life. The pages on Willa Cather are the finest in all literature. What a memory the Bishop has! What vitality and what success! An Episcopal rector is not supposed to get off a train and make friends with all the men in that division of the road, and shortly have them all as his communicants. Sioux Indians were supposed to be handy in taking scalps, but here they are deep in religious services. And how I would like to have a dog like Othello. I can see no reason why teachers of the West and Western Expansion should not use this volume in their classes. The Bishop reminds me in many ways of Parson Woodforde's Diary of the second half of the 18th century.

"And yet, I can't tell you why this is a great book. True, I grew up in Kansas on the Missouri Pacific, half way between Salina and Council Grove, three miles from the cattle trail from Texas. Perhaps that locale has something to do with my enthusiasm. There is a brevity, a compactness, something of a haunting longing for home, as in the case of the English cowboys, singing outside the church windows. Each part is local, definite, exact, but it also transcends the place and the immediate moment. Or again, this book gives a true picture of the settlement and the hardships of the West. Fine men and fine women, portrayed at their best. I never had much use for the early days of Abilene, Kansas, where cowboys spent their money on wine and women and fought each other. The Bishop tells the story of the actual builders of the West and the men who grew there.

"Doubtless, you did not expect such a letter from me. But I did not dream of such a book when I opened it. To you, of course, much credit for your part in telling the American people the great story of the Episcopal Church in this country. First, you do it in one way; then in another; always with great success . . ."

Publication No. 29
Illustrated
Cloth Bound
$3.00

THE CHURCH HISTORICAL SOCIETY

4205 SPRUCE STREET • PHILADELPHIA 4, PA.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The WITNESS

10¢ A COPY

September 20, 1951

ST. LUKE'S ART EXHIBIT
Staged by Children of New York School
(Story on Page Five)

RELIGION AND THE MIND BY C. J. KEW

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 8 (and 9 Holy Days ecept Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 7:45, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers – 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. – 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital – 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m. Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a.m. Holy Communion
11 a.m. Morning Service and Sermon
Weekdays: Holy Communion Tuesdays at 12:10 p.m.; Wednesdays at 8 a.m.; Thursdays at 10:30 a.m.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer – 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon. Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D., Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 – 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m
Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.–High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacCall, 3rd, Rector
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 30 The WITNESS SEPTEMBER 20, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Faith and Order Commission Meets in Switzerland

Complete Plans for Third World Conference To Meet Next Summer in Lund

BY
JAMES W. KENNEDY
Rector of Christ Church, Lexington

★ A full meeting of the faith and order commission of the World Council of Churches met at Orleans, near Montreaux, Switzerland, August 14 to 18. The special business of the meeting was to complete arrangements for the third world conference on faith and order to be held in Lund, Sweden, August 15-28, 1952. The first day however, was given over to receiving and considering the reports of the three theological commissions, prepared over the years since the second world conference on faith and order in Edinburgh in 1937. The work of these special commissions was intensified following the first assembly of the world council when the life and work movement merged with the faith and order movement, and the faith and order concerns were entrusted to the faith and order commission, really composed of the old continuation committee appointed at Edinburgh.

These three themes were and are of fundamental importance to the ecumenical movement. "The nature of the Church," theme one, sets out the main task of the theologian to seek for doctrinal unity in this area. The ramifications of this theme are so vast they cannot be given in a brief news summary, but the work of this commission has covered everything from the agreements and disagreements over the historic meaning of "the Church" to some of the modern distortions in Marxism and some forms of existentialism. The commission did not forget that in the final analysis the nature of the Church must be expressed in the relationships at the parish level. "Every meeting of Christian with Christian must needs bear upon it something of the meaning of the Church which is his body. In the words of St. Augustine 'Thou hast been a brother; thou hast seen the Lord'."

The thorny problem "Intercommunion," the second theme, dealt with briefly in the report, was given long and serious consideration. Notice was given of the volumes soon to be available on the fundamental principles underlying the problem, with all points of view represented and a summary and classification of the actual rules and practices now in force in the various Churches.

The third theme, "Ways of Worship" concerned with the different worship traditions and their common elements especially, was reported by the secretary of the commission, Wiebe Vas because of the lamented death of the chairman, Professor Van Der Leeuw. The report contained a summary of the work done in both the areas of compatibility and apparent incompatability based upon many factors.

All these subjects will form the basis of the program for Lund, with the many non-theological factors involved used as a background for each section. The printed reports will be sent to all official delegates as their preparation for the third world conference on faith and order.

Other important business included the work of the second and third full days: A sub-committee on "post-Lund reorganization" with Prof. D. M. Baillie as chairman and Oliver Tomkins as secretary, prepared several memoranda for use at Lund on the possible future of the faith and order commission to be considered in the light of a more flexible and effective working within the framework of the World Council of Churches.

A sub-committee on the "Lund Program," with Bishop Angus Dun as chairman and Dr. Leonard Hodgson, secretary, worked out the details of the two weeks at Lund and the status of those who will come.

The makeup of the official delegation to Lund will be 250 places assigned to the Churches; five have been given to the Protestant Episcopal Church with no alternates allowed except in the place of a delegate who cannot attend; some 25 consultants; and a limited number of accredited persons to interpret the conference to their respective countries. The sessions will be held in the Great Hall of the University. Accommodations for the official delegation will be handled through the faith and order secretariat.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Another sub-committee completed plans for "Worship at Lund." Bishop D. W. Habler was chairman and Mr. Floyd Tomkins secretary. All services will be held in the cathedral with one communion service arranged by the Church of Sweden where all delegates will be invited to make their communions. Daily services will be held morning and evening in the cathedral.

A special delegation of young people attended the commission meeting and participated in all the sessions, making a statement at the close concerning their reactions and telling of the third world conference of Christian youth to be held in Travencore, India, in the winter of 1953 immediately preceding the central committee meeting of the World Council of Churches in India in January 1953.

The commission held daily services morning and evening and two communion services, one according to the rite of the Church of England and the other rite of the Greek Orthodox Church.

About 80 attended the meeting, most of them regular members of the commission with a few substitutes, consultants and members of theological commissions present as visitors.

CHURCHWOMAN WINS AWARD

★ Mrs. Mabel K. Staupers, member of St. Philip's, New York, has won this year's Spingarm award presented by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. She has been active for 30 years in public health work. The award was made "for spearheading the movement to integrate Negro nurses into American life as equals." She was instrumental in the liquidation of the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses, as now Negro nurses may join state and local chapters of the American Nurses Association. She led the fight to have Negro nurses training in New York City tax-supported institutions, and was largely instrumental in breaking down the navy's ban against Negro nurses in world war two.

CHURCH NEAR NORTH POLE

★ More than 100 miles above the Arctic Circle, about 20 degrees from the North Pole, a finger of land, "Tigara" in the Eskimo tongue, juts out into the polar sea. Tigara used to be the postoffice name but in recent years it has been changed to Point Hope. Here is an Eskimo village where the Church has had a mission, St. Thomas', since 1890.

John Driggs, M.D., later ordained deacon, ministered there for eighteen years, with but three visits home and mail but once a year. He was followed by four others, Hoare, Thomas, Goodman and Gordon. Only in very recent years has the isolation been broken by the use of airplanes.

The Point Hope parish reaches up and down the bleak coast to Kivalina and Point Lay, and inland eighty miles to Noatak the one place where the missionary never sees a tree.

The mission has more than 600 names on its membership list. The Eskimo church council and Eskimo lay readers have been a strong support to the missionary and during the present long interval without a priest, more than three years, they have kept up their services and their offerings. "No question about offering," the chief lay reader, Roy Vincent, who is also president of the village council, wrote to Bishop Gordon. "We give our little money to the Church every first Sunday in the month ever since you left. Services pretty good every Sunday. Large congregations. I remind them confirmation class try to be here ready for you."

STUDENTS in universities and colleges throughout the country are now gathering. This is a dinner of the Canterbury Club at the University of Kentucky. Rectors are urged to notify college chaplains of their students going away to college

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

ST. LUKE'S CHAPEL AND SCHOOL

★ The story of St. Luke's Chapel dates back to 1822 when Greenwich Village was separated from New York by several miles of open country. There was an occasional stage service between this village and New York City, but for those who wished to attend the laying of the corner-stone of the church, it was a considerable journey. An old account tells us this of the event: "Curiosity and propriety drew many this day out of the precincts of the city to attend the laying of this corner-stone. Some took the lanes winding among and over the hills of Broadway, till they reached the stone bridge which spanned the canal. Other parties passed on, till they crossed the wooden bridge over the canal at Greenwich Street." The facts of this imposing ceremony required two days to reach the city papers.

The church grew rapidly with the expanding neighborhood which soon became a suburb of New York rather than a country village. For during the yellow fever epidemic of 1822, many came here to escape from that dread scourge and eventually settled here permanently. In late years as the character of the neighborhood changed with the northward movement of the population, the church adapted itself to changing conditions.

The first warden of the church was Dr. Clement Moore who wrote The Night Before Christmas for the amusement of his children. There has always been a strong interest in the children of the parish and community. A school was established as far back as 1831, there being a strong feeling that "the work of education was the bounded obligation of the Church." The present St. Luke's School is only six years old, under the direction of Trinity Church. But starting with only three grades, it will have grown from nursery to eighth grade this fall. The main part of the school is now in the Bret Harte House. In keeping with the background of so many of the parents and of the neighborhood, the children put on their own outdoor art exhibit in the churchyard in May. (See cover). St. Luke's changing with the years but is ever a part of the community.

GENERAL CONVENTION HAS MANAGER

★ The Rev. Gabriel Farrell has been named manager of the 1952 General Convention, it has been announced by the Rev. Gardiner M. Day, chairman of the diocesan committee on arrangements. Until June he was director of the Perkins Institute and Massachusetts School for the Blind. He is at present on the staff of the Episcopal Theological School where he assists Dean Taylor in administrative matters. He has been released by the school for the first eight months of next year.

BISHOP OF NEWCASTLE VISITS STATES

★ The Bishop of Newcastle, the Rt. Rev. Noel Baring Hudson, will arrive in the United States this week. He will be the guest of the General Theological Seminary while here and will cover a considerable speaking itinerary arranged by the Rev. Canon C. Rankin Barnes, secretary of the House of Deputies and of the National Council.

A former secretary of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts (SPG) Bishop Hudson is official envoy to the Church in America, bringing 250th birthday greetings from the society. He will bring a replica of the charter granted to the SPG by King William III in 1701. He will visit ten dioceses between September 19 and October 23, and will sail for England October 27.

On Wednesday, October 10, Bishop Hudson will attend a luncheon with the National Council at Seabury House, and that afternoon will address the National Council in session there, presenting his formal message from the SPG to the Church in the new world.

In his itinerary, Bishop Hudson will visit seventeen SPG parishes—parishes actually founded by the SPG, or at some early stage in their history assisted by SPG.

WASHINGTON LAYMEN MEET REGULARLY

★ The Episcopal men of King's County, Washington, hold weekly luncheon meetings at a Seattle hotel. They meet at noon, and all men are welcomed cordially. No introduction is needed and there is no formality. There is no program. It is simply a group of fellow Churchmen sitting down to lunch once a week. There is much conversation and a fine spirit of fellowship.

SON IS ELECTED TO VACANCY

★ Courtney Barber Jr. has been elected to the board of directors of the American committee for the Brotherhood of St. Andrew in Japan, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of his father.

VALENTINE LEE waves the cancelled note making the Good Shepherd, Jacksonville, Florida, free of debt. The choir in the background sings the doxology

National Canterbury Association Elects New Officers

BY JACK KELK
Episcopal Student at Cornell

★ Daniel Merrill of Princeton was elected as national chairman of the National Canterbury Association at the first annual meeting of the executive commission of the National Canterbury Association held at Topeka, Kansas. Other officers elected were Lucille Minarik of Western Reserve as recording secretary; Wendell Peabody of Colby as corresponding secretary and Jack Pierson of Washington University, St. Louis, as treasurer. Chosen as advisors for the group were the Rev. Roger Blanchard, executive secretary of the division of college work; the Rev. James Pike, chaplain of Columbia; and Capt. Leslie Richardson, executive secretary of the Church Society for College Work.

The National Canterbury Association was founded during the Christmas holidays last year at a convention of college students at Cranbrook School, Bloomfield Hills, Michigan. It coordinates the activities of all Canterbury Clubs, and other relevant Episcopal groups, on the college and university campuses of the nation.

Delegates reported that, during the past year, great advances had been made in the work of the association with all but one province now having commissions, and with a high percentage of diocesan commissions also being formed. To date, eighty-five campus clubs have applied for charters in the new association.

A major topic for discussion at the sessions was that of financial structure for the association. Two fundamental principles were agreed upon: first, the association does not wish to be financially dependent on any other group either in or out of the Church and should become self-supporting as soon as possible. Second, the delegates believe that the association should always give to others as much as it spends on itself, thus fulfilling one of Christ's basic commandments, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." In light of this conviction, the conference designated a large section of its budget to support the work of two major ecumenical efforts, the United Student Christian Council and the World Student Christian Federation. It was recommended that the annual Lenten offering of students for 1952 go to the International Christian University of Japan which is in its formative stages.

Chosen as official delegates to the United Student Christian Council were Mr. Merrill, Miss Minarik, John Beekley of Lehigh and Robert Schmidt of Baylor. Mr. Schmidt was also elected as representative to the United Movement of the Church's Youth.

In challenging its chapters to stimulate new growth, on the college campuses, the executive commission said: "Equally as important as the establishment of the Canterbury Club is the growth of cooperation and action on the diocesan level; for this a diocesan or regional commission is of primary importance, both in creating a sense of unity among the individual clubs, and of carrying on the missionary work of the Church in the diocese. The executive commission and all other commissions are ready to help wherever necessary; for we can aid, but we cannot initiate any activity on the local level. We feel that the students will meet this challenge and will respond to it in such a way that the mission of the association, 'To witness in our colleges and universities to the Lordship of Christ over the whole life of mankind' will be realized."

Time and again, delegates discussed the difficulty of making a Christian witness on today's college campus which, in essence, is pagan and secular in its religious outlook. It was decided that every effort should be made by committed students to convince the college community that, in practice, its members did make religious assumptions for their lives and to attempt to show them that Christian faith and doctrine explicitly, gives meaning and relevance to all phases of existence.

A draft copy of a new Canterbury handbook was revised at the session and will soon be published, in connection with a monthly association news letter. The national convention of the association is planned for October of next year in Boston, to meet in conjunction with General Convention.

WENDELL W. ANDERSON, industrialist of Detroit, is a director of the Episcopal Church Foundation

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

ST. MARTIN'S, DETROIT IS OPENED

★ The congregation of St. Martin's, Detroit, has moved into their new church building which will be dedicated in December.

EDUCATION INSTITUTE IN GEORGIA

★ The Rev. Don H. Copeland, rector of St. James, South Bend, Ind., conducted an institute for Sunday school teachers and parents at St. Paul's, Albany, Ga. He stressed the Prayer Book teaching regarding education and described in detail the methods he has used in a successful parish-home cooperative educational program.

BISHOPS CONGRATULATE JOHN FOSTER DULLES

★ Bishop Sherrill as president of the National Council of Churches and Bishop Scarlett of Missouri, as chairman of the department of international justice and goodwill, sent a communication to John Foster Dulles expressing the hope "that the deliberations at San Francisco will yield results that will immensely improve the prospects for peace and justice in Asia and throughout the world."

They also congratulated Mr. Dulles for his leadership "during the difficult negotiations of these recent weeks."

AMERICAN CHURCH UNION COUNCIL TO MEET

★ Bishop Louttit of South Florida will be the speaker at the banquet held in connection with the annual council of the American Church Union, meeting in New York, October 9-10. The council mass will be celebrated at the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, with business sessions the rest of the day.

WILLIAM LUMPKIN RESIGNS

★ The Rev. William W. Lumpkin has resigned as rector of Calvary Church, Pittsburgh, Pa. This month the Rev. T. A. Cheatham of Pinehurst, N. C., is aiding the Rev. E. L. Baxter, assistant minister, with services and pastoral duties, and next month Dean Chester Emerson of Cleveland will assist.

PACIFIC SEMINARY HAS LARGE ENROLLMENT

★ Ninety students registered on September seventh at the Church Divinity School of the Pacific, when Dean Sherman E. Johnson began his first year as head of the school. During the summer, the interior of All Saints' chapel was completely remodeled. Regular pews are replacing the collegiate style stalls to increase the seating capacity of the chapel from 65 to 120. A new dormitory room has been added to Shires House to make room for additional students. The kitchen is being completely remodeled in order to prepare food for twice as many students. The staff of full professors remains the same: Randolph Miller, Charles Whiston, and Frederick Schilling, with Samuel Garrett as assistant professor. Special instructors will include various clergy in the vicinity, Mrs. Mary Blaisdell Harris and Mrs. Jean Johnson.

NEWARK CLERGY CONFERENCE

★ The clergy of the diocese of Newark held a conference at Delaware, N. J., September 10-12. The leaders were Bishop Washburn, Bishop Ludlow, Prof. Robert Dentan of Berkeley, Chaplain James Pike of Columbia, Prof. Norman Pittenger of General.

ST. LUKE'S, Tulsa, started by Trinity Parish in 1942 when it took over the property of a former drive-in barbecue and beer stand, is now a parish of 500 communicants. The Rev. James E. Crosbie was rector until his untimely death in March

Mexican Government Hampers Church Activities

★ Progress in the face of considerable difficulty is reported for the missionary district of Mexico by Bishop Efrain Salinas y Velasco, who celebrates the 20th anniversary of his consecration September 29. Addressing the thirty-seventh convocation of the district, he said in part: "The world situation, which might not seem to affect us directly, has made difficult economic conditions. Many families have left their homes in the country, seeking better conditions in towns and cities where more opportunities may be found for work, and more income in commerce and industry. The seven-years drought which has laid waste wide regions of the country and has greatly reduced crops has resulted in scarcity and want which in turn have led to the emigration of whole families.

"Efforts to expand the work as opportunity offered met with much difficulty during the year. One of the clergy established a new mission in the federal district but it was impossible to obtain the necessary government permission to exercise his ministry or to hold services in the temporary chapel. Of course we have not abandoned our work in this area. A sufficient number of faithful people continue to hope that in the end they will be allowed to have their church and be left free to enjoy the rights, conceded by our Magna Charta, to worship God and to render him service according to their conscience.

"Our new mission in Tlamata is up and doing. On my last visit a churchman gave land for a church building, indicating the determination of these our brothers to stand firm in the ranks of the Church. Our congregation at Joquicingo, which has been inactive, is now full of interest and enthusiasm. The people repaired their church during the year and are furnishing the interior, hoping to dedicate the building soon.

"Our church homes (hostels) in Nopala were threatened by fanatics at first but were able to finish the year and to start the new year under the best conditions. Several improvements were added to the house for girls. In the parish house at Cuernavaca a hostel has been opened for boys, especially those who hope to enter the ministry. These young men attend the government's educational institutions to obtain a bachelor's degree, looking toward theological study. A new parish house at Tlalpan has been completed except for plumbing and other interior fixtures. The Heroe de Nacozari kindergarten and nursery in Mexico City functions regularly, as do the other social welfare projects in various parts of the country. In San Martin de las Flores and San Sebastian, both in the state of Jalisco, two small but very helpful clinics have been opened, thanks to the good will and cooperation of Dr. Alfonso Ibarra Ibarra."

Other material improvements mentioned by the Bishop include an artesian well and pump to provide an adequate water supply for St. Andrew's School and the school farm, Granja Mexico. This was done with aid from the National Council and others. An electric organ, a gift from the diocese of Michigan and other sources, was dedicated in the cathedral in Mexico City, in memory of Frank W. Creighton, former Bishop of Mexico and of Michigan. Other improvements, provided by local contributions or by gifts from friends elsewhere, have included two Church windows, three portable organs, two jeeps, and plumbing for the Cuernavaca hostel.

FREDERICK GRANT SPEAKS AT METHODIST SCHOOL

★ Frederick C. Grant, professor at Union Seminary and book editor of the Witness, was a headliner at the School of Missions held at Macon, Ga., Sept. 10-14, sponsored by women of the Methodist Church. There was an enrollment of about 200.

MICHIGAN URGES TITHING

★ The work being done on modern tithing in the diocese of Michigan was explained and discussed in three diocesan clergy conferences during the past week. Leading the discussion at the conference of the diocese of Western Michigan was the Rev. Howard V. Harper, chairman of the department of promotion of Michigan. The meetings took place September 10 and 11 in Grand Rapids.

John C. Chapin, director of the department of promotion, gave a talk on tithing to the clergy of the Diocese of Albany who met at Lake George September 9 and 10. On Sept. 11, Mr. Chapin addressed the clergy of the diocese of East Carolina at Washington, N. C.

Under the guidance of Bishop Emrich and the department of promotion, tithing has become a vital interest in Michigan. A little over a year ago a seven year educational program was begun, and a considerable amount of promotional material—films and pamphlets have been developed.

CHAPLAINS RECEIVE DECORATIONS

★ Three more Episcopal chaplains have been decorated for service "over and above the call of duty": Lewis B. Sheen; James A. Edden; Julian Ellenberg.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EDITORIALS

Irresponsible Statement

CARDINAL SPELLMAN quoted an old proverb recently when he said, To err is human, to forgive divine. He went on to announce that all ninety of the West Point cadets dismissed for having violated the honor code of the academy would be made welcome at the Roman Catholic colleges named in his much publicized statement.

The West Point story came as a terrific shock this summer. Since the football squad was conspicuously involved, it could not but call to mind other dismaying exposures of athletic misconduct in our colleges over the last year. Senator Kefauver was moved to speak with concern about "the moral fibre of the nation."

The fact that no less than ninety men were guilty of some kind of cribbing did not, as some have oddly suggested, give a kind of sanction to the deed. After all morality is not determined by counting heads, nor does it shift back and forth according to the majority will. From all accounts these boys had broken faith with the honor system, and if commendation there be — it should be directed toward those in authority who had the courage to uphold the standard of the institution at the cost of the worst kind of publicity and criticism. At the very least, their decision will probably mean defeat on the gridiron this autumn. Far more, it meant a shattering penalty laid upon so many promising young men.

Our sympathy goes out to these last: they have paid a very high price for the error of their way. And all of us would hope that they might be given other chances to continue their education and put the past behind them. But this is not to say that they are to be made martyrs or heroes. To encourage any such idea would be a disservice to them and to youth in general.

It is this last which disturbed us about Cardinal Spellman's magnanimous gesture of forgiveness. We share the Cardinal's belief in forgiveness, but we would remind him that repentance is rather important, too, if not quite essential if forgiveness is to benefit the sinner. Frankly we thought his widely circulated announcement on the irresponsible side, if not a deliberate piece of Roman Catholic propaganda.

"Quotes"

THE Church is not organized as a fighting force in national and international life. That is why all kinds of injustice, oppression and immorality can flourish right under our eyes. When the Church becomes militant again, when its strategies are less timid and stereotyped and more venturesome and courageous, when its social conscience is keener, when Church membership costs something, not only in dollars and cents but in time and service, in labor and sacrifice and, possibly, in reputation, it will once again become a center of attraction for heroic souls.

—ROBERT J. McCRACKEN

Education Moves Forward

PRESIDENT HENRY VAN DUSEN of Union Seminary has written a most pertinent book, "God in Education; a Tract for the Times," which has attracted much attention as a keen analysis of the failure of our educational institutions to educate. He insists that the study of religion is not only a specific interest on the plane of other interests, such as literature, science and business, but that it is much more; "a determinative principle in the educational process as a whole." The sad part about our educational systems is that they have very generally been unconcerned to correlate the information gained; they have been content to leave it undigested, have produced a grab-bag of so-called facts which have no meaning in themselves because they are aimless and goal-less. They have failed singularly to face the ultimate question for every human being; is there a God or is there not? Our institutions of higher learning have consistently dodged the issue or self-consciously pretended it didn't exist.

The lamentable result has been that they have only succeeded in producing highly skilled animals—theirs not to question why. They are only superior in techniques to the trained apes who can learn to count up to six, ride bicycles and even smoke cigarettes. These former, to be sure, can erect sky-scrapers, soar into the stratosphere, split the atom; destroy and restore life with equal facility. Most efficient of the higher primates, one observes them with morbid fascination as they turn their energies to exterminating each other with flawless timing and precision—"Operation Killer"—and then inconsistently withdraw in dismay and horror as they see what they have done in their superlatively organized madness.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

For this we educate. Why not?—how much time has been spent in teaching our youth otherwise? The preposterous grotesqueness of such naive methods in training men to live is gradually being realized. We congratulate President James P. Baxter of Williams College, who recognizes this. In a recent report on the state of education in his institution he puts the problem succinctly and squarely. Writes he, "We are doing a better job at training the intelligence than developing the character. Clearly we need to strengthen religious influence, particularly at the college level . . . I believe that it is our duty as part of general education to expose all Williams students to the big questions that lie in the field of religion." Noting that an instructor in religion has been engaged, he states that it might be well to consider the possibility that "each Williams undergraduate be required to elect, during his four years, a minimum of two courses from the fields of religion, philosophy, ethics, or the Bible."

This is a realistic step forward; other colleges please note and copy.

Future of Free Catholicism

BY
CHAD WALSH
Professor at Beloit and Witness Contributing Editor

THERE are many different ways of describing the Anglican communion. It has been called the via media, the missing link between catholicism and protestantism, liturgical protestantism, evangelical catholicism—the labels are legion. You may prefer some of these descriptions over others, but I think they all point toward the same fact: that the Anglican communion is firmly catholic in framework, with its historic creeds, apostolic ministry, objective sacraments, and liturgical modes of worship—but that at the same time a spirit of liberty and individual man-to-God immediacy prevails within the catholic framework.

Another way of putting this is to say that the ethos of the Anglican communion is strikingly similar to that of the early, apostolic Church, as reflected in the New Testament and Church fathers. At the time of the Reformation the ethos of western Christianity divided into two types: the sense of visible historical continuity and the belief in the objective power of the sacraments became a Roman Catholic specialty, whereas the inwardness of the direct man-to-God relationship and the primacy of faith over all visible deeds and institutions became the treasure of protestantism. Of the western Churches, only the Anglican communion has steadfastly endeavored to hold together, is a state of creative tension and paradox, these elements which were intermingled in the golden age of primitive Christianity. For this reason, I believe the best way of labeling our communion is to call it evangelical catholicism or free catholicism.

What is the future of free catholicism, such as we profess? A first glance is not encouraging. If you look at the broad patterns of world Christianity, it seems evident that three great rallying points are evident. Roman Catholicism grows more Roman every year, and less inclined to rub shoulders with Christians outside the pale. The Kremlin is endeavoring to make Moscow the center of Eastern Orthodoxy. The Protestant Churches are drawing rapidly together, with Geneva as their spiritual center. This leaves the Anglican communion, a small free-wheeling comet, circling Canterbury for the most part but making occasional wistful journeys to Geneva and the other great focal points of world Christianity.

Folly of Figures

IF the Christians of the globe organize themselves into four groups, the Anglican contingent will be by far the smallest. What mission can it have in a world inhabited by the giants of Rome, Moscow, and Geneva? The very fact that I even ask this question is evidence that my thinking has been infected and corrupted by the American insistence on treating statistics with exaggerated seriousness. In reality, one man in the right is a majority of one. The early Christians began as a few hundred passionate believers, and were not discouraged at any census reports indicating that a thousand men worshipped Caesar for every one who worshipped Jesus Christ. If, as we believe, the Anglican tradition of free, evangelical catholicism represents the most comprehensive attempt to combine all facets of Christian truth, we need not pay too much attention to statistics.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

But we do need to think in the language of the missionaries. In principle, if not always in fact, the Anglican communion stands for a full-bodied, balanced Christianity—for a tradition which arrives at truth by addition rather than subtraction. We have no cause for personal pride in this. We are merely lucky. Either the character of the Anglican communion is the result of a fortunate set of historical accidents, or else God has deliberately guided the history of our Church so that it can bear witness to the ideal and fact of evangelical catholicism. If this second possibility is the true one, then I think the unimpressive statistics of our world membership is a part of God's present plans: our small size is a protection against pretensions to secular power. Our bearing witness can be purer because we are so very powerless in worldly ways.

Here is what I think: the unique mission of the Anglican Church is to demonstrate free catholicism in action, and to commend it to all the Christians of the world. We ought to maintain all contacts possible with other Christian bodies and be alert to establish new contacts, so that we will be on the spot, ready to recognize and encourage, anywhere and at any time, any tendencies toward the full-bodied protestant catholicism that we ideally represent.

Roman Church

WITH this in mind, I should like to say something about Rome, Moscow, and Geneva. Concerning Rome I speak with both love and sorrow. With love, because I know how deep and genuine is the devotional life of millions of Roman Catholics, and because I know also that Rome has courageously preserved, against all temptations to water them down, the basic truths of the Christian faith. But I must speak also with sorrow, because the Roman Church of today is not the same thing as the western Church of the early Middle Ages. Modern Roman Catholicism is almost as much a child of the Reformation as Lutheranism or Calvinism. The birthday of the Romanism that we know was the Council of Trent. Since Trent, the process of stiffening and growing rigid and adding new and unscriptural doctrines has gone on apace. Vanished is the evangelical, free spirit that once prevented occification.

(The First of Three Articles)

Peter, Patmos and Peace

BY
RANDOLPH CRUMP MILLER
Professor at Church Divinity School of the Pacific

THE old Sewanee poet, William Alexander Percy, wrote a wonderful hymn about the fishermen who cast their nets in Galilee. They were contented, until Jesus came along and threw their lives into a turmoil. And in the end

"Young John, who trimmed the flapping sail,
Homeless, in Patmos died.
Peter, who hauled the teeming net,
Head-down was crucified.

"The peace of God, it is no peace,
But strife closed in the sod.
Yet, brothers, pray for but one thing—
The marvelous peace of God." (Hymn 437)

The "peace that passes understanding" is so much deeper and striking and more satisfying than the kind of peace we usually dream of, that we need to rethink our views of peace if we are to know the blessedness of the Christian faith.

Our young fishermen, John and Peter, were contented and peaceful. They had good jobs, were happily married, and had at least the conventional Jewish faith. They may have been stirred by John the Baptist. We know that Jesus was a follower of the Baptist before and after his baptism, and John and Peter soon joined Jesus. They left their nets in Galilee, closed up shop, left their homes, and became fishers of men, because Jesus said, "Follow me." It is just like that—casual, intuitive, and yet shockingly final. That they were never far from their fishing, however, is clear from the statement from the broken-hearted Peter after the crucifixion, "I'm going fishing."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Peter the Rock

PETER is the best known of the Twelve. He is portrayed as the chief spokesman through Jesus' ministry and at Pentecost. We are familiar with his enthusiasms and his weaknesses. We know how Jesus came to his house and healed his mother-in-law (which led one wag to say that this was why he left home so eagerly). We are familiar with Peter's confession that Jesus is the anointed one, the Christ. We recall the story of the Transfiguration, which may be Peter's vision of Moses and Elijah with Jesus. We all know that Peter denies his Master in the great crisis of the trial and crucifixion. Peter is a vaccilating character, until the risen Christ appears to him: the first disciple to experience Christ's presence after the women.

Then comes a great change. The risen Christ takes hold of the wandering fisherman and brings him around. It is Peter who gives the great sermon at Pentecost, when three thousand are baptized. He becomes the leader of the Church at Jerusalem for awhile, although he is soon superceded by James, the brother of Jesus, as he expands his activities outside of Jerusalem. There is a legend that when Nero's persecution caught up with Peter at Rome, that he asked to be crucified upside-down, because he was not worthy to die as did his Master.

It is certain that Peter lived a dynamic, exciting, and even violent life after he was whisked away from his teeming nets by his Lord. But there was a "marvelous peace of God" for the "big fisherman" who travelled throughout the known world bringing the gospel of Jesus Christ to his fellow Jews.

John Son of Zebedee

JOHN, the son of Zebedee, offers us more difficulty. We are not sure that he is the author of Revelation and therefore identical with the seer of Patmos. We are certain that he did not write the letters and gospel ascribed to him. But there is enough in the gospel story to make the same point.

Jesus called John and James the sons of Thunder, because they were noisy, impatient and vehement. John scolded those who attempted to heal in Jesus' name. He prayed for fire to fall on a Samaritan village. John and James were ambitious, and asked for chief places in the future kingdom.

On the other hand, tradition tells us that John was the "beloved disciple." After the resurrection, John worked closely with Peter, was imprisoned, made some missionary journeys, and worked chiefly in the Jerusalem Church. He was probably put to death sometime about the year 70. Another tradition ties this with John the author of Revelation, who is quite evidently a Jewish Christian imprisoned on the isle called Patmos. It is possible that the vehemence of John the son of Zebedee is reflected in the bitterness of the book of Revelation, but only if John lived long enough, for Revelation was written about 95 A. D. (and this conflicts with the story of his martyrdom in the year 70). The Patmos John lived into the reign of Trajan, and died a natural death probably at Patmos and in exile.

But whether there were one or two Johns, the point is the same: one was martyred and the other exiled. Life for these early Christians was not easy, and to take them from their safe and contented fishing jobs and to put them at the mercy of cruel leaders is not exactly the promise of worldly peace.

What are these demands of Jesus which promise men the peace of God and then breaks them? In W. Russell Bowie's hymn we sing:

> "From old unfaith our souls release
> To seek the kingdom of thy peace,
> By which alone we choose thee."
>
> (Hymn 522)

Paul writes: "Let the peace of Christ be supreme within your hearts—that is why you have been called as members of the one body." (Col. 3:15, Moffatt). When we show "compassion, kindliness, humility, gentleness, and good temper," when we "forbear and forgive each other," and above all when we are "loving, for love is the link of the perfect life" (Col. 3:12-13, Moffatt), then we are on the road to perfect peace.

Peace is certainly not the absence of conflict or the absence of security. Tennyson writes:

> "Why do they prate of the blessings of peace? We have made them a curse,
> And lust of gain, in the spirit of Cain, is it better or worse
> Than the heart of the citizen hissing in war?"

The contented, peaceful fishermen did not have peace before they followed Jesus. Such peace was a delusion. They were at the mercy of anyone who could conquer them. They were at the mercy of schools of fish. They relied on their own strength. They may have escaped turmoil for awhile, but they did not escape inner stirrings of the spirit. They did not know the peace of God at all.

But later on, when John was on Patmos and in prison, he knew peace. Peter, who was persecuted throughout his later life, knew peace. From a secular point of view, they were in the midst of a world-changing conflict and they died at the hands of the opposition. Their peace was not what we discover in the peace of mind cults of today. Yet they had the "marvelous peace of God."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

This peace was like the ocean. Deep down beneath the waves, there is a serenity about the ocean, but on the surface there are swells, waves, and even typhoons. The ocean does not lose its basic rhythm of peace.

Great music may often provide magnificent excitement on the surface, and even reflect conflict and discord. Wagner and Beethoven are often tumultuous and even stormy, but there is experienced unity and structure and serenity in the total impact.

This kind of peace is illustrated in a happy family. On the surface there are noise and activity and excitement and argument. But even a home that looks like a beehive may express a deep peace in the background. Tennyson wrote about his wife: "The peace of God came into my life before the altar when I wedded her." The peace of God is like that. It is what rest is to the body, what sleep is to the activity of the day, what serenity is to the home, what depth is to the ocean.

Louisa Alcott, who wrote Little Women, in her first twenty-eight years moved twenty-nine times. Even today that would be a record matched only by trailer lovers. Her home was fundamentally happy even against the background of constant change.

Peace in Activity

WE begin to see what is meant by the peace that Peter and John of Patmos experienced in the midst of their rugged missionary careers. Their serenity was no "flight of the alone to the alone." It was no detachment from life. Their work was full of urgency as they expected the end of the age. They spent their days and nights in feverish activity, for the kingdom was just around the corner. But one never feels that they were jittery or shallow or anxious. From the depths of their being came a strong sense of dependableness. Peter was like a rock. John's soul was released from unfaith to seek the kingdom of peace. They knew the marvelous peace of God and thus could face prison on Patmos or crucifixion in Rome with equanimity. That simply was not the issue.

The peace of God, then, is the source of tremendous activity. If we are going to reform the world, to overcome evil with good, to serve our fellow men, we need resources like the depths of an overflowing spring. Then God's grace will continue to work from within us to provide integrity of purpose and power to do his will.

If we have this kind of peace, the pace of modern life is not so appalling or devastating. Like Louisa Alcott who moved twenty-nine times in twenty-eight years, we can keep our serenity and keep moving. There is no greatness in anyone without serenity. There is no great art of living without the peace of God. The blessedness that Jesus promised Peter and John, and which he promises to us today, is to the poor in spirit and the pure in heart, to the peacemakers and those who suffer for righteousness' sake. Out of the hurly-burly of life comes a peace that passes understanding, and it throws us back into the maelstrom better able to keep our heads above water and swim in the direction God chooses.

> "The peace of God, it is no peace,
> But strife closed in the sod.
> Yet, brothers pray for but one thing—
> The marvelous peace of God."

Forgiveness

BY

PHILIP H. STEINMETZ
Rector of the Ashfield Parishes

WHEN the score is about even it is easier to forgive. Unfortunately it is not usual for both parties to agree when the score is even. One or the other feels that just one more stroke must be struck to get even and then the account can be closed.

I have found it helpful when trying to forgive an offense to remember what I have done to offend. Forgiveness flows more freely from a heart which is genuinely ashamed and knows its own need to be forgiven.

Yet God freely forgives those he has not offended. He never stands in need of our forgiveness. Here is one of the points at which we stand in utter amazement before him. What a love it is which forgives those who return evil when they have received good.

There is some inkling of it in the incident of the slave being brutally flogged and taunted by the master with the question, "What can Jesus Christ do for you now?" He replied: "He can teach me to forgive you."

Forgiveness is like the pearl which forms in an oyster at the very point where a wound is inflicted by some foreign body. Out of harm comes great beauty.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Religion and the Mind

BY
CLINTON J. KEW

PSYCHOSOMATIC

"WHAT is psychosomatic medicine? Does religion have any bearing on this type of medicine?" These questions have been asked by many people who have read several popular books in the field of psychology.

Psychosomatic as a term frequently means thinking of the human being as consisting of two separate parts: a mind and a body. Recent studies have shown that there is a close connection between mental states and physical disorders. Psychosomatic medicine means that an emotional disease will affect the body, and a physical disease will affect the mind and the emotions. In other words, a sick mind will disturb bodily functions and a sick body will affect the mind. Thinking has a great deal in common with emotional reactions and emotional components enter into a great deal of thinking.

About 380 B. C., Plato in the Republic anticipated this in his narrative of Socrates' dissertion on the cure of a headache: "Charmides had been complaining of a headache, and Critias had asked Socrates to make believe that he could cure him of it. Socrates said that he had a charm which he had learned when serving with the army, of one of the physicians of the Thracian king, Zemolxix. This physician had told Socrates that the cure of a part should not be attempted without the treatment of the whole, and also that no attempt should be made to cure the body without the soul, and therefore, if the head and body are to be well, you must begin by curing the mind: that is the first thing. And he who taught me the cure and the charm added a special direction: 'Let no one persuade you to cure the head until he has given you his soul to be cured. For this is the great error of our day in the treatment of the human body, that physicians separate the soul from the body'."

If we can think of the human being as a single system, we can understand that anything which affects the body will affect the mind and the emotions. Even the common cold affects our thinking. Some people, as soon as they feel a cold developing, immediately make up their minds that certain plans must be terminated. Others lament that the next few days of the cold will be unhappy ones.

Similarly, there is no emotional disturbance which does not affect the functions of the body. For instance, a man is afraid of losing his job. He may have a bad mental picture of being idle and in need of food for his family. An anxiety attack may come. This mental picture may stir him up to such an extent that his breathing may become shallow or deep, his heart may palpitate, and he may experience a chocking sensation. These disturbances are only bodily manifestations of his mental and emotional disturbances. In other words, all disease is psychosomatic.

It is not a question of having mental medicine when our minds are disturbed or physical medicine when our bodies are ill. It is necessary for us to treat the whole organism. This is where religious belief plays a large part in the healing of diseases, both physical and mental.

Prinzhorn implies the necessity of treating the whole man when he wrote his prescription of the ideal healer back in 1932: "One wise priest from each of the great religious communities, one lawyer, one teacher, one psychologist, one wise philosopher, and three physicians possessing a very firm biological basis." Everyone is acquainted with the statement of Jung where he says, "there has not been one whose problem in the last resort was not that of finding a religious outlook on life." Religion has a large state in the happy functioning of men, women and children.

Much of the illness today is due to the fact that people have no love, because they have never experienced it; no faith, because they are afraid of the future; no hope, because they are disillusioned by their lives; no understanding, because they have failed to find significance in their own existence. Everyone needs faith, hope and love. Spiritual healing can be regarded as a kind of surgery. As an officer in the art of spiritual hygiene, the minister must not only keep his flock from going astray, but he must seek them when they are lost.

A woman is on the operating table. The doctors do not want to give her ether as she is afraid of death. The chaplain is sent for. If he is the kind of person who has lived in an atmosphere of holiness, his very presence in the operating room will bring fresh light and hope to the fearful woman. A manic-depressive student in a mental hospital has rebelled against his shock treatments. The chaplain enters the room and the young man runs to him for help. With the help of the chaplain who carried confidence and love within him, the young man regained confidence in the doctors and his cure was assured.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Public worship is very important in these days of fear and tension. When people realize that the individual ministry is an integral part of public worship, that too will be undertaken in the physician of the soul's white surplice. "Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to account anything as from ourselves; but our sufficiency is of God."

Questions should be addressed to Mr. Kew at St. Luke's Church, S. Fullerton Ave. & Union St., Montclair, N. J.

The Big and Little in Religion

BY

IRVING P. JOHNSON

Founder and First Editor of The Witness

RELIGION is really a big thing, but when a little mind is confronted with a big thing, it bites off only a small chunk of the whole, and that which was a big thing goes on its way, while the morsel becomes the big thing to the little mind.

Religion has much to do with various things. It is infinite in its diversity.

It has been the motive power for many things. It has promoted education, philanthropy, social service, lodges, cults, philosophies and other movements.

It has concerned itself with prophecy, healing, spirit rapping, telepathy, and other wonders. In the hands of Mohammedans it has sanctified many wives and much slaughter, and in the hands of the Mormon many wives and much business sagacity.

The man who is self-seeking can invoke religion to gratify his lust, slay his enemies, fill his pocket or cure his ills.

The man who lives in an academic world can give a philosophic turn to his religion or a religious turn to his philosophy, and so discover a new religion.

The man who does big business can invoke religion to protect his dividends and the man who works by the day can curse religion because it does not increase his wages.

Religion is elemental. It is like air and fire and water. With these elements one can sail his craft into the harbor where he would be, and with the same elements he can destroy his ship and be engulfed in the very element by which he plies his trade.

The man who is prosperous can use religion to embalm his conscience and the man who is down on his luck can secure religious charms with which to dispel his misfortune.

The man who is well can ignore religion so long as he has a good appetite, and the man who is ill can become religious to aid his digestion.

A Potent Force

YET religion is the same potent, kindly force which Christ sanctified. It still has force to make us friends with God; to replace hatred for personal enemies with love for those who have despitefully used us; and to inspire sinners with a longing to be clean.

Like fire, it has power to illuminate the understanding; enkindle the affections; energize the will, and burn out the dross.

Like fire, it may also derange the mind; consume love; scotch the will and burn up the most valuable of our possessions.

Like fire, it must be watched, confined, guided, directed, and it will warm men into friendliness and contentment; but like fire it may become a devastating conflagration, destroying the valuables of life as well as its refuse.

Religion has made men saints and hypocrites; has lit the fires of hospitality and the inquisition; has built up Jerusalem and devastated Smyrna. It has produced Christ and Judas; St. Francis and Torquemada; Allenby and Kaiser Wilhelm. In other words, religion is a force which, like all other forces, man may use for his development or for his destruction; for his redemption or for his judgment.

The mother who has seen her child scorched by fire loves not the fire; but the cold, hungry, lonesome traveler loves a fire-place.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

After all, things ought never to be condemned because of our own personal experience, but rather on the broader ground of their benevolent purpose.

So a man should not condemn religion because he has been swindled by a hypocrite, but rather should praise religion because it has given a Christ to the world.

It is only thus that we can find the way that leadeth to eternal life.

Darkness or Light

THE world is full of many ills and many blessings. You may dwell on its wrongs or its blessings and you yourself will become darkness or light to those who look to you for blessing and find in you what you have found in the world.

Elemental things are realities, but they do not change their nature to suit our moods.

God gives us a force in religion and we seem to think we can treat it merely as a sentiment.

The average man dislikes to think and loves to feel.

We want thrills, impressions, emotions, and so we frequent the movies, sing jazz songs, and give bizarre entertainments.

Those who have the money to spend seek to find satisfaction in creating the impression that they are prosperous, while they are grumbling at the size of their bills and the lack of satisfaction that they get out of life. Prosperous people, therefore, grow blase, stodgy, dull, because they foolishly think that joy can be purchased with money.

Dimensions of Christ

A LITTLE soul cannot be a big man because it has the temporary power of spending much money, nor can such a soul expect to experience big things after the money has been spent.

In the same way the bigness of religion is limited by the size of the soul that comes in contact with it.

As we have intimated, it usually takes a bite, gets an impression and runs eagerly away with the morsel, thinking that it has captured the prize.

Religion can make men big, but it also can make them petty; and when one has persuaded himself that "the sky is falling" because he has been hit by a raindrop, he has helped to make religion ridiculous.

Let us endeavor to study the dimensions of Christ and then bring our own life into comparison with those dimensions.

Cracking Walnuts

BY

WILLIAM PAUL BARNDS

Rector of St. Matthew's, Lincoln

RECOLLECTIONS of my Missouri childhood came back to me as I cracked some black walnuts. The shells are hard and it takes a hard blow of the hammer to break them. An ordinary nutcracker will not do the job.

There are other things that take some cracking before the inner worth appears. Some parts of the Bible are hard to understand at first reading, because they are couched in archaic phraseology, or a literary form that is not familiar in our present day. How rewarding, though, are the effort and study which enable us to get to the spiritual meaning contained within the shell of the outer form!

Sometimes we are confronted with problems that come in a form which makes them hard to solve. Repeated efforts may be necessary but when by persistence the solution is reached, it proves to be worthwhile. It is hard to get to know some persons. They have a shell about them. Once this is penetrated, a satisfying friendship may develop, better than a casual acquaintance with a more approachable but perhaps superficial person.

Forming a new habit or learning an unfamiliar technique frequently requires repeated efforts and for the time being one seems to make little progress but at length the goal is reached. Some of the best things in life do not come to us only with effort. But when we keep cracking away, the hard encasing shell is broken and the real inner value is our reward.

An Invitation To Roman Catholics

By ROBERT S. TRENBATH

Rector of Trinity, Washington, D. C.

Reprinted as a leaflet at numerous requests

$3 for 100 copies
$2 for 50 copies
5c for single copies

Tunkhannock Pennsylvania

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Publishers of Fine Books for over Four Centuries

A devotional manual for use before, during and after Holy Communion

Our Bounden Duty

By the
REV. M. L. YATES
General Theological Seminary

The only devotional manual providing worship material on pages opposite the Holy Communion Prayer Book pages, Our Bounden Duty is designed to help members of the Church interpret the Holy Communion as the solemn action by which they perform their "bounden duty." It is an excellent background text for clergymen preparing Confirmation classes and for clarifying the meaning and significance of the Service for students and other parishoners.

A brief and simple explanation of Christian doctrine in its relation to the Holy Communion, together with a carefully presented outline of the Communion Office, constitutes the introduction. This is followed by devotions and meditations for before and after the Service. Devotions for use during the Service are arranged with the Holy Communion Service from the Prayer Book on the left and the devotional material on the right. Material from the Psalter and Hymnal has been incorporated into the prayers. The pages of the pew-size Prayer Book are used for reproduction.

Dr. Yates' scholarship and understanding of the needs of Churchmen will bring greater appreciation of the Holy Communion to everyone. Our Bounden Duty is an ideal gift for church school students, confirmands and other Episcopalians.

Regular edition, $1.50. Limp linen, $1.00

At your bookstore

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
114 Fifth Avenue, New York 11, N. Y.

NEWS OF OTHER CHURCHES

FIGHTING SEGREGATION A CHURCH TASK

Action to improve the lot of racial minorities in the United States, especially in the fields of housing, legislation and church membership, was recommended by the Pacific Northwest institute of race and cultural relations meeting at Portland.

Church bodies were urged to "join other organizations in a long-range policy of reducing segregation on a national level." At the same time, denominational authorities were asked to work toward the principle of non-segregation in all newly established congregations.

As measures to combat segregation in housing, the institute called on church members to:

(1) Form a united front of community groups against realty boards which restrict sales on grounds of race, creed or national origin.

(2) "Debunk the myth" of depreciation of property values due to sale of real estate to non-Caucasians.

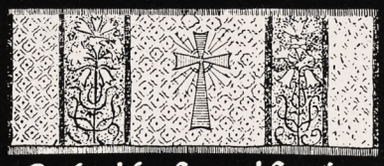
(3) Refuse to sign petitions to exclude certain races from a neighborhood.

(4) Refuse to list property with firms which discriminate against certain races in selling.

(5) Actively welcome members of other races who move into a neighborhood.

(6) Refuse to be parties to plans to exploit members of other races who are trying to obtain housing.

WHITTEMORE ASSOCIATES INSTALLS CARILLON



Religious music will ring out over Boston four times daily starting Sept. 24, when Whittemore Associates, dealers in church supplies, dedicates what is believed to be the first bell carillon on any retail store in this country. The carillon, comprising 25 bells, weighs two and a half tons.

Representatives of religious, political, business, music and other fields are expected to attend the presentation ceremony. The Rev. Frank Jennings, executive secretary of the Massachusetts Council of Churches, is scheduled to offer the dedication prayer, and Dr. Kamiel Lefevere, carilloneur of Riverside church, New York, will play the first notes on the new instrument.

Other slated participants are Boston's Mayor John B. Hynes, T. K. Hebert, Dutch consul in Boston, and Guus Fritsen of the Dutch firm which made the carillon. Mr. Fritsen ac-

ALTAR HANGINGS

• FRONTALS • STOLES • PULPIT ATTEPENDIA • DOSSALS • BIBLE MARKERS • SUPERFRONTALS

Crafted for Sacred Service

ENRICHING embroideries in full, faithful colors. Give church symbolism on your altar hangings new meaning and beauty. We invite your inquiry on our special embroidery services for all types of paraments. Please supply sizes with your inquiries.

VESTMENTS FOR CHOIR AND CLERGY

J. THEODORE Cuthbertson INC.

2013 SANSOM ST. PHILADELPHIA 3, PENNSYLVANIA

The Church Pension Fund

and its subsidiaries

administered for the benefit of the Church

The Church Hymnal Corporation

Publishers of The Hymnal; Hymnal 1940 Companion; Book of Common Prayer; A Prayer Book for Soldiers and Sailors; Book of Offices; Stowe's Clerical Director.

The Church Life Insurance Corporation

Offers low cost insurance and annuity contracts to clergy, lay officials and active lay workers of the Church, either voluntary or paid, and their immediate families. Services include individual insurance programming and assistance to parish officials in preparing and establishing plans for retirement of lay employees.

The Church Fire Insurance Corporation

Low cost fire, windstorm and extended coverage insurance on property owned by or closely affiliated with the Church, and on the residences and personal property of the clergy.

Further information available by addressing any of the above at

20 Exchange Place New York 5, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

companied the bells on their voyage from the Netherlands and assisted in their installation in a special steel structure over the facade of the four-story business house.

Caroll Whittemore, head of the Boston store, said the carillon would be used "to provide music to lift the spirits of hurrying wayfarers." After the dedication, hymns will be played daily at 9 a. m., noon, 1 p. m., and 5 p. m.

JACK McMICHAEL REELECTED HEAD OF FEDERATION

Jack McMichael, under constant attack in recent months as being too leftist, was reelected executive head of the Methodist Federation for Social Action at the annual meeting held this month in Evanston. The vote was overwhelming in his favor after a two-hour debate when the leader of the Boston University delegation, Roger Ragen, threatened to withdraw if McMichael was retained.

SEX EDUCATION SOUGHT BY METHODISTS

A program of education which would deal with sex, marriage and family life was urged in a report on moral standards adopted by Methodist young people, meeting at Lafayette, Ind. It recommended a committee to study literature on sex and recommend approved materials. It also advocated that youth be informed of the conflicts involved in mixed marriages and that protests be made to advertisers, publishers and movie producers on the improper use of sex in their media.

An imprisoned Negro conscientious objector, James Lawson of Massillon, O., was reelected a vice-president, with a letter going to President Truman charging that CO's "are receiving decidedly longer sentences on the average than federal offenders convicted of embezzlement, forgery, counterfeiting, larceny, white slavery, liquor and narcotic law violations." In the message to the White House, Lawson was characterized as "a representative of our finest Christian youth" and pointed out that besides serving as the conference's vice-president, he represented the Methodist Church in the united Christian youth movement and at the midcentury White House conference on children and youth last December.

ACTIVE CHURCH MEMBERS LEAD SUCCESSFUL MARRIAGE

First place for successful marriages is held by couples who are active church members, participants in the annual summer workshop of the American institute of family relations were told.

Reporting on a survey he made, Joseph B. Henry, of the institute's educational department, said in second place for marital success were those who, while no longer active in church work, attended Sunday school and church regularly beyond childhood into their early adult years.

Third place, according to the survey, is held by couples who, although not closely identified with a church, had a wedding ceremony performed by a clergyman.

Mr. Henry said the survey disclosed that couples who have no church affiliation and are married by a justice of the peace are in the greatest danger of seeing their marriage go on the rocks.

A report of another study on the relation between church membership and marital success was presented by Dr. Paul Popenoe, head of the institute. He said his study showed that a mixed marriage is two or three times as likely to end in divorce as when persons of the same faith are united. In spite of the risk involved, Dr. Popenoe said, his study indicated that an increasing number of people are crossing faith lines in contracting matrimony.

731* of your fellow-clergymen SAVED $10--So can you

ENJOY THE COMFORT of this good-looking, long-wearing

Everyday, All-purpose CASSOCK

Value $25.00 now only $15.00

*They want to share this "find" with you:

"The fit is ideal. Built for sturdy wear" —CALIFORNIA

"I like it very much. Will help my other good one"—VIRGINIA

"Well tailored—fits me—especially suitable for our overheated buildings" —PENNSYLVANIA

"A comfortable Cassock indeed. Will take a daily beating"—NEW YORK

"Friends will send for one, too, after seeing mine"—NEBRASKA

AS far as looks are concerned, most folks can't see much difference between this "Knockabout" every-day Cassock, and your $85 or $100 Dress Cassock. YOU will appreciate the combed, mercerized poplin, and the sturdy tailoring that takes hard wear. Fast color. Washable. Sanforized. Back and shoulders fully lined. Full cuffs and pleated back. Our specialization on one model makes possible this $25.00 value—for only $15.00. Let your own good judgment decide. Mark your size on the coupon now, but send NO money. Wear it for 10 days—then, if you want to keep it, let us bill you. Otherwise, simply return Cassock and owe us nothing.

HOPKINS CO.
422 Washington Bldg., N. W.
Washington, D. C.

HOPKINS CO., Dept. W-9
422 Washington Bldg., N. W.,
Washington, D. C.

Please rush Lounging Cassock for examination.

Size: (Circle one) 34-36-38-40-42-44-46-48

My Height: .....

I will either keep the Cassock and send you only $15.00, or return it within 10 days, and owe you nothing.

Name .....

Street and No. .....

City ..... Zone.... State.....

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CHURCHES OVERSEAS

ARCHBISHOP SENDS GREETINGS TO METHODISTS

The Archbishop of Canterbury sent greetings to the eight hundred delegates attending the world conference of the Methodist Church, meeting at Oxford. "If there had been a clearer vision of the true purpose of God," he wrote, "there would have been no need for separation between us. Yet God turns even the shortcomings and sins of his people to the furtherance of his purpose. He is now leading us to see that there can be no resting in our divisions, but a constant pressing on to find again the unity in which every revealed truth of God shall be preserved for the salvation of his people."

Methodist leaders from several countries gave accounts of the religious situation and the work of their Church, including a report for the U. S. by Bishop Baker of Los Angeles. Speaker for the Churches of Asia was the Rev. S. G. Mendis of Ceylon who told of efforts there toward reunion. "The younger Churches can no longer be divided by denominationalism but must stand together. They know their goal and where they are going."

SCIENCE & RELIGION CONFLICT MORE SUBTLE

Developments in the field of pyschology have produced a "more subtle and painful" form of conflict between science and religion, the Rev. Donald M. Baillie of the University of St. Andrews told the British association for the advancement of science at its annuel meeting at Edinburgh. Preaching at a convention service in St. Giles Cathedral, Prof. Baillie said that, while in the past theologians and scientists have clashed over particular teachings, present-day psychology has led to "a struggle between two different habits of mind" in the same person.

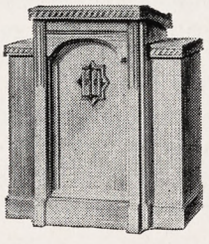
In some quarters, he said, psychological discoveries have brought about "a meticulous dread of wishful thinking—a self-questioning as to whether one's religion is anything more than an escape into fantasy, or one's God anything more than a projection."

He declared that such psychological efforts to "explain away" religious belief go against "the devout persuasion in our hearts, deeper than all proofs and arguments, which told us about God and the meaning of life."

Thus, Prof. Baillie asserted, "the intellectual might be torn between two opposite temptations, on the one hand, to be very chary and non-committal about all religious belief because of his scientific conscience, and on the other hand, to flee from his scientific conscience altogether, with a certain dishonesty, because he was afraid of straining his faith in God."

YOUTH DELEGATES ALARMED OVER CHURCH DIVISIONS

Delegates to an international Christian youth conference sponsored here by the British Council of Churches expressed concern over the Church divisions which kept them from having a united communion service.



"Early in the conference," an official press release said, "these young people were disturbed by the need to hold two separate communion services. Most attended both services—the Anglican one and the Free Church one. But those not belonging to the Anglican communion were not invited to partake at the Anglican service and felt cut off."

The release added that "the Anglican young people themselves were most deeply disturbed. Many discussion groups tried to understand more fully why the Churches of Britain were thus divided at a communion service."

At the conference, more than 1,100 delegates aged 18 to 39 discussed four main topics: work, international affairs, education, and evangelism. Evangelism drew the greatest interest of the young people, 200 of whom came from overseas.

NEW PRIMATE IN CANADA

Bishop Walter F. Barfoot of Alberta was installed as the new primate of the Church of England in Canada at a service held in Christ Church Cathedral, Victoria, B. C.

For everything in fine Church Furniture

It will pay you to consider American Seating Company products when you build, remodel, or refurnish. Bodiform pews, chancel furniture, and architectural woodwork by American Seating Company craftsmen assure liturgical correctness and long service. Write for information desired.

Department 1133

American Seating Company

World's Leader in Public Seating
901 Broadway N. W., Grand Rapids 2, Mich.

1951 Yearbook of American Churches

edited by George F. Ketcham

The 20th biennial edition of an esteemed statistical reference book about every U. S. religious body of all faiths. 276 pages and convenient index. Price $4.00 The edition has always been oversubscribed. Order your copy now.

Dept. of Publication
National Council of Churches
297 4th Ave., New York 10, N. Y.

STAINED GLASS

Windows designed and made in the Rambusch Studio-Workshop may be seen in these churches:

St. Bartholomew's Church, New York, N. Y.
(Illustrated; designed by Hildreth Miere)
All Saints' Church, Atlanta, Ga.
St. John's Church, Sharon, Pa.
St. Mark's Church, Casper, Wyo.
St. Paul's Church, Canton, Ohio

RAMBUSCH 40 W. 13th St. New York, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT, Book Editor

The Christian Way. By Sydney Cave. Philosophical Library. $3.75.

Responding to questions of senior students in his seminars on Christian ethics concerning the significance of the teaching of Jesus and its relation to our modern situation, the Principal of New College, London, has written a useful volume, which might well supplement in some degree, though certainly not supplant, the profounder work of Brunner to which he is so deeply indebted. The scope of the book is suggested by its three main divisions: New Testament Ethics; Methods and Motives; Life in Community (marriage, industry and state.) A final chapter discusses the Church's task.—Oscar J. F. Seitz

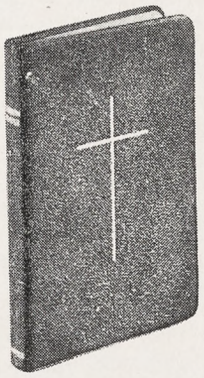
Strengthening the Spiritual Life. By Nels F. S. Ferre. Harper. $1.00.

In these talks, delivered before the International Convention of Disciples of Christ, Dr. Ferre searches his own experience for practical guidance in the life of private devotion. It is interesting that, along with the works of the great Christian writers and the devotional sections of the Bible, he recommends the Episcopal Book of Common Prayer as a companion in the development of Christian character. Nor does he omit reference to mystical writings of other religions for, he asks, "Can its (religion's) universal speech separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus, our Lord?" Perhaps the chapter which is most needed in this day of broken homes and busy fathers and children is that on "Strengthening Through Family Devotions."—Sydney Temple

Religion and the New Psychology. By Alson J. Smith. Doubleday. $2.50.

This book is one of a series of attempts to relate the field of psychical activity with both science and religion. That Dr. Smith has succeeded, at least in some measure, in making an interesting case is proven by the introductions which were written by Bishop Pardue of Pittsburgh, and by Dr. J. B. Rhine, professor and director of the parapsychology laboratory at Duke University.

Following a brief survey of the modern study of psychic phenomena, particularly communication with the dead, the author turns to the modern, scientific study of the phenomena grouped together under the term extra-sensory perception, or E.S.P. In brief, the results of this study are, for science, the end of materialistic emphasis, and the opening of new vistas for research; for religion, it confirms the existence of the soul, of God, and of human free will. While the book is a little too uncritical in places, and the author tends to claim too much for his subject, neither is unusual in a study such as this. Indeed, the treatment is notable for its restraint in handling material which can make such an impact, and which is so interesting to so many people. —Robert Hill



God So Loved the World. By Elizabeth Goudge. Coward - McCann. $3.50.

The author of "Green Dolphin Street" employs the novelist's skill to give us the story of Jesus. The book is beautifully written and covers the life of our Lord from the time the angels appeared to Mary until the resurrection. Although she uses her imagination in the background material she follows the gospel story reverently and humbly. This is not a scholarly account of the life of Jesus, but it is beautiful and it is sincere. It should prove helpful and inspirational to the layman.—G.H.M.

Beyond East and West. By John C. H. Wu. Sheed and Ward. $3.50.

The spiritual autobiography of a Chinese convert to Roman Catholicism. Dr. Wu was born into an old fashioned Chinese home at Ningpo in 1899, had his early education in traditional Chinese fashion, but as a youth transferred to a mission school to study Western subjects, was converted to Christianity and joined the Methodist Church. Coming to America to study law he lapsed into a vague theism and returned to China to a successful career as a lawyer, judge and member of the legislative Yuan, but to a life a moral chaos. In 1937 he was converted to Roman Catholicism, and this book is essentially an account of the spiritual experiences which from childhood had been preparing him, as he thinks, for that conversion. Perhaps its greatest interest is the light that it throws incidentally on home life and public life in the China of his generation. —Elsie Gordon Jeffery

Harper Deluxe Prayer Books
⚜ A Gift To Be Treasured ⚜

According to the use of the Protestant Episcopal Church in The United States of America

The Prayer Books listed below are superb examples of fine binding and printing. Printed on Micropake India paper, these books are bound in fine grain Morocco, with the new and improved paper lining called Flextex Edgelining. All styles come in 3-piece, GIFT-PAK box.

INDIA PAPER

Medium Size, 3⅝ x 5⅝", only ¼" thick

H237x—Black Morocco, fine grain, Flextex Edgelined, gold edges, gold cross, GIFT-PAK.....$7.50
H238x—Same as H237x, in Red..... 8.00
H239x—Same as H237x, in Blue..... 8.00

For those who prefer a smaller size Prayer Book, size 2⅞" x 4⅜ x ¼", the listings below are recommended. All binding and printing features exactly the same as in the larger book.

H137x—In Black Morocco.....$6.50
H138x—Same in Red..... 7.00
H139x—Same in Blue..... 7.00

HARPER & BROTHERS, Publishers—New York, N.Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

ST. JAMES LESSONS

A nine course series of instruction for Episcopal Church Schools including illustrated work books—150-250 pages (60c each) and teachers' manuals I, II, III 40c each, IV through IX 60c each).

No Samples - Payment with orders

St. James Lessons, Inc.

865 Madison Ave., Dpt. 5, N. Y. 21, N. Y.

● ADDRESS CHANGE

IN MAKING AN ADDRESS CHANGE, PLEASE SEND both THE OLD AND THE NEW ADDRESS AND ALLOW THREE WEEKS FOR THE CHANGE.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS
EST. 1877

SELL EXCLUSIVE Sunshine CHRISTMAS CARDS

EARN ALL THE MONEY YOU NEED Among friends, neighbors. Smart Sunshine Boxes and Imprints sell on sight. America's leading 21 folder Christmas Ass't. Many DECORATIVE LINED ENVELOPES $1. 100% Profit. $1,000 Cash Sales Contest. Special Money-Making Plan for Organizations. SAMPLES ON APPROVAL.

SUNSHINE ART STUDIOS, Dpt. LG9
115 Fulton St., New York 38, N. Y.

FINEST PURE IRISH LINEN

For all Church uses

Just received from Belfast a new fine lightweight linen for Surplices in 39"—1.65 per yard. Also qualities and width for Albs, Fair Linen, etc., Patterns and Supplies, Books.

Samples Free

MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
BOX 386 CHILLICOTHE, MO.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

VESTMENTS

Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves
Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries
Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars
Custom Tailoring for Clergymen

1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951

COX SONS & VINING, Inc.
131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

CASSOCKS

Surplices — Choir Vestments
Eucharistic Vestments
Altar Hangings and Linens
Prices Sent on Request

J. M. HALL, INC.
14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.
Tel. CH 4-3306

PEOPLE

DEATHS:

HENRY R. FELL, 42, rector of Trinity, Ottumwa, Iowa, died of a heart attack Aug. 21 while on maneuvers as a chaplain in Wisconsin.

EUGENE A. HEIM, 74, retired, died Aug. 22 at his summer home at Laporte, Pa.

ALBERT T. PHILLIPS, 70, rector of St. Mary's, Laguna Beach, Cal., died Aug. 27.

CLERGY CHANGES:

GEORGE DAVIDSON, rector of St. John's, Los Angeles, for 38 years is retiring as rector and from the active ministry on Oct. 1.

THOMAS L. COX, formerly rector of Christ Church, Blacksburg, Va., is now rector of Emmanuel, Geneva, Switzerland.

H. G. STACEY retired Sept. as rector of Christ Church, Dearborn, Mich., and from the active ministry.

EDWARD R. A. GREEN, formerly canon of St. Paul's Cathedral, Detroit, is now rector of Christ Church, Dearborn.

B. H. CREWE, formerly rector of the Ascension, Detroit, is now vicar of St. Gabriel's, East Detroit.

CLYDE EVERTON, formerly of St. John's, Bandon, Ore., is now ass't at Trinity, San Jose, Cal.

EDWIN E. WEST, formerly rector of St. John's, San Francisco, is now rector of St. Mark's, Palo Alto, Cal.

F. J. KLOHN, formerly rector at Galion and Mt. Gilead, O., is now rector of St. Andrew's, Akron, O.

T. E. VOSSLER, ass't at Grace Church, Mansfield, O., became rector of Grace Church, Toledo, Sept. 15.

JOHN W. KNOBLE, formerly ass't at Trinity, New Haven, Conn., is now rector of Holy Trinity, Minneapolis, chaplain to Episcopal students at the University of Minn., and managing editor of the Minn. diocesan paper.

ARTHUR L. KENYON has resigned as rector of Trinity, Findlay, O., because of ill health.

G. F. GILMORE, formerly rector of All Saints, Appleton, Wis., is now rector of St. Paul's, Yonkers, N. Y.

A. W. KAHL, formerly ass't at St. Mark's, San Antonio, is now locum tenens of St. Luke's, Altoona, Pa.

C. E. EDINGER, formerly vicar of St. Luke's, Ferndale, Mich., is now rector of St. James, Cheboygan, Mich.

E. G. GUTHRIE has resigned as rector at New Philadelphia and Dennison, O., because of ill health.

CURATE WANTED

A young man as assistant in Evangelical parish in the north midwestern states. An unusual opportunity for the right man for varied work in large parish. Must be able to take over the direction of large church school, and an unusually fine program for young people in high school, college and business. Good salary and attractive apartment. Write Box G of THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

HOUSE FOR SALE at Keene Valley in Adirondacks Furnished or unfurnished; suitable for year-round living. 1st floor two bed-rooms and bath, attractive kitchen, hall and living-dining room with knotty pine paneling and fire-place. 2nd floor, 2 bed-rooms and bath. Basement, furnace-room, rooms suitable for workshop and laundry; 1 car garage. Oil-burner, hot-water heat. 2.1 acres of ground, mostly woodland, mountain view, trout-stream. BOX C, WITNESS, TUNKHANNOCK, PA.

Here It Is! The Easiest MONEY You Ever Made!

Sell Christmas Cards

Make easy spare time CASH! Call on friends, take orders for Christmas Cards. You'll be amazed at your earnings! 21-card $1 Deluxe Christmas Assortment, 35 others, pay up to 100% profit. Personal Christmas Cards with name, 50 for $1.25. Personalized Stationery, Napkins, Matches and many other fast selling money-makers. Plan for organizations, too. Write for Assortments on Approval and Personal Samples FREE!

FRIENDSHIP STUDIOS, INC.
675 Adams St., Elmira, N. Y.
Please send the Friendship Earning Plan, Assortments on Approval, Personal Samples FREE.

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ Zone ___ State _____

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS

Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS

Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.

SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

Exquisite
IRISH LINENS
BY THE YARD

From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States, I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values; unsurpassed quality, imported direct from Ireland. Also transfer patterns, linen tape, and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 3 inches at 75c, 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.00.

MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

THE BISHOP WHITE
PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833

Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.

PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)

Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

GRAY M. BLANDY
Clergyman of University of Texas

I read with interest the editorial about theological education (Witness, July 26). The last sentence of the opening paragraph was of particular interest. The fact that the majority of our seminaries lie concentrated along the eastern seaboard—or east of the Mississippi—would indicate that the "Church at large" to which you refer seems relatively content with this situation. Yet the most rapid expansion of the Episcopal Church in the past decade has been elsewhere. Having grown up almost in the shadows of ETS, I know of what great value to the work of the Church the presence of a seminary can be. It provides a center of inspiration for continuing study by the clergy, of resource leaders for many types of conferences for lay people, and the chance to introduce likely ministerial candidates to the actual life and work of seminary years.

Also, the fact that most of our present seminaries are struggling for adequate financial support seems to be no argument in favor of suppressing further seminaries. All it does testify to is the fact that the Church has failed to consider seriously enough the need for adequate seminary education, and the need of seminaries for wider support than either present fees or endowments will produce.

The fact that we have questions about the number of scholars in our midst who can staff our seminaries again points to the inadequate concern shown for seminaries in our Church structure. We have not deemed it essential to provide men free from demands on their time or their financial capacities to pursue further such studies as would fit them for teaching in seminaries.

Certainly I would be the last to suggest that we have seminaries inadequately staffed. But it does seem to me that one must take a venture in faith that a much-needed institution in a given area can through the years meet its requirements both financial and personal to do its best work.

At the same time, it seems required of us who see the problem to urge upon the Church that it encourage scholarship among its best equipped clergy, providing them with the time and resources to do a major service to the Church in the field of clergy education.

When I see the reserve of manpower which is available amongst our Roman brethren and also the opportunities amongst us which must be delayed because of lack of sufficient clergy to get the job done, then I cannot help but protest that the point of your editorial seems to me a call to retreat rather than to advance. However, I am quite ready to agree that the problems to which you point are serious problems; yet they do not convince me that to suppress further establishment of seminaries is the logical or practical answer to them.

THEODORE C. BRAUN
Editor of The Messenger
Organ of the Evangelical and Reformed Church

The Witness is a live magazine. I regularly enjoy reading it.

ST. LUKE'S SCHOOL
Episcopal Day School under the direction of Trinity Parish
Nursery, Kindergarten, Elementary Grades. After School play groups. Coeducational. Moderate tuition. For catalogue and further information communicate with
THE REV. PAUL C. WEED, JR.
Headmaster
Hudson & Grove Sts., NEW YORK 14, N. Y.
Phone WAtkins 4-5960

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL
Coeducational Episcopal Day School
Prepares for leading secondary schools. Sound academic training. Kindergarten thru 8th grade. French and Latin emphasized. Complete testing program. Est. 1894. Music, drama, arts & crafts, sports. Bus service. Hot lunch. Tel: AL 4-2000
E. ALLISON GRANT, Headmaster
88 E. Fourth Ave. (11th St.), N. Y. 3

THE PATTERSON SCHOOL for BOYS

Episcopal School in Blue Ridge Mountains of Western No. Carolina. Accredited. Grades 6-12. Gymnasium, sports, 42nd year. 1300-acre estate. Board and tuition, moderate.
GEORGE F. WIESE, Supt.
COLLEGE Legerwood, N. C. HEALTH
PREPARATORY EDUCATION
CHARACTER BUILDING

SCHOOLS

FORK UNION
MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth New Hampshire

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

"I thoroughly enjoy each number of the HISTORICAL MAGAZINE, and keenly anticipate the record of new discoveries in the historical field." — The Rev. KENNETH D. PERKINS, Chaplain, United States Navy.

HISTORICAL MAGAZINE

September, 1951

THE CLERGY OF THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN 1785

By Walter H. Stowe, Nelson W. Rightmyer, G. MacLaren Brydon, Lawrence F. London, and Albert Sidney Thomas

[No complete and accurate list of our clergy in 1785 (right in the midst of this Church's most critical era) has heretofore been available. The need of one has long been felt. Not only is this the most complete list ever compiled, but it is replete with biographical data and bibliographical references, hitherto not readily accessible. It is compiled by five authorities in the field. The article is introduced by an essay, "The Critical Period in the History of the American Episcopal Church," by Walter H. Stowe.]

BRITISH LEGISLATION AND AMERICAN EPISCOPACY

By Richard G. Salomon

[Presents hitherto unpublished information on the history of the act whereby the episcopate was given to the American Church, and how it came into existence, written by the Professor of Church History in Bexley Hall. Dr. Salomon did the research in England.]

CHRISTOPHER EDWARDS GADSDEN (1785-1852): FOURTH BISHOP OF SOUTH CAROLINA, 1840-1852

By Albert Sidney Thomas

[This biography, by the retired Bishop of South Carolina and the Historiographer of the Diocese, recovers to us the life and work of one of the great bishops of the Church, who has been unjustly neglected by historians.]

THE RELIGIOUS OPINIONS OF THOMAS JEFFERSON

By Arthur B. Kinsolving

[The Rector Emeritus of St. Paul's Church, Baltimore, died recently at the age of ninety years. His mental keenness and historical balance at such an advanced age, as evidenced by this essay, should be an inspiration to all.]

ORDINATIONS BY THE BISHOPS OF HONOLULU, 1862-1902

By Andrew Forest Muir

[This is a valuable contribution to the complete and accurate ordination record of the clergy of the Episcopal Church which, for the years 1785-1885, does not yet exist. Dr. Muir engaged in extensive research on the beginnings of the Anglican Church there.]

"Doubtless, all members of the American Episcopal Church know in a vague way that they are the beneficiaries of centuries of a great religious heritage. But nothing helps as much as exact documentation by actual learning of the men and events of earlier ages. HISTORICAL MAGAZINE is rich on any and every page. It will take the blur out of the past, enabling the reader to see and to understand the man of yesterday and profit from his fight for a humane, civilized life."—PROFESSOR FRANK J. KLINGBERG, the University of California, Los Angeles, and a leading authority on the history of humanitarianism.

Published Quarterly:
$1.25 the copy, $4.00 per year

HISTORICAL MAGAZINE
5 Paterson Street, New Brunswick, N. J.

Enter my subscription to the HISTORICAL MAGAZINE beginning with the September, 1951 issue for the enclosed $4.00. (check, postal note, money order).

Name .....

Local Address .....

City ..... Zone .... State .....

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The WITNESS

10¢ A COPY

September 27, 1951

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

PRESENTS RAILROAD BELL

To St. Simon's, San Fernando, California

(Story on Page Five)

A PARISH PROGRAM FOR EDUCATION

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 7:30, 8 (and 9 Holy Days except Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 8:30, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers – 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. – 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital – 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m. Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a.m. Holy Communion
11 a.m. Morning Service and Sermon
Weekdays: Holy Communion Tuesdays at 12:10 p.m.; Wednesdays at 8 a.m.; Thursdays at 10:30 a.m.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer – 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on benalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon.
Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D.,
Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 – 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m.
Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacColl, 3rd, Rector
Rev. Peter Chase, Curate
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

SEPTEMBER 27, 1951 The WITNESS VOL. XXXIV, No. 31
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

New Social Action Group Seeks To Steer Middle Course

Group Organized At Washington Conference Dominated By Seminary Professors

★ A new Protestant social action group to be known as Christian Action was formed at a meeting in Washington, attended by more than 200 delegates from 20 denominations. The organizers were mostly theologians and seminary students, although some laymen, including several labor leaders, were present. The group will attempt to furnish Protestantism with a "solidly oriented middle ground" to help offset the influence of both leftists and rightists in the Church and society.

Emphasizing the group's concern with social evils of all types, a statement of purpose said: "Chief among the evils confronting the Church are wide economic inequalities, racialism, tension and conflict in a divided world, and growing insecurity, disillusionment, and fear which have placed millions under the jeopardy of totalitarian enslavement. We recognize that our failures and shortcomings have contributed to this disorder, and that the menace of international Communism reveals in a special way the failure of the Church to be true to its Lord."

Positive Program

The delegates stressed that the new organization must not merely oppose the present evils of society, but must affirm a positive political, social and economic program. An adopted resolution supporting this sentiment stated: "We affirm that the gospel impels us to work together for a responsible society —local, national, and world-wide —which will give each person or group a fair and equal opportunity to develop his full potentialities. This involves judgment on the political, economic, and social policies of our country. It also involves responsibility to seek constructive policy, consensus, and common action. We declare that church members have a responsibility as Christians to work in the power structures and centers of influence in society. As a group we intend to speak and act on concrete issues as they arise."

Foreign Policy

The conference endorsed an American foreign policy based on cooperation with the United Nations and urged that the natural resources of the free world be shared with other friendly nations in the fight against totalitarianism.

A resolution praising capitalism for providing the highest standard of living in the world provoked heated discussion. An original committee proposal to the conference had stated, "We reject the identification of 'free enterprise' with the will of God."

Prof. Kenneth Underwood of Yale Divinity School, told the conference that no economic system could be identified with the will of God and urged elimination of the specific reference to capitalism. His suggestion was adopted and the final conference draft read: "We reject the identification of capitalism, socialism or any economic and political system with the will of God, since judgments about the political economy must be made as a response to the dynamic activity of God in concrete, specific situations related to national policies."

In another move, the conference voted down a resolution proposed by the Rev. Joseph Merchant, executive director of the Religion and Labor Foundation, which would have put the conference on record as condemning "monopolistic capitalism" as an evil equally as great as Communism and Fascism.

A motion to place more emphasis on the sin of the individual as the basis for the reformation of society was defeated. The motion was made by Prof. E. Ahmad Sheh of Lucknow University in India, now teaching at Emory University.

Who Can Belong

After a heated debate on membership in the new organization, the way was left open for Christian pacifists to join. Prof. A. T. Mollegen of Virginia Seminary, declared that there was no place in the organization for "watered down Quaker Unitarianism." Will Herberg, research director of Local 22, International Ladies Garment Workers Union, New York, supported Dr. Mollegen and called for a ban on pacifists as well as Communists from Christian Action. The delegates, however, acting on the advice of several study groups, decided to revise their original statement of aims which would have barred pacifists by saying: "Though the majority of us agree that military power is necessary to withstand political tyranny, none of us places major reliance upon military power or accepts uncritically the decisions of the military."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

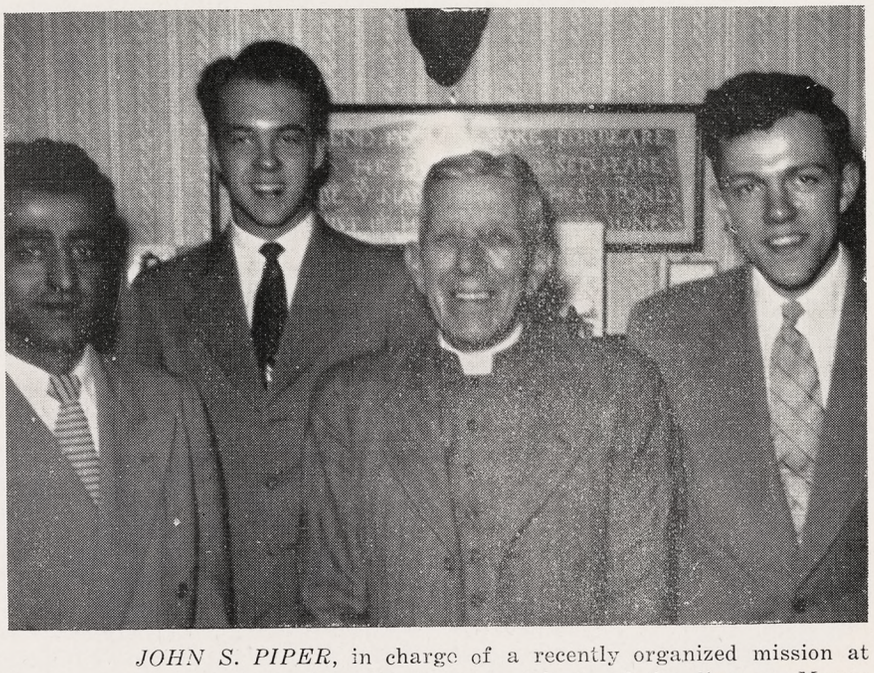
Dr. Niebuhr

Prof. Reinhold Niebuhr of Union Seminary, generally recognized as the one setting policy for the new group, told the delegates that they faced four major problems. First is "a recrudescence of a type of conservatism in which Christian pietism becomes the screen for an un-Christian economic order." The second, according to Niebuhr, is "the group of rather pathetic fellow travelers who have debased Christian radicalism by subservience to Stalinism." The third is the "sheer irrelevance of a great deal of present Christian testimony on social issues to actual problems" and the fourth is that churchmen who have both the courage and wisdom to deal efficiently with social issues lack organization.

The new organization is out to supply it and starts with a yearly budget of $20,000. There is an 18-man executive board, which includes Prof. John Bennett and Prof. Niebuhr of Union, Dean Liston Pope and Prof. Kenneth Underwood of Yale Divinity School, Ray Gibbons, director of social action of the Congregational Church, Ernest Johnson, on the staff of the National Council of Churches, with which the new group will cooperate closely.

PROGRAM SUGGESTIONS FOR UN WEEK



★ United Nations Week, 1951 is an eight-page leaflet published by the Church Peace Union. As an aid to churches, synagogues and other religious organizations in making plans for the celebration of UN day and UN week, the leaflet has been issued early so as to allow communities ample time to use it in making advance preparations for the observance.

The folder contains concrete suggestions for programs to celebrate the sixth anniversary of the United Nations. It also gives ideas for worship services, themes for sermons and talks, suggestions for UN projects and sources of materials for programs such as pamphlets, films, posters, etc. Copies of the leaflet may be obtained from the Church Peace Union, 170 East 64th Street, New York 21. Single copy, free. Special rates for quantity orders.

October 24, has, by resolution of the UN General Assembly, been designated as UN day. This day is observed on a world-wide basis. UN week—this year, October 21 to 27—is a period set in the United States by a large number of national organizations. The world-wide observance of UN day offers an important opportunity for all community organizations to make a concerted effort to stir wider interest in and deeper concern for the United Nations as the world's best hope for peace.

DEACONESSES MEET IN WASHINGTON

★ The College of Preachers on the close of Washington Cathedral buzzed with a new and different activity last week. The college, which ordinarily is host to groups of Episcopalian ministers for week-long conferences and post-ordination training, was the scene of the national conference of Deaconesses, with nineteen women from parishes as far away as Texas and Kansas attending the first conference for women ever held there.

JOHN S. PIPER, in charge of a recently organized mission at Hazard, Kentucky, with three postulants of the diocese: Magar Bdrosian, Marion H. Rambo, Harold Emery Jr.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

LAYMEN STAGE SERVICES EFFECTIVELY

★ This Is Our Business," is the title of the series of laymen's services conducted at St. George's Church, St. Louis Park, Minn., the last three Sundays in September. Two laymen of the congregation, Ben Ciscel and Charles Emery, developed the series to answer the question, "What does it really mean to be a Christian and a Churchman?"

The technique used is unusual and effective. Two average church-going business men, Ciscel and John Broughton, enter the church with the rest of the congregation and at service start a conversation loud enough for the entire audience to hear. Mr. Broughton asks many of the questions which so frequently puzzle Christians. Mr. Ciscel gives the answers. Then, during the service of holy communion, Ciscel explains the significance of the parts of the service audibly.

The first of the series takes up the church's job; second, the parish's job, and last, the individual's job.

The series leads up to the appearance at two October meetings of Bob DeHaven, northwest radio personality. Dr. DeHaven, with his gang of entertainers, has been appearing in small towns throughout Minnesota for some months in a program of personal evangelism as a layman. His appearance at St. George's will be his first meeting in the Twin Cities and suburbs. He will meet with the men of St. George on Oct. 9 and the Woman's Auxiliary Oct. 16.

WESTERN NEW YORK DISCUSSES SCHOOLS

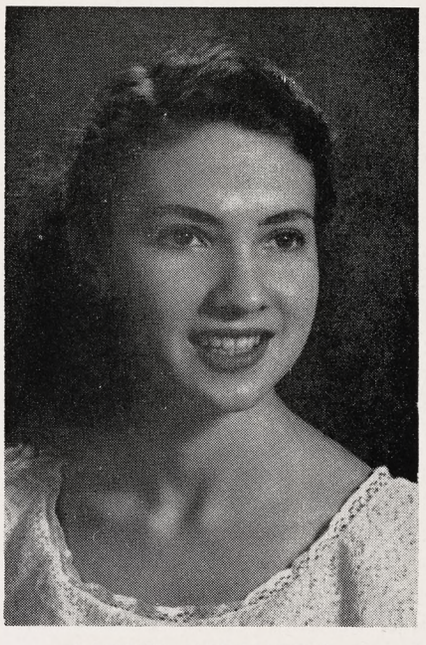
★ With the opening discussion by the clergy panel on the faith of the church, the Episcopal Church School leaders' group of Western New York began its nineteenth year September 17th at 8 o'clock, at St. Simon's, Buffalo. The panel was composed of the Very Rev. Samuel N. Baxter, archdeacon of the diocese; the Rev. Leslie D. R. Hallett, canon of St. Paul's Cathedral; the Rev. Richard B. Townsend, rector of St. Mark's, and the Rev. H. Russell Barker, rector of St. Simon's. The Moderator was Mrs. R. Howard Smith of the Good Shepherd.

Originally designed to help the kindergarten and primary teachers, the group branched out into all age groups, and this year presented its broadcast program in endeavoring to help teachers with their specific lessons. During the summer the program committee, with their leader, Mrs. Eldon F. French, mapped out a suggested curriculum which many of the clergy approved. This will make it possible for teachers of each age group from nursery through Bible classes to receive such help as they wish from selected leaders of the diocese.

THE PICTURE ON THE COVER

★ A big brass bell that has traveled many thousands of miles atop the outmoded "iron horses" of the Union Pacific railroad, now completely replaced with Diesels, found a permanent home when the last of the old steam engines of the roalroad was dismantled and retired in Los Angeles.

The bell, 3000 pounds of brass and silver, was presented to the new St. Simon's church, San Fernando. It hangs in the church tower and rings out over the valley to call the congregation to worship in the church built, literally from the "ground up," by the members of the little mission. The adobe bricks which form the main structural part of the new church, 21,000 of them, were actually made by hand by the men of the mission during the past year.



In the picture above John W. Padden, western division traffic manager of the Union Pacific (left) presents the bell to Bishop Donald Campbell, suffragan of Los Angeles, center, and the Rev. Elvin W. Smith, vicar of St. Simon's.

TELLS OF WORK WITH AGED

★ The Rev. Beverley M. Boyd, who is leaving a job with the National Council of Churches to accept a parish in Texas, told an international congress of gerontologists, meeting in St. Louis, that churches are giving increased attention to improving the welfare of older people. He told the delegates, however, that the history of the Church in dealing with the aged was not "a record of unbroken progress."

"In fact," he said, "at one period early release from this miserable earthly pilgrimage was stressed as is evidenced by the grim dolefulness of many hymns that still find a place in Church hymnals."

Turning to the role of Protestant churches in caring for older people, Boyd said: "Protestant churches are more aware today than ever before of their responsibility to the older person, within their respective groups and in the community." As a result of this awareness, he said, there are today approximately 350 to 375 Protestant homes for older people in this country. The majority of these are under direct church or ecclesiastical control.

LOUISE GARDNER is one of the leaders of Episcopal students at the College of the Pacific

While paying high tribute to the Protestant Church's concern for the aged, Boyd warned against permitting a "sudden emphasis on youth" to lessen the Church's interest in older people. "This is not to decry the place of youth in either church or community," he said, adding: "Young and old alike are of inestimable value in the total program of the churches."

Dr. Boyd called upon Christians and Jews "as religiously minded persons" to cooperate and learn from one another in the field of care for the aged. He said church and synagogue should watch carefully what government agencies are doing in this field and should see that legislation affecting older people is properly administered. He also urged religious groups to cooperate with voluntary secular agencies concerned with the aged and to keep abreast of trends in the medical profession dealing with problems of old people.

Asserting that secular agencies have developed case work and group techniques that have proved valuable, he added, "Frankly, too many religious institutions are operated solely on the principle of custodial care as being the goal."

BISHOP KENNEDY VISITS OHIO

★ Bishop Harry S. Kennedy of Honolulu is addressing vestries in the diocese of Ohio, Sept. 24-Oct. 5, on the national work of the Church.

OLD RIVER BOAT BELL CALLS TO CHURCH

★ St. George's Church, Bismark, S. D., is again ringing its bell—formerly a pioneer river boat bell on the old Red Cloud, a 355-ton stern wheeler that operated from Bismark on both the Missouri and Yellowstone rivers in the early days.

The Red Cloud sank on July 11, 1882, near Ft. Peck, Mont. The bell was salvaged by an insurance company and was sold to the ship's owner, Capt. I. P. Baker. Later Capt. Baker presented the bell to the Episcopal Church, in those days "The Church of the Bread of Life," changed to St. George's in 1890.

Improper installation in the church tower gave the bell a tone that was objectionable. Recently it was taken down and installed properly with resulting improvement in tone. Through an electric timing device it will ring 15 minutes before church services, and at the time of the beginning of services, also at noon and 6 p.m. on weekdays and Sundays.

CLERGY MEETING AT TOLEDO

★ Clergy of the fifth province, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin, met for a conference on education at Toledo, September 17-21. The leaders were the heads of the department of the National Council: the Rev. John Heuss, Canon Ward, Canon Wedel, the Rev. Reuel Howe, Mrs. Dora Chaplin, Charlotte Tompkins.

IOWA PARISH GETS RADIO AWARD

★ St. John's, Mason City, Iowa, and the First Presbyterian Church of that city, received awards from the radio workshop of the National Council of Churches. The citation was "for a youth program beamed to youth and produced by youth." The two churches had combined their youth groups for 1950-51 and produced the play "Ideas Unlimited" which was tape recorded and broadcast over a local station.

NOTRE DAME ACCEPTS FIRED CADETS

★ As a follow-up of our editorial of last week, it is now announced that Notre Dame has accepted twenty-one of the students fired from West Point for cribbing. An anonymous benefactor, presumably interested in football, is paying their board, room and tuition.

RESTORE PULPIT AT ST. JOHN'S

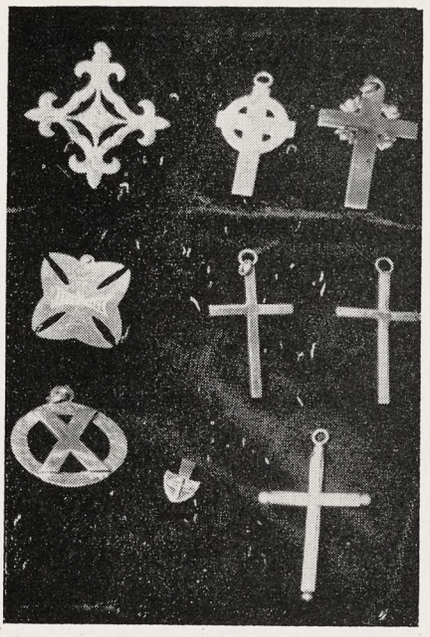
★ The large, carved-stone pulpit at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine went back into service on September 16, after having been set aside for ten years. It was presented in 1916 by the late Mrs. Russell Sage in memory of Bishop Potter.

Since the time of its installation the pulpit had stood on the south of the crossing, according to Canon Thomas A. Sparks. Although the pulpit remained in place, its use was discontinued shortly after the cathedral's great nave was finished because its position prevented many in the congregation from seeing the preacher. A temporary wooden pulpit, placed at the end of the choir benches on the north side of the crossing, was used. It has been removed.

This summer, workmen took the many-sectioned pulpit apart, cleaned it, and reassembled it in its present location on the north side of the crossing after reinforcing the foundation in the crypt under it.

The massive structure was built of non-crystalline limestone marble, quarried in Knoxville, Tenn., at a cost of $25,000, Canon Sparks said. He estimated that the cost of replacing it at today's prices would be $150,000 to $200,000.

Bishop Donegan was the preacher at the service, speaking on the accomplishments of the present-day Church.



"It's time we revised our thinking and studied what contributions the Christian Church has made to the life of the world," he said.

He pointed to four points of accomplishment: The Church has kept alive the whole concept of God; held up before the world the figure of the Saviour of mankind; held up before men the moral order, and provided the means of grace, worship and the sacraments by which Christ is made available to man.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Ardent members of work shop at St. Joseph's, Detroit, create religious art objects of silver, ceramics, wood and plastics

Products of Detroit Work Shop Used By Church Overseas

★ Three years ago Bishop Emrich suggested to the Detroit clericus that every church have a special interest outside of its regular work. Among his suggestions was a craft shop for making religious objects. The rector of St. Joseph's Church, the Rev. William C. Hamm, liked the idea well enough to take on this particular project.

Soon a group of enthusiastic adults was launched on this new project. Since that time they have made special religious art objects of sterling silver, ceramics, wood, and plastics. The group meets every Wednesday evening in the studio rooms at St. Joseph's.

Mrs. Roger Williams, a teacher of silver work at Redford high school, is the directress of the studio. Among other things, the studio supplies silver crosses and ceramic plaques to Bishop Emrich for his awards to members of the diocese who have done outstanding work for the Church. These are always awarded at the annual diocesan dinner. Special crosses also have been made for missionary churches in the Philippines and Liberia. A pectoral cross was made for Bishop Tsu of China and a silver baptismal shell was made for St. Paul's Church, Jackson, Mich.

Many occupations and skills are represented in the group. Among the members are a research engineer, a sales promoter, college students, a sales executive, a real estate broker, laboratory technician, clerical workers, housewives, school teachers, and clergymen. One evening Bishop Hubbard joined the activities to make a sterling silver clasp for his cape.

This project is entirely voluntary. The time of the workers and the sales money is given to the church. The studio provided a new floor for the dining room of the parish house, and made more than three hundred oak card holders for the pews.

This enthusiastic group welcomes people who not only will work for the fun of it, but also are conscious that making silver crosses, reminders of the sacrifice of our Lord, is to the glory of God. It is interesting to note that the work shop bears the name of the patron saint of craftsmen, St. Joseph.

TUSCALOOSA CHURCHES UNITED FOR SCHOOL

★ The fiftieth anniversary of the first vacation church school was observed in Tuscaloosa, Ala., by four of the downtown churches uniting for the project: Presbyterian, Methodist, Christian and Episcopal. A steering committee set up committees on various phases of the school, selected leaders, ran a training institute. Each age group met in one of the churches. The enrollment reached 173 children with 62 teachers with the entire affair so successful that a similar school is planned for next summer.

CENTRAL NEW YORK CLERGY MEET

★ Clergy of the diocese of Central New York met at St. Peter's, Cazenovia, September 18-19, with Bishop Sherman, suffragan of Long Island, the leading speaker on the subject of stewardship. Other leaders were the Rev. Robert Fay, rector at Columbus, O., and Bishop Higley.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

PASTORAL INTERNESHIP FOR DIOCESE

★ For a 12 week period this summer candidates for the ministry in Western Mass., are receiving a "pastoral interneship" under the direction of clergymen experienced in all phases of the ministry.

The need for clergy specially trained in pastoral techniques has become increasingly recognized in recent years by the development of clinical training programs in general hospitals, mental hospitals and other institutions for the care of people. This type of institutional training is offered by most of the seminaries of the Episcopal Church and is a required course in several. The program being instituted by Western Massachusetts is a departure from the traditional institutionally centered programs in that the centers of experience will be in the normal and natural setting of parishes and missions.

The students will be assigned to key parishes and missions as curates and will be given a maximum of responsibility in all of the pastoral aspects of the church's life. Under the guidance of the resident clergy the "pastoral internees" will have opportunities to develop insights and abilities in dealing with pastoral situations by actually meeting and handling those situations as they arise. Premarital and post marital counseling; ministering to the sick and the bereaved; counseling of parishioners with personal problems; instructing children and young people; overseeing the operation of parish organizations and experiences in handling the business aspects of the parish are among the aims of the new program.

CHURCH SHOWS GROWTH IN PHILIPPINES

★ Statistics from the Philippine Episcopal Church include the following: Missions, 70; clergy, native 14; foreign, 18.

While a few new outstations have not yet reached the reporting stage in statistics, thirty missions have up to 400 members each. Nineteen missions have 400 to 1,000. Six have more than 1,000. At St. Mary's, Sagada, the central station alone has 5,075 baptized persons; its ten outstations have an additional 9,908. The priest in charge at Sagada thus has oversight of more Church members than any one of about fifty bishops has in his diocese or district.

The total number of baptized Church members in the Philippine Episcopal Church is 30,914. Of these, 11,275 or more than one-third are communicants. In the Episcopal Church as a whole, 56 dioceses and districts report fewer communicants; 75 dioceses and districts report fewer members.

BRYAN GREEN MISSION IN PHILADELPHIA

★ The Rev. Bryan Green is to conduct a preaching mission in Philadelphia, December 2 - 11. Services will be in Convention Hall, transformed into a church. He has previously held missions in New York, Washington, Boston, Houston, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

BARD COLLEGE GIVES SCHOLARSHIPS

★ Emmett O'Brien Jr. of Newington, Conn., and Peter F. Watterson of Upper Darby, Pa., have been awarded scholarships at Bard College. The scholarships, made possible by alumni, go to men who are preparing for the ministry of the Episcopal Church.

BISHOP BAYNE HITS PROTESTANTISM

★ Criticism of what he called a "painless Protestantism" now growing in America was made by Bishop Stephen Bayne of Olympia at a mass meeting held at Victoria, Canada. He said it is professed by people who feel that they don't have to believe anything much, or even go to church, "but they are to vote against the Roman Catholics." Also as part of this trend, he said, is a tendency to use religion as a sort of defense for the status quo.

The service, attended by 7000, was the largest of its kind ever held in Victoria.

QUESTIONNAIRE ON YOUTH

★ The 1,200 parishes and missions of the Second Province will shortly be receiving a "questionnaire on youth work'" as a result of a decision reached at a recent meeting of the provincial youth commission held at Grace Church, Utica, New York. Prepared with the help of a statistical expert, this questionnaire will attempt to secure an overall set of figures for the evaluation of the status of youth work in the province.

Since "youth work" is to be the principal topic of consideration at the next meeting of the synod to be held in Buffalo in October of 1951, the members of the commission are anxious to secure statistical evidence which will help in answering such questions as "How many persons between the ages of 12 and 25 are affiliated with the Episcopal Church in the second province?" "What activities do they engage in?" "How many persons are involved in these various activities?" "How much of the program of the united movement of the Church's youth is used in parish youth programs in the province?" and, "How is youth work financed in the parishes and missions?" Answers to these questions will help in presenting to the synod a true picture of the youth work of the eight Dioceses of New York and New Jersey, and in making plans for the future.

Alice Brown of Hudson, N. Y., is chairman of the commission and the Rev. Robert R. Spears Jr. of Auburn, N. Y., is provincial youth adviser. The commission meeting was attended by 28 clergy and young people representing the dioceses of Newark, Long Island, New York, Albany, Central New York, and Rochester.

EDITORIALS

Whence Cometh Our Help?

WE realize that the wicked world of politics is no place for the simple-hearted Christian or for anyone with ideals — yet the propagandists tell him often enough that the billions of dollars which the North Atlantic treaty nations are now spending on defense projects are to defend a free world, a democratic world of freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom of assembly, freedom from want and hunger. The Christian is led to believe that it does matter what he does—that what he does reflects his belief. Then he is suddenly confronted with the ethics of an American - Franco deal.

Since the British, French and American governments could find no common ground for an agreement with Franco-Spain, the USA has come to a unilateral understanding with Generalissimo Franco for "purely military" reasons. The USA has secured the use of air and naval bases in Spain; high Spanish officers are to be trained in American military schools of strategy and tactics; and a yet undisclosed amount of American military equipment and economic aid is to be sent to Spain. But, as many critics and commentators in both Europe and the USA have openly asserted, military strategy cannot be disassociated from political decisions and political realities. Dorothy Thompson even goes so far as to say that "when political policy accommodates itself to strategical considerations a country has adopted militarism"—and she was speaking of her own country!

This latest international 'deal' certainly seems to encourage the cynical philosophy that anything is right so long as it pays—one can do anything so long as one makes sure of winning. It is exactly the same philosophy that has dominated intercollegiate sports below the border and is rearing its ugly head in Canada—the coach must produce a winning team. And very soon one gets to the point where one believes that any means justifies any end we have in view—we begin to do what we so glibly accuse the despised communists of doing, anything to win. The pre-war proposed Hoare-Laval 'deal' that caused the resignation of men of principle from the British government has been forgotten. A leading Canadian editorial writer puts it with brutal frankness when he can write: "It is therefore clear that, when the crisis is big enough, the situation dangerous enough, abstract ideology counts for less than concrete military help." The means by which we are to achieve our ends become all-demanding.

This kind of thinking and this kind of action make nonsense of all our prating about an ideological war, or the righteousness of our cause, or the saving of Western Christendom. We here frankly admit that we have no guiding principles, except to win—any more than most intercollegiate football teams in the USA have had of late years. But why blame college basketball or football players for adopting standards in their struggle for existence that we openly follow in our national and international 'deals'? Why blame the youth of this North American continent for not following principles that we have no intention of following on a national scale?

It is deals such as the USA-Franco one that shatter what little idealism is left for the average western democrat, socialist or conservative. It is deals such as this that do more to sap the morale of western Europe in France, Germany, Italy and Britain than any Berlin blockade or any threats of Russian propaganda. It is deals such as this that shake the faith of the precarious govern-

"Quotes"

THAT the Almighty does make use of human agencies and directly intervenes in human affairs is one of the plainest statements of the Bible. I have so many evidences of his direction, so many instances when I have been controlled by some other power than my own will, that I cannot doubt that this power comes from above. I frequently see my way clear to a decision when I am conscious that I have not sufficient facts upon which to found it . . . I am satisfied that when the Almighty wants me to do or not to do a particular thing he finds a way of letting me know it.

—ABRAHAM LINCOLN

EDITOR'S NOTE: It is helpful occasionally to see ourselves as others see us. We present therefore as our editorial this week one that appeared in the September number of the Anglican Outlook, the very excellent magazine of the Church of England in Canada. We would add that the same critical appraisal of the US foreign policy has been voiced several times in recent months by the conservative weekly, the Church of England Newspaper.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

ments in France, Italy, Germany and Britain that the USA means actively to defend Western Europe and not merely to use it in the global defense of the American hemisphere. The Franco 'deal', coupled with the offer of further millions of military aid to Chiang Kai-shek, cannot but react against the continued American leadership of the western European nations. It can only breed further cynicism and moral disintegration.

The trial balloons of 1948, consisting of statements from Senator Chan Gurney, Coca-Cola's Jim Farley and the motion picture industry's Eric Johnson—warnings assessed correctly by our contemporary of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the USA, The Witness—have all been followed by the fait accompli. What The Witness then prophesied would be "the greatest moral delinquency that the USA has yet fallen into" has happened. However, it is publicly condoned as being 'functional'—the highest test in a crudely utilitarian and materialistic world. Britain managed to defy a whole continent without Generalissimo Franco's active help, or even Spanish bases, in 1940-41. One wonders what the Clement Attlee Brigade of the late Spanish civil war has to say on this latest deal in the interests of western democracy. And one wonders, too, where the Christian idealist can now stand who once was wont to repeat and sing the one hundred and twenty-first psalm—"from whence cometh my help?"

Maybe we should remind ourselves of the bitter consequences of Israel's experiences in seeking alliances with the great powers of her day, Egypt and Assyria.

Future of Free Catholicism

BY
CHAD WALSH
Professor at Beloit and Witness Contributing Editor

ROME is headed toward an increasing admixture of fable and superstition with the original deposit of faith. There are several roots of the evil. One is the tendency to equate the Kingdom of God with the Church. This raises the Church above criticism and makes it into a brazen idol. Another is the unscriptural and historically frail doctrine of papal infallibility. These two developments prepared the way for the baroque growth of Roman doctrine. Last century it was the Immaculate Conception, this century it is the Bodily Assumption of the Blessed Virgin. Here and there I come on trial balloons indicating that when the time is ripe—perhaps a century from now—an additional doctrine will be made essential to salvation: nisi per Mariam nulla salue.

If you think of primitive Christianity as a beautiful statue, you can say that Romanism preserves that statue but has covered it with so many layers of paint, hung so many strings of beads around the neck, fastened on so many earrings, and wrapped so many garments around the torso, that the general outlines of the statue are difficult to discern at first glance.

Meanwhile, Rome seems to be becoming more rigid all the time in its attitude toward other communions. Unconditional surrender is the only terms offered. I cannot imagine that in the foreseeable future there will be any change in this regard. But something else can happen—indeed it is already happening here and there on a small scale. The tensions within the Roman Church are probably much greater than most of us realize. Some of these are theological. Not every Roman scholar is inwardly happy at the free-and-easy attitude toward scriptural authority and the willingness to sprinkle holy water over every superstition that acquires enough popular backing. Other tensions are political, and arise from the unfortunate fact that Rome has formed embarrassing alliances with various reactionary political groups. Things explode occasionally. We all know of the groups that have broken away—the Old Catholics in Europe, the Polish National Church in America, the Philippine Independent Church. A few years ago a Roman Catholic bishop in Brazil started an independent catholic Church there. This sort of thing is likely to happen increasingly as Rome becomes more baroque, more involved in the affairs of this world, and more rigid and authoritarian. On such occasions, I think we should be on hand to establish friendly relations with these free catholic Churches. Experience shows that once the centralized control of Rome is shaken off, it is easy enough for the Anglican Church to enter into intercommunion with the new Churches. In this way, a federation of free catholic Churches, united by agreement on basic theology and by the bond of charity, may gradually evolve.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Eastern Orthodox

WHAT of the Eastern Orthodox Churches? It is difficult to say anything that the events of the next ten years may not negate. Politics is thoroughly mixed up with religion so far as these relationships are concerned. But several things are certain. The Eastern Churches have retained far more of the evangelical spirit than has Rome; there has been much less rigidity of structure, much less of a tendency to elevate legends and folklore to the status of essential doctrines. Considerable progress has already been made toward intercommunion with some branches of the Eastern Church. For the time being, the cold war seems to have slowed this natural development down. But the struggle between Russia and America cannot go on forever, and meanwhile we need to maintain and cultivate whatever friendly contacts with the Christian East we find possible. In time, as political conditions change, we may see the Eastern Churches joining with the Anglican communion and the offshoots of Rome to form a world-wide federation of intercommunion.

Meanwhile, in America I think we should seek the closest possible relations with the 600,000 members of the Orthodox Churches. There are several factors in our favor. For one thing, most of these people are anti-Communist, and inclined to fight off any attempt of the Kremlin to exert control over their ecclesiastical affairs. Another factor is that as the second and third generation members of American Orthodox Churches lose contact with the old world and forget their native languages, it is going to be harder and harder for their Churches to hold them without sweeping changes, which might involve conducting the services in English. We all know how readily a good many second-generation Greeks become Episcopalians when a Greek Church is not available. In time, we may be able to establish formal intercommunion with some or all of the Orthodox Churches in America; perhaps eventually an actual merger will become feasible. For the time being, at the very least we can make friends with individuals and learn all we can about their religious traditions.

World Council

I COME now to Geneva, and to the area of main controversy. What should be our attitude toward the Protestants? I know what many of the more catholic-mind Anglicans would say—"Give them a wide berth." I have observed more than one Episcopal priest who almost visibly drew back in the presence of a Congregational minister, as though fearful that the latter's necktie might brush against his rabat.

A good deal of this standoffishness comes from confusing Church union with Church cooperation. So far as the actual organic merger of the Episcopal Church with any other denomination is concerned, I think in all honesty we should make it clear that we could not do anything on a "vaguest common denominator" basis. If other Churches, less theologically minded, can unite organically without taking any clear-cut stand on the Incarnation, the Atonement, or the nature of the sacraments and the ministry—fine, let them go ahead. But it is dishonest for the Episcopal Church to enter into negotiations for union without laying the cards on the table. We are a catholic Church, and intend to remain one.

However, organic merger is very different from brotherly cooperation. We cannot merge on the bare basis of belief in "Jesus Christ as divine Lord and Saviour," but we can easily cooperate with other Churches on that basis. I do not share the apprehensions of some Episcopalians who wanted to keep our Church out of the newly founded National Council of Churches of Christ. There are vast areas of common concern that we share with the Protestants and all Christians; many problems that we can handle cooperatively without any compromise of our catholicity. I for one am proud that our Presiding Bishop was selected to head the National Council, and I hope that all the Episcopal clergy will give him moral support in his difficult task.

But there is much more to the question of cooperation with Protestants than I have so far indicated. Sometimes we fall into the error of talking as though Protestantism is one vast hotbed of heresy, whereas the Roman Church, for all its willfulness and arrogance, is simon pure. I don't think this is a correct way of viewing the actual situation. If heresy means divergence from the basic faith as stated in the Bible and given precise formulation by historic creeds and early ecumenical councils, then Geneva falls into heresy mostly through subtraction and Rome through addition. Geneva chips away at the statue. Rome adds unscriptural and unecumenical adornments and then insists that they be regarded as part of the original statue. I raise this question and raise it seriously: is such a Protestant Church as the Lutheran actually more heretical than the Roman Church? True, most branches of Lutheranism have lost the apostolic succession, but on the other hand Rome has burdened the conscience of its communicants with the Immaculate Conception, the Bodily Assumption of the blessed Virgin, and that hotbed of error the Infallibility of the Pope.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

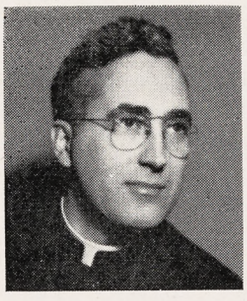
Let me tell you what I think. I believe that the Holy Ghost is at work to lead Christians to a purified catholicism — a catholicism which, because pure, would also be strongly evangelical. If he finds the Roman Church resistant to his plans, he will not be frustrated. He will take the Protestants and recatholicize them.



(Concluded Next Week)

Religion and the Mind

BY
CLINTON J. KEW

ANXIETY

IN the past month many letters have asked these questions over and over again: "How can I overcome anxiety? What causes it? Can religion really help?"

Anxiety is one of the commonest emotions of our modern life. It is one of the most distressing states in the lives of hundreds of thousands of people in all walks of life. Amid the hurry and strain of our present-day living, anxiety haunts both the rich and the poor, the scholar and the uneducated, the religious and the agnostic. It stalks people everywhere; it attaches itself to all kinds of objects; and it is one of the most disrupting factors in the lives of the young as well as the aged.

Fear and anxiety have much in common in that both are responses to danger. Fear, however, is immediate while anxiety is anticipated. Fear is intense, while anxiety is diffuse. Fear is momentary, but anxiety is persistent. When we experience fear, we can do something about it. But when we experience anxiety we feel helpless. The feeling tone in anxiety and fear, however, are the same.

There are two kinds of anxiety: normal and neurotic. Normal anxiety is concerned with outer dangers, neurotic anxiety is concerned with inner dangers. Normal anxiety is intelligible, neurotic anxiety is purposeless and unintelligible. Normal anxiety, like fear, is aroused by known dangers; neurotic anxiety is aroused by unknown dangers.

Anxiety is expressed in dozens of ways; such as, headaches, nausea, dizziness, homesickness, palpitations of the heart, sleepless nights, and respiratory disturbances. It varies all the way from the screaming of a young child to the anxiety attacks of adults. Any threat to one's love life, any fear of failure, or the possible loss of a job will cause anxiety. In fact, a large part of the adjustments we make as human beings is devoted to the avoidance of anxiety. Anxiety comes as a result of frustration. Any incident may become a setting for it. Specifically, anxiety is mental distress to some anticipated danger. It ranges from the most acute state of terror to the vague feeling of being ill at ease.

Anxiety, however, has a positive side in that it is the basis of much of our creative efforts. It spurs progress. It causes men to seek security and to work for the future. It has played a large part in laying a basis for the constructive efforts of society. For instance, the fear of air raids has caused people to organize classes for first aid care and protection.

What can we do to alleviate anxiety? Will religion help? It may appear strange to affirm that anxiety is not a natural response to danger. Anxiety is learned. Anxious parents pass it along to their children. It is not only what the parents say that counts in the lives of children, but how they feel and think. The children feel what their parents feel. They absorb anxiety from their parents. They may not understand what their parents say, but they can feel the tensions of worry about them. Even a little puppy will sense the worries and fears of adults.

Many books have been written recently on how to rid oneself of anxiety. One method is to become informed about the causes of anxiety. When one understands why one becomes a prey to vague fears, he becomes less anxious. Being informed about cancer, for instance, will reduce the terror of the disease. Another method is to do our work well and to surmount all the obstacles. Suspense and uncertainty are the greatest causes of anxiety. By keeping busy with our jobs, we shall eliminate many stimulants of anxiety. Still another method is to get ready for the emergency. One insures his automobile so as to avoid the possibilities of worry about accidents.

And lastly, we can believe that our minds belong to God as much as our bodies. If we are able to endure pain by offering our bodies to God, surely we can offer him our anxieties. We can make friends with our anxieties and accept them as they are. We can let the sense of God's presence and his love enter our minds. If we can develop the habit of submitting to God in worship; if we can practice our religion day in and day out; if we can practice the presence of God, then we shall feel better and anxiety will never attack us again. This is one of the most important preventatives for anxiety and fear.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

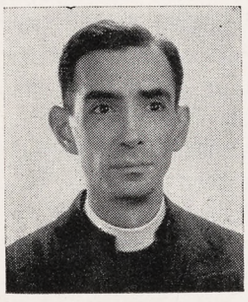
Psychotherapy is nothing more than working through the experiences which should have been accomplished normally many years before. Religion teaches us to understand ourselves and to live each experience in a straightforward normal way. By living as Christ wants us to live, consciously and unconsciously, we shall experience the love which casts out fear.

Questions should be addressed to Mr. Kew at St. Luke's Church, S. Fullerton Ave. & Union St., Montclair, N. J.



The Living Liturgy

BY

MASSEY H. SHEPHERD JR.

OUR INCOMPARABLE ALMANAC

ONE of the things that puts newcomers to the Prayer Book off their guard is the first fifty pages or so of the book. For this sizable preface to the liturgy is nothing more nor less than an almanac, full of calendar notes, time tables and schedules, full moons, Golden numbers, and Sunday letters. This is not all. In the heart of the book are the specific prayers and lessons to be read on specific Sundays and holy days throughout the year. Closer scrutiny of the Prayer Book shows that the whole liturgy is laid out in an ordered time-sequence of rites and observances, day by day, week by week, year by year, from birth to death. It is almost as though time insisted on imposing its tyranny even upon those moments when man lifts his heart and mind above the things that are temporal to commune with the things that are eternal.

Yet time does not control the liturgy. Rather the liturgy orders time, and thereby helps us to redeem it, by making the things that are temporal true sacraments of the things eternal. Our ordinary tasks and activities could not be carried on, at least in any social or community sense, unless we regulated them by clocks and calendars. Is it so strange then that our spiritual life should be ordered by 'times and seasons?' Whatever time is, let philosophers, scientists and mathematicians debate. Yet none of their definitions can ever enable us to escape time. It is one of the given conditions of our creatureliness. God has set up within the mysterious ordering of time that we may grow with it in his grace and spend it to his glory.

The liturgy takes time seriously because the Christian faith takes time seriously. We worship and believe in a God who reveals himself in history, in the concrete events of time and the prophetic insights of individual persons. To Christian faith the drama of history has meaning because each single event, each individual person has a unique, once-for-all significance. At the very center of our faith is an historical person, Jesus of Nazareth, who was crucified under Pontius Pilate and rose from the dead on the third day. On his particular cross and on none other was made the 'one oblation of himself once offered' for all time and for every place. The Prayer Book gives much space to the tables for finding the date of Easter because Easter is the supreme, concrete fact of history, the center of our faith, the center of our liturgy. Every Sunday and saints' day is a commemoration of Easter, a reliving of it here and now. Easter is the climax of history and the foretaste of history's fulfillment in the Age to Come.

God's gift of time is priceless. Time lost, wasted, or misused can never be recovered; it can only be redeemed by repentance and a resolute change of our wills and affections. God's forgiveness wipes out the shame and guilt but not the painful consequences of a misspent past. 'Remember not, Lord, our offenses, nor the offenses of our forefathers,' cries the Litany. Yet time need never be lost; it can always be improved and won. Each moment of the living present is the time of decision. And each decision has lasting consequences and opens new possibilities for growth in God's love and service. Day by day the Absolution of the Daily Offices prays 'that those things may please him which we do at this present; and that the rest of our life hereafter may be pure and holy.'

The time pattern of the liturgy is not, any more than history itself, a cycle of vain and meaningless repetitions. It continually confronts us with ever new moments of decision. In every Eucharist we ask him to 'forgive us all that is past; and grant that we may ever hereafter serve and please thee in newness of life.' Every season calls like Advent: 'knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep.' In Holy Baptism we make a once-for-all renunciation of evil and profession of allegiance and promise of obedience. In Confirmation a definite acceptance of Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour is promised, and a once-for-all gift of the Spirit is imparted for our daily increase in his gifts of grace. A life-long pledge of fidelity and love is exchanged by the parties to Holy Matrimony, a decision that is binding until death. Unless we make a mockery of our liturgy, our lives must be different after every act of participation in its rites. 'For now is our salvation nearer than when we believed.' The Kingdom of God is always nigh at hand. Repent, believe, watch!

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Program of Education

BY HELEN WEBB
St. John's Church, Franklin, Pa.

IN the early 19th century, Horace Bushnell, the great religious educator of that day, expressed the vision of the world-wide Christian Church in these words: "A child is to grow up a Christian and never know himself as being otherwise." This is a vision which the Christian Church has held these many centuries. It is a vision which is a tremendous task for the Christian Church to put into effect. It is a vision which requires for accomplishment a definite program in Christian education and a definite plan of action. So we ask these questions. Does the world-wide Christian Church today have such a program and if so, how is it put into action?

We must answer these questions this way. The world-wide Christian Church is now represented by many denominations upon which it depends for action. Therefore each Christian body must develop its own program of Christian education and its own plans for putting that program into action. But to be effective such plans of action should be developed around two basic groups: the home and the church. This means that the program should be put into action first by the Christian home, with the parents as teachers, through the help of the church, and second, by the church through its formal educational program with parents and teachers working together, and with the teachers trained for their special tasks.

Why do we say the home and then the church? For this reason. The child's first contact is his home. His first teachers are his parents. It is in the home that his attitudes and feelings toward life in general are moulded. Just so are his attitudes and feelings toward the Christian Church moulded. From his home, then, the child one day becomes an active part of the Christian Church which continues the Christian teachings begun in his home and adds to them as the child grows from one level of understanding to another. But this does not mean that Christian education leaves the home at this point. It is always a cooperative business between the home and the church, for at baptism parents promise to see that their children are brought up in the Christian faith. Our Prayer Book requests our parents at our baptism to promise that "they will take heed that the child learn all things a Christian should know."

In order to carry out this cooperative responsibility parents should take an active part in the whole life of the church and should be regular attendants at church. In our own church our parents, at the time of their confirmation, took a vow to be in church every Sunday. (And so will all of us at our confirmation). The same holds true for our teachers in the church school.

Plan of Action

WE then ask these questions. Does our own St. John's Church have a definite program of Christian education and does it have a definite plan of action for carrying out the program? The answer, of course, is yes, to each question. But let me elaborate briefly upon our program and plan of action by picturing for you first, our home program, and second, our formal church school program, as they serve our groups from the cradle through the ninth grade. (The role of our church in the lives of those beyond these age groups is another story).

The author is the wife of the rector of St. John's, Franklin, Pa., and the paper was read at a service, in place of a sermon, by Joyce Andre, age twelve.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

First, as to the home. We have a home cradle roll which includes babies from the day of birth to their third birthday. Into each home where there are babies of these ages, we send a printed leaflet every month which guide the parents in the Christian nurture of their children and which suggests helpful readings on understanding children. In the homes of the children from three years of age through the ninth grade we place a reading book each quarter related to the subject of study for that quarter. Three times a year our parents and teachers meet for the distribution of these reading books and for explanation of plans for their use, and for the distribution and use of other home materials for the kindergarten, primary, and junior groups. Other books for reading are available through our church school library. Monthly reports from our parents are sent to our teachers on our progress in our home projects, and reports are sent to the parents from the teachers twice a year.

Second, as to our Sunday Church School. The child at age three moves from his home into our church school where we help him become a part of the Christian life outside his own home. He then continues in the church school through the various grades.

Our studies are child-centered. We mean by that, that they are built around the experience and understanding of the children at successive age levels. Our studies are Bible-centered. We mean by that, that the Bible is the basic textbook for each year of our school curriculum. Our studies are missions-centered. We mean by that, that they stress the missionary task of the Church. Our studies are educationally sound. We mean by that, that they embody the best educational principles. Our studies are theologically sound. We mean by that, that they relate the whole person and the whole of life to God.

Our studies are developed on a three-year cycle plan. By this plan, when we have gone through twelve years of church school, beginning at age three, we will have completed four cycles of three years each. The main themes for our studies are, Jesus Christ, the Holy Bible, and the Christian Church with adaptations of these themes on the various age levels. This year our subject was the history of the Christian Church.

Our church school is developed upon the educational principles that we learn by doing. Therefore, we engage in discussion, creative handwork, weekly homework, home reading, dramatic activity, play activity, and memory work based upon association of ideas.

Function of the Plan

THE Sunday morning session is one hour long. During this hour a variety of activity goes on. The pre-school class, (three-year-olds), the kindergarten, and the primary classes, in their separate class rooms, enter into informal worship suitable for them. They listen to stories, and sing songs and say little prayers. They work at their tables with crayons, scissors, paper and paste to make the stories of the day come alive. They look at pictures, make original drawings, or scrap books, carry on conversation, or study nature to learn of the orderliness of the universe and the wonders of God's world. They enter into physical activity for learning to play together, for expressing ideas, and for learning to share.

These groups are informal for the most part yet orderly. Their programs give direction to the child in his spiritual, physical and social growth.

The junior and junior high groups participate in a brief worship service in the church under the leadership of the rector with opportunity for individual leadership. In their class rooms they discuss the lesson of the day with much freedom, make posters, maps, villages, a model church, and other things of interest to them but always related to the topic at hand. Among the number of projects of interest to these groups are two that appealed greatly: a time line, made by the lower junior group, and a wall map made by the junior high girls. The time line depicts, through pictures and drawings, great events in Church history from the beginning of the Christian Church to the present day, these events appearing under their proper centuries. The wall map shows the spread of the Bible in its many languages throughout the world and the persons who made this possible.

Such projects give these age groups an opportunity to express themselves, to show that they are responsible individuals, and to lead them to a decision for Christ.

During Lent the lower age groups meet once a week on a weekday, for study of some area of work carried on by our National Church at home or abroad. Our methods are the same as for our Sunday sessions. We close the workshops with original dramatizations based on the life, customs, and events of the people and countries we study.

Each teacher in our church school receives individual coaching in our program, plan of action, and methods for a period of one school year. Other meetings are held for group instruction, reports, and discussion and exchange of ideas. By such means we develop leaders who are able to use our materials to lead our children to a commitment to Christ.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Such is our program of Christian education and our plan of action for our children from birth through the ninth grade which is helping each child to "grow up a Christian and never know himself as being otherwise."

Nurture

BY

ANSON PHELPS STOKES JR.

Rector of St. Bartholomew's, New York

FIFTY years ago there was great emphasis on increasing the size of the Christian Church. Today, in the opinion of many, it is more important to increase the devotion of those who are its members.

Our nation is arming itself not only in terms of numbers of men but also in terms of the equipment and training of men and the spirit and purpose of our national policy. We are having—and they are probably necessary despite the obvious dangers involved—patriotic "loyalty checks." Perhaps we need a spiritual "loyalty check" to see if Christians are ready to stand and be counted in a critical time. We would not send men unarmed into modern warfare. Spiritually we require armaments also. We must "put on the whole armour of God."

First of all, we need facts. To be sure, religion is a matter of faith, but faith is founded on fact. Why should we love our neighbor? Why should we be decent? Why should we believe in God? We do not hold these as goals simply because they are "nice," but rather because of certain events which once happened in history in the life of the people of Israel, in the life of one called Jesus of Nazareth, and in the life of the community which he founded, known as the Christian Church.

Too often we expect people to hold Christian attitudes without a knowledge of the facts on which they are based. Science gives men a body of definite facts; and religion, if it is to hold its place, cannot consist merely of vague emotion. The Church is realizing this. Preaching is not so frequently of the old fashioned hortatory type, but is more and more stressing its teaching function. The Episcopal Church is producing books on its faith.

Of course, while we start with facts, our religion does not end there. We do not read the Bible just out of curiosity or because it is good literature, but that we may be deeply influenced by it. The whole purpose of worship is to change our attitudes. We do not pray in order to change God's mind and get him to do our will, but in order to put ourselves ever more fully at his disposal and let him change us. The Church is a family in which, by regular worship, we seek gradually to change our attitudes so that they may be in harmony with the spirit of Christ, that we may be more understanding, more forgiving, more convinced and more courageous.

Last of all, attitudes are not sufficient unless they become rooted in the habit pattern of our lives. Dr. Moffat once preached a sermon on the text, "And he entered, as his custom was, into the synagogue on the Sabbath day." If our Lord needed habits of worship, how much more must we need them! A soldier drills long after he has mastered the theory of an action, in order that it may become so much a part of his habit pattern that in an emergency he will instinctively do the right thing. So it is with our Christian life. Having faced the facts of the faith, we seek to develop a Christian attitude and to make it part of our every-day pattern of behavior.

The Church is not a society of those who are already fully Christian. We have compared it to an army in which men are trained. It might be compared likewise to a school in which we are ever learning to live the Christian life. But perhaps it is best described as a family, into which we are born and in the life of which we are nurtured, so that we may understand the facts of Christianity, hold Christian attitudes, and exhibit them in the habit pattern of our lives.

The Bible has a note of urgency which is closely akin to the urgency of the times in which we live. We cannot rely on casual citizens and no longer can we count on casual Christians. Rather we must be a group of persons spiritually equipped and trained so that we know and show our faith in a time of testing.

An Invitation To Roman Catholics

By ROBERT S. TRENBATH

Rector of Trinity, Washington, D. C.

Reprinted as a leaflet at numerous requests

$3 for 100 copies
$2 for 50 copies
5c for single copies

Tunkhannock Pennsylvania

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BISHOP DUN PRESENTS SEMINARIES

★ Bishop Angus Dun of Washington is to speak on theological education at the synod of the fourth province, meeting at the Advent, Birmingham, Ala., October 23rd. Delegates will be divided into workshops to consider various phases of the work of the province. The Auxiliary will meet concurrently.

BUILD NEW CHURCH IN YONKERS

★ Bishop Donegan of New York broke ground Sept. 9 for the new $40,000 Church of St. Augustine's, Yonkers. The Rev. Alger Adams, vicar and a Witness editor, stated that they hope to have the brick and stone church completed in time for Christmas.

ANGLO-CATHOLICS MEET IN ENGLAND

★ The Rev. Albert J. duBois, director of the American Church Union, leaves for England October 11 to participate in the "Anglo-Catholic Progress" series of services and meetings. Over 200 clergymen and laymen of the Church of England are being organized into teams that will visit sixty cities of the country.

BETTER ATTENDANCE IN ENGLAND

★ "A return to church life among the intellectual and professional people in England since the end of World War II is a hopeful sign," commented Bishop Eastaugh of Kensington, London, who spent three weeks in Southern California en route home from an official Church visit to New Zealand and Australia.

Bishop Eastaugh preached at St. Edmund's, San Marino; at the Ascension in Sierra Madre, and at St. Paul's Cathedral, Los Angeles.

Bishop Eastaugh was one of six British bishops commissioned as envoys to carry the 250th birthday greetings from the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts to areas where the Church of England maintains activities.

The visiting Anglican dignitary left Sept. 17 for New York where he was the guest of the Presiding Bishop before returning to England Sept. 22.

At his press interview, Bishop Eastaugh further stated that a spiritual resurgence in Great Britain is particularly noticeable among the best type of students at Oxford and Cambridge but a great deal of work is ahead for the Church in awakening the industrial populace to a religious life. The bishop's area in London includes the city of Westminster with 204 parishes serving a population of two million people.

In discussing the rebuilding program in Great Britain, he commented that the Anglican Church is reorganizing the London diocese by combining parishes and abandoning some of the churches which were badly damaged during the blitz. As the ministry of works restricts building costing more than 100 pounds it is impossible to do much reconstruction of the damaged churches.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

ST. JAMES CHURCH STAGES PLAY

★ A popular English playwright's latest drama will be given for a limited run at St. James Church, New York. It is believed the presentation will mark the first time that an American church has housed a professional play.

Luther Greene, New York theatrical producer, has arranged to transport in its entirety from St. Thomas' Church in London, Christopher Fry's latest play, "A Sleep for Prisoners." The production was named as the most distinguished play brought forth by the Festival of Britain.

One of Mr. Fry's verse dramas, the play concerns four prisoners of war who are confined together for one night in a church in a foreign country. The time is indeterminate.

The church setting, although unique in this country, has been used before by Mr. Fry in England. "A Sleep for Prisoners" had its first performances in the University Church of St. Mary the Virgin in Oxford. Between engagements at St. Thomas' it was played in churches in Blackpool, Lancaster, Bournemouth, Brighton and Birmingham.

Mr. Fry is said to have chosen a church setting for his play as a "newer experiment in dramatic illusion."

The rights for the American engagements of "A Sleep for Prisoners" are controlled by Francitas Film Foundation, a non-sectarian and non-profit organization. Arrangements have been made for the disposition of its profits to educational and religious groups.

Mr. Greene has assigned the usual producer's profits to a group to establish a fund for financing future plays and films of an educational and religious nature.

The Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving, rector of St. James', has assigned the church's share of the receipts to Bishop Donegan to create a fund to improve conditions for underpaid missionaries.

BISHOP OF NEW GUINEA TO VISIT STATES

★ Bishop Strong of New Guinea is to visit the United States for missionary talks, sponsored from October 26 to December 3 by the American Church Union. His tour will begin on the east coast and end on the Pacific when he will leave for his diocese to greet the Archbishop of York who plans to spend the Christmas holidays there.

LAKE SUCCESS HAS NEW CHURCH

★ The Church of St. Philip and St. James, Lake Success, N. Y., was opened this month. The congregation was organized about a year ago and has been worshipping in a home. The Rev. James N. Dennison is rector.

Theological Seminaries in the Life of the Church

Their primary function is the training of spiritual leaders for the people of the Church.

But they are also centers of Christian scholarship and of intense study and thought in "the deep things of God."

Members of their faculties produce much of the literature that stimulates and nourishes the Church's life. They are in constant demand, too, as preachers and lecturers in areas surrounding the Seminaries.

Support for the Seminaries means power for the Church.

* * * *

Berkeley Divinity School, New Haven, Conn.; Bexley Hall, Gambier, Ohio; Church Divinity School of the Pacific, Berkeley, Calif.; Divinity School of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia; Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass.; The General Theological Seminary, New York City; Nashotah House, Nashotah, Wis.; School of Theology of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.; Seabury-Western Theological Seminary, Evanston, Ill.; Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CHURCHES OVERSEAS

CANADIAN ANGLICANS WANT RELIGION IN SCHOOLS

Canada's provincial governments are using "delaying tactics" in introdusing religion in the schools, speakers declared at sessions of the executive council of the Church of England in Canada, meeting at Victoria. The Ontario government was specifically accused by delegates of failing to implement recommendations for religious training made by the Hope commission on education early this year.

Several delegates said they felt that religious education in public schools, not merely the reading of excerpts from the Bible, is "a paramount need today." Among them was Bishop Philip S. Abraham of Newfoundland, who said that "there must be interpretation of the Bible for the children." Canon Kenneth Naylor of Montreal said that "the real problem is a battle between secularism and Christianity in our schools." He charged that the secularists were bent on promoting their ideas through the schools.

Some members of the Council claimed that the Church itself was at fault in regard to religious education in the schools. "There is a general lack of interest on the part of the clergy," one member said. "We can't expect to gain further regulations until the provincial governments see us taking advantage of those already open to us."

CALCUTTA BISHOPS ARE NAMED

Two assistant bishops in the diocese of Calcutta have been announced by Arabindo Nath Mukerjee, bishop of the diocese and metropolitan of the Church in India, Pakistan, Burma and Ceylon. They are Archdeacon R. W. Bryan, who will have charge of West Bengal, and the Rev. J. D. Blair of the Oxford Mission Brethren who will have charge of the part of the diocese lying in East Pakistan. Consecration service will be in St. Paul's Cathedral, Calcutta, Oct. 14.

CANADIANS ANSWER POPE'S CHRISTIAN UNITY PLEA

A recent appeal by Pope Pius XII for Christian unity to oppose the enemies of religion was answered by the executive council of the Church of England in Canada.

"In reply to the appeal of the Pope that all Christians should unite in opposition to the foes of spiritual values in the world today," an adopted resolution stated, "members of the Anglican communion are bound to point out that cooperation among all Christian communions is possible through the World Council of Churches. The Pope has been invited to lead his followers into the fellowship and so strengthen spiritual unity against the onslaught of the common enemy. Unfortunately, he has so far refused this cooperation with other Christian people."

The resolution was drafted by a special committee named by Archbishop Walter F. Barfoot of Edmonton, primate of the Church, after another resolution was considered unsatisfactory. The first resolution said there could be no favorable reply to the Pope's appeal unless the papacy "changed its attitude in regard to its exclusiveness and totalitarianism."

METHODIST CENTER AT OXFORD

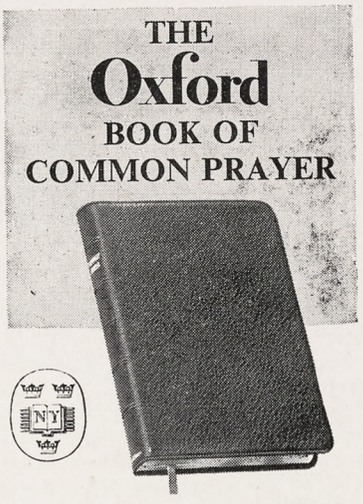
The Methodist Church is planning a world Methodist center at Oxford, England. An appeal for $420,000 is made to acquire and endow premises capable of housing forty and providing a chapel, library, common room and warden's quarters.

MACKEY SURVEYING PROTESTANT WORK

President John A. Mackay of Princeton Seminary returned to New York yesterday after making an extensive survey of Protestant work in Spain, Portugal and Italy. He is a recognized authority on the difficulties Protestants have in carrying on their work in countries dominated by the Roman Church. He will report to the board of missions of the Presbyterian Church, of which he is president.

DANISH CATHEDRAL MARKS 750th ANNIVERSARY

The king and queen of Denmark were among those attending a service commemorating the 750th anniversary of the cathedral at Aarhus, Denmark. Built in 1201 when Aarhus had a population of 500, it is now a landmark in a city of 100,000.



METHODISTS ORGANIZE WORLD COUNCIL

The world conference of the Methodist Church, meeting at Oxford, England, has set up a permanent secretariat to be known as the World Methodist Council, which will deal with evangelism, faith and order, women's work, education, exchange of preachers, youth work. It will have offices in the U. S. and England.

JAPANESE CHURCH HEAD TOURING GERMANY

Moderator Michio Kozaki of the United Church in Japan is now on a speaking tour in Germany at the invitation of the German Evangelical Missionary Council. Discussing the development of Christianity in his country, he said that before the war it was considered a "western thing" but that today, with mistrust and prejudices having vanished, Christianity has found a wide response. To many of the Japanese, he said, "it is a matter of understanding that Christianity is the only hope for Japan."

The choice for generations

Oxford Prayer Book 07339x is the popular-size Prayer Book used in churches. It is printed on ultrathin India paper in a clear type that can be read even in dimly lit churches. Bound in fine grain French Morocco, limp, leather lined. $7.00

At your bookstore

Free — Write for a copy of Our Father, a 48-page commentary on the Lord's Prayer by 16 Bishops, with a foreword by the Presiding Bishop.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS, Suite W
114 Fifth Ave., New York 11, N. Y.

Publishers of Fine Books for over Four Centuries

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT
Book Editor

The Christian in Politics. By Jerry Voorhis. Associated Press. $1.75.

This book must surely be unique. It is a simple and practical statement, written by a Churchman after many years of personal experience in politics, telling how serious Christians can apply their Christian convictions to political life.

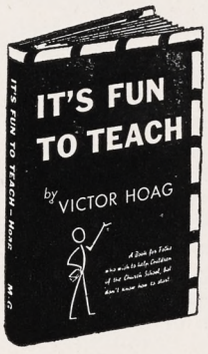
The book can be used by readers of any political belief except the absolute fanatics at either hand. Moreover it is so courteously written that Jews or other non-Christians can read it to their advantage, although its roots lie deep in Christian doctrine. If all high school and college students would study and discuss and apply the contents of this small book, the coming generation of political life would almost certainly be transformed.—Gladys Barnes

The High Calling. By James Street. Doubleday. $3.00.

The story of a Baptist minister who comes back from a prominent post in a big city to give himself to building up a little church in the mill village where his ministry had begun. It is a wholesome picture of religious spirit among the "Plain People"; and if one is not too much disturbed by a clumsy style and unconvincing characterization, it will seem worth reading.—W. R. Bowie

You Can Preach. By G. Ray Jordan. Revell. $2.50.

A book on building and delivering the sermon. The title, "You Can Preach," is hopefully inviting. The reader will need its encouragement to persuade him to read through nearly a hundred commonplace first pages. After that, when he comes to the chapter on "Making the Sermon," he will find there and in the chapters following material which is interesting and helpful.—W. R. Bowie



BOOKS RECEIVED

A Space of Life Between. By Frederick Ward Kates. Privately printed. 1951.
A collection of beautifully poems of youth.

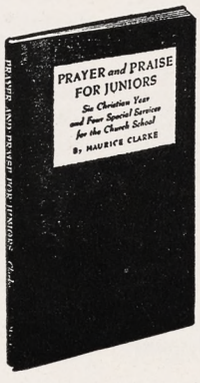
A Method of Prayer. By Johannes Kelpius. Edited, with an Introduction by E. Gordon Alderfer. Harper. $1.50.
A fascinating little book of devotion, first published in Philadelphia in 1761. It was written by an early American mystic—a German pietist who brought over a community to settle among the Quakers.

Great Catholic Festivals. By James L. Monks Schuman. $2.50.
The latest volume in the Great Religious Festival Series is a well-illustrated explanation of the major Christian festivals, written by a learned Jesuit.

Books for Leaders and Teachers

IT'S FUN TO TEACH

By Victor Hoag



This practical book has been written to dignify teaching in the Church School as a hobby, and shows how teaching can be real fun. This is not theoretical pedagogy but practical common sense, a challenge and a duty for all who would practice the Christian faith and work at it. Dr. Hoag's book is the most provocative and readable one yet written for prospective, beginning and experienced Church School teachers. In addition to its excellent instructive content, It's Fun to Teach is fun to read.

Price, $3.25

LITTLE CHILDREN'S PRAISES

Services of Worship for Kindergarten and Primary Children

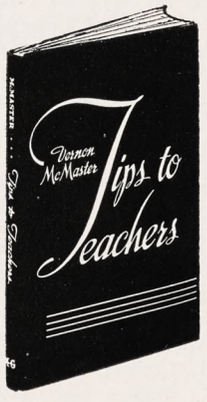
By Maurice Clarke

There is a true thrill in attending a well-planned worship service for children. In Little Children's Praises are plans and programs for worship services of an exceptional character. Here are services with originality and variety, emphasizing at all times the central place of worship in religion.

Price, $1.50

PRAYER AND PRAISE FOR JUNIORS

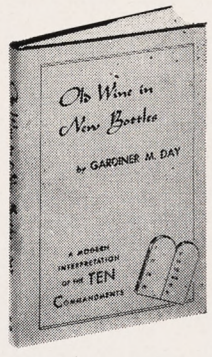
Six Christian Year and Four Special Services for the Church School



By Maurice Clarke

The same high caliber of material is found in this book as appears in Little Children's Praise. Six services complete the Christian year, and there are four additional services: Service of Dedication for Church School Teachers, Blessing of the Boxes, Service of Presentation of Lenten Offering and a Patriotic Service.

Price, $1.50



TIPS TO TEACHERS

By Vernon McMaster

In easy-to-read form, this book discusses the purpose of teaching, the child's way of learning, the goals of a Church School teacher, the tools teachers can use, the value of a Church School library, with guides to some general techniques and principles. Created around nine lively, provocative discussions between a rector and his teacher-trainees, the book is both entertaining and instructive. Randolph Crump Miller says: "Every rector should have this book on hand to present to those who say they really should not teach."

Price, $1.65

OLD WINE IN NEW BOTTLES

By Gardiner M. Day

Reveille Magazine says: "This book seems to get closer to the heart of the truth than any I have read on the Ten Commandments. In the text the author presents a brief historical background of each of the Ten Commandments together with a modern interpretation. A very valuable book. The Churchman says: "This is a first-rate little hand-book on the Ten Commandments. For brevity and clear thought this little volume is hard to beat."

Price, $2.25

Postage Additional

MOREHOUSE-GORHAM

14 E. 41st Street, New York 17, N. Y. 29 E. Madison Street, Chicago 2, Ill.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

NEWS OF OTHER CHURCHES

STEPHEN FRITCHMAN UNDER FIRE

Stephen H. Fritchman, pastor of a Unitarian Church in Los Angeles, and formerly the editor of the national magazine of that Church, has been charged by a sub-committee of the House Committee on un-American Activities, as having "given aid and comfort to the Communist cause." In a press conference after the hearing Fritchman denounced the House committee as "seeking to invade the intimate confidence of the confessional" and striking a blow against "both American democracy and unfettered religion." He said he was profoundly shocked "at this first example to my knowledge of the committee's calling before it of a parish minister," and declared that every clergyman should be equally alarmed. Following the hearing the trustees of the church passed a resolution supporting the minister and stating that they "consider the committee's inquiry into speakers, meetings and activities of the church an attack upon our institution and upon all organized religion."

CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP BEING STRESSED

A Christian citizenship department has been set up by the Council for Social Action of the Congregational Church to replace its legislative department. Lobbying, main function of the latter, is to be minimized, with education through Washington seminars, publications that discuss the background of public problems, and the encouragement of local discussion groups, the new emphasis. The Council will however continue to testify before committees of Congress whenever legislation with which it has a particular moral concern is under discussion.

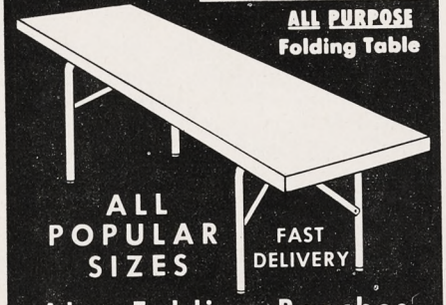
CHURCH MEMBERSHIP REACHES NEW HIGH

A new total membership of 87,548,621 in all religious bodies of this country is reported in the 1951 Yearbook of American Churches, which will be published this week under the auspices of the National Council of Churches. Figures compiled by official statisticians of Protestant, Roman Catholic, Jewish and other religious groups, according to the Yearbook, show that 285,834 congregations, parishes and similar local units now embrace 58.09 per cent of the nation's population. These religious groups are reported to have a total of 281,251 ordained men and women clergy, of whom 166,891 are actively engaged in religious work.

The most unique features of the yearbook is its compilation of clergy statistics, which it says is the first made in about 20 years. It reveals that 3,763 of the 281,251 ordained clergy are women, of whom 2,437 are active in church work.

CONGREGATION HONORS ITS MINISTERS

The Lutheran Church of Decorah, Iowa, has sent 51 of its members into the ministry during its 100 years of history, with 33 living with all but four of them still active. They are being honored with a five-day homecoming and mission festival, Sept. 26-30. The present pastor is the Rev. R. A. Ofstedal who shepherds 1,841 baptized members in a town of about 5,000.



KLAN DENOUNCED FOLLOWING DYNAMITING OF CHURCH

The Ku Klux Klan was denounced from a pulpit at Walhalla, S. C., as proclaiming "the same bigotry, prejudice, and intolerance that Hitler vomited." The denunciation was made by the Rev. A. L. Tubbs, Presbyterian minister, who said: "Our troops have fought bloody wars to conquer dictators intolerant of the ideals and ideas of peoples, and this fight must be carried on the home front against the Ku Klux Klan."

Mr. Tubbs issued his attack following the explosion of a dynamite charge at a Negro church in Swansea, S. C., where members of a white congregation were conducting a vacation Bible school. This incident was blamed on the Klan by the pastor of the white church (Swansea Baptist) who said that he and members of his congregation had received threatening communications from the Klan regarding the conduct of the classes.

R. C. SEMINARY IN WISCONSIN

A new Roman Catholic seminary has been dedicated at La Crosse, Wis., the ceremony being attended by about 12,000. It cost three million dollars with an estimated 95,000 making contributions. Attending was Francis P. Matthews, ambassador to Ireland and former secretary of the navy, who said that the American people "must continue to have faith in God" in facing the challenge of Communism.

SERVING All INSTITUTIONS
FACTORY DIRECT The LUXWOOD TRADE MARK REG.
ALL PURPOSE Folding Table

ALL POPULAR SIZES
FAST DELIVERY
Also Folding Benches
WRITE FOR COMPLETE DETAILS NOW!
Manufactured Exclusively by
The JAMES P. LUXEM CO.,
1716 N. Wells St., Chicago 14, Ill.

Everyone's Talking About This Wonderful, Easy Way To Learn Music!

Send for FREE BOOK telling how quickly and easily you can learn YOUR favorite instrument—even if you don't know a note of music now! You play delightful pieces from very first lesson. Properly— by note. Make amazing progress at home, in spare time, without teacher. Only few cents per lesson. 850,000 STUDENTS!

FREE BOOK and Lesson-Sample Just send name and address. No obligation; no salesman will call.
U. S. SCHOOL of MUSIC
Studio A5411 Port Washington, N. Y.

Sudbury CHURCH WORSHIP AIDS
Have your dealer show you the wide variety of well made church appointments we produce
FOR COMPLETE CATALOG SEND TO
SUDBURY BRASS GOODS CO.
55 SUDBURY STREET, BOSTON 14, MASS.

New "HARTAL" Auto Clothes-Rack
Saves a lot of packing, carries garments on hangers or in garment bags. Keeps clothes wrinkle-free, saves pressing bills. No installation expense, springs into position or out just as easy. Will not mar upholstery. No screws or bolts, FITS ANY CAR, hugs ceiling, does not interfere with headroom. Beautifully finished. New low price, $6.95 F.O.B. Port Washington, Wis.
When Writing: PLEASE Mention This Magazine.
THE SPECIALIZED PRODUCTS CO.
P. O. BOX-59, PORT WASHINGTON, WISCONSIN.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Scriptural—Artistically designed
WORSHIP FOLDERS
Large assortment—Self Selection
Lithographed—Special Days—General use
Ecclesiastical Art Press
Dept. W Louisville 12, Ky.
FREE CATALOG

ADDRESS CHANGE
IN MAKING AN ADDRESS CHANGE, PLEASE SEND both THE OLD AND THE NEW ADDRESS AND ALLOW THREE WEEKS FOR THE CHANGE.

Mitchell FOLD-O-LEG tables
The strongest, handiest folding table made. For banquet, church and school use. Write for descriptive folder.
MITCHELL MFG. COMPANY
2748 S. 34th St., Milwaukee 7, Wis. Dept.W

LOOK TWICE...Yes, It's Easy To MAKE MONEY!
Sell Midwest Everyday Cards
Turn your spare time into cash. Show Midwest All-Occasion Cards to friends. They'll buy 21-card big value $1 Assortment fast. Your profit up to 50c! EXCLUSIVE Secret Pal, Eastern Star Cards. Also Pop-Up Books, Scented Stationery, other money-makers. CASH BONUS, Party Plan, Club fund-raising plan, too. Get Samples on approval. Write at once.
MIDWEST CARD CO., 1113 WASHINGTON AVE., DEPT. 54, ST. LOUIS 1, MO.

CHURCH BULLETINS
Every progressive church should use Winters' De Luxe Bulletin Board. Dignified, effective, and economical. Over 7,000 IN USE. Increase attendance, interest and collections. Write today for Illus. Catalog H. E. Winters Specialty Company, Davenport, Iowa.

FINEST PURE IRISH LINEN
For all Church uses
Just received from Belfast a new fine lightweight linen for Surplices in 39"—1.65 per yard. Also qualities and width for Albs, Fair Linen, etc., Patterns and Supplies, Books.
Samples Free
MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
BOX 386 CHILLICOTHE, MO.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

VESTMENTS
Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves
Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries
Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars
Custom Tailoring for Clergymen
1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951
COX SONS & VINING, Inc.
131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

CASSOCKS
Surplices — Choir Vestments
Eucharistic Vestments
Altar Hangings and Linens
Prices Sent on Request
J. M. HALL, INC.
14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.
Tel. CH 4-3306

PEOPLE

DEATHS:

GEORGE T. LASCELLE, 66, rector emeritus of the Messiah, Glen Falls, N. Y., died Sept. 16. He had previously been rector of St. John's, New York City.

ORDINATIONS:

ROBERT E. JUERGENS, vicar of St. John the Evangelist, Needles, Cal., was ordained priest by Bishop Campbell, Sept. 8.

LAY WORKERS:

HILDA L. DIETERLY, deaconess, formerly supt. of the House of the Good Shepherd, Utica, N. Y., is now matron of the Home of the Aged, Shippensburg, Pa.

MIRIAM A. HIRHWOOD is now director of youth work in the diocese of Alabama.

RITA WILKINS, Burlingame, Cal., has been awarded a fellowship by Trinity parish, N. Y., to study social work, living at Windham House.

SARAH LEWIS, formerly director of education at the Good Shepherd, Corpus Christi, Texas, is now director of education in the diocese of West Texas.

LESTER C. YOUNGWHO, formerly director of Protero Hill Neighborhood House, San Francisco, is now director of the Good Shepherd Center, San Antonio, Texas.

YVONNE GREATWOOD is the new director of education at St. Paul's Cathedral, Buffalo.

CLERGY CHANGES:

JAMES W. MONTGOMERY, formerly ass't at St. Luke's, Evanston, is now rector of St. John the Evangelist, Flossmoor, Ill.

ADOLPH W. KAHL, ass't at St. Mark's, San Antonio, Texas, becomes locum tenens of St. Luke's, Altoona, Pa., Oct. 7.

Z. A. JEFFERY, formerly rector of St. Andrew's, Methuen, Mass., is now rector of All Saints, Stoneham, Mass.

J. WILLARD YODER, formerly director of education, New York, is now residing at Hawthorne, N. Y.

ROBERT STELLAR, recent graduate of the Pacific, is now vicar of St. Timothy's, Compton, Cal.

FREDERICK W. RAPPA, formerly on the staff of St. Paul's Cathedral, Boston, is now rector of the Messiah, Auburndale, Mass.

CURATE WANTED
A young man as assistant in Evangelical parish in the north midwestern states. An unusual opportunity for the right man for varied work in large parish. Must be able to take over the direction of large church school, and an unusually fine program for young people in high school, college and business. Good salary and attractive apartment. Write Box G of THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

HOUSE FOR SALE at Keene Valley in Adirondacks Furnished or unfurnished; suitable for year-round living. 1st floor two bed-rooms and bath, attractive kitchen, hall and living-dining room with knotty pine paneling and fire-place. 2nd floor, 2 bed-rooms and bath. Basement, furnace-room, rooms suitable for workshop and laundry; 1 car garage. Oil-burner, hot-water heat. 2.1 acres of ground, mostly woodland, mountain view, trout-stream. BOX C, WITNESS, TUNKHANNOCK, PA.

I Want to Contact New WRITERS
who are interested in cashing checks of $1 to $100, offered every day. The easiest way to write for pay. No previous experience necessary. Send for FREE DETAILS. No obligation.
SAUNDERS M. CUMMINGS
468 Indep. Bldg., Colorado Springs, Colo.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE·BRASS·SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS
Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS
Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.
SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

Exquisite
IRISH LINENS
BY THE YARD
From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States, I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values; unsurpassed quality, imported direct from Ireland. Also transfer patterns, linen tape, and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 3 inches at 75c, 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.00.
MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

THE BISHOP WHITE
PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833
Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.
PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)
Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CLERGY CHANGES:

WARREN H. McKENNA, formerly rector of St. John's, Roxbury Cross, Mass., is now running a social service project on a farm at Epping, N. H.

GILBERT P. PRINCE, rector of St. Mark's, Van Nuys, Cal., is now dean of the Pasadena convocation and will have supervision of diocesan activities, particularly missions.

GERARD W. RUBINO, formerly in charge of St. Michael's, Bridgeport, Conn., is now rector of Christ Church, Warwick, N. Y.

LELAND B. HENRY, director of social service of New York, is rector of St. Mary's, Scarborough, N. Y.

NORMAN SPICER, formerly in charge of college work in New York, is now rector of All Saints, Leonia, N. J.

JOHN W. HERMAN, formerly ass't at St. Paul's, Waco, Texas, is now rector of Grace Church, Cuero, and in charge of the Holy Communion, Yoakum, Texas.

MELCHOR SAUCEDO, formerly rector of Templo de Jesus, Guadalajara, Mexico, is now in charge of Mission Santa Fe and the Chapel of the Good Samaritan, San Antonio, Texas.

WILBUR L. CASWELL, formerly rector of St. Paul's, Yonkers, N. Y., is now living at Patterson, Cal.

JOHN W. PYLE, formerly of the diocese of Los Angeles, is now vicar of the Redeemer, Yonkers, N. Y.

GERALD W. RUBINO, formerly rector of St. Michael's, Bridgeport, Conn., is now rector of Christ Church, Warwick, N. Y.

OWEN C. THOMAS, formerly of the diocese of Washington, is now director of college work in New York.

JAMES W. HYDE, formerly ass't at St. James, New York, is now ass't at St. Matthew, San Mateo, Cal.

GEORGE F. COLLARD, formerly of the diocese of N. Y., is now rector of St. Paul's, Columbia, Pa.

CYRUS L. HERON, formerly of Pennsylvania, is now rector of Holy Trinity, Inwood, N. Y.

JOUN C. FRANCIS, formerly of San Mateo, Cal., is now ass't at St. Thomas, New York.

THOMAS G. MUNDY, formerly vicar of St. Anne's, Tifton, Ga., is now rector of St. Andrew's, Darien, Ga.

GEORGE P. TIMBERLAKE, ass't at Harcourt parish, Gambier, O., is now rector of Trinity, Findlay, O.

TURNER W. MORRIS, rector of St. Mark's, Charleston, S. C., becomes vicar of St. Paul's, Martinsville, Va., Nov. 1.

CENTRAL SCHOOL OF RELIGION
(A Correspondence Institution)
6030 Lowell Ave., Indianapolis 19, Ind.
College level courses since 1896. Bible, Theology of O. & N. T., Pastoral Psychology, Church Publicity, Religious Education, etc. Complete interrupted studies at home. Excellent faculty. Reasonable. Write to Secretary for further information NOW.

Shattuck School
FOUNDED 1858
Shattuck integrates all parts of its program: religious, academic, military and social to give high school age boys an environment in which to grow "in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man." Summer School-Camp. Catalogue
REV. SIDNEY W. GOLDSMITH, JR.
RECTOR AND HEADMASTER
Box W, Shumway Hall
SHATTUCK SCHOOL FARIBAULT, MINN.

ST. LUKE'S SCHOOL
Episcopal Day School under the direction of Trinity Parish
Nursery, Kindergarten, Elementary Grades. After School play groups. Coeducational. Moderate tuition. For catalogue and further information communicate with
THE REV. PAUL C. WEED, JR.
Headmaster
Hudson & Grove Sts., NEW YORK 14, N. Y.
Phone WAtkins 4-5960

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL
Coeducational Episcopal Day School
Prepares for leading secondary schools. Sound academic training. Kindergarten thru 8th grade. French and Latin emphasized. Complete testing program. Est. 1894. Music, drama, arts & crafts, sports. Bus service. Hot lunch. Tel: AL 4-2000
E. ALLISON GRANT, Headmaster
88 E. Fourth Ave. (11th St.), N. Y. 3

THE PATTERSON SCHOOL for BOYS

Episcopal School in Blue Ridge Mountains of Western No. Carolina. Accredited. Grades 6-12. Gymnasium, sports, 42nd year. 1300-acre estate. Board and tuition, moderate.
GEORGE F. WIESE, Supt.
COLLEGE PREPARATORY Legerwood, N. C. HEALTH EDUCATION CHARACTER BUILDING

SCHOOLS

FORK UNION MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth New Hampshire

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Schools of the Church

BARD COLLEGE
Formerly St. Stephen's
A Coeducational College of Liberal Arts and Sciences
FOUNDED 1860
For catalogue and further information write to The Director of Admissions, Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, New York.

DANIEL BAKER COLLEGE
BROWNWOOD, TEXAS
Established 1889. Operated under the auspices of the Diocese of Dallas. Co-educational senior college offering B.A. and B.S. degrees. Special opportunities in teacher training, music education, business administration. The only available undergraduate course in the Episcopal Church in Church Work Training. Member: Association of Texas Colleges.
REV'D W. A. CROSS, M.A., President
REV'D L. A. HASELMAYER, Ph.D., Dean

SAINT PAUL'S POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE
LAWRENCEVILLE, VIRGINIA
Approved by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. B.S. Degree with major in Trade and Industrial Education, B.S. Degree in Home Economics Education, B.S. Degree with major in Elementary Education, B.S. Degree in Secondary Education.
EARL H. McCLENNEY, President

VOORHEES SCHOOL & JR. COLLEGE
DENMARK, S. C.
Co-educational. Accredited by State Dept. of Education of S. C. and the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges. Under the two Dioceses of S. C. and The American Church Institute for Negroes. Expenses reasonable. Limited scholarship aid for worthy students. Apply:
CECIL D. HALLIBURTON, President

Okolona College
Okolona, Mississippi
Co-educational, Private, American Church Institute for Negroes (Protestant Episcopal Church) Established 1902
High School and Junior College - Trades and Industries - Music
For information write: W. MILAN DAVIS President
Today's Training for Tomorrow's Opportunities

St. Augustine's College
RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA
1867 — 1951
Accredited Four-Year College for Negro Youth. Co-educational. Music, Pre-Medical, Health and Physical Education, High School Teacher Training, Business, Pre-Social Work, Nursing Education in co-operation with St. Agnes Hospital.
HAROLD L. TRIGG, President

SAINT HELEN'S HALL
Portland 1, Oregon
Historic Pacific Northwest Episcopal resident and day school. Founded in 1869. Co-educational pre-school. Boys admitted to Lower School through grade III. Upper School girls only.
Write for catalog.
The RT. REV. BENJAMIN DAGWELL, D.D.
President, Board of Trustees
JANE ALLEN SAXTON,
HEADMISTRESS

The Cathedral Schools
National Cathedral School for Girls
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding department, grades 7-12
KATHARINE LEE, Principal
St. Albans
The National Cathedral School for Boys
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding Department, grades 8-12
CHARLES MARTIN, Headmaster
Address:
Mt. St. Alban, Washington 16, D. C.

St. John Baptist School
FOR GIRLS
Offers College Preparatory and General courses. Music, art, outdoor sports, and a happy home life, with character building extra-curricular activities for resident and day students, under the care of the Sisters of St. John Baptist. In the country near Morristown, New Jersey. Accredited.
For catalog address Box 556
The Sister Superior, Mendham, New Jersey

St. John's MILITARY SCHOOL
Salina, Kansas
Since 1887 St. John's has been perpetuating the cultural tradition of the Church by stressing sound scholarship in Christian atmosphere. Grades 3 through 12. Fully accredited.
COL. R. L. CLEM, Rector

ST. MARY'S HALL
SECONDARY BOARDING SCHOOL
Faribault, Minnesota
Close relationship of students and faculty in residence allows for a maximum of spiritual, academic, and social growth. Preparation for leading colleges. An extensive sports program, including riding.
PHYLLIS M. NEWMAN, M.A.
Founded 1866 Headmistress

IOLANI SCHOOL
Episcopal Church School for Boys
HONOLULU 17, HAWAII
A college preparatory church school for boys. Kindergarten through twelfth grade. Established 1862. Day tuition $225 to $275. Boarding $665 - $775. Summer session. Accredited.
REV. CHARLES A. PARMITER, JR. M.A., S.T.B., Rector

The MERRICOURT SCHOOL
(Episcopal)
A country boarding school for 40 boys & girls. Grades 1-8 (pre-preparatory). Home-like environment. Sports, extra-curricula program. 26th year. 8 weeks summer camp. For information: Visit, write, or phone 3-3209.
THE REV. M. W. WHITFORD, Hdm.
BERLIN, CONN.

ST. LUKE'S HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING
New York City
Offers a 3 year course in nursing to high school and college graduates. College graduates may be admitted with 9 months advanced credit allowance. For further information write to The Director of Nursing, St. Luke's Hospital, 421 West 113th St., New York 25, N. Y.

HARVARD SCHOOL
Diocesan School for Boys. 52nd Year. Fall term opens September 11, 1951. Grades seven through twelve. Fully Accredited. R.O.T.C. unit. For all information apply to
THE REV. W. S. CHALMERS
Headmaster
3700 Coldwater Canyon Rd.
NORTH HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

Cathedral School of St. Mary
An accredited Episcopal school for girls. Suburban New York City. Day-nursery to college. Boarding—fifth grade to college. Strong college preparatory course. Music, Dramatics, Art. Excellent sports program. Catalog on request.
MARION REID MARCH
Box W, Garden City, Long Island, N. Y.

ST. STEPHEN'S SCHOOL FOR BOYS
ALEXANDRIA, VA.
Grades 3 thru 12 (Day School). College Preparatory. Under the Church School System of the Diocese of Virginia.
Address
THE REV. EDWARD E. TATE,
Headmaster
2405 Russell Rd. ALEXANDRIA, VA.

ST. MARY'S HALL on the Delaware.
Episcopal boarding and day school for girls 8-18. Founded 1837. Thorough college preparation. Fully accredited. Separate lower school. College preparatory and general courses. Music, Art, Clubs, Sports, Dramatics. Near New York and Philadelphia. Catalogue.
FLORENCE LUKENS NEWBOLD
Headmistress
Burlington, New Jersey

DeVEAUX SCHOOL
Niagara Falls, New York
FOUNDED 1852
The Church School in the Diocese of Western New York. College preparatory for boys. Representative form of student government. Small classes. Reasonable charges. Grades 7 through 12.
For information address The Headmaster.

The Church Home and Hospital
SCHOOL OF NURSING
Baltimore 31, Maryland
A three year course of nursing. Classes enter August and September. Scholarships available to well qualified high school graduates.
Apply to Director of Nursing

ST. AGNES SCHOOL
An Episcopal Country Day and Boarding School for Girls
Excellent College Preparatory record. Special courses arranged for girls not contemplating college. Day pupils range from Kindergarten to College Entrance. Boarders from Grade 8 to College Entrance.
MISS BLANCHE PITTMAN, Principal
Albany New York

HOWE MILITARY SCHOOL
Thorough Academic Training in a Spiritual Environment. R.O.T.C. Accredited college preparatory, business courses. Junior School. Small classes. Every boy participates in sports. Balanced program. Episcopal. Established 1884. Summer Camp, boys grammar school age. Catalogue.
COL. B. B. BOUTON
13 Academy Place, Howe, Indiana

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The WITNESS

10¢ A COPY

October 4, 1951

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

TRINITY CHURCH, OSSINING, N. Y.
Canon West of Cathedral of St. John the Divine Celebrating

A Celebrated Ecclesiastical Law Suit

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 7:30, 8 (and 9 Holy Days except Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 8:30, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers – 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. – 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital – 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m. Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a.m. Holy Communion
11 a.m. Morning Service and Sermon
Weekdays: Holy Communion Tuesdays at 12:10 p.m.; Wednesdays at 8 a.m.; Thursdays at 10:30 a.m.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer – 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

☆

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon. Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D., Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 – 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m. Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.–High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacColl, 3rd, Rector
Rev. Peter Chase, Curate
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 32 The WITNESS OCTOBER 4, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Christ Church, Middletown, N. J. Observes Historic Event

Bishop Hudson of England Visits Parish Which Prompted Founding of SPG

★ Governor Lewis Morris of New Jersey, writing to the Bishop of London in 1701, said: "Middletown was settled from New York and New England. It is a large township. There is no such thing as a church or religion among them. They are perhaps the most ignorant and wicked people in the world. Their meetings on Sunday are at the public house when they get their fill of rum and go to fighting and running of races."

The letter caused considerable consternation in English Church circles and resulted in a conference at Lambeth Palace attended by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of London and other dignitaries. The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts was founded, the charter being granted that year by King William III. The first missionary, the Rev. George Keith, was dispatched forthwith to Middletown, to see what he could do about the rum drinking, fighting and racing. That he may not have been too successful is revealed in other records of the time which report horse races on Kings Highway, with the first prize a gallon of applejack and the second a peck of doughnuts. It is also recorded that the women of the village preferred gin to either applejack or rum and drank their full share of it.

Bishop Noel Baring Hudson of Newcastle, England, at one time the secretary of the SPG, found Middletown in a quieter mood when he visited Christ Church on September 27th to celebrate the 250th anniversary of the founding of the Society. Yet those familiar with the village as it is today could introduce him to places that no doubt would convince him that life goes on pretty much as it was when the Rev. George Keith arrived from England.

The dinner which followed the service last Thursday evening, in honor of Bishop Hudson and Bishop Gardner of New Jersey, was held in Leeds Hall, which reveals another interesting chapter in Christ Church history. William Leeds was reputed to be one of Captain Kidd's chief cohorts. On January 3, 1703, according to the records of George Keith, "William Leeds, and his sister Mary, late converts from Quakerism" were baptized at Christ Church. Upon his death he left 438 acres of his land "to the venerable and honorable Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, and to their successors for ever, for the use and habitation of a minister or clergyman of the Church of England, as it is by law now established, that shall be a missionary of the said society to preach the gospel to the inhabitants of Middletown and Shrewsbury." His neighbors, present at the reading of the will, drew the conclusion that the gift was conscience-money, an expiation for the pirate days under the famous Captain Kidd.

Whatever may have been the motive, Christ Church today derives an income from that original grant since the acres were eventually sold and the money invested in bonds and mortgages. Incidentally the land given by Leeds is today owned largely by Mrs. Lewis S. Thompson who is a communicant of Christ Church. Also the parish house, recently built, is doubtless the only church building in the country named in honor of a pirate.

Presiding at the dinner last Thursday was the present rector of the parish, the Rev. Andrew M. Van Dyke, and at the speakers table with Bishop Hudson and Bishop Gardner were the Rev. William B. Spofford Sr., former rector who resigned three years ago in order to devote full time to the Witness; the elected warden, Maltby Jelliffe, of the Central Hanover Trust Co. of New York; the rector's appointed warden, Samuel Riker, officer of the New Jersey Zinc Co., and Miss Louise Hartshorne who has the notable distinction of having served the parish as treasurer for over half a century.

BISHOP KINSOLVING IN TEXAS

★ Bishop Kinsolving of Arizona is in the diocese of Texas the first two weeks of October addressing rallies on the work of the Church. Both Bishop Quin and Bishop Hines are also speaking at the meetings set up at various population centers.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

PRAYER MEETINGS FOR PEACE

★ Clergymen of all faiths, concerned over the failure of Korean truce talks, are sponsoring three simultaneous public prayer meetings and vigils for peace in New York, October 7th. They are sponsored by the interfaith committee for peace action.

A statement of principles by the religious leaders declared, "We, who are in close daily contact with our people are keenly aware of the fervent desires of their hearts and minds for peace. Since war is contrary to the principles of brotherhood, we believe that the people should be given an opportunity to express their firm conviction of the evil and hopelessness of continued bloodshed and urge that all nations involved make a real effort now to come to an immediate cessation of warfare and further human slaughter. For this purpose, we joined together and formed the Interfaith Committee for Peace Action."

Urging men of all beliefs to join the vigil for peace, the committee said, "With firm faith in the will of people, under God, to achieve a peaceful world, we call upon men and women of all persuasions, to meet with us in fellowship, to discuss soberly, charitably and without fear the means of establishing peace, and to ask the guidance and blessing of the Father of All upon our efforts."

The meetings will be held in Manhattan Center, 34th Street and Eighth Avenue; St. Nicholas Arena, 69 West 66th Street; and Rockland Palace, 155th Street and Eighth Avenue.

Among the large number to issue the appeal are the following Episcopalians: Prof. John Wild of Harvard; Prof. Joseph F. Fletcher of Episcopal Theological School; the Rev. Kenneth R. Forbes, executive chairman of the Episcopal League for Social Action and the Rev. W. B. Spofford Sr., managing editor of The Witness.

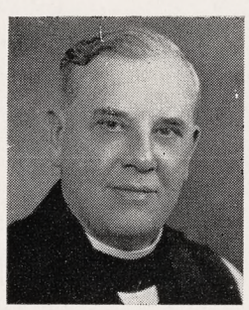
LAYREADER ADDRESSES CLERGY CONFERENCE

★ William H. Corwin, a layreader of the diocese of Rochester, was one of the headliners at the clergy conference of the diocese of Central New York, meeting Sept. 22-23, at St. Peter's, Cazenovia. He told of the recent conference at Seabury House where thirty men were trained for the every member canvass.

ARMY SEEKS MORE CHAPLAINS

★ The department of the army is appealing for 300 civilian chaplains of Protestant, Roman and Jewish groups to volunteer immediately for appointment as chaplains in the volunteer reserves.

Major General Roy H. Parker, chief of chaplains, explained that "these chaplains will be appointed to replace certain chaplains now on active duty who will soon complete their involuntary tour of service."



Chaplains who are appointed will receive a minimum of 60 days' notice before they are required to report for duty, unless a shorter notice is acceptable to the individual. The initial assignment when called to active service will normally be to the chaplain school, Fort Slocum, N. Y. for the six weeks officer basic course. The initial appointment will be the grade of lieutenant.

Applicants must be citizens of the United States, actively engaged in the civilian ministry, indorsed by their own denomination and educationally and physically qualified. While the appeal is made principally to clergy without previous military experience, applications for active service will continue to be accepted from reserve or national guard chaplains below the grade of major.

BROTHERHOOD HOLDS CONVENTION

★ Samuel S. Schmidt of York, Pa., was reelected president of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew at its convention held Sept. 14-16 at Romney, W. Va. An encouraging report of activities to enlarge the effectiveness of the organization was presented by Morton O. Mace, general secretary. During the past year seventy chapters have been chartered, compared with twenty-four last year. In furthering the work Mr. Mace has visited thirty-one dioceses, and several hundred parishes, as well as visits to seven seminaries.

CHURCHMEN IN THE NEWS: George Davidson resigns as rector of St. John's, Los Angeles, after a notable ministry; Bishop Gardner entertains Bishop Hudson at historic parish (see page three); Bishop Strider of West Virginia resumes his tasks after operations

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CLERGY CONFERENCE IN NEW YORK

★ The annual clergy conference of the diocese of New York met at West Point, September 24-27. The conference was for the clergy of the diocese of New York only. It was in the nature of a refresher school in theology and in practical techniques as applied to the whole of the Church's work in every parish and mission.

Bishop Horace W. B. Donegan presided and guided the conference in its deliberations. Among the speakers were the Rev. John Heuss, director of education of the National Council; Canon Wedel, warden of the College of Preachers; the Rev. Reuel Howe, professor of pastoral theology, Virginia Theological Seminary; the Rev. Vesper O. Ward, editor in chief of the new curriculum; Mrs. Dora Chaplin, associate editor of parent-home materials in the division of curriculum development; Miss Charlotte Tompkins, secretary of the audio-visual division of the department of education.

The clergy were the guests of Bishop Donegan throughout the conference.

TO CONSIDER FREEDOM AND RELIGION

★ Free inquiry in the modern world and its dependence on Christianity is the title of a conference to be held at Kenyon College on October 19-21. The fourth in a series of conferences on a theme of general concern, this year's conference will pay special attention to theology and to the divinity school of the college, Bexley Hall.

Speaking to an assemblage of laymen and clergy from all over the country will be the Rev. James Albert Pike, chaplain of Columbia University and chairman of the department of religion; also Prof. Amos Niven Wilder, chairman of the department of New Testament and early Christian literature, University of Chicago; Dr. Douglas Bush, professor of English at Harvard University; Dr. Richand George Salomon, professor of history and ecclesiastical history, Kenyon College; and President Gordon Keith Chalmers, Kenyon.

The current discussion of freedom in government and of freedom of discussion often assumes that the modern basis of liberty is a merely political philosophy. The conference at Kenyon will treat the Christian origins of political liberalism and the relation of Christianity to the maintenance of freedom.

EDUCATION THEME OF CONFERENCE

★ A conference on education for the diocese of Massachusetts was held Sept. 30-Oct. 3 at Grace Church, Newton, under the leadership of the Rev. Walter Williams of the National Council. Similar conferences for different areas are being held in Salem, Lawrence, New Bedford and Taunton.

EVANGELICALS HOLD CONFERENCE

★ A regional conference of the Episcopal Evangelical Fellowship was held recently at St. Paul's, Lynchburg, Va., with "Central Anglicanism" the theme. Speakers were Prof. William Clebsch and Prof. Clifford Stanley of Virginia Seminary; the Rev. Ernest A. DeBodernave of Christ Church, Philadelphia, and the Rev. Charles D. Kean, rector of Grace Church, Kirkwood, Mo., who is president of the fellowship. About 150 persons, representing eight dioceses, attended.

Announcement was made by Prof. Robert O. Kevin of Virginia Seminary that a new journal will presently be launched jointly by the Fellowship and the Evangelical Education Society. He declared that it was in no sense a rival to existing news magazines of the Church, but will be a news-letter, with one feature article interpreting some development in Church life from the point of view of the sponsoring groups.

BISHOP SHERRILL GIVES AWARDS OF MERIT

★ At a ceremony in New York, Bishop Sherrill, as president of the National Council of Churches, presented awards to five church leaders for the parts they played in founding the organization. Luther A. Weigle, dean emeritus of Yale Divinity School, topped the list which included H. N. Morse, Presbyterian; Samuel M. Cavert, general secretary of the Council; Roy G. Ross, associate secretary; Earle F. Adams, an administrative secretary.

BISHOP SCAIFE of Western New York meets with a group of young people. Also seated is the Rev. Kenneth W. Kadey, rector of St. Paul's, Harris Hill, who is youth advisor

SOUND TRUCK GETS 'EM OUT

★ At St. Thomas', Canyon City, Ore., now in its 75th year, things are beginning to pop. The vicar, the Rev. Albert E. Allen, and some of the lay members, realizing that it takes modern methods to appeal to modern people, have started to use the unusual to obtain their goals. For example, when the local weekly newspaper failed to run an article on the registrations and the opening of the vacation church school being held in Canyon City he and a couple of laymen got hold of a sound truck, and spent several hours going up one street and down the other announcing the particulars. Net result? Pretty good, we think—53 enrolled for the morning class, at the church, in Canyon City, and 33 enrolled for the afternoon class, held in the city hall, in Prairie City. In fact it was so successful that there is a full time church school in Prairie City now.

MISSIONARY RALLIES IN LOS ANGELES

★ The diocese of Los Angeles is holding twenty-three missionary rallies Sept. 30 - Oct. 5. Bishop Melcher of Brazil was the speaker last Sunday when thirty parishes with their combined choirs united for a meeting at Redlands' Bowl. Bishop William Gordon of Alaska and Bishop Hunter of Wyoming are also addressing many meetings, with all three bishops having such a packed schedule that most of the travelling is being done by air.

ANSON PHELPS STOKES IS HONORED

★ The Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, former canon of Washington Cathedral, author of "Church and State in the United States," has been named the outstanding clergyman of the year by the Washington Pilgrimage of American Churchmen. Selected as the outstanding layman was William H. Stackel of Rochester, N. Y., president of the council of churches there in 1947-48. They received their rewards on Sept. 29 at a dinner attended by over 300 men and women who were invited because they have "distinguished themselves in Christian service." Features of the three-day pilgrimage were a meeting at which government leaders discussed "religious views of contemporary statesmen" and a service at Washington Cathedral last Sunday with Bishop Dun preaching.

BISHOP DeWOLFE VISITS HOLY TRINITY

★ The congregation of Holy Trinity, Brooklyn, welcomed Bishop DeWolfe for a confirmation service, followed by a reception, on Sept. 23rd. The former rector, William Howard Melish, who acceded to the ouster by the bishop after a long legal battle ending in the Supreme Court, was unable to be present due to illness. He did however establish a mood of concord through a letter in the parish bulletin.

"We are bound together," he wrote, "not because we think alike, or because we like one man and dislike another. I love the story which has come down to us about the apostle John. When he became old and unable to enter the church alone, he was carried in by his friends and was asked to speak. All he would say was: 'Beloved, let us love one another, for love is of God.' Would that I could be with you tonight. In over forty years it has been my privilege to welcome our bishop and to present to him boys and girls, men and women, for confirmation. After three major operations, that is beyond me today. The Church, as I have said many times, is the fellowship of all who love in the service of all who suffer. We have suffered many things together. But the God of love had sustained us and will do so to the very end."

At the morning service the Rev. William H. Melish, in charge of the parish until a successor to his father is elected, praised the congregation for their loyalty. He also declared that "there are many positions today that a Christian is driven to take that are not dissimilar to positions taken by left-wingers," citing the issues of peace and race relations as examples.

Lewis G. Reynolds, senior warden, expressed the hope that the visit by Bishop DeWolfe meant the "healing of the breach between the diocese and the parish" with several members of the vestry making similar expressions.

Bishop DeWolfe told the vestry after the service that he was always within phone distance and ready to counsel them in the selection of a new minister. He also said that his present visit was standard procedure and in no way indicated that the status of the Melish case had been changed.

Last April, the younger Melish, for a number of years his father's assistant, assumed charge of the parish, pending the election of a new rector. Later the parishioners voted overwhelmingly to ask the vestry to name him as rector. However no action has been taken by the vestry up to this time.

BISHOP DeWOLFE of Long Island resumes his visits to Holy Trinity, Brooklyn

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BISHOP HOBSON FAVORS NEW YORK CITY

★ Bishop Hobson of Southern Ohio was the only mid-westerner to favor New York as headquarters for the newly formed National Council of Churches. He said it should be there because headquarters should be as close as possible to the headquarters of the member churches, most of which are in the east. The committee to select a site came to no final decision but did agree on five criteria as the basis for selection: transportation facilities and communications between denominational headquarters; accessibility to press and radio; hotel accommodations and their cost; freedom from race discrimination; availability of an adequate supply of educated and skilled office workers.

BISHOP HOBSON urges New York for headquarters

The committee will hold hearings in January to give representatives of various cities a chance to present their claims. Chicago, Cleveland, Columbus and New York got the highest votes in answers to a questionnaire submitted to 29 member Churches.

EXPANSION PROGRAM IN LOS ANGELES

★ More than a half million dollars for new buildings and land will be spent during the next thirty days by missions in the diocese of Los Angeles. The program includes new churches, parish houses, church school buildings, and land purchased in several areas where congregations are planning to build. Canon W. Clinton Billig, executive assistant to Bishop Bloy who is in charge of the program, says that new missions are first developing combination buildings which will provide church facilities while at the same time making them the center for parish gatherings and church schools. The program was stimulated by a loan to the diocese of $175,000 by the National Council last January.

WOMEN ANNOUNCE PROJECTS

★ Churchwomen of more than 80 non-Roman communions, organized in some 1,800 state and local councils, United Church Women of the National Council of Churches, will observe "world community day" on November 2. Two projects are being completed. One is the raising of an "ecumenical scholarship fund" to bring to this country young people from overseas for training for leadership in their own communities. The other is the making or collecting of blankets and warm clothing to be sent overseas through Church World Service.

PARIS WELCOMES NEW CANON

★ A reception was held at the American Pro-Cathedral of the Holy Trinity, Paris, Sept. 13th, to welcome the Rev. Arnold R. Verduin, newly appointed canon and assistant to Dean Sturgis Lee Riddle.

TEXAS SEMINARY OPENS

★ Seven men have enrolled in the newly opened seminary of the diocese of Texas. Four of them have left other professions in order to study for the ministry. They are Major Arthur Edmonds, acting head of the physics department at A. & M.; Lane Denson 3rd, who has a graduate degree in geology; Graham Paulkingham of Canada who has a graduate degree in music; the Rev. Everett G. Smith, a professor in the school of business at the University of Texas; E. H. Campbell, manager of the Chamber of Commerce of Rusk County; William Shopshire of the diocese of West Texas; David Morris of the diocese of Dallas.

They will enroll in the Austin Presbyterian Seminary. Instructors from the diocese who will be affiliated with the Presbyterian institution are the Rev. Gray M. Blandy who will teach New Testament; the Rev. Lawrence Brown, teaching Church history and the Rev. John Holt, teaching Old Testament. Administrative officers are Bishop Hines, president, and Mr. Blandy, dean.

TRAINING TEAM ON EDUCATION

★ The leadership training team of the department of education of the National Council has started its fall itinerary. The Rev. Walter Williams, Mary L. Villaret and Eleanor Snyder lead the caravan of panel truck and station wagon which is setting up conferences to discuss plans and problems and to display available materials. The schedule calls for 35 stops between Sept. 19 and January 21. After seven stops in Massachusetts the group moves south for conferences in Dallas, North Texas and West Texas.

LAYMAN LEADS TEXAS CONFERENCE

★ Bertram Parker of Corpus Christi was the headliner at the laymen's conference of the diocese of Texas, meeting at Camp Allen, Sept. 22-23. He is a member of the national committee on laymen's work and chairman of that work in the seventh province. Bishop Quin addressed the laymen on work on the diocesan level and Bishop Hines on work in parishes.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BISHOP THOMAS IS DEAD

★ Bishop William Thomas, missionary bishop of Southern Brazil from 1928 to 1949 when he retired, died at Bethesda, Maryland, September 18. He gave to the Church's work in Brazil his entire life as priest, suffragan bishop and bishop. A native of Mattapany, Maryland, he graduated from the Virginia Theological Seminary in 1904, and was ordained to the diaconate the same year. In 1905 he was ordained priest by the late Bishop Lucian Lee Kinsolving. For six years he was a professor in the theological school at Rio Grande do Sul, and from 1907 to 1911 was also rector of the Church of the Saviour there. In 1912 he founded the Southern Cross School at Porte Alegre, of which he was headmaster until his election and consecration as suffragan bishop in 1925. He was elected missionary bishop in 1928, continuing in active service to the time of his retirement.

One of the most important achievements of Bishop Thomas, aside from his pioneering in education in Brazil, was his work toward the division of the great district into three missionary dioceses, each with its bishop, two of the three bishops being Brazilians. This was accomplished by the General Convention of 1949.

DANIEL BAKER COLLEGE HAS OPENING

★ Daniel Baker College, Brownwood, Texas, began its second year of operation as an Episcopal college on September 12th. The enrollment shows a slight decrease in numbers over last year, as a result of the national situation. But the enrollment shows a sizeable increase of Episcopalian students from a wide state and out of state coverage. Seventeen states, two foreign possessions, and one foreign country are represented in the student body. From within Texas, students are enrolled from 12 cities, representing four of the five Texas dioceses.

There are sixteen Postulants enrolled from the dioceses of Dallas, Texas, Northern Indiana, Harrisburg, Erie, Milwaukee, Puerto Rico, Georgia, South Florida, and Honolulu.

The church work training program, started this year under the direction of Deaconess Katharina Putnam of the college faculty has an enrollment of six students: four freshmen and two juniors, from Wisconsin, Michigan, Washington, District of Columbia, Texas, and Venezuela. Additional enrollments for the spring semester are on file at present for this program.

The college begins this year a five-year campaign on a state wide basis for $2,500,000 for capital endowment and buildings.

MARRIAGE REUNION SERVICE

★ The Rev. Reginald M. Field conducted a married couple's reunion service last Sunday at Trinity Church, Albany, N. Y., with all of the principals of the 150 weddings where he has officiated invited to attend. In addition to brides and grooms, he invited other principals—bridesmaids, ushers, best men.

LESLIE GLENN HEADS NEW GROUP

★ The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn, rector of St. John's, Washington, is sharing the chairmanship with Rabbi Jerome M. Pines of Bethesda, Md., of the newly organized Religious Committee for Federation of the Democracies. Its purpose is "to conduct an educational program among clergymen and religious organizations on the need of a federal union of the democracies in order to combat the dangers of war and Communist aggression."

PSYCHIATRIST STRESSES ROLE OF FAITH

★ Can a "religious experience" cure a mentally-ill person? A prominent Montreal psychiatrist was asked that question when he addressed alumni of the United Theological College. After long thought, the psychiatrist, Dr. George E. Reed, medical superintendent of the Verdun Protestant Hospital for the mentally ill, made his reply.

A religious experience is one of the few things that might help a mentally-ill person, he said, but the most effective role of religion in regard to mental illness is a preventative one. He added that clergymen could help prevent mental breakdowns by helping people toward "spiritual faith that will give the only security that exists—moral security."

CORNERSTONES LAID FOR NEW CHURCHES

★ Bishop Scaife of Western New York recently laid cornerstones for two churches in the Buffalo area: the Advent at Kenmore, and Calvary at Williamsville. The cost of each church is about $175,000.

LAYMEN MEET IN CONNECTICUT

★ John E. Quarles, business man of Wellesley, Mass., was the leader at a conference of laymen of Connecticut that met over the weekend of September 29th to consider the work of the Church. They will then present it before parish groups in the diocese. Mr. Quarles was one of the group of thirty men recently trained at Seabury House. Also addressing the Connecticut laymen were Bishop Hatch and the Rev. Ralph D. Read, executive secretary of the diocese, who spoke of the work on a diocesan level.

LAYMEN HELP OUT THE CURATE

★ The men of St. Matthew's Church, Evanston, decided last week that their curate's house needed painting. So 28 of them spent all day doing just that. The whole job was finished by supper time. One mishap occurred. A can of paint fell on the head of the senior warden. But it really didn't matter, for his wife said "I'm only concerned with getting him cleaned up now."

EDITORIALS

Speak For Peace

IN these mad days of hysteria, when the official Church tends more and more to give religious sanction to everything done by the brass of the Pentagon, it is nice to be able to report that at least a handful of Episcopalians met over the Labor Day weekend to consider our foreign policy in the light of Christian truth. They gathered as members of the Episcopal Pacifist Fellowship, with Pastor Andre Trocme of France as their leader and with Bishop Lawrence of Western Massachusetts the chaplain. They spent their hours considering the theological basis of pacifism and "Steps to Peace," the recent analysis of the U. S. foreign policy issued by the Quakers. At the end of the conference the forty or fifty Church leaders present unanimously adopted a statement. We do not consider it either profound or startling, but it is so much better than anything to come from any recent gathering of Church people that we hope our readers will give it the study that it deserves. The statement:

Recalling our Lord's saying that the light of the body is the eye, and that the whole body is full of darkness if the eye does not function, we believe that the Church today is called to be the eye which gives light to so many peoples who "... are here as on a darkling plain

Swept with confused alarms of struggle and flight,
Where ignorant armies clash by night."

Remembering also Jesus' warning against "certain who trusted in themselves that they were righteous, and despised others," the first word which came to us, as American churchmen, was our need for humility and repentance.

With regard to principles of procedure in the handling of international affairs, it seems to us that the power of the Pentagon should at all times be subordinate to that of the State Department, the President and Congress. We also believe that policies of the United Nations should not be pressured by Russia or the United States, or the nationalism of any government. The Church, we think, should endeavor to bring into public view the full light of the gospel as applied to specific current issues under guidance of the Holy Spirit. Since the fate of millions of God's children depends upon the correct solution of many of these problems, the Church should formulate and follow a program for its action as the Church, that is compatible with the mind of Christ.

Asknowledging our liability to error in attempting to point a way through the pitfalls which beset the East-West conflict, we are nevertheless constrained to make known our convictions about certain immediate issues. We hope that they may be shared by a larger circle of citizens and be put before the appropriate governmental authorities. We believe:

One; That the need of stopping the spread of war is so urgent that it should not be sacrificed for considerations of military strategy, such as insistance on a boundary other than the 38th parallel in Korea.

Two; That in all the treaty arrangements to be made with Japan no pressure should be put upon her to rearm or to give military bases to another nation, thus violating the spirit of the peace articles of Japan's constitution.

Three; That the efforts being made to induce Western Germany to rearm should be abandoned; also that the Eastern and Western Zones should be reunited into a single unarmed country.

Four; That since the exclusion of any government from the United Nations' endeavors to win peace by conference, conciliation and consent seems to us wrong in principle, the de facto government of Communist China should be admitted tc membership in the United Nations.

Five; That the United States should propose a bold new plan to break the disarmament deadlock, possibly along the lines of Senator McMahon's proposals.

"Quotes"

BY maintaining a hands-off policy towards all effort for social amelioration, the Church perpetuates the injustices of the moment and sanctifies the status quo as, somehow, God's will for the hour. Its total pessimism blinds it to the possibilities for achieving relative justice in any given situation, though such achievement is always precarious and threatened by dissolution. Ironically enough, by refusing to relate itself positively to the social struggle, the Church puts its very existence in peril. Where the Church refuses to offer Christian leadership to the masses, Satan raises up his own, which proceeds to muffle the voice of the Church to a whisper. This is the lesson of the totalitarian state. A Church that is negatively related to the struggles of history can neither be salt nor light to the world.

—CULBERT G. RUTENBER

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

We realize that extreme difficulties lie in the way of carrying out the foregoing proposals, but we believe that God continually comes into human life for the fulfillment of his objectives. His way of uniting opponents summons us to the practice of undiscouraged patience and long-suffering perseverance. But if we suffer for God's purposes, we know where the ultimate victory will lie.

A Famous Ecclesiastical Law Suit

BY
WILLIAM A. ROBERTSON
Layman of Grace Church, Orange, N. J.

LAST year marked the one hundredth anniversary of the determination of one of the most famous ecclesiastical law suits ever decided by an English court. The case was that of Gorham vs. The Bishop of Exeter. It involved a question of infant baptism, and it arose under the following circumstances.

Prior to 1847, the Rev. George C. Gorham, a clergyman of the Church of England, was living in the diocese of Exeter. In 1847, he was presented by the Crown to the parish of Brampford Speke in that diocese. The bishop of the diocese, Doctor Henry Phillpotts, refused to institute Mr. Gorham into his new post because of his views on the subject of infant baptism. Mr. Gorham believed that baptism, when administered to an infant, did not convey grace to the recipient because of lack of understanding at so tender an age. He did not decline or refuse to administer the sacrament to an infant, but simply believed that it was a mere formal act.

After an extended correspondence between the Bishop and Mr. Gorham, and an oral examination of Mr. Gorham lasting eight days, the Bishop still declined to institute; and Mr. Gorham then commenced a suit in the ecclesiastical court called the Court of Arches. The court was asked to order the bishop to make the institution, or to, itself, perform such an act. A book written by Mr. Gorham constituted the record before the court. The judge of that court bore the title of dean of the Arches, and was a very distinguished international lawyer named Sir Herbert Jenner Fust. Eminent counsel appeared on both sides. The decision of the court was long and able in favor of the bishop, because Mr. Gorham's views were deemed to be not in accordance with the laws of the Church of England. Mr. Gorham then appealed to the highest ecclesiastcial tribunal possible to him, namely the judicial committee of her Majesty's Privy Council.

The judicial committee is, in reality, a court of great eminence and importance in civil cases, as well as ecclesiastical. Though called a committee, it really acts as a court of last resort in giving advice to the Crown for deciding appeals in cases where the common law courts of England are without jurisdiction. The Crown always adopts the recommendation made to it, never assuming to substitute its own judgment for that of the committee.

Noted Jurists

WHEN the Gorham appeal came on for hearing, it was listened to by some of England's most eminent lawyers and jurists, who composed the judicial committee. Among these were the following: Lord Chief Justice Campbell, of the Court of Queen's Bench; Baron Parke, afterward Lord Wensleydale, one of the greatest judges of the nineteenth century; Mr. Pemberton Leigh, a famous equity lawyer, who afterwards became Yord Kingsdom; Doctor Stephen Lushington, a great admiralty and equity lawyer; Lord Langdale, the Master of the Rolls, a position which made him the second highest equity judge in the land, next to the Lord Chancellor. There were also present the Vice Chancellor, Sir James Lewis Knight Bruce; and by special request of her Majesty the Queen, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Archbishop of York, and the Bishop of London, Doctor Bromfield. The argument consumed three days.

The decision of the committee was written by Lord Langdale, whose name was Henry Bickersteth. He belonged to the same family as Rev. Edward H. Bickersteth, the author of some of our beautiful hymns. The decision resulted in a victory for Mr. Gorham, and a reversal of the decision of the Arches Court. The decision is a masterpiece of fine judicial reasoning.

After stating the views of Mr. Gorham on the subject, as best the committee were able to understand them, Lord Langdale says: "These being, as we collect them, the opinions of Mr. Gorham, the question which we have to decide is, not whether they are theologically sound or unsound —not whether upon some of the doctrines comprised in the opinions, other opinions opposite to them may or may not be held with equal or even greater reason by other learned and pious ministers of the Church—but whether these opinions now under our consideration are contrary or repugnant to the doctrines which the Church of England, by its articles, formularies, and rubrics, requires to be held by its ministers, so that, upon the ground of those opinions, the appellant can lawfully be excluded from the benefice to which he has been presented."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Gorham vs. Bishop of Exeter, The Jurist, Vol. 50 (1850), Pt. 1, p. 449.

In conclusion, after showing that the Church of England had never made any final determination on the subject of infant baptism, though always providing for it in practice and commending it, his Lordship shows that the whole subject is one as to which some of the most eminent clergymen of the Church have never been in agreement. He cites very distinguished names of men whose authority stood very high. The conclusion was, therefore, that a clergyman was at liberty to hold his own particular views, one way or the other, because the Church had left the matter open. The Bishop of London and the Vice Chancellor Knight-Bruce dissented from the majority opinion, but filed no opinion of their own.

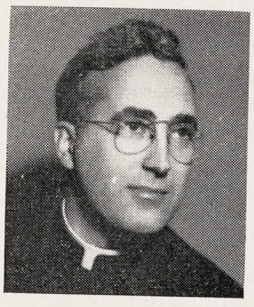
Great Controversy

THE rendition of this decision created a tremendous and violent discussion and dissension among both clergy and laity, which lasted for years. Mr. Gladstone himself took part in this. The number of pamphlets written was about eighty. The high Church party was particularly angry that such a doctrinal question should have been decided by a law court. The Bishop of Exeter himself vainly sought to secure a writ of prohibition from one of the regular law courts, so as to prevent the judgment being carried out. Applications were made to the Court of Queens Bench, the Court of Common Pleas, and the Court of Exchequer. No one of these tribunals would grant the writ. Even the Court of Arches itself felt in a peculiar position, at being ordered to institute a clergyman into a benefice over the protest of the bishop of the diocese. The court consulted the Archbishop of Canterbury on this point. But that official saw no difficulty in proceeding, and finally Mr. Gorham was duly instituted into the position of vicar or rector of the parish of Brampford Speke.

The Bishop of Exeter, however, wrote a severe rebuke to the Archbishop of Canterbury denouncing all that had been done.

The decision of the Privy Council was followed by the departure from the Church of England of many who held high Church views, such persons joining the Roman Catholic Church.

It is pleasant to record that the Bishop of Exeter did not harbor any ill will to his opponent, but contributed money to a fund to put the parish church of Brampford Speke in repair.



Religion and the Mind

BY

CLINTON J. KEW

A SENSE OF GUILT

"IN the past three years I have been feeling guilty. Yet I don't know what I am guilty of. I have joined three churches recently, but they have not helped me. Why do I have a sense of guilt?" A man of about 60 has asked this question.

First of all, let us consider guilt. It is a variety of anxiety. It is a form of fear, even though the feared object is not discernable. Guilt feelings arise from the demands of the conscience. For instance, a man has forgotten to do an errand for his neighbor, and while his friend will not know about it for several days, his guilt feelings persist. Why? Something within him has told him that he has done something wrong. This uncomfortable feeling has been stirred up by his own inner standards which make up his conscience.

Dr. Freud has told us that we inherit a rudimentary conscience. To this we add all the teachings and feelings of our parents, the school, and the church. Our total set of values which we have assimilated in our growth is called conscience.

Our minds are divided into two parts: conscience and unconscience. Our conscience has its conscious and its unconscious parts too. To all this we add reason when we make a decision. When people pray, "we have done those things which we ought not to have done," we are dealing with our conscience. When we have a sense of guilt like the man who asked the question above, we don't know why it exists because it is largely in the unconscious mind. In Psalm 19:12 we find an excellent illustration: "O cleanse thou me from my secret faults." Here the psalmist asks to be cleansed of those faults which are unknown to him, that is, those of which he is not conscious. "Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins," is the next sentence. Here he prays to be delivered from willful faults, those of which he is conscious.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

These values which have been absorbed on the infantile level often persist throughout life. Very often adults will become sensitive about faults which their parents were critical of when they were growing up. An elderly woman said recently, "I should be guilty, I am having a good time." This woman had been brought up in a narrow, puritanical home. Her utterance undoubtedly expressed a vague sense of guilt concerning guilt feeling from another time and place. During her early life she was not supposed to enjoy life too much as it was sinful.

Certain individuals feel guilty even when their reason has long since informed them that they are forgiven. "Confession does not relieve me of my sense of guilt," a woman remarked recently. As indicated above, a "sense of guilt" differs from conscious guilt. A childish, infantile conscience does not accept forgiveness even when reason does. The residue of the past gets in the way and makes forgiveness almost impossible. The capacity for self-criticism is inherent in human beings. If parents make their children feel unnecessarily guilty, this "carry-over" conscience will interfere with normal life when they grow older.

In these days of tension and frustration, the greatest cause of a sense of guilt is due to internalized hostility which turns on the self. A person keeps it in his unconscious; he doesn't let it out; he feels resentful to the world; and he believes that life hasn't been fair to him. Instead of accepting life as he finds it, he becomes resentful of it. This internalized resentment comes out in the form of depression and a sense of guilt. This is difficult for people to understand. The infantile part of the conscience, charged with guilt from another time and place, often is touched off by incidents; such as, the death of a loved one. If this happens the grief will be prolonged.

People with a healthy conscience will never have a neurosis. Conscience still plays a tremendous part in the emotional and mental illnesses of people. It is our job to cultivate normal, healthy consciences in the lives of our children and to recognize our own faults. A deep feeling of peace comes to those who are at peace with their conscience. Religious penance, confession and understanding help us resolve our guilt feelings. Many great souls have been made as the result of the fiery furnace of guilt. Religion helps us to resolve our guilt and thus set into operation those forces which make for culture and morality.

Questions should be addressed to Mr. Kew at St. Luke's Church, S. Fullerton Ave. & Union St., Montclair, N. J.

Future of Free Catholicism

BY CHAD WALSH
Professor at Beloit College

CHANGES IN PROTESTANTISM

I happen to have a good many contacts with Protestants of various denominations, and increasingly I have become aware that many of them feel that the Reformation, while doubtless godly, was too thorough; that a part of the basic Christian heritage was lost in the passion of housecleaning. Sometimes this realization does not reach the point of being definitely expressed in words; rather, the feeling is revealed by widespread changes that are going on in Protestant liturgical practices. Perhaps some of them will sound trivial to you, as though they spring more from esthetic than theological concerns. But I would not dismiss them too quickly. I think they betoken a deepest dissatisfaction, and that they point toward the eventual rediscovery of the full catholic faith. I have in mind the large number of Protestant churches which now have the divided chancel and are altar-centered; the increasing use of candles, crosses, and other aids to worship; the markedly more liturgical nature of worship as set forth in the service books recently prepared by many denominations. For example, one of the Presbyterian morning services is almost identical with matins, and one of their communion services is very close in structure to ours. Most amazing of all, the new Congregational manual for worship makes provision for a nuptial mass, though it is not called by that fighting name.

I know of one Methodist church where every Sunday, at nine o'clock, the minister says what we would call low mass; he even uses the common cup. Perhaps most significant of all is the Iona Movement in the Church of Scotland, which is endeavoring to revive the Church calendar and symbolism, and establish holy communion as the usual form of Sunday worship. Already this movement has attracted a good deal of attention in American Presbyterian circles.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

If any Protestant tendencies in a Catholic direction were confined to liturgical practices I might be inclined to write them off as superficial, but the liturgical unrest is matched by a genuine theological revival. Protestant liberalism is definitely on the way out. In most cases it is being replaced by neo-orthodoxy, with its emphatic belief in the sovereignty of God, the reality of sin, and the Incarnation and Atonement. It is true that neo-orthodoxy, as developed by Barth, Brunner and Niebuhr, has rather a Calvinistic flavor, and says all too little about the nature of the Church, its sacraments, and its ministry. Even so, it represents a very long step away from vague "Golden Rule liberalism" and toward the fullness of the Christian faith.

Our Special Mission

THE Episcopal Church has a special mission toward the Protestants. We need to bear witness, by the life of our own Church, that catholic and evangelical are not contradictory terms, and that a catholic framework and spirit can be flexible enough to permit a very large degree of individual liberty; in other words, that catholicism can be dynamic and free. But we need to do more than this. We need to rub shoulders with Protestants, both clerical and lay. The contact won't hurt us any. Protestants don't bite. Coming in contact with the challenge of their outlook won't do us any harm. The more I see of Protestantism, the more precious our catholicism seems to me; but at the same time, I get a renewed appreciation for the evangelical spirit and want it to flourish vigorously within a sturdy catholic framework. And what can we contribute to make it a two-way exchange? We can answer innumerable questions; we can explain how it is possible for a Church to be both Protestant and Catholic; we can be on hand when any Protestant shows catholic twinges, and help him develop to the utmost the latent catholic elements in his own tradition.

Will this ever reach the point where actual Church union or at least intercommunion will be possible? I believe it will, though it may not be in the lifetime of any of us. The apostolic succession is the most obvious stumbling block, but with the passage of time I doubt that it will loom any larger to many Protestants than the altar-centered church or the frequent celebration of holy communion does to many of them now. One thing leads to another. Catholicism is all of one piece. If the Protestant Churches gradually acquire an awareness of the Church as the mystical body of Christ, if they come to a more objective understanding of the sacraments, if they begin to see that worship should be centered in the altar, not the pulpit—then, and perhaps only then, they will be able to see how the historic ministry fits into the total picture.

Expression of Hope

If we hold back, if we barricade ourselves in our small corner of the Christian world, it is because we are strong on sanctus bells, incense, and vestments, but weak on the theological virtues. To mingle with the Protestants in friendship, and legitimate cooperation is a manifestation first of all of faith—faith in the power of God to overcome the divisions of Christendom, faith that he is quietly working to restore the wholeness of the Church and its doctrine, and that he is willing to use the least of us in his holy work.

Contact with Protestants is also an expression of hope — the belief that the seemingly impossible is a clear possibility when God is in the picture. Most of all, it is an expression of charity, of agape—of the same sort of love that our Lord revealed when he let no barriers of religion, class, or social opinion hinder him from mingling freely with every human being who crossed his path.

The more catholic-minded portion of the Anglican communion is sometimes accused of being too theological in viewpoint. I would say that we are not theological enough. We need to preach and cultivate and practice the theological virtues, until they become a part of our blood and flesh and bones. The minutiae of ritual and discipline, no matter how important, are secondary to this. When the theological virtues become an ardent reality, such a power will be generated that other things will take care of themselves. Love in particular is so great a magnet that it will draw all men toward it. After they are attracted, they will learn quickly enough the meaning and importance of the faith that we profess and the way of worship that we practice. "Though I have the gift of prophecy and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge: and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing . . . And now abideth faith, hope, and charity; these three; but the greatest of these is charity."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Entwhistle Visits His Seminary

BY
THOMAS V. BARRETT
Rector of R. E. Lee Memorial Church, Lexington, Va.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

"I'M off to the seminary," said the Rev. Samuel Entwhistle, as he kissed his wife Isabel goodbye. "If you need any help with anything, Lord Nelson will be around. I'll be back Thursday."

"Have a good time," Isabel said. "I'm sure it will do you good. You need some rest."

"I need inspiration," Samuel retorted trying to look uninspired. "Sorry to leave you alone with the altar guild dinner, but it will be the first time I've heard the annual Underdonk lecture for fifteen years."

"Heavens," said Isabel, "it sounds like something you do to a doughnut." Good bye . . ."

When Samuel arrived at the seminary he felt at least five years younger. It was a day fresh with the first smell of spring. His imagination back-tracked twenty years, and he remembered how fine it had been to go to early communion when spring first came to the yard after the dark winter mornings. A shadow of regret touched for a moment his benign spirit and made him feel five years older. "Ah those were the days when I was filled with a real piety . . . and zeal," he thought to himself. "At the time I hardly realized the joy of being here, among believing Christians, all with a common purpose." He sighed wistfully, and felt ten years older.

As he approached the entrance of Wipple Hall where a room had been assigned to him, a seminarian with a low forehead and a somber eye appeared in the doorway. He looked at Samuel with somber disdain.

"Good morning," Samuel boomed heartily. "Lovely morning."

"G'mng," the seminarian gritted looking somberly at Samuel's knees. He finally raised his head, gave Samuel a pitying look and moved off up the path.

"Mmm," Mr. Entwhistle murmured to himself, "a problem case; or perhaps a neo-orthodox." He entered the dark hall, stopped to recall whether room 17 was to the right or left. Two more seminarians drifted toward him, intent in conversation.

"Of course," said one, "what Paul probably meant to say was . . ."

"Good morning," interrupted Samuel cheerfully. "I'm Samuel Entwhistle, Church of the Tribulation, Middleville. Could you tell me where room 17 is?"

"Next to the last door, Father. On the left," said the second seminarian, looking with disapproval at Samuel's anglican vest.

"Back for the Underdonk lectures," Number One asked with magnificent disinterest.

"Yes . . ." said Samuel somewhat ashamed, but unable to figure out why. Surely the Underdonk lectures hadn't become improper.

"Are you in Bishop Plump's diocese?" asked Number Two.

"No, Bishop Eiderdown's," said Samuel.

"Did you attend Bishop Plump's consecration?"

Samuel shook his head negatively.

"I did. Beautiful service. Everything done correctly. Bishop Plump wore full regalia. Do you know Father Hardline? I'm sure you'd like him. He's vice-president of the B. M. M. It's making tremendous headway in the southwest Father Oswald says."

"What's the B. M. M.?" Samuel asked, feeling definitely ashamed.

The seminarian looked quite shocked.

"Why the Back to Mariolatry Movement. You must have heard of it."

"Oh yes," Samuel agreed absently, thinking of Bishop Plump filling out his full regalia.

"As I was saying," said Number One to Number Two, "it's too bad Paul didn't consider the full implications of his position. Father Egbert says that women should wear hats in church because . . ."

"What time is lunch," Samuel asked rudely.

"One," said Number Two . . . "do you have Tenebrae at the Tribulation?"

Mr. Entwhistle scratched his mind trying to remember what tenebrae was. We must have it, he thought. We have everything else at the Tribulation. It had something to do with Shrove Tuesday or Maundy Thursday. He wasn't sure which. The best defense is a good offense, he told himself.

"No, but we have a rip-snorting pancake supper on Shrove Tuesday . . . put on by the Men's Club." Samuel beamed.

The seminarians nodded coldly, and moved on out of the building. Samuel shrugged, shuddered slightly and walked to room 17. He thought he caught a faint swell of incense in the corridor. He knocked timidly on the door, wondering if he might be interrupting a special service. The door was opened by a tall young man whose appearance reminded Samuel of a mole just coming up to the sunlight after a struggle with the roots of an elm tree.

"Good morning. I'm Samuel Entwhistle. They told me I was to . . . I was assigned to this room. If there's a mistake . . ."

"Come in," said the pale youth softly. "It's quite all right. This is my room but I'm moving over to Pearson Hall." Samuel stepped into the sanctuary. It reminded him of the Green Pastures Funeral Home.

"I guess you gentlemen are to room here together. The couch is quite comfortable."

Samuel peered through a light smog of what smelled like the smoke of burning sandalwood and saw a man his own age sprawling on the couch.

"I'm afraid I've forgotten your names," the youth stammered.

"Jerry Black," said the man, climbing to his feet. "Aren't you Entwhistle? Thought a remembered you. Two classes after yours. Read about you in the Witness the other day."

"Ah of course," said Samuel shaking hands. He tried vainly to remember Black. The shades of the windows were pulled down against the spring sunshine. It was rather difficult to distinguish the man's features.

"Well, I'll run along," young pale face twittered. "Hope you're comfortable here. If I can help . . ." He nodded and glided from the room. Samuel looked around, sniffed, and fixed his eyes glassily on a fierce Persian rug tapestry that half covered a wall. In front of it was a small shrine with a statue of some unidentified saint, illuminated by three candles.

"Exotic, isn't it," remarked Rev. Black. "There's another in the bedroom if this seems too much in the baroque tradition. Pure Gothic."

"It's dark in here isn't it?" Samuel asked, half whispering as he peered into a twilight bedroom.

Rev. Black looked shocked. "It's supposed to be dark. It's a catacomb—or a crypt; I haven't figured which. There's probably an old martyr entombed under the couch."

"What are the three candles for?" Samuel asked, realizing he ought to know.

"You've heard of the Trinity, no doubt?"

"Hmm," said Mr. Entwhistle, "but . . . but ..."

"Your guess is as good as mine," Mr. Black shrugged. "What else could it mean? Unless we're in a pawn shop."

Samuel reached for a Chesterfield. Rev. Black coughed with a faint tone of disapproval.

"Do you think smoking is permissible in here?" He cocked an eyebrow. Samuel grinned, raised a window shade, then the window. He inhaled deeply first of the cigarette; then of the spring breeze that drifted into the room.

"Better watch out," Mr. Black warned, lighting a Camel. "You'll lose the fine flavor of Byzantium, and all the mystery of the ancient east."

"It's stuffy in here," Samuel complained. Mr. Black sniffed with appreciation. "Not if you like opium," he answered.

"I can't understand," Samuel began. "On such a glorious spring day . . ."

"Let's get out of here," said Rev. Black. He stopped at the door, turned and gave Samuel a sinister look.

"Szhall we go to ze Casbah?" he asked with a leer.

Later on, after dinner, Samuel's spirits rose a few notches. He saw several alumni he hadn't met for years, and a few of his favorite faculty members. He began to look upon seminary life from a broader viewpoint. After all, he told himself, the boys were young and hadn't really had time to mellow. But after all, they were a fine upstanding group, and seemed to be deeply inspired with a real zeal. At evensong Gordon Quince Bunce of Old Danes' Church preached an eloquent sermon on the social responsibility of the Christian priest. Samuel had a proper awe for Gordon Quince Bunce. Everybody knew Gordon Quince Bunce was probably the best preacher in the whole Church. Samuel began to feel quite inspired. Then he overtook a small knot of seminarians on the chapel steps.

"Sheer sentimentalism . . ."

"Did you hear him call the Holy Spirit IT?"

"Father Rector thinks Gordon Quince Bunce is over-rated."

"He didn't even mention the problems in Romans VII in his second point."

"Weak stuff theologically, I'd say. The whole thing was terribly Nestorian."

"And unaware of the enormous influence of Nazianzus."

"Well, I thought he was pretty good in what he said about the necessity of decision."

"Not bad . . . but his interpretation of Christian fortitude. Sheer Pelagianism. The trouble is he's probably not read a book since he got out of here. Some of these old boys ought to retire."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Mr. Entwhistle eased off into the night feeling old, ignorant and quite uninspired. Later in the evening he and Black tried a conversation with three seminarians and the new instructor in Ascetic Theology and Liturgics. The discourse didn't seem to make much progress. One seminarian kept talking about the grass-root movement toward a valid ecumenical encounter; a second one persisted in using a private language which seemed to be based fundamentally on words like charisma, the kerygma, the concrete existential situation, and the dynamic paradox of history. Or was it the paradox of dynamic history, or perhaps the history of dynamic paradoxes, or maybe even the paradox of historical dynamics. Samuel couldn't quite remember. The professor of ascetic theology quoted long passages from Pascal and suggested the parish communion as the most workable cure for international tensions. The third seminarian was quite clearly a pure example of the neurotic personality of our time, Samuel thought. He brooded in a corner and tried only twice to enter the conversation by saying, "Of course Canon Quirck says . . ." Samuel never found out what Canon Quirck did say, as the others were evidently allergic to Quirck and pressed on vigorously after the charisma of the existential ecumenical kerygma. As for Rev. Black, Samuel felt that he wasn't really trying to hold up the intellectual honor of the old grads. Black tried five times, without success, to find out from somebody if the Giants were ever going to win another pennant. The complete evasion of his question pushed him back into a brooding, profound and silent meditation. At ten thirty the seance broke up and Black came out of his reverie.

"Come on Entwhistle," he muttered. "Let's go back to our existential nest and see if we can have a valid ecumenical encounter."

"I don't believe," said Samuel smugly, on the way to their room, "that you have the faintest idea what a kerygma is."

"Tell me," Black said.

"Well," Samuel began, knitting his brows in thought. "I'm not quite positive myself. But from the way they spoke, I judge it's that doohickey thing worn over the left arm when in full regalia."

"Did you get all inspired?" asked Isabel, greeting Samuel at the door of the rectory.

"My dear," said the Rev. Samuel Entwhistle, "you've no idea. It was positively exhilirating."

"What happened?"

"Anything in the refrigerator, my dear?" countered Samuel setting down his suitcase.

"Some cold chicken," Isabel said proceeding to the kitchen. "What happened?"

"Well, to begin with I met a fine chap named Black. Real down to earth sort of person. Knew him slightly in seminary. He's at Booville, Kansas. We sort of hung around together. Shared a room. You should have seen the room."

"Was it pleasant?"

Samuel pursed his lips. "In a way, yes. You know the lounge downstairs at the Bijou theatre?"

"You mean the one with the swans and rhododendrons all over the wall and the fawn over the drinking fountain?"

"That's supposed to be Pan." Mr. Entwhistle bit into a chicken wing.

"You mean your room was like that?"

"Somewhat. There was a little shrine . . . statue of Saint Kerygma. Or somebody. No light. I mean windows closed, shades down, smelled of incense. Like a harem."

"Samuel, when were you in a harem?" Isabel inquired sweetly. "How was Underdonk?"

"Who?"

"Underdonk. You know, the lectures."

"Oh that," muttered Samuel around the corner of the chicken wing.

"Tell little Isabel all," Mrs. Entwhistle demanded skeptically.

"Well to tell you the truth," said Samuel, "we . . . we . . . didn't get to the lectures."

"WHAT? I thought that's what you went for."

"Well, it was . . . but you see . . . it was such nice weather . . . and that room we had . . . so gloomy . . . candles . . . opium . . . saints all around . . . so Black thought . . . nice fellow Black . . . he thought since it was such a lovely day . . . it was really too nice to stay inside that little shrine affair . . . and we really got in for the best part of the program . . . fine sermon by Gordon Quince Bunce . . . very inspiring. So the next day . . . well, we thought perhaps the lectures might be a little . . . dry . . . and Oh shucks, my dear," Samuel said smiling broadly, "it was tremendously inspiring . . . full of existential kerygma . . . or charisma . . . the Yankees beat the Indians. Double header."

"You great big cheat," Isabel said.

"Furthermore," Mr. Entwhistle went on, "I feel quite confident that the Holy Spirit escaped to the stadium before we did."

"No doubt," Isabel remarked reaching for a drumstick.

"And," her husband raised a forefinger in warning, "if you ever hear me threaten to go back for an Underdonk lecture in the next fifteen years I would appreciate it if you would just say 'catacombs' with a rising inflection."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

CONFERENCE ON ALCOHOLISM

★ A conference on alcoholism as a problem confronting the parish priest is to be held at North Conway, N. H., October 8-9, to which all clergy of New England have been invited. There are to be panels with various experts taking part, dealing with physiological, psychological, and social points of view in relation to alcoholism. There will also be an exhibit of literature dealing with the subject.

MANY NOMINATED FOR MILWAUKEE

★ When the convention of the diocese of Milwaukee meets on October 8th to elect a coadjutor a lively time is expected. The committee on nominations is offering the names of 29 men whom they consider qualified for the position. They are Bishop Boynton, suffragan of New York, Bishop Voegeli of Haiti, and the following Reverends: G. B. Armstrong, E. A. Batchelder, Victor Lolle, E. B. Bosshard, B. G. Buley, J. V. Butler Jr., Daniel Corrigan, A. J. du Bois, James M. Duncan, Donald Hallock, John Heuss, John Higgins, Alden Kelley, Howard Kennedy, F. W. Lickfield, Clarence Lund, Charles S. Martin, K. D. Martin, Malcolm Maynard, J. B. Midworth, Joseph Minnis, J. O. Patterson, James A. Pike, W. C. R. Sheridan, Killard Stimpson, G. F. White, Lawson Willard.

FEAST OF HARVEST IN SYRACUSE

★ The annual feast of harvest was held September 23 at Calvary, Syracuse, N. Y., with Bishop Campbell, superior of the Order of the Holy Cross, the guest of honor. On the 27th Bishop Campbell conducted a healing service.

MAYOR LaGUARDIA MEMORIAL

★ A memorial service for the late Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia was held at his grave on September 23. Officiating was the Rev. Gerald V. Barry, rector of Christ Church, Riverdale, where the former mayor was a communicant.

BISHOP SALINAS y VELASCO of Mexico entertained a youth group from the southwest: Harriet Anderson, the Bishop, Joyce Anderson, the Rev. C. C. Stutzer, Vincent Reese. Kneeling: John Cassady, Terry Moore, Jim Paget

BISHOP DONEGAN DEDICATES

★ Bishop Donegan of New York is to dedicate a processional cross this coming Sunday which was given in honor of the rector, the Rev. Roelif Brooks. That afternoon he goes to Chappaqua where he dedicates the new parish house of the Church of St. Mary the Virgin. The Rev. Howard D. Perkins is rector.

BISHOP HUANG ACCEPTS POST IN WASHINGTON

★ Bishop K. Y. Huang of China has accepted the position of associate rector of St. Stephen's and the Incarnation, Washington, D. C.

Publishers of Fine Books for over Four Centuries

The Scriptures in perspective

The SHORTER Oxford Bible

Edited by G. W. BRIGGS, G. B. CAIRD and NATHANIEL MICKLEM

The SHORTER OXFORD BIBLE makes it possible to read the Bible as a consecutive, coherent story. It is ideal for school and study groups. The text is printed the full width of the page, with subtitles and chapter references. It includes all the most frequently consulted passages from the Old and New Testaments and the Apocrypha skillfully edited . . . chronologically arranged . . . carefully annotated with short introductions for each major section. With suggested syllabus. 480 pages. 2 maps.

"The Oxford shortened edition of the Bible is not just another edition, but a textbook Bible issued for a particular purpose . . . The volume should be useful in Released Time Bible Classes and Independent School courses here in America, as well as helpful to the average adult who would like to read the Bible."
—The Witness

"This is a valuable book."
—Saturday Review

$1.85 at your bookstore

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
114 Fifth Ave., N. Y. 11

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE PRESS

Edited by
GEORGE MacMURRAY

RECTOR vs. MINISTER:—The Rev. William E. Hart of the Church of England in Canada, has this to say on the subject of titles in the Anglican Outlook:

I like to think of the church as a democratic institution, yet some of our clergy use the title Rector as if they were lords over God's heritage. For such a one to say, "I am the Rector" means "I am the boss, and I am going to run my parish." The word minister is altogether different. It means servant, the opposite to master. Literally master means the "greater one," and minister the lesser. We use the word minister in two connections, in politics as well as in the church. Jesus Christ may be considered the Prime Minister, the First Servant and Head of the Church. He came to minister and to give his life.

SOUTHERNERS FIGHT BIAS:—The Southern Patriot, organ of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, recently took a poke at the Churches for their slowness in opposing racial discrimination and bias. After pointing out progress in legislation in this field, the magazine asks: "If the denial of equal rights for all citizens is unjust in the eyes of the secular law, then where lies the morality of Jim Crow church schools. 'lily-white' churches and 'separate - but - equal' church activities? In the tenets of the Christian ethic which insists upon the equal and indivisible value of all human souls, thoughtful Southern clergymen are finding no justification for the traditional practices of their various sects. The clergy is coming to recognize that it has underestimated the humanitarian maturity of its flocks, and has been too timid in proclaiming its divine message."

INTERESTING IDEA:—Late—or maybe early—to say anything about Lent. But from English papers the event was poorly observed last Spring. Among the causes of a poor Lent were bad weather and no star preachers with great drawing capacity similar to Studdert-Kennedy or Dick Sheppard. There was some rumbling to make Lent shorter. The suggestion that the season should be reduced to ten or fourteen days finds a good deal of favor. If it were so shortened, say the supporters of the proposal, it might be possible to generate a real measure of interest and devotion. Something like an annual mission might be held, culminating in the glory of Easter. Easter, in that case, would have behind it a period of real preparation which it certainly lacks in many parishes as things are.

If a shorter Lent were introduced with really intensive preparation and work more might be accomplished, and after a time the longer season might find favor once more.

RELIGION IS NEWS:—Three Eastern newspapers, The New York Times, Newark (N. J.) News, and Providence (R. I.) Journal-Bulletin were recently honored for their reporting of religious activities by the national religious publicity council. Said Edwin L. James, managing editor of the "Times": Newspapers are giving more and more space to major developments in the religious world . . . because the papers think that religious news interests their readers. The barriers of misunderstanding which once existed between the press and religion are gradually being broken down—I hope to the benefit of both. I think the church is, even if belatedly, finding it has an important ally in newspapers. It seems to me that the press, on the other hand, is perhaps also belatedly coming to a more complete realization that there is news in religion.

The Church Pension Fund

and its subsidiaries
administered for the benefit of the Church

The Church Hymnal Corporation

Publishers of The Hymnal; Hymnal 1940 Companion; Book of Common Prayer; A Prayer Book for Soldiers and Sailors; Book of Offices; Stowe's Clerical Director.

The Church Life Insurance Corporation

Offers low cost insurance and annuity contracts to clergy, lay officials and active lay workers of the Church, either voluntary or paid, and their immediate families. Services include individual insurance programming and assistance to parish officials in preparing and establishing plans for retirement of lay employees.

The Church Fire Insurance Corporation

Low cost fire, windstorm and extended coverage insurance on property owned by or closely affiliated with the Church, and on the residences and personal property of the clergy.

Further information available by addressing any of the above at

20 Exchange Place New York 5, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT, Book Editor

Studies in Jewish Theology. Ed. by J. Rabbinowitz and M. S. Lew. Oxford Univ. Press. $5.00.

This is the memorial volume in honor of the late Professor Arthur Marmorstein—one of the greatest scholars of modern Judaism. The translated and reprinted essays are of very great value to serious students of the Bible and of early Christian doctrine, e.g. the Unity of God in Rabbinic Literature; The Imitation of God; The Holy Spirit in Rabbinic Legend; The Doctrine of the Resurrection of the Dead in Rabbinic Theology; Judaism and Christianity in the Middle of the Third Century. Christian and Jewish scholars are drawing closer together every year. Let us hope the intelligent laity of both Church and Synagogue will do likewise. We have much to learn from each other, we modern Jews and Christians!

Protestant Biblical Interpretation. By Bernard Ramm. W. A. Wilde. $1.75.

This "Textbook of Hermeneutics for Conservative Protestants" reflects the continuing emphasis on methodology among those who insist that "(a) the Bible is the Word of God and (b) therefore it must contain only one system of theology" (p. 91). Dr. Ramm evidently believes that this is "the general system of Calvinism" (p. 105, n.6); but his syllogism will perhaps not seem self-evident to Anglicans. Given his presuppositions, as well as the fact that many of his arguments are directed against straw men whom he calls liberals or Catholics, his book is intelligent and persuasive. It represents a moderate and irenic type of fundamentalism which will probably become increasingly influential.—R. M. G.

Statement On Race. By Ashley Montagu. Henry Schuman. $2.00.

Here is a book to own. It gives three things: (1) An authoritative, brief and readable exposition of the known facts about race and their bearing upon human relations, both international and local; (2) The texts of the UNESCO "Statement by Experts on Race Problems" and of the UN "Universal Declaration of Human Rights"; and (3) a brilliant and moving defense of cooperation, brotherhood and love, using with discrimination the sciences of biology, anthropology and history to prove their superiority in influence and persistence over competition, hostile aggression and hate. Dr. Montagu, head of the Department of Anthropology at Rutgers, author of Man's Most Dangerous Myth: The Fallacy of Race, drafted and edited the UNESCO statement with the collaboration of a group of the world's outstanding scholars, and in this valuable book, writes in plain language a brief chapter of explanation upon each of the major paragraphs of that statement. An exceptionally well annotated list of books and pamphlets on Race is appended.—Arthur L. Swift Jr.

The Royalty of the Pulpit. By DeWitt Jones. Harper. $5.00.

This report on the Lyman Beecher Lectures on Preaching from 1872 to 1949 is fascinating to those who presume to practice that art. Brief biographies and analyses of the theology and methods of the seventy lecturers present a pageantry of the changing years, with their impact on the preacher, that is invaluable to the student. In the amazing variety there is a unity that is composed of tremendous faith in the message uttered and, in the words of Phillips Brooks, "your own intelligent delight in what you are doing."—J. H. T.

Design for Living: From Jewish Life and Lore. By Esther Rudy. Bloch. $3.00.

This volume is intended primarily to introduce Jewish young people to the moral and ethical heritage of their faith. It is organized in four main sections, entitled Torah, Talmud, Judaism and Labor, each with acrostic sub-headings. Around this frame the writer has added the living flesh and blood of citations from the Torah, Prophets and Wisdom Literature, Talmudic Haggada and thumbnail sketches of great figures of Jewish history.—Paul W. Meyer.

The Romance of New Testament Scholarship. By Wilbert Francis Howard. London: Epsworth Press. 7s.6d.

Lectures delivered in this country at Drew University. It is a fascinating story of the development of New Testament scholarship through the centuries, including the discovery and study of manuscripts, including the papyri, and the lives of such great modern New Testament scholars as Bishop Westcott, Bishop Lightfoot, Dr. Hort, and Dr. Ramsay. It would be a fine thing if this little book were available in an American reprint.

ENCYCLOPEDIA OF RELIGION

VERGILIUS FERM, Editor
with 190 Collaborators

"THIS encyclopedia of religion deserves a warm welcome. It is published at what, in view of its bulk and contents, must be regarded as a most modest price. In clear print it embraces tens of thousands of articles. All the significant religions of the world are included, Christian. Jewish, Moslem, Buddhist. Hindu and the rest. A truly great achievement."
—N. Y. Times

"There is every prospect that this will be a volume too frequently used to be allowed ever to get far out of reach."
—The Christian Century

Subjects Include:

- Religions of the World
- Protestant Denominations
- Biblical Terms
- Church History
- Founders of Religions
- Rituals and Religious Practices, etc.

900 Pages Limited Edition

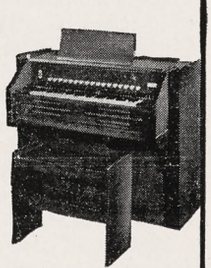
-Special Order Coupon-

PHILOSOPHICAL LIBRARY, Publishers
15 E. 40th St., Desk 579, New York 16, N. Y.



Enclosed is $..... for ..... copy(ies) of the ENCYCLOPEDIA OF RELIGION, at $10 per copy.

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

(Expedite shipment by enclosing remittance)

ELECTRIC ORGANS
for Small Church or Chapel

Other models as low as $75. Write for catalogue on all these organs.
We can also supply you with stained glass and church furniture of all kinds.
Free Catalogue.

WHITTEMORE ASSOCIATES
16 Ashburton Place, Boston 8, Mass.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CHURCHES OVERSEAS

ANGLO-CATHOLICS CAUTION ON REUNION MOVES

Actions toward reunion which "blur distinctions between the Church of England and non-episcopal communions" were scored in a statement issued by the Anglo-Catholic Council. The complaint, addressed to the assembly of the Church of England, stated that actions were frequently taken which make light of fundamental theological differences and traditions. The statement concluded by saying that they did not believe in holding joint services; inviting non-conformists to preach; in proposals for inter-communion.

ALBERT SCHWEITZER GETS AWARD

Albert Schweitzer has received an award of $2,380 for promoting peace by the association of book publishers and sellers of west Germany. In accepting the noted missionary said that the only way out of today's "misery" was for people to become worthy of each other's trust.

ARCHBISHOP EXPELLED FROM CHINA

The Roman Catholic archbishop of Anking, China, a Jesuit, together with five other Spanish priests and a nun, have arrived in Hong Kong after being expelled from their diocese in central China. They are accused "of plotting an armed uprising against the government and endangering the interests of the state and people."

CHRISTIAN-MARXIST GROUPS ARE URGED

Newspapers in eastern Germany are urging the formation of "Christian-Marxist Working Committees" which will "work toward an understanding between Christianity and Marxism" and "thus overcome peacefully the tensions which are presently threatening mankind."

ARCHBISHOP OF YORK WARNS ON MARRIAGE

The Archbishop of York expressed regret that no official of the Church was included on the royal commission set up to deal with marriage problems. Addressing his convocation, he urged that spokesmen for the Church should give evidence before the commission. The Church, he said, could testify that the increase in divorces and the departure from the Christian conception of marriage as a lifelong union were harmful to the social and moral health of the nation and detrimental to the happiness of its children.

MAORI TRIBESMEN HAVE BISHOP

Wiremu N. Panapa was consecrated bishop of Waiapu, New Zealand, by Archbishop West-Watson, primate of New Zealand, at the cathedral at Napier. He will serve the Maori people throughout the country. Following the service tribesmen paid homage to their new bishop with traditional songs, action chants and speeches. Replying to the tributes, the new bishop said, "The new canoe of Aotearoa (the Long White Cloud, which is the native name for New Zealand) has been christened and lies on the beach ready to be launched. There is an old Maori proverb, 'Be careful how you launch a canoe lest the surging of the tide damage the ornamentation.' I am really saying that of myself."

STAMP TO HONOR BOUNTY BIBLE

The famous Bounty Bible is to be honored on a postage stamp issued by Pitcairn Island. The Bible was left aboard the ship when the despotic Captain Bly and others of his crew were cast off the ship near Tahiti. Salvaged by the nine mutineers who ultimately settled on the island, it was for many years the only book there.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

NEWS OF OTHER CHURCHES

MINISTERS ASSAIL RENO JUDGES

A dispute over who should perform marriages has flared anew between ministers and civil magistrates. It started when members of the ministers association appeared before county commissioners to protest against what they called "wholesale marrying practices" of county judges. They presented a tabulation of marriages during June by four judges which showed that between them they performed 1056 marriages, collecting the customary fee of $11 for each one. The ministers disclaim any personal motives. They said: "We plan to have a public meeting in the near future at which the judges will be invited to explain why they are devoting so much time to performing marriages when some court cases have been set over until 1953."

MISSOURI SYNOD SETS RECORD BUDGET

A $5,250,000 budget, largest ever proposed, has been adopted by the fiscal committee of the Missouri synod of the Lutheran Church. It is in addition to a ten million dollar drive to be launched next Spring for missions and education.

PHILADELPHIA COMMISSION MARKS ANNIVERSARY

The Philadelphia Fellowship Commission, dedicated to "promoting equal treatment and opportunities for all people," will celebrate its tenth anniversary October 11. More than 280 community officials, including 37 religious leaders, will sponsor a program of "rededication of the people of Philadelphia to William Penn's ideal of a city of brotherly living."

JUDGE FREES CO; SCORES DRAFT BOARD

A member of Jehovah's Witnesses on trial for draft evasion was freed by a federal judge in Detroit. After directing a reluctant jury to find Walter Kobil, 25, of La Salle, "not guilty," Federal Judge Frank A. Picard criticized the draft board for arbitrary and capricious handling of the case.

"When Kobil came to the draft board for a hearing," said the judge, "he brought two witnesses with him and the board refused to hear them. That was wrong and it was un-American."

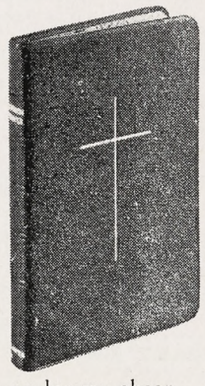
The board at La Salle classified Kobil as 1-A, in spite of his plea that he obtain conscientious objector classification. His parents are Jehovah's Witnesses, and he was brought up as a member of the sect. At least a dozen previous cases have been heard here involving members of various religious sects on draft evasion charges and in every one the defendant has lost and received the maximum five-year prison term.

CHRISTIAN QUARTET SINGS AT SYNAGOGUE

Christians of four denominations provided the music at Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur services at Temple Israel, Layayette, Ind. The quartet was composed of a Baptist, a Methodist, a Lutheran and an Episcopalian, Burton Burns.

SENATE NARROWS ADMISSIONS TAX EXEMPTIONS

The Senate finance committee has recommended repeal of the 20% tax on "any admissions all the proceeds of which inure exclusively to the benefit of a church or a convention or association of churches." It voted however to keep the present tax on all motion picture exhibitions, regardless of sponsorship, and on any carnival, rodeo, or circus in which any professional performer participates for compensation.



CAN ANYBODY BEAT THIS RECORD?

The Rev. John C. Williams, ordained 66 years ago as a Presbyterian minister, just had his 93rd birthday. He is still the pastor of the church at Washington, Ark. He is also still correspondent for a Little Rock daily, a job he has held for the past 20 years.

METHODIST UNIVERSITY HAS RABBI AS CHAPLAIN

Boston University has named Rabbi Charles Freeman, director of the Jewish work at the institution, as chaplain to the entire student body until a permanent successor is named for the position left vacant during the summer by a resignation. Rabbi Freeman will be responsible for organizing and administering the entire student program of the university, largest Methodist institution of its kind in the country.

When buying a Prayer Book ask for Harper Editions and enjoy—at no extra cost— all these exclusive features

MICROPAKE INDIA PAPER the finest India paper ever made in America. Harold P. Landers, Business Manager, Massachusetts Bible Society, says of Micropake: "Of all India papers from any part of the world that have come under my observation, this is definitely the best." (Micropake is now in use on all small and medium-sized Harper India paper editions.)

FLEXTEX EDGELINING the new, improved method of applying strong, flexible paper linings to give the finished appearance of a full leather lining. (Now used on many paper-lined editions of the Prayer Book.)

GIFT-PAK the 3-piece box that keeps your Prayer Book fresh and clean and gives you a handsome gift wrapping in blue and gold, free of retail store price marks. (Now used on a large majority of Harper Prayer Books.)

Ask to see Harper Prayer Books

On sale at leading booksellers everywhere

HARPER & BROTHERS, New York 16, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CURATE WANTED

A young man as assistant in Evangelical parish in the north midwestern states. An unusual opportunity for the right man for varied work in large parish. Must be able to take over the direction of large church school, and an unusually fine program for young people in high school, college and business. Good salary and attractive apartment. Write Box G of THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

ST. JAMES LESSONS

A nine course series of instruction for Episcopal Church Schools including illustrated work books—150-250 pages (60c each) and teachers' manuals I, II, III 40c each, IV through IX 60c each).

No Samples - Payment with orders

St. James Lessons, Inc.

865 Madison Ave., Dpt. 5, N. Y. 21, N. Y.

ROBES

Pulpit, Choir and Confirmation Robes; Paraments. Fine materials; beautiful work; fair prices. Catalog, samples on request. Mention items needed.

DeMOULIN BROS. & CO.
1188 S. 4th St., Greenville, Ill.

I Want to Contact New WRITERS

who are interested in cashing checks of $1 to $100, offered every day. The easiest way to write for pay. No previous experience necessary. Send for FREE DETAILS. No obligation.

SAUNDERS M. CUMMINGS
468 Indep. Bldg., Colorado Springs, Colo.

FINEST PURE IRISH LINEN

For all Church uses

Just received from Belfast a new fine lightweight linen for Surplices in 39"—1.65 per yard. Also qualities and width for Albs, Fair Linen, etc., Patterns and Supplies, Books.

Samples Free

MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
BOX 386 CHILLICOTHE, MO.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

VESTMENTS

Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves
Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries
Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars
Custom Tailoring for Clergymen

1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951

COX SONS & VINING, Inc.
131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

CASSOCKS

Surplices — Choir Vestments
Eucharistic Vestments
Altar Hangings and Linens
Prices Sent on Request

J. M. HALL, INC.
14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.
Tel. CH 4-3306

PEOPLE

CLERGY CHANGES:

WILLIAM MARTIN, formerly a canon at Christ Church Cathedral, Louisville, Ky., is now in charge of St. Alban's and St. Mary's, Houston, Texas.

ROLLIN J. FAIRBANKS is in charge of St. Elisabeth's, Sudbury, Mass. He continues on the faculties of Episcopal Theological School and Harvard Divinity School.

RICHARD H. GURLEY, formerly rector of St. Martin's, Radnor, Pa., is now vicar of All Saints, Fitchburg, Mass.

WILLIAM B. WILLIAMSON, formerly rector of St. Stephen's, Catasauqua, Pa., is now rector of Grace Church, Honesdale, Pa.

JACKSON A. MARTIN, formerly the rector of the Holy Comforter, Gadsden, Ala., is now rector of St. Mark's, Pleasantville, N. J.

MAYNARD G. ARGEDUX, formerly ass't at Trinity, Miami, Fla., is now rector of Trinity, Daytona Beach, Fla.

DEATHS:

WILLIAM M. M. THOMAS, 73, missionary bishop of Southern Brazil, 1928-49, died at Bethesda, Md., Sept. 18. See news section.

LAY WORKERS:

ILIONE BALDWIN has resigned as advisor in education for the diocese of Texas and has returned to her home at Los Altos, Cal.

EDWARD L. HAWTHORNE, formerly student personnel administrator at Alfred University, has been appointed executive director of St. Barnabas House, New York City. The new building of the institution gives temporary shelter to over 600, aged 2 to 11, each year.

ORDINATIONS:

WILLIAM K. REID was ordained priest Sept. 19, by Bishop Sawyer at the Church of Our Father, Foxbury, Pa., where he is in charge. He was formerly a lawyer.

JOHN M. PRITTIE was ordained priest Sept. 21 by Bishop Sawyer at Holy Trinity, Brookville, Pa., where he is in charge. He was formerly a business man.

GEORGE E. CLARKE was ordained priest Sept. 22 by Bishop Sawyer at St. Laurence Church, Osceola Mills, Pa., where he is in charge. He is also in charge of churches at Gearhartville, Houtzdale and Hawk Run. He was formerly in the Church Army.

The Prayer Book
Its History & Purpose
BY
IRVING P. JOHNSON
Late Witness Editor

25c for single copy
$2 for ten copies

The WITNESS
Tunkhannock, Pa.

HOUSE FOR SALE at Keene Valley in Adirondacks Furnished or unfurnished; suitable for year-round living. 1st floor two bed-rooms and bath, attractive kitchen, hall and living-dining room with knotty pine paneling and fire-place. 2nd floor, 2 bed-rooms and bath. Basement, furnace-room, rooms suitable for workshop and laundry; 1 car garage. Oil-burner, hot-water heat. 2.1 acres of ground, mostly woodland, mountain view, trout-stream. BOX C, WITNESS, TUNKHANNOCK, PA.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE·BRASS·SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS

Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS

Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.

SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

Exquisite
IRISH LINENS
BY THE YARD

From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States, I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values; unsurpassed quality, imported direct from Ireland. Also transfer patterns, linen tape, and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 3 inches at 75c, 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.00.

MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

THE BISHOP WHITE
PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833

Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.

PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)

Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

BACKFIRE

ELLIOTT CALVIN
Layman of New York

I want to thank you for the excellent articles by Mr. Kew. Those which have appeared so far are excellent. There is always a danger, I think, in dealing with such a subject as "Religion and the Mind" since it calls for a thoroughly professional job. Otherwise more harm is done than good. But Mr. Kew has already revealed that he is definitely in the professional class. I am sure his column will be read eagerly.

MARY CORBIN
Churchwoman of Chicago

The report of the disgraceful Cicero riot by Mr. Sontag (Witness, Sept. 6) was objective and to the point. Certainly none of us here in Chicago who have an awareness of what our religion requires were anything by ashamed of the affair. But as Mr. Sontag points out, leaders in other cities—not only Church leaders but others—would do well to prepare now for similar outbreaks. They can be prevented if a sound educational program is launched in time.

JOHN D. GRAY
Layman of Indianapolis

I have been a member of the CIO for a good many years. I have also been a member of the Episcopal Church for a still longer period. It is a simple statement of fact that many working people find their union a substitute for their church. The reason, I think, is that they believe, rightly or wrongly, that the Church caters to the employing group and has little concern for the welfare of workers. I do not know whether it is a policy of yours to print articles regularly like the one by labor leader Michael Budzanoski in your issue of Sept. 6. I hope that it is since I am sure it will serve to bring labor and the Church closer together. I ask you to send me 25 copies of that number which I wish to give to some of my fellow union members.

MRS. JAMES SWIFT
Churchwoman of New York

It does not seem to me that your heading "Mexican Government Hampers Church Activities" is justified by the story that follows, (Witness, Sept. 20). The report speaks of "difficulties" but why not be specific and name places and incidents. I have spent a good deal of time in Mexico in recent years since it is a delightful place for a vacation. And any observing person soon discovers that the country is dominated by the Roman Church, including the government. All Protestant work is carried on there with great difficulty. This ought to be known, though I presume Bishop Salinas would have even greater difficulties if the Mexican authorities discovered that he was reporting conditions to Church authorities in the United States.

W. H. WILSON
Layman of Boston

The article by Bishop Johnson on the Big and Little in Religion (Sept. 20) was one of the finest I have ever read in any paper. I am a new comer to the Witness and so am not familiar with his writing, but if this is typical then I most heartily agree with Bishop Pardue that "he is the best writer the American Church has produced."

ST. LUKE'S SCHOOL
Episcopal Day School under the direction of Trinity Parish
Nursery, Kindergarten, Elementary Grades. After School play groups. Coeducational. Moderate tuition. For catalogue and further information communicate with
THE REV. PAUL C. WEED, JR.
Headmaster
Hudson & Grove Sts., NEW YORK 14, N. Y.
Phone WAtkins 4-5960

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL
Coeducational Episcopal Day School
Prepares for leading secondary schools. Sound academic training. Kindergarten thru 8th grade. French and Latin emphasized. Complete testing program. Est. 1894. Music, drama, arts & crafts, sports. Bus service. Hot lunch. Tel: AL 4-2000
E. ALLISON GRANT, Headmaster
88 E. Fourth Ave. (11th St.), N. Y. 3

THE PATTERSON SCHOOL for BOYS

Episcopal School in Blue Ridge Mountains of Western No. Carolina. Accredited. Grades 6-12. Gymnasium, sports, 42nd year. 1300-acre estate. Board and tuition, moderate.
GEORGE F. WIESE, Supt.
COLLEGE PREPARATORY — Legerwood, N. C. — HEALTH EDUCATION CHARACTER BUILDING

SCHOOLS

FORK UNION MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth — New Hampshire

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-help system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield — Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Schools of the Church

BARD COLLEGE
Formerly St. Stephen's
A Coeducational College of Liberal Arts and Sciences
FOUNDED 1860
For catalogue and further information write to The Director of Admissions, Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, New York.

DANIEL BAKER COLLEGE
BROWNWOOD, TEXAS
Established 1889. Operated under the auspices of the Diocese of Dallas. Co-educational senior college offering B.A. and B.S. degrees. Special opportunities in teacher training, music education, business administration. The only available undergraduate course in the Episcopal Church in Church Work Training. Member: Association of Texas Colleges.
REV'D W. A. CROSS, M.A., President
REV'D L. A. HASELMAYER, Ph.D., Dean

SAINT PAUL'S POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE
LAWRENCEVILLE, VIRGINIA
Approved by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. B.S. Degree with major in Trade and Industrial Education, B.S. Degree in Home Economics Education, B.S. Degree with major in Elementary Education, B.S. Degree in Secondary Education.
EARL H. McCLENNEY, President

VOORHEES SCHOOL & JR. COLLEGE
DENMARK, S. C.
Co-educational. Accredited by State Dept. of Education of S. C. and the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges. Under the two Dioceses of S. C. and The American Church Institute for Negroes. Expenses reasonable. Limited scholarship aid for worthy students. Apply:
CECIL D. HALLIBURTON, President

Okolona College
Okolona, Mississippi
Co-educational, Private, American Church Institute for Negroes (Protestant Episcopal Church) Established 1902
High School and Junior College - Trades and Industries - Music
For information write: W. MILAN DAVIS President
Today's Training for Tomorrow's Opportunities

St. Augustine's College
RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA
1867 — 1951
Accredited Four-Year College for Negro Youth. Co-educational. Music, Pre-Medical, Health and Physical Education, High School Teacher Training, Business, Pre-Social Work, Nursing Education in co-operation with St. Agnes Hospital.
HAROLD L. TRIGG, President

SAINT HELEN'S HALL
Portland 1, Oregon
Historic Pacific Northwest Episcopal resident and day school. Founded in 1869. Co-educational pre-school. Boys admitted to Lower School through grade III. Upper School girls only.
Write for catalog.
The RT. REV. BENJAMIN DAGWELL, D.D.
President, Board of Trustees
JANE ALLEN SAXTON,
HEADMISTRESS

The Cathedral Schools
National Cathedral School for Girls
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding department, grades 7-12
KATHARINE LEE, Principal
St. Albans
The National Cathedral School for Boys
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding Department, grades 8-12
CHARLES MARTIN, Headmaster
Address:
Mt. St. Alban, Washington 16, D. C.

St. John Baptist School
FOR GIRLS
Offers College Preparatory and General courses. Music, art, outdoor sports, and a happy home life, with character building extra-curricular activities for resident and day students, under the care of the Sisters of St. John Baptist. In the country near Morristown, New Jersey. Accredited.
For catalog address Box 556
The Sister Superior, Mendham, New Jersey

St. John's MILITARY SCHOOL
Salina, Kansas
Since 1887 St. John's has been perpetuating the cultural tradition of the Church by stressing sound scholarship in Christian atmosphere. Grades 3 through 12. Fully accredited.
COL. R. L. CLEM, Rector

ST. MARY'S HALL
SECONDARY BOARDING SCHOOL
Faribault, Minnesota
Close relationship of students and faculty in residence allows for a maximum of spiritual, academic, and social growth. Preparation for leading colleges. An extensive sports program, including riding.
PHYLLIS M. NEWMAN, M.A.
Founded 1866 Headmistress

IOLANI SCHOOL
Episcopal Church School for Boys
HONOLULU 17, HAWAII
A college preparatory church school for boys. Kindergarten through twelfth grade. Established 1862. Day tuition $225 to $275. Boarding $665 - $775. Summer session. Accredited.
REV. CHARLES A. PARMITER, JR. M.A., S.T.B., Rector

The MERRICOURT SCHOOL
(Episcopal)
A country boarding school for 40 boys & girls. Grades 1-8 (pre-preparatory). Home-like environment. Sports, extra-curricula program. 26th year. 8 weeks summer camp. For information: Visit, write, or phone 3-3209.
THE REV. M. W. WHITFORD, Hdm.
BERLIN, CONN.

ST. LUKE'S HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING
New York City
Offers a 3 year course in nursing to high school and college graduates. College graduates may be admitted with 9 months advanced credit allowance. For further information write to The Director of Nursing, St. Luke's Hospital, 421 West 113th St., New York 25, N. Y.

HARVARD SCHOOL
Diocesan School for Boys. 52nd Year. Fall term opens September 11, 1951. Grades seven through twelve. Fully Accredited. R.O.T.C. unit. For all information apply to
THE REV. W. S. CHALMERS
Headmaster
3700 Coldwater Canyon Rd.
NORTH HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

Cathedral School of St. Mary
An accredited Episcopal school for girls. Suburban New York City. Day-nursery to college. Boarding—fifth grade to college. Strong college preparatory course. Music, Dramatics, Art. Excellent sports program. Catalog on request.
MARION REID MARCH
Box W, Garden City, Long Island, N. Y.

ST. STEPHEN'S SCHOOL FOR BOYS
ALEXANDRIA, VA.
Grades 3 thru 12 (Day School). College Preparatory. Under the Church School System of the Diocese of Virginia.
Address
THE REV. EDWARD E. TATE,
Headmaster
2405 Russell Rd. ALEXANDRIA, VA.

ST. MARY'S HALL on the Delaware. Episcopal boarding and day school for girls 8-18. Founded 1837. Thorough college preparation. Fully accredited. Separate lower school. College preparatory and general courses. Music, Art, Clubs, Sports, Dramatics. Near New York and Philadelphia. Catalogue.
FLORENCE LUKENS NEWBOLD
Headmistress
Burlington, New Jersey

DeVEAUX SCHOOL
Niagara Falls, New York
FOUNDED 1852
The Church School in the Diocese of Western New York. College preparatory for boys. Representative form of student government. Small classes. Reasonable charges. Grades 7 through 12.
For information address The Headmaster.

The Church Home and Hospital
SCHOOL OF NURSING
Baltimore 31, Maryland
A three year course of nursing. Classes enter August and September. Scholarships available to well qualified high school graduates.
Apply to Director of Nursing

ST. AGNES SCHOOL
An Episcopal Country Day and Boarding School for Girls
Excellent College Preparatory record. Special courses arranged for girls not contemplating college. Day pupils range from Kindergarten to College Entrance. Boarders from Grade 8 to College Entrance.
MISS BLANCHE PITTMAN, Principal
Albany New York

HOWE MILITARY SCHOOL
Thorough Academic Training in a Spiritual Environment. R.O.T.C. Accredited college preparatory, business courses. Junior School. Small classes. Every boy participates in sports. Balanced program. Episcopal. Established 1884. Summer Camp, boys grammar school age. Catalogue.
COL. B. B. BOUTON
13 Academy Place, Howe, Indiana

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The WITNESS

10¢ A COPY

October 11, 1951

BISHOP EMERY OF NORTH DAKOTA
Pronounces Benediction at his First Convocation

THE SAINT AND THE HUMAN CONDITION

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 7:30, 8 (and 9 Holy Days except Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 8:30, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers – 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. – 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital – 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m.
Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a. m. Holy Communion.
9:30 and 11 a. m. Church School.
11 a. m. Morning Service and Sermon.
4 p. m. Evensong. Special Music.
Weekday: Holy Communion Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.; Wednesdays and Saints Days at 8 a. m.; Thursdays at 12:10 p. m. Organ Recitals, Fridays, 12:10.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer – 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon. Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D.,
Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 – 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m.
Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.–High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacColl, 3rd, Rector
Rev. Peter Chase, Curate
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 33

The WITNESS

FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH

OCTOBER 11, 1951

PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA

EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Bishop Angus Dun of Washington Replies to President

His Sermon Makes It Clear That Church Cannot Be Used for Politics

★ Bishop Angus Dun of Washington took issue with President Truman in a sermon preached at Washington Cathedral, September 30th, attended by delegates to the convocation of the Washington Pilgrimage of American Churchmen. The President had chided the same group only two days before on the failure of religious leaders to unite in a common affirmation of faith at a time of crisis. He told them that for some time he had been endeavoring to bring together without success the religious leaders of the world in "one common act which will affirm those religious and moral principles on which all agree."

Bishop Dun did not quote the President's speech directly but in an obvious reference to it, he told the pilgrims that "Christian faith and devotion cannot be mobilized by political leadership for political ends, however good."

He said that "the God who makes himself known to us in scripture, who makes himself known to us in Christ, cannot be bargained with, cannot be mobilized or used for our human purposes. He can only be trusted and loved and served."

Characterizing communism as a "demonic religion" and a "demonic obsession," the Episcopal Church leader asserted that "there are frightened servants of mammon who think this might be a good time to finance the church to fight this threatening form of godlessness so that mammon might be served in peace."

"On the surface," he added, "There is considerable appeal in the idea that the churches might be mobilized to strengthen the weak political sinews of the traditionally Christian West.

"But you who come here in the spirit of pilgrimage surely know that Christian faith and devotion cannot be financed from outside, nor at bottom can Christian faith and devotion be mobilized by political leadership for political end, however good."

Bishop Dun told the assembled pilgrims, who had come to the capital city to visit national shrines and review the religious bases of historical documents, that the United States had "good reason" to fear communism.

"We are arming mightily to hold it at bay," he said, and "speaking as a man and a citizen, I believe that is right.

"But we shall not overcome it by the energies fear can give us. We shall not overcome it by might alone. If within our might there are not at work the energies and the wisdom that can come alone from truer faith and a truer hope, we can neither save ourselves nor our world."

Before the Bishop began his sermon, the pilgrimage was welcomed to the vesper service by Dean Francis B. Sayre Jr. of the cathedral.

The varied representation of the group among a number of denominations was pointed up during the service when the Rev. Harold F. Carr, pastor of the Lakewood, Ohio, Methodist Church, knelt before the altar in his clerical robes and led the congregation in the litany of dedication.

Early that afternoon the advisory committee of the pilgrimage met to discuss future plans. It was their unanimous opinion that the project be made an annual affair, with the next gathering scheduled for April, 1952.

All of the committee members emphasized that the pilgrimage had no axe to grind, was independent of any sponsoring organization and would continue to remain in that category.

White House reporters saw in the President's proposal an explanation for the visit to the Vatican last summer of Myron C. Taylor, a communicant of St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church, New York. It was reported at the time that he carried to the Pope a message from Mr. Truman. Later, in answer to a question at a press conference, the President said that Mr. Taylor had made a report on the mobilization of the spiritual forces of the world.

Upon being advised of details of the President's proposals, presumably by Mr. Taylor, the Pope is said to have indicated that his pontifical statements appealing to all Christians to bring about a united Church by everyone joining the Roman Church answered the purpose Mr. Truman intended.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

RUSSELL DILL IS DEAD

★ Russell E. Dill, treasurer of the National Council, died at his summer home, Big Wolf Lake, Faust, N. Y., September 27th after a long illness. He was 57 years old and is survived by Mrs. Dill and one son, George Post Dill. He was born in San Jose, California. He attended the University of California, majoring in economics. He made a special study of the textile industry also, and was for a time the head of a large textile organization.

In 1930 he became a specialist on the reorganization of industrial companies, serving in this capacity with large department stores, motor companies and an aircraft company. During world war two he was sent to England to confer with army authorities concerning confidential matters in regard to aerial warfare.

Mr. Dill was widely traveled, and for many years had been interested in the world-wide missionary program of the Church. He was an organist, having been both choirmaster and organist at Calvary Presbyterian Church, San Francisco, for a number of years. He was an active member and former vestryman of Christ Church, Bronxville, N. Y.

He joined the National Council as treasurer in 1948.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICE IN LONG ISLAND

★ Bishop Noel Baring Hudson of Newcastle and representative of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel will preach to a joint service of the four Colonial parishes of Long Island on Sunday, October 14 at 4 p. m. at Grace Church, Jamaica. The parishes, among the first sponsored by the society in America are: Grace, Jamaica, the Rev. Joseph H. Titus, rector, founded 1702; St. George's, Flushing, the Rev. Dougald Maclean, founded between 1702 and 1705; St. George's, Hempstead, the Rev. Victor Regan, founded 1704, and St. James', Elmhurst, the Rev. George W. Parsons, founded 1704. The combined choirs of the parishes will join in the service.

BANKER ADDRESSES LAYMEN

★ William M. Dorr, officer of a bank in Louisville, Ky., was the leader of a laymen's conference for the diocese of Southwestern Virginia, held Sept. 22-23 at the diocesan house in Roanoke. It was in preparation for the presentation of the Church program throughout the diocese. Bishop Phillips and the Rev. Wilfred E. Roach of Radford discussed the program on the diocesan level.

RIVERDALE PARISH CELEBRATES

★ Bishop Donegan is to preach at Christ Church, Riverdale, New York City, next Sunday morning, the occasion being the celebration of the 85th anniversary of the founding of the parish. The Rev. Gerald V. Barry is rector.

LARGE ENROLLMENT AT CAMBRIDGE

★ With thirty-seven new students, the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge opened September 24. This will make a total of ninety students in the three-year course, and is one of the largest enrollments in the history of the school. The new students come from all parts of this country but for the first time in several years there are no foreign students. Most of the students enrolled in the school will carry in addition to their academic work, programs of assistance in various parishes and social organizations in the neighborhood of Cambridge, this being part of the modern practical program of their training for the parish ministry.

Dean Charles L. Taylor has announced the new additions to the staff. The Rev. Charles W. F. Smith, formerly rector of St. Andrew's Church, Wellesley, is to fill the chair of professor of New Testament. Before going to the Wellesley parish, he was canon chancellor of Washington Cathedral, and a member of the staff of the College of Preachers. During that period he was also instructor in homiletics at the Virginia Theological Seminary, of which institution he is still a trustee. Gabriel Farrell, for the past twenty years director of Perkins Institution for the Blind, is to be on the staff as administrative assistant to the dean. The Rev. William H. Clark, rector of St. Paul's Church, Concord, Mass., is to serve as a part time tutor. Grover Oberle, organist of Emmanuel Church, Boston, is to be choir director.

MIDWEST SYNOD AT ANN ARBOR

★ The close ties between all branches of the Church's work and the increasing activity of the laity in all fields of service, were the points stressed at the synod of the fifth province held in Ann Arbor September 18-20. Clergy, laymen and laywomen alike, benefited from the total picture presented of all aspects of the Church's task in the modern world.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

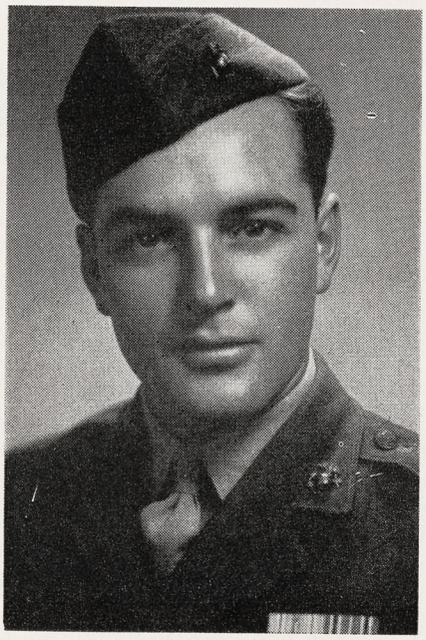
In pointing out that everything we do is a part of the educational work of the Church, the Rev. John Huess, of the department of education of the National Council, stated that the great danger is in allowing good works to overshadow the religious motive. Concerning missionary activity, Huess spoke of man's primary need to become one with God, and of the Church's task in coming to man first with the gospel of reconciliation and secondly with the corporal works of mercy. The task of telling the missionary story had passed from the bishops to the laity in large degree, he said.

In other sessions Bishop Bentley explained the mission of the overseas department and said that the Church has a hold-the-line policy where there is opposition; reported progress in nonstrategic areas; and stressed the great need for salary readjustments among the missionary personnel.

The address given by the Rev. Roger W. Blanchard of the home department aroused considerable interest with its emphasis on the importance of recruiting young men and young women, from colleges and universities particularly, for service in the Church. The outcome of his address was the appointment of a committee headed by Bishop Randall, retired suffragan bishop of Chicago, to investigate and recommend recruiting procedures within the province.



Mrs. Arthur W. Sherman, executive secretary of the Woman's Auxiliary, pointed out that the Auxiliary is not a separate organization, but an instrument to stimulate interest, integrate, and help sponsor the total Church program among women. She also said that the two programs sponsored by the Auxiliary are missionary supply work and the United Thank Offering. In connection with the U. T. O. it was stated that Roger Babson had called it the ". . . greatest single force for good in the world today."

Other National Council leaders who took part in the meetings were the Rev. George A. Wieland, the Rev. Almon R. Pepper, Messrs. Robert Jordan and the late Russell E. Dill.

Bishop Herman R. Page of Northern Michigan, is president of the province.

BISHOP PEABODY CELEBRATES

★ Bishop Malcom E. Peabody observed the 13th anniversary of his consecration September 29 by celebrating at the Church of the Saviour, Syracuse. Prayers of thanksgiving for his Episcopate were offered in parishes of his diocese which stretches from the St. Lawrence River to the Pennsylvania border. During his years of leadership, the diocese has shown growth in membership strength with an increase in the number of clergy and the establishment of new parishes.

LT. ROBERT KLETZKER, student for orders, is serving in the marines

NORTH DAKOTA HAS CONVOCATION

★ Bishop Smith of Iowa was the headliner at the convocation of North Dakota which was held September 23-24 at the Advent, Devils Lake. He preached on "Observations on the life of the Church today" at the opening service and was also the chief speaker at the dinner when he spoke on evangelism and stewardship.

Bishop Emery in his first annual address placed the following objectives and asked for wholehearted support: "to lead our present communicants to greater enlightenment and deeper spiritual experience; to increase our zeal and improve methods for evangelism; and to raise our giving to a sacrificial level." He asked for a doubling of communicant strength by the end of this decade which would mean 6000 by '60. The delegates went on record as endorsing the Bishop's forward looking program.

The district budget for current expenses totals $6530 for 1952, that for 1951 was $3400. The missionary program calls for $6767 as share in the general Church program and $5000 for work in the district.

The Rev. Roger Blanchard, division of college work, addressed the clergy and laity at a luncheon. Colonel Perry Ragan of Colorado Springs, who had been the leader at the laymen's training conference held previous to the sessions, addressed the convocation, and Deaconess Elsie J. Riebe, recently returned from China, addressed the meeting of the Auxiliary and guilds.

RALLY SERVICE IN HOUSTON

★ Episcopal Churches of Houston, Texas, joined forced September 30th for a rally service held at Christ Church Cathedral. It was the first of several meetings being held at centers in the diocese which are being addressed this week and last by Bishop Quin, Bishop Hines and Bishop Kinsolving of Arizona.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The Lord Bishop of Newcastle Will Visit Delaware

BY NELSON RIGHTMYER
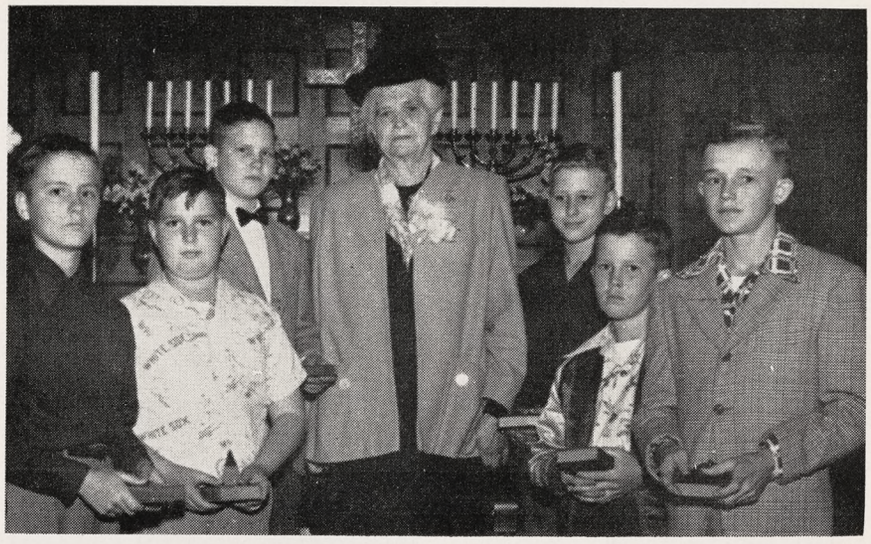
Prof. at Philadelphia Divinity School



★ The late seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries saw the rise in England of numerous "Societies;" there was a Society for the Reformation of Manners as well as the society of pious young men which later became Methodism, and it was in this atmosphere that the Rev. Thomas Bray, rector of Sheldon, later appointed commissary for the Bishop of London to Maryland, founded The Society for the Promoting of Christian Knowledge in 1697 to spread the Christian religion at home and abroad throughout the British colonies. After a trip to Maryland and his return to England in the interest of the passage of the bill to establish the Church in Maryland, Dr. Bray succeeded in his plan to establish by royal charter a Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts. The first meeting of the society was held in Lambeth Palace on June 27, 1701.

There was no Anglican diocese outside the British isles; today there are 233 dioceses outside the British isles. Then there were a few Englishmen scattered around the world served occasionally by a few British chaplains under the supervision of the Bishop of London; today there are millions of Anglicans of every race and color served by their native priests and bishops. The SPG has undoubtedly been one of the foundation stones upon which this tremendous spread of the gospel "as this Church has received the same" has been accomplished; throughout the Anglican world, therefore, thanksgiving to Almighty God is being offered in the two hundred fiftieth year of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts.

The thanksgiving service for the diocese of Delaware will be held on October 21 in historic Immanuel Church, New Castle, when the Lord Bishop of Newcastle, England, formerly executive secretary of the SPG, will be the principal speaker. In the present diocese of Delaware nearly one-third of the churches owe their foundation or continuation to the generosity of the Society throughout the colonial era. New Castle Church, sometimes called the "Mother Church" of the diocese, was among the first churches in America to receive a missionary from the newly formed Society, the Rev. George Ross being appointed in August, 1703.

Before long the other two county seats, Lewes and Dover, also had resident missionaries appointed and supported by the Society, who spread out fan-wise from their river's-edge churches to cover the countryside. The Rev. Thomas Crawford was appointed to Dover in December of 1704, and the Rev. William Black was appointed to Lewes in July of 1706. The mission at Appoquinimy, although not a county seat, had been served by clergymen from Maryland for several years, and it, too, now came under the benefits of the Society; the Rev. Thomas Jenkins sailed in the same vessel which brought Black to Lewes and the Rev. John Talbot to Burlington, New Jersey.

Without the support of the Society no Anglican Church could have prospered in those early years. The people were poor, the living was hard, and only a relatively small number of the settlers were nominally Anglicans. In many cases the fifty pounds provided by the Society was the sole means of sustenance for the missionary and his family. Little wonder that few men volunteered for the service and that churches were sometimes left vacant for a time after the death or removal of the missionary. Replacements were hard to get. Even when Americans began to offer themselves for the ministry the result was too often tragic. The candidates had to go to England for ordination—6000 miles in a sailing ship—and too often they never returned. One of the most tragic appointments was that of Hugh Wilson and Samuel Giles, related to missionaries and trained by them. These young men went to England, were ordained, and returned only to be drowned at the point of the capes within sight of land when the ship foundered. This tragedy prevented the division of one populous mission, Dover, for years.

MRS. BYRON D. MORRIS trained these boys for confirmation. Members of her class at Trinity, Apalachicola, Florida: Dickey Porter, Glen Totman, Fred Matthews, Frank Cook, DeWill Galloway, Richard Meyer

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The Society found another means of supplying these occasional vacancies in the ministry of the Swedish Church. The Swedes had settled along the Delaware before the advent of the English and had established five or six churches, all of which remain today—one in Delaware, one in New Jersey, and the rest in Pennsylvania. Here was a non-Roman episcopal ministry with acceptable orders, and the Society regularly used the Swedish priests to serve occasional vacancies.

The Lord Bishop of Newcastle will therefore be greeted when he appears in this old SPG mission by representatives from all those churches which owe their foundation or continuation to the generosity of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts: the New Castle Mission (Immanuel Church, New Castle; St. James' Church, Stanton); the Appoquinimy Mission (St. Anne's Church, Middletown); the Dover Mission (Christ Church, Dover; St. Peter's Church, Smyrna; Christ Church, Milford); the Lewes Mission (St. Peter's Church, Lewes; St. George's Church; Indian River Hundred; St. John the Baptist's Church, Milton); The Swedish Church (Holy Trinity, Old Swedes, Wilmington): The "Maryland Chapels" (Prince George's Chapel, Dagsboro; Christ Church, Broad Creek).

NEW CHURCH IN ALBANY

☆ On Sunday, September 30, Bishop Barry laid the cornerstone of the new Grace Church, Albany, N. Y. The new building occupies the site of the old church. Services are being held temporarily in the adjoining parish hall. The Rev. L. N. Gavitt has been the rector since 1933.

THIRD PROVINCE SYNOD IN WILMINGTON

★ The synod of the third province will meet in Wilmington, Del., October 16-18, when bishops and delegates from thirteen dioceses will meet at the Cathedral Church of St. John. At the same time the Auxiliary will hold meetings at Trinity. Speakers will be Bishop Oldham, retired of Albany; Bishop Barth, coadjutor of Tennessee; Chaplain James Pike of Columbia University; Bishop Louttit of South Florida; President Clark Kuebler of Ripon College; the Rev. Roger Blanchard, head of the college work division of the National Council.

Bishop Powell of Maryland is the president of the province and Bishop Phillips of Southwestern Virginia is chairman of the program committee.

SERVICE STATION NOW A CHURCH

★ Bishop Peabody knocked on the door of what was once a gas and service station in Black River, N. Y. last Sunday to begin the service of dedication which will convert the building into St. John's Church. This latest addition to the increasing number of Episcopal parishes in the diocese of Central New York is the result of the response of families in the Black River area to the work of a team of missionaries headed by the Rev. William H. Cole of Clayton, dean of the North Country missionary district, and of the Rev. Edmund S. Mathews, vicar in Black River.

It was Mr. Mathews who, as a seminarian in the summer of 1950, made a survey of the community and established the need for the new parish and with Mrs. Henry J. Fikes, president of the church's executive committee, led in the formation of the parish a year ago and in the search for a suitable place of worship.

SUFFRAGAN BISHOP CONSECRATED

★ The Rev. Martin J. Bram was consecrated suffragan bishop of South Florida at Holy Trinity, West Palm Beach, September 21, with Bishou Louttit the consecrator and Bishop Mason of Dallas and Bishop Burton of Nassau the co-consecrators. Presentors were Bishop Juhan of Florida and Bishop West, coadjutor of Florida. The sermon was by Bishop Bloy of Los Angeles. He told the new bishop, an old friend and a seminary classmate, not to take himself too seriously since such an attitude "has ruined the sincere work of many a greater person than any of us."

EVERYONE SMILED when James P. Trotter was instituted at St. Francis, Turlock, California. L. to R.: Paul Shimmon; George D. Godfrey, pastor of the Presbyterian Church; Trotter; Bishop Walters; David Graham, rector of St. Paul's, Walnut Creek

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SUCCESSFUL SCHOOL AT SEWANEE

★ The graduate school of theology of the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn., this summer was most successful. There were thirty-eight men from twenty-one dioceses present. The courses offered were: Prof. Marshall Fowyer Stewart of General Theological Seminary on "Belief in Christ During the Age of the Fathers;" Prof. Pierson Parker of General on "The Backgrounds of New Testament Faith;" Prof. Massey H. Shepherd Jr., of the Episcopal Theological School, and Witness columnist on "The Church in the Second Century;" Prof. John Sedberry Marshall, professor of philosophy in the University of the South, on "The Christian Philosophy of Human Nature" and the Rev. J. Willard Yoder presented the course on religious education for the National Council. The courses were all geared to men who were studying for their masters degrees in theology. This is a course which demands three years attendance and a thesis. Some few others were completing work for their batchelors degree in divinity and some were auditing courses. It was an earnest, hard working group of men and a devoted faculty.

For some few years Prof. Stewart has been the director of this school, a task which Massey H. Shepherd Jr. will take over for the ensuing year. This year and for the future the courses will come under the direct supervision of Dean F. Craighill Brown of the School of Theology.

BERKELEY ANNOUNCES NEW TEACHERS

★ The Berkeley Divinity School opened on September 24th with a record enrollment of 93 students, including one each from the Lutheran and Armenian Churches. Two graduate students, thirty juniors, and five special students were admitted. New faculty appointments include the Rev. Thomas S. Cline, as acting professor of moral and pastoral theology; the Rev. Howard F. Dunn, lecturer in homiletics; the Rev. John H. Esquirel, lecturer in canon law; the Rev. Norman S. Howell, lecturer in Christian missions; the Rev. Joseph A. Johnson, as instructor in Christian education; Professor Harmon A. Chapman of New York University as visiting professor in Christian philosophy and apologetics; Mr. Hiram Sibley is acting bursar, and Stanley A. Leavy, lecturer in the department of pastoral theology and consultant in psychiatry. Bishop William T. Havard, of St. David's is English lecturer and visiting professor of Church history, giving a course on the Celtic Church. At the opening service the new student stalls recently given to the chapel were occupied for the first time.

REDECORATION JOB IN CHICAGO

★ The complete cleaning and redecoration of St. James Church, Chicago, is being made possible by a layman who heeded the request of the rector, the Rev. Howard S. Kennedy, "that something be done to clean up this place." Kennedy has been given $14,000 by the layman, whose name is not being revealed, and the Chicago priest raised $6,000 among friends to finish the job. The entire nave, nartex, and sanctuary are being redecorated, as are Sunday school, assembly rooms, and the parish offices. The work will be finished in November.

St. James, where the Brotherhood of St. Andrew was founded, and which is the spiritual home of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew in Japan, will "now be able to serve as a clean and presentable meeting center in Chicago for any Episcopal group" according to a parish spokesman.

Since coming to St. James a short time ago Mr. Kennedy has obtained 60 medical, dental, and nursing students for the parish, many of whom receive communion on their way to work, and has begun an active canvass among hotels and apartments for non-active Episcopalians.

CHURCH PROGRAM PRESENTED

★ Forty key laymen of Southern California met September 29th at Pasadena to hear John C. F. Merrifield, business man of Seattle, Washington, present the program of the Church. Following his address an intensive instruction session was held so that those attending might pass on the message to others. Also addressing the meeting was Bishop Campbell, suffragan, and the Rev. Edward McNair and the Rev. Charles H. Perry.

EPISCOPAL STUDENT CENTER at Louisiana State University is a memorial to the late Bishop Davis Sessums

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EDITORIALS

Why People Lie

IT is a distressing thing, and a fearful thing, to read our papers these days and to learn about the great amount of dishonesty which controls the lives of men. From recent revelations, the evil practice of lying, distorting, slandering, and name-calling is no respecter of age, sex or station. Congressmen are guilty; executive officers are guilty; college athletes are guilty. And, as a result, a feeling of trust and confidence in one's fellow has given rise to feelings of suspicion, hatred and distrust.

Why do men lie? Basically, it is because they are fearful and self-centered. They lie for personal advantage or else they lie to protect themselves from social condemnation and to earn themselves a bit of security, false though it may be. Men lie, in the last analysis, because they are sinful and, lacking true interest in the well-being of all the others who make up the human community, they believe that what happens to them only is important. Given this sense of values, lying and dishonesty become a logical manner of conduct since they effectively cut off real relationship with other beings and exalt one's own personal desires and wishes.

And yet, to a Christian, lying and dishonesty are sins. In his epistle to the Colossians, St. Paul counsels: "Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds." In other words, the Christian owes it to himself, and to his God, as a new, or converted man, to tell the truth.

In Shakespeare's tragedy, Othello, one of the greatest villians of literature, Iago, announces that falsehood is a parasite that lives on the body of honesty. Lying and dishonesty is only effective as a means of conduct when the liar or thief is working within a framework of trust. If no man trusted another, or believed the words of another, all speech would be a lie and all actions would be suspect. The liar can continue to be false only when he has trusting souls to fool.

As Christians, we believe that the world was created by a good and logical God. He made our order of existence according to certain natural laws—laws which can be trusted to operate at all times. Without trust in these laws, we would soon be dead or insane. We could not exist without a firm belief in them. God does not lie nor does he distort his laws. Therefore, we can live our lives in trust.

And man is created in the image of God. We are meant to live our lives in imitation of him. Such imitation means that for us all falsehood, lying, slander, and dishonesty is evil and destroys the basic nature of creation as God has made it. If we have put off the old man with all of his deeds, we do not lie to one another but live in a fellowship of trust and love.

★

"Quotes"

HOW can a Church claim to be God's Church if it fails to seek earnestly for the weaker members of society and to stand boldly in their behalf for proper standards of education and living? How can it retain its selfrespect if it makes no protest against the overworking of young children and women; the crowding of people into narrow and filthy and unsanitary quarters; against the payment of such low wages as make normal family living simply impossible to employees? Indifference and insensibility on the part of the Church to such wrongs cannot escape the condemnation of the law of Christ.—No man can read the Sermon on the Mount with an open mind and then dare to say that the Church has fulfilled its whole function when it has taught and listened to doctrinal and moral teaching.

—ETHELBERT TALBOT
Late Bishop of Bethlehem

★

A Holy Estate

IT has been said that the survival of man rests with the Christian Church alone because it is the one institution of life which is fundamentally concerned with marriage and family life. Since time began, of course, man and woman have joined themselves in love and affection and have sought to raise and protect their families. All religions and philosophies, as well as all sciences, recognize this basic fact of life.

Through the centuries, however, the Church has been the special protector of the marriage relationship. In no other faith, save Judaism and Christianity, is marriage held in such sacred esteem. We are forever conscious of the fact that Jesus of Nazareth was a member of a family and that he was nurtured in life by his parents, Joseph and Mary, who had committed themselves to each other before God.

In marriage two persons enter into a relationship which, of necessity, forces them, as individuals, to forego their own exclusive pleasure. This is a hard thing for us to do. We each have our own wishes, ideals and desires. To make them fit into the wishes, ideals and desires of another person is difficult. But that is what marriage demands of us. All marriage is a treasure which is bought at a great price: the price of losing one's identity and freedom in the identity of another creature.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

There is little wonder, in a time when man has chosen to live increasingly without God, that one out of four marriages ends in divorce. In an era when men, seemingly, count only material things as good, it is logical that the marriage bond should be, not a strong wire cable, but a cotton thread which snaps under the slightest pressure.

The Church, however, teaches extreme reverence for marriage. Marriage is a cable, not a thread. This means that marriage is never to be lightly entered into nor is it to be profaned or lightly set aside. Rather it is a holy tie between two of God's creatures which must be honored and preserved as a holy estate.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The Saint and The Human Condition

BY

T. S. KIRKPATRICK SCOTT-CRAIG

Professor of Philosophy, Dartmouth College

"THE best of a bad job is all any of us make of it—Except of course, the saints . . ."

So counsels Sir Henry Reilly, that enigmatic central figure in Mr. Eliot's Cocktail Party. He is speaking to a world which is still the wasteland, a world filled with lunacy, violence, stupidity, greed: a world where millions are increasingly making not the best but the worst of a bad job. To make the best of a bad job, to achieve, in our inhuman world, what Sir Henry later calls "the human condition," is therefore a salvation to be worked out with diligence. Fortunately the end and the means can be stated in familiar terms—avoidance of excessive expectation, giving and taking what there is to give and take, contentment with the morning which separates, contentment with the evening which brings us together for casual talk before the fire.

We can, however, as Sir Henry explains, take a more striking course. We can rise with the saints above the human condition. We can do more than make the best of a bad job out of what there is to give and take; and this likewise is a salvation to be worked out with diligence. But, in this case, Sir Henry concludes, the way can not be described in familiar terms; the path of the saint is one along which we must "journey blind."

If the Cocktail Party be a true reading of our times, of the world and we ourselves be a wasteland, a domain not of justice and friendship and charity, but of injustice, unfriendship, uncharity —then one must confess, as Sir Henry is unwilling to do, that the doctrine of the human condition is just as esoteric as the doctrine of sanctity. All doctrines, philosophical as well as theological, is esoteric in the circumstances of our day. Even the splendid renewal of philosophy and theology through the partial re-discovery of Aristotle and Aquinas dismays us too often by the antics of an animated skeleton.

For we have seemingly forgotten that when philosophy and theology have been great, they have been imaginative philosophy and imaginative theology. Aristotle appealed to minds whose imaginations had been stretched by Homer and Aeschylus; Aquinas to spirits whose imaginations had been stretched beyond breaking-point by the Divine Liturgy, and by that incredible poem, the Bible. Philosophical and theological doctrine, philosophical and theological instruction, can be alive only in a world which possesses or is possessed by imagination. If we cannot imagine what it would be like to emerge from the wasteland to the human condition of giving and taking; if we cannot imagine what it would be like to emerge from the wasteland to sanctity; then no doctrinal instruction, no planning or controls, no exhortation or command, above all no coercion, can bring us one inch nearer justice, or friendship, or charity.

Visual Imagination

IF we cannot imagine . . . Now, since man is above all the seeing animal, his imagination is above all a visual imagination. If we want to fool at home with that electrical marvel which opens the doors for us in Pennsylvania Station, we have to turn it into an electric eye and pretend it sees us coming. If we lose our sight and become dependent on a dog to guide us, we have to pretend that it sees, rather than hears and smells, for us; we call it our seeing-eye dog. If from birth or infancy, like Helen Keller, or Kathryne Frick, we are afflicted with blindness, then we are just lucky if we do not fall into the hands of a teacher who does not diminish our sense of reality by trying to disguise our sensory deficiency. And I have no doubt that the odd philosophy which means so much to Miss Keller appealed to her in the first place because her teacher, unlike Miss Frick's, encouraged her to disguise her blindness, and to write as if she could visualize "blue pools of dog-violets" and "cascades of golden primroses." Perhaps to some people, unimaginative people, a primrose by the river's brim must remain a yellow primrose and nothing more; but if we induce people to imagine it as golden instead of yellow, corruption has already set in. We begin to see what isn't there; we are in the wasteland, with all its lunacy, madness, and death. For the lunatic, as well as the poet, is "of imagination all compact"; but while the poet "gives to airy nothing, a local habitation and a name," his dangerous relative with a distorted visual imagination continually "sees more devils than vast hell can hold; that is the madman."

Indeed, I sometimes wonder if the widespread attempt to have youngsters imagine Joyce Kilmer's trees, in the course of which they have to envisage trees standing on their heads to pray, does not indicate pretty clearly a crisis in the Western Imagination. For if your poetry be lunacy, how can we hope to approach the ways of salvation?

The poet Shelley once remarked, with romantic insight together with romantic exaggeration, that the poets are the unacknowledged legislators of the world. The poets are rather the unacknowledged executives of our world. For it is they who stretch our imaginations. It is they who enable us to see ourselves as we are and to imagine what it would be like to be different. It is they who, by stretching our imaginations, enable us to get things done which we had fancied could not be done; things good, things bad, things diabolic.

We can see this written large in the public life of our times. Was it not, for example, the poet in Mr. Churchill, his daring (perhaps too daring) identification of Britain's battle with the blood, toil, tears, and sweat of Gethsemane, which stretched the imagination of the British people to see themselves in another and greater light? And was it not this imaginative identification which released the inventiveness and valour needed to rescue the army from the beaches of Dunkirk, and to create a port of re-entry where none had been by land or sea? And is it not an impoverishment of imagination in honest Mr. Attlee and austere Sir Stafford Cripps, which goes far to explain the widespread dull resentment at the present state of welfare? Or to come to our own country; was it not the poet in Mr. Roosevelt which persuaded us that we had nought to fear but fear itself, and thereby enabled us to improvise our way out of the depression, out of the armistice, out of the phony war? And is it not at the moment a certain lack of poetry in the Pentagon, a certain imaginative stolidity in the White House—its studied policy of unrevolutionary renovation, its careful preservation of an eighteenth century facade—not to speak of the collapse of the State Department into a heap of broken images, which goes far to explain the contortions of Congress, the fantastic ineptitudes of Representative Tweedledum and Senator Tweedledee?

The faltering of the American imagination was of course already apparent in the Roosevelt era—when the President, in his own handwriting and by the hand of Mr. Willkie, transmitted to the Premier those timorous lines of Longfellow:

> Sail on, O Ship of State . . .
> Humanity with all its fears,
> Is hanging breathless on thy fate.

And it needed a strong dose of Churchillian imagination, the return through Clough to the images of sea and sky, to bring us back on an even keel:

> For while the tired waves, vainly breaking,
> Seem here no painful inch to gain
> Far back, through creeks and inlets making,
> Comes silent, flooding in, the main.

But nothing prepared me at least for that corruption of the American imagination, especially of the American Episcopalian imagination, that dreadful day—dies irae, dies illa—that parody of the Last Judgment, when the Secretary of State publicly identified his private duty to visit the prisoner, with what our Lord, seated on the mountain-side said privately to his disciples about that public event when the Son of Man shall visit us in his glory to separate the nations one from another. No wonder the newsmen were unfamiliar with the reference; no wonder they were overwhelmed when they found a State Department aide in the anteroom, thoughtfully providing a Bible where they could read the text. For the Bible does not claim that America is God's own country, or that any of our judgments are his judgment.

It is therefore not wholly surprising that, when on May Day some fanciful citizens of Wisconsin staged a Communist revolution, within a week the mayor had died of a cerebral hemorrhage, and one participating clergyman had died of coronary thrombosis. With the collapse and corruption of our imaginative world we have invented a diabolic dream with which we can kill ourselves more surely and quickly than in any atomic or biochemical war. In our lunacy we see more devils than vast hell can hold; and perish.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

This-Worldly Adversary

WE can however take heart if we still dare to take just a peek behind the Iron Curtain. And the first thing to notice is that Mr. Stalin is blessedly innocent of any religious imagination whatsoever. (If he had one it was doubtless killed for him during his years in a theological seminary)! There is no reason for Christians to fear Communism, to approach it with holy dread, whether in the present cold war or in that blazing inferno to which we may have to resort. For Mr. Stalin, in a permanently significant remark during the late war, disclosed a total unimaginative realism which proves he is not the Devil. You recall what he said when a possible role for the Pope in the conflict was being discussed: "How many regiments has he got?" Stalin, having escaped both heaven and hell, is a this-worldly adversary indeed. Americans still have a sense of the other world, even if we dangerously identify the United States with God's own country; American Episcopalians have still some spiritual imagination even if they think unimaginatively of His Holiness as one among several foreign bishops. At least we do not imagine him as the Commander of the Swiss Guard. This Stalin does, and gives us the chance to meet him on a purely secular level. But the opportunity demands that our secular imaginations be stretched in time by poets and artists.

Here again our imaginative collapse may lead us to evaluate amiss the imaginative world in which and by which Russians, whether Marxists or Christians, appear to live—the tie that binds Stalin with Trotsky, with Lenin, with the Czars, with indeed the Dukes of Muscovy. We can fool ourselves all we like with empty talk about that animated skeleton dialectical materialism; we can fool ourselves too about the brute facts of the communist revolution, the police-state and the rest of it. For what we in the west are encountering for the first time is a vision of life in which bare theory and brute fact are both secondary; an imagination of existence which is, moreover, almost totally foreign to us; a view of human nature and destiny dominated by the Great Eurasian Plain, where (as Mr. Wolfe has finely said) empires have always spread with elemental force "like the tide over limitless flats."

Whereas the western imagination, the imagination of the peoples of the Atlantic Heart-Lake rests in the great images drawn from sea and sky, the images to which Mr. Churchill turned at the height of the last world war, images which can be permeated by Humanism and by Christianity —the Russian Orient and the imagination of the peoples of the Asiatic Heart-Land are dominated by the endless stretch of forest and steppe. And yet, as Mr. Wolfe so rightly concludes: "How could a people not be great and not aspire to greatness, whose horizon was as unlimited as this Eurasian Plain?"

Here is the secret weapon of the Soviets, the imaginative appeal of the USSR to millions in Russia, in China, in India. What chance do we, in the west, still have of understanding it? What chance have we of containing and repelling it, by the force of an infinitely greater and finer vision? What chance unless our poets and artists are already re-creating our secular and religious imaginations, and enabling us to approach the ways of salvation?

Now we may return to Mr. Eliot and the Cocktail Party. For the importance of the play to me at least lies in its dramatic stretching of my imagination to see, with Mr. Eliot's Chamberlaynes, the wasteland I am in at the beginning, and by the end what it would be like to be restored to the human condition, to be making the best of a bad job. Here is philosophic wisdom for our time in philosophic form, in imaginative form; just because through its beginning, middle, and end, through its dramatic logic, it evokes for us what it would mean to use, from the beginning, human means for human ends, to use, in justice and friendship "what there is to give and take."

Poets Contributions

AT this point I may begin to tread on dangerous ground, but while on the subject of the Cocktail Party, I feel impelled to remark that it is not, in its present form at least, exactly a treasury of theological wisdom. Mr. Eliot's Saint Celia bothers me; indeed his general approach to Christ and sanctity through the images of Krishna and Zarathustra is for me like seeking the unknown through the Unknowable—a technique more likely to bolster the views of Herbert Spencer than of more orthodox theologians. In fact, by listening, as Sir Henry Reilly might, to what Mr. Eliot does not say, I am almost led to believe that Protestants know more about sanctity than practicing Catholics; or if they don't know more about it they can talk about it more revealingly. I am not referring to eloquent sermons from distinguished pulpits, nor even to great lectures by Biblical theologians, but to the stretching of the spiritual imagination by poets nurtured on the dramatic poetry of the Bible. And in particular to the only profound Christian drama in English since Milton's Samson Agonistes, the Masque of Mercy by Robert Frost.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

In that play, as you may recall, poor Jonas Dove, the Biblical Jonah for our day, the prophet of doom on injustice in the name of divine justice, finds that he cannot trust God to be justice alone, "can't trust God to be unmerciful." But under the ministrations of an analyst Paul, a greater than Sir Henry Reilly, he comes to cry out "Mercy on me for having thought I knew."

And he is ready at the end which is not the end, to descend into the crypt, where he may learn to contemplate:

"Contemplate glory. There will be a light, Contemplate truth until it burn your eyes out . . ."

And it is on a crucifix that Jonas must fix his eyes so that he may learn to utter the central Christian affirmation

"Nothing can make injustice just but mercy."

Thus he becomes one of those called into that communion of saints which is the Church in its final mystery of being, the mystical fellowship of all believers—Chamberlaynes, Celias, and Jonahs alike.

And Frost's play is a Christian play, perhaps even in a sense that Milton's is not, in that it not only stretches our spiritual imaginations dramatically, but is consciously a play to end all plays, a play to send us from the theatre to Church. Preferably to where the Church in this world is most really the Church, preferably to where we are here and now, where the sacrifice of the altar is continually re-presented before the divine majesty. But not only to this place and to such places. For the Church, or something more like the Church than anything else, is also to be found elsewhere in the world, where Frost has found the Church —as where, for example, a crucifix is painted on the cellar wall by a religious Aztec Indian, which happens to be the busy basement of Baker library at Dartmouth College, with its notorious and revealing murals of the march of Christ through American history.

Quaker Statement

IN fact, it is persons of neither strictly Catholic nor strictly Protestant piety who are today making the most instructive analyses of contemporary public life. Nothing that Mr. Eliot has written as a sociologist—for all he does is to restate the value of a leisured class; nothing that Mr. Frost has said on the public issues of our day —for all he does is to stress the desirability of cutting up the world into the disunited states of Vermont; nothing that they have said can compare with the recent Quaker analysis of the conditions under which those two great commonwealths, the USA and the USSR, can and may live in one world of justice and friendship. And this Quaker analysis is done, as far as I can see, without benefit of Biblical revelation or of the Catholic witness.

Yet the Quaker analysis, and the Quaker proposals, have an inherent and fatal defect. As the report itself admits, all depends on the spirit in which negotiations are conducted—a spirit which can above all bridge the gulf between regional interests and world law. But on what does the spirit, humanly speaking, depend? On the stretching of the imagination. Before we can hope to work for, far less live in, a world of justice and friendship, our imaginations must be stretched by the poets and artists.

I don't believe that most of us in the west are capable at the moment of the amount of "imagination-stretching" which Mr. Eliot and Mr. Frost put us through. Still less would I claim that the world can bear the imagination impact of the Bible or the liturgy. But if, as a naturalized citizen I dared to propose a philosophic peace plan which had even a remote chance of success, I would arrange for a secretary at the White House to call up his opposite number in the Kremlin and have them hustle off their respective masters to a double feature. It would consist in the first place of the Cherry Orchard, which might show Mr. Stalin that western Humanism has a place in Russia, and might introduce Mr. Truman to the problem of the Eurasian imagination. And it would consist in the second place of Death of a Salesman which might show Mr. Truman that Horatio Alger is not enough, and might introduce Mr. Stalin to the problems of the western imagination.

The results I would guarantee to be spectacular. But perhaps a more modest beginning is more within the powers of people like you and me. Just take an ordinary Rand McNally map of the world —a really scientific one with all the lovely distortions of equidistant polar projections, and ask your students, the people you are teaching, whether they would print it that side up if they were living not in New York or Oskosh but in Leningrad-St. Petersburg, living in Russia under any regime whatsoever. And I think they would say: "Of course not." For to see the world scientifically you must center the map on where you live and move and have your being; center it on America if you live there, center it on Russia if you live there. Though all you have to do in order to see what the world looks like if you live in Moscow, is to turn an American printed polar projection map upside down. And, of course, all they have to do if they want to see what the world looks like if you live in New York, is to turn a Russian printed polar projected map upside down.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Perhaps if all of us could be induced to stretch our visual imaginations that way we might be readier for the dramatic stretching of our ethical imaginations by Eliot to comprehend the human condition; readier too for the dramatic stretching of our spiritual imaginations by Frost to comprehend the merciful holiness of God and his saints. And then we might be able to read our Bibles again; we might be ready to participate in offering to God that cult and worship which is his due. We might eventually be ready to work successfully for world law under God. We might even produce —an American saint.

As Worshipper

SO at least the problem of sanctity and of the human condition appears to a philosopher at work in the world. But I should like in conclusion to say how it appears to me as a worshipping Christian in the Church.

Our scientists are busy all the time with their accurate observations and measurements. Every man, day in and day out, uses his senses to focus himself in space. The artists produce works through the performance of which we re-focus ourselves in time. Surely in religion, surely in the Christian religion, there is something we can do, some de-focusing of ourselves we can undergo, which will lighten the burden of the intolerable mystery, some way by which the eternal faith can be experienced as knowledge.

Unless I am altogether mistaken there is something we can do, something which Christians in the Church have done from the beginning. We can join that unknown disciple, the friend of Cleopas, on the walk to Emmaus. We can converse about the great hopes we have entertained that the Kingdom and the Christ are nigh; and we can discuss our disillusionment and despair at the apparent defeat by sin and death of all our fondest hopes and highest expectations. And then a stranger may join us, and explain how it was all intended to be so from the beginning, as the Scriptures fore-said; and our hearts will glow with faith. But we will not yet have knowledge. And then the unknown, the stranger, will bless God and break bread for us. And he will be known to us in the breaking of bread.

We may not be able to know from our conduct that we have become saints and merciful ones. We may not even be able to know that we have bettered our human condition. But just as the scientist can know the events he so carefully observes; just as we all can know by our senses whether a chair will bear our weight or not; just as in the arts we can learn to discriminate between the good, the bad, and the holy; so in the sacred celebration of our holy religion, we can be as it were de-focussed, and come to know him when we have believed, come to know him whose nature and whose name is love. Whatever the world may say, here in the Church we know the divine mercy and what it is to be a saint; here we know that mercy and sanctity can redeem not only the powers of the wasteland but our little achievements of justice and friendship; here we know that God's love and mercy can raise the human condition itself into the communion of saints.

If we may, without irreverence, re-state the whole magnificent truth in terms of an imagination emerging from the lunacy of the wasteland, then all we would have to do would be to alter one word in the famous first verse of Horatio Bonar's hymn:

Here, O my Lord, I see thee face to face;
Here would I touch and handle things unseen,
Here grasp with firmer hand the eternal grace,
And all my lunacy upon thee lean.

But perhaps we can rest in the precise words of that profoundly Christian and Catholic genius which imagined at once the wasteland, the human condition of giving and taking, and the dimension of sanctity:

The quality of mercy is not strain'd;
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath; it is twice blest;
It blesseth him that gives and him that takes.
It is an attribute to God himself:
And earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice. Therefore . . .
If justice be thy plea, consider this.
That in the course of justice, none of us
Should see salvation: we do pray for mercy . . .

New Edition
MEANING OF THE REAL PRESENCE
By
G. A. STUDDERT-KENNEDY
The famous pamphlet has sold into the hundreds of thousands 10c for single copies $2.50 for 50 copies
$4 for 100 copies
Cash with order please
THE WITNESS Tunkhannock, Pa.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Religion and the Mind

BY
CLINTON J. KEW

THE LONELY

"I AM almost seventy years old. I feel very lonely. I lost my husband a year ago. Nothing is left in life for me. What can I do to regain some of the happiness I once knew?"

Many of the men and women who have come to our healing services complain of loneliness. In the case of some women they have depended too much on their husbands; their whole life has been centered around the man of the house. One woman remarked, "I don't know what to do, he would hold my umbrella for me and buy my tickets for me whenever I went on a vacation. I didn't want any friends, my husband and I were very happy together." The man and wife who have lived for their own ends often are completely lost when one is taken by death. There are times when they will feel shut off from life; times when they will feel that they have failed and life has robbed them of what they should have. A man and wife must not become too self centered and narcisstic.

Why does loneliness take place? If parents demand too high a price for love, then their children tend to be selfish. If parents love is not given in a wholesome manner, the child will turn towards himself for love. Sometimes parents become too dominating with their love, and again the child is thrown back on himself, where he should not be. In these three ways children never learn to give love in a wholesome way. They will love only when they receive love. This self-centered attitude towards life is carried over to adult life. Many people are unable to love enough to find a life partner. Sometimes they do marry and if so, they will live together unto themselves. People who are burdened with selfishness are afraid to give love to others.

When people grow older they become even more sensitive over their status in life. They are highly sensitive to the possibility of being ignored or not appreciated. Many of them, the unmarried in particular, have usually surrendered themselves to the dullest of routine and the petty individual habits of daily living. A school teacher was retired at sixty-five. Her profession had become a framework for her routine type of existence. Now it had suddenly come to an end. She tried reading to the sick in one of the hospitals; she tried to travel alone about the world; and she even tried to make friends. But she complained, "Nothing makes me happy. If I could only get my old job back, I'd be happy." Women in particular want to do the same thing in the same way at the same time each day. It is so easy to do the same thing every day. It is so uncomfortable to make changes, even to the learning of a new hymn in church.

People who have never learned to give their love and friendship to others will suffer from loneliness. It is the result of the incapacity to make friends. Such people who draw their love inward feel bitter and resentful towards the world.

If you have never created interest in life, if you have no compensation, you will be one of the most lonely, unhappy persons. You will still cling to life, but what a bore life is! If you have retained some active interest in something, or someone, how fortunate you are indeed.

As people grow older their minds turn in on themselves. Lonely people need our sympathy and understanding and help. Fortunate indeed, if you can develop your faith, making frequent pilgrimages to the chapel or church. Accept your loss, if you have been unfortunate. Do not grow old before your time. Try worshipping in church every Sunday morning, meditating quietly in the cool shadows of the chapel. If you can lose your life in other interests, in people, in doing something for God, you will find something worth living for. Losing one's life in worship, in service to others, in some great cause, will take away the fear of loneliness and uselessness.

What Is Confirmation?

BY
PHILIP F. McNAIRY
Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Buffalo

AN old commentary on the English Prayer Book has this to say about the rite of confirmation. "From the earliest ages of the Christian Church, and in every part of it all over the world, until modern times, the rite of confirmation has been considered essential to the full perfection of Christian life in those who have attained to years when they can discern fully between right and wrong. Nor have any Christians been ordinarily permitted by the Church to partake of the Holy Communion until after they have been confirmed." This sacramental act is referred to in the New Testament under several names. Acts 8, verses 14-17, refers to the service as the "laying on of hands" ("Then laid they their hands on them and they received the Holy Ghost"). Again it is called the "seal" in Ephesians 1, verses 13 and 14 ("After that ye believed in Christ ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise . . .") Still another name for confirmation is "unction" or "annointing." In the First Epistle of John, Chapter one, we read, "Ye have an unction from the holy one, and ye know all things."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Early practice in the Church indicates that persons were baptized and confirmed as soon afterward as possible, often immediately, that the great gift of the Holy Spirit might be fully theirs. During the years of persecution, persons had been known to receive baptism and confirmation solely for the purpose of betrayal of the meeting place of Christians. Tradition has it that in order to meet this difficulty, the two rites became separate, that candidates for membership in the Christian Church might be tested and properly prepared. While the stigma of suspicion has long since been removed, the Church still finds a thorough period of preparation to be of great value to persons receiving confirmation.

Confirmation is also the fulfillment of the obligations taken by sponsors at the baptism of children in their behalf, that, "so soon as sufficiently instructed" the child be brought to the bishop to be confirmed by him.

While the history of this practice places the proper emphasis on the part of confirmation which implies something done for the individual—that he be "confirmed and strengthened," we need to remember that each candidate has a personal share in the rite. He is asked to "ratify and confirm" the vow which he made or was made for him at his baptism. This confirmation of his promise "to follow Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour" is now made by him personally and in the presence of the whole congregation of which he is about to become a full member, and subsequently, to receive the Holy Communion as a part of the same. Thus once again we see that Christianity, like its cross, symbolizes through its sacraments the two-way passage—from God to man, and from man to man. Confirmation is both a privilege and a responsibility, preserved and safeguarded as the means of membership through the long centuries of the Church's existence. They, upon whose heads the hands of the bishop are laid, become one with that great company of saints and godly souls who, in the strength of the grace of God, have directed their lives toward him.

Inspiring Others

BY

WILLIAM P. BARNDS
Rector of St. Matthew's, Lincoln

ON a college campus, quite by accident, I fell into conversation with a student, who spoke enthusiastically of an English teacher she had that summer, who was doing an excellent job of teaching, and the student deplored the fact that she had had such poor English teachers in high school and in college up to this time. She said that the professor's field was really history, but that he was teaching English that summer. Intrigued by this description, I dropped in to visit the class. Sure enough, Dr. Savage was an inspiring teacher, and his treatment of Brownings "My Lost Duchess" and "How They Brought the Good News From Ghent to Aix" is unforgettable.

In analyzing his success, I would say that he knew his subject, loved it, and thought it was important, and he wanted the class to share in the subject.

As Christians we are concerned with interesting other people in our religion. Some of us have positions of leadership, maybe in Church school, guild, or on the vestry. We help in guiding other people in the faith. We are likely to be successful in this if we really know something about the Church and our faith. We will inspire others to love, if we ourselves love it. If we genuinely believe that Christianity is important, others are apt to catch that belief from us. Then, as a good teacher, we must not only think of the subject and love it, but we must also have the class in mind, and want other people to share in what we enjoy. With these attitudes we will inspire fellow Christians and others, as did the history professor who loved English.

An Invitation To Roman Catholics

By ROBERT S. TRENBATH
Rector of Trinity, Washington, D. C.

Reprinted as a leaflet at numerous requests

$3 for 100 copies
$2 for 50 copies
5c for single copies

THE WITNESS
Tunkhannock Pennsylvania

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT, Book Editor

Here I Stand. By Roland Bainton. Abington-Cokesbury. $4.75.

"This spiritual father of Adolf Hitler says that the state can do no wrong. My detestation of that man grows." In these vigorous and unflattering terms Dean Inge, "the Gloomy Dean," recently characterized Martin Luther, the subject of Roland Bainton's book, Here I Stand.

In view of the fact that Hitler derived his doctrine of racism not from Lutherism but from the old Germanic pagan religions, one finds it hard to agree with Dean Inge. And after reading Roland Bainton's Abingdon-Cokesbury Award winning biography of Luther, one is convinced that the accusation is entirely unfair.

The book reveals that Luther's motivating concern at all times was the supremacy ,and purity of the Christian religion. While it is true that he counselled submission to the constituted officers of the state, the author makes it abundantly clear that Luther did this, first, on the authority of the Bible, citing St. Paul's teaching that "the powers that be are ordained of God." (Rom. 13:1), and second, because he abhorred violence and bloodshed and saw submission to the state as the only way to preserve peace and order. He vigorously opposed Muntzer in the latter's fomentation of the Peasants' War.

But at no time did Luther counsel submission of conscience to the state. Indeed, he urged his followers to disobey the state when matters of religious belief and conscience were at stake. In this he could speak with conviction for had he not almost alone opposed the Roman Catholic Church and the Holy Roman Empire for conscience sake? One feels, had he lived under Hitler, he would have been a Martin Niemoller rather than a Reichbishop Mueller.

Author Bainton has given us an exciting biography of one of history's greatest men. The reader feels himself living in those turbulent times, and whether he agrees with Luther's religious ideas or not, he cannot but be thrilled and inspired by the man's massive strength of soul and sheer courage as he faces the almost unchallenged power of the papacy and of the medieval Church plus the political power of the Holy Roman Empire at the Diet of Worms with his: "I cannot and I will not recant anything, for to go against conscience is neither right nor safe. Here I stand, I cannot do otherwise. God help me. Amen."

The book is a great biography. More than this, it makes an invaluable contribution to our knowledge of the Reformation period. No great man can be understood apart from his historical, social, and religious environment. The author has drawn upon his scholarly knowledge of the period to give us the historical setting in which Martin Luther lived and taught. And he does this with consummate fairness.

The book is not written from a narrowly Protestant viewpoint (Dr. Bainton is a Quaker). It points out that not a few of the leaders in the medieval Church were sympathetic with Luther's reforms, especially regarding the sale of indulgences, and that much of the corruption and abuse against which he taught was corrected in the subsequent Counter-Reformation.

But with all this fairness of treatment, the author still leaves no doubt that the Reformation was necessary. Throughout the book, what Luther was against is overshadowed by what he was for. He believed the Bible to be the Word of God, the only true spiritual and moral guide for the people. As such, it should be in their native language. So he made his great German translation. He believed in justification by faith. He freed the people from oppressive external controls and created a new inward desire for moral standards. He believed in the priesthood of all believers, thus bringing a new democracy to religion from which has sprung the political-democratic ideals of our time. As a former monk, in his own marriage he exalted the Christian family above the celibate life, thus strengthening what few today would deny is the essential unit of a stable society, the Christian home. He was a man of God who believed that when God guides, a man must follow though he oppose the whole world. And that is what he did!

An exciting biography! An invaluable historical contribution! For either or both of these reasons this book will richly repay the reader. —Donald J. Campbell, Suffragan Bishop of Los Angeles.

The New Testament: A Conspectus. By J. W. Hunkin. Macmillan. $1.25.

An excellent little introduction to the study of the New Testament, written by the Bishop of Truro. It it meant for beginners, and is simple and easy to read.

ONE AND HOLY

by Karl Adam

Dr. Adam does not spare the Catholic Church in the account of the causes of the Reformation with which he begins this book. He continues with a study of the differences that have developed between the religion of the first Reformers and that of modern Protestants, and ends with a discussion of the possibility of a reunion of all the Christian Churches. He is by no means optimistic about this, but not hopeless either. It is significant that he feels that one of the first steps toward it must be a better understanding by Catholics of those positive values which Protestantism has retained. This is the first book since the war by the author of The Spirit of Catholicism. $2.00

STIMULI

by Msgr. Ronald Knox

Sermons so small that the author compares them to gnat stings (noting that "a gnat sting is better than no sting at all"). Each takes about a minute and a half to read, but a disproportionately long time to forget. They originally appeared in the London Sunday Times. $2.25

THE MONKS WHO WORRIED

Pictures and Text

by Russell Collinge

Each of the monks in a monastery and why they worried about us—you see four of them below, sitting down so as to worry better. This is one of the pleasantest books we have published. $1.00

Order books from your bookstore

For more about these books and the 16 others we are publishing this Fall, see Sheed & Ward's OWN TRUMPET —Testina MacGill will send it to you free and postpaid on request.

SHEED & WARD

NEW YORK 3

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

BISHOP WELLES BUILDS SUMMER HOME

BY

Frederick H. Sontag

★ Bishop and Mrs. Edward Welles of West Missouri, finished their summer vacation at Southwest Harbor, Me. recently by starting to live in their new house, after two summers of sleeping in their car. In 1949, Bishop Welles bought a lot in this lovely Maine village. During 1950, after he and his wife had cleared the land of trees and bushes, they began to build a house. With mattresses in their station wagon serving as home, and with their children, Kathrina, 16, Harriet, 13, Edward Jr., 11, and Peter, 9, sleeping in tents, the family made good progress in building their new home. This year they camped inside the unfinished house at summer's end.

The Bishop, who is usually most receptive to reporters, was nowhere to be found on repeated visits to the house, with the word out that the whole project was not being publicized at this time.

Neighbors, however, spoke freely of their joy in having the Bishop move into their community, and told of one neighbor sheltering the Welles children during rains.

The attractive house may soon be subject of national attention, as Maine A. F. of L. leaders would like to have "Builder" Welles join the carpenters and bricklayers unions, and so become the first Episcopal Bishop to hold AFL membership cards.

GENERAL SEMINARY STARTS YEAR

★ The Michaelmas term opened at the General Theological Seminary on September 26th with 201 students. Of these, 14 are graduate students; 53 seniors; 58 middlers; 55 juniors or first year men; 11 special students; and 10 guest students. The registration is the largest in the history of the Seminary.

Dean Rose has announced the following faculty changes: the Rev. Dr. Marshall Bowyer Stewart, for over twenty years professor of dogmatic theology in the Seminary, is now professor emeritus and lecturer in dogmatic theology. The Rev. Norman Pittenger, formerly instructor in Christian apologetics, becomes professor of Christian apologetics. The Rev. Robert S. Bosher, formerly instructor in ecclesiastical history, becomes associate professor of ecclesiastical history. T. S. Kirkpatrick Scott-Craig becomes a lecturer

Bargain Package For a Dollar

THE PRAYER BOOK: ITS HISTORY AND PURPOSE by Bishop Johnson
MAKE CHRISTMAS CHRISTIAN. What One Woman's Gift Accomplished
WHY WORSHIP? by Charles Herbert Young
THE WORK OF A BISHOP by Bishop Lawrence
THE CHRISTIAN AND HIS MONEY by Bishop Washburn
THE MARRIAGE SERVICE by Hugh McCandless
PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS ON RUNNING A PARISH by Bishop Lawrence
MEANING OF THE REAL PRESENCE by G. A. Studdert-Kennedy
WHY BELIEVE IN JESUS? by Albert H. Lucas
MISSIONS DEMAND UNITY by Bishop Azariah of Dornakal

All for One Dollar. Cash with Order Please

THE WITNESS Tunkhannock, Pa.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

in Christian apologetics. Dean Chester B. Emerson, and the Rev. Robert E. Terwilliger become lecturers in pastoral theology. The Rev. Arthur C. Kelsey becomes a fellow; and the following become tutors: the Rev. Messrs. Gordon Griffith, John W. Pyle, John A. Cranston Jr., Thomas C. Lee, and Steele W. Martin.

EAST GERMANY IS AIDED

★ The World Council of Churches reports that tubercular and undernourished deaconesses, near-destitute catechists and church workers, and needy families in east Germany are scheduled to receive 4,000 specially prepared packages of food this fall, as a result of an "ecumenical parcel action" made possible by the Christian overseas program. A list of nine Churches is responsible for this special gift, seven of them are in the United States, one in Canada and one in Sweden. The Episcopal Church is one of the seven in this country.

The Churches interested provided funds which enabled CROP bulk shipments to be made up into ten-pound food packages. The packages contain margerine or lard, powdered milk, sugar, canned meat and fish, rice and pudding powder.

Most East Zone food items are still rationed and are not yet sufficiently plentiful to supply everyone, even to those who can afford to purchase for their daily needs. Butter costs about four days' wages per pound. A pound of sugar costs slightly more than one day's salary.

NEW TELEVISION FEATURE

★ "Frontiers of Faith," new religious television program, began last Sunday with a live telecast from the Heavenly Rest, New York. Presiding Bishop Sherrill preached and the Rev. John Large, rector, read the lessons, and the choir sang in the half hour national program.

Program time will be equally divided between Roman Catholics, Jews, and Anglican, Protestant, and Orthodox Churches affiliated with the National Council of Churches.

Although no representative of the Episcopal National Council promotion department called on Miss Doris Ann, the newly appointed NBC-TV head for religious programs, Frederick Sontag, Episcopal public relations executive, began work with her from the day of her appointment, and he expressed "gratitude that our Church has been chosen to begin this series in spite of lack of interest from 281." The late Russell Dill, former treasurer of the National Council, encouraged Sontag to continue his work with television networks to encourage them to feature Episcopal programs.

Another Busy Year For Theological Seminaries

Four years ago the Deans of our Church's ten seminaries estimated their maximum capacity at 800 students.

Last year those same ten schools enrolled 1003 men. Early reports indicate that this figure will be exceeded this current academic year.

For the effectiveness of their program of training men for the Ministry, every one of these institutions depends upon the prayers and contributions of Church people.

* * * *

Berkeley Divinity School, New Haven, Conn.; Bexley Hall, Gambier, Ohio; Church Divinity School of the Pacific, Berkeley, Calif.; Divinity School of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia; Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass.; The General Theological Seminary, New York City; Nashotah House, Nashotah, Wis.; School of Theology of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.; Seabury-Western Theological Seminary, Evanston, Ill.; Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CHURCHES OVERSEAS

CATHOLIC PEACE CONGRESS IN PRAGUE

A Catholic Peace Congress, attended by 1,600 delegates, including three bishops, met in Prague. Non-Catholic guests included Prof. Joseph L. Hromadka of the Comenius Theological Seminary. A delegation was appointed to call on President Gottwald to assure him of the clergy's loyalty to the government. The headline speaker was Joseph Plojhar, an excommunicated priest who is now minister of health, who declared that "breaking with the Vatican, and despite its excommunications, still leaves us priests and servants of God. The clergy must help to build a better world."

During his speech he denounced what he called the Vatican's "crimes against mankind" since the beginning of world war one. He wound up with a defense of the new German-Polish border after first assailing Cardinal Spellman for "agitating among American youth to join forces in killing old men, women and children in Korea."

Another speaker was Zdenek Fierlinger, minister of Church affairs, who charged that the Vatican follows a "clearly subjugated, exploiting and Fascist policy."

BASQUE PRIESTS BARRED FROM MAGAZINE

Identical decrees have been issued by three Roman Catholic bishops of the Basque province of Spain, forbidding priests to lend support to a clandestine publication which opposes the Franco regime. The bishops said that the magazine is political "not to mention its not infrequent attacks on the ecclesiastical hierarchy."

It will be recalled that the Basque Province was militantly anti-Franco during the Spanish civil war and that priests generally were supporters of the Republican government.

WESTERN CHURCH GROUP VISITS HUNGARY

Twelve western Church leaders spent ten days in Hungary as guests of the Reformed and Lutheran Churches. Nine were from France, the others from England, including two clergymen of the Church of England. At a dinner given in their honor, one of the speakers was Prof. Joseph L. Hromadka, dean of the seminary at Prague and formerly on the faculty of the Princeton Theological Seminary, who is well known among American Church leaders. He told the visitors that he was "shocked by the prejudices of western Christians when they say the Christian life cannot be lived in communism. The truth is that I feel quite at home in it. We have all the possibilities to serve the Church faithfully under communism." He also said that he was not himself a communist, nor did he expect western Churchmen to become communists.

GERMAN CHURCH LEADERS WORRY OVER SECTS

Leaders of the Evangelical Church of Wurttemberg, Germany, have called a special meeting of pastors to discuss means to combat "the current all-out campaign of the sects among Evangelical believers." Special attention will be given to the Pentecostal movement, the new Apostolic movement, and Jehovah's Witnesses.

HUNGARIAN PRIESTS SUSPENDED

Four Roman Catholic priests of Hungary have been suspended, according to the Vatican radio, for cooperating with the government of their country.

NIEMOELLER PREACHES IN SOVIET ZONE

Pastor Martin Niemoeller, president of the Evangelical Church of Hessen and Nassau, is on a preaching tour in the Soviet Zone. In eight cities he is addressing meetings arranged by local Church authorities.

ITALIAN EVANGELICALS PROTEST BROADCASTS

The Federal Council of Italian Evangelical Churches protested against a question raised during a recent session of the Italian Senate in regard to Protestant radio broadcasts. The Council said its protest was motivated by the action of Senator Mario Riccio who asked the Prime Minister whether he "would not consider putting a stop to the devious Protestant propaganda which offends the Catholic religious soul of the Italian population."

Senator Riccio's question, the Council stated, offended the dignity of the Italian Evangelical churches and the freedom guaranteed by the Italian constitution. "Freedom of religious worship in any form, and therefore also on the air," the Council said, "is guaranteed by article 19 of the constitution. Evangelical religious services on the air are essential to those citizens who live in small communities where evangelical churches do not exist and for those who are physically incapable of attending church services."

The Council charged that during the past two years, Protestant religious broadcasts have been arbitrarily shifted by the network's management without previous notice. It requested that Protestant broadcasts be guaranteed every Sunday, Christmas, New Year's Day, Good Friday, and on other special occasions.

New "HARTAL" Auto Clothes-Rack

Saves a lot of packing, carries garments on hangers or in garment bags. Keeps clothes wrinkle-free, saves pressing bills. No installation expense, springs into position or out just as easy. Will not mar upholstery. No screws or bolts, FITS ANY CAR, hugs ceiling, does not interfere with headroom. Beautifully finished. New low price, $6.95 F.O.B. Port Washington, Wis.

When Writing: PLEASE Mention This Magazine.

THE SPECIALIZED PRODUCTS CO.
P. O. BOX-59, PORT WASHINGTON, WISCONSIN.

SERVING All INSTITUTIONS
FACTORY DIRECT The LUXWOOD
TRADE MARK REG.

Also Folding Benches

WRITE FOR COMPLETE DETAILS NOW!

Manufactured Exclusively by
The JAMES P. LUXEM CO.,
1716 N. Wells St., Chicago 14, Ill.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

NEWS OF OTHER CHURCHES

MACKAY REPORTS GAINS FOR PROTESTANTISM

Protestants have made gains in Latin European countries with the exception of Italy and Spain, President John A. Mackay of Princeton Theological Seminary, said reporting on a recent trip to five European countries in which he surveyed the problems faced by Protestants in carrying on their religious work.

In Belgium and France, Mackay said, Protestants enjoy full religious freedom and official protection. This same protection is given them in Portugal, but there they have "relative" freedom, he said. In Italy, he declared, although Protestants are constitutionally entitled to religious freedom, "they are merely tolerated." And in Spain, according to the theologian, "freedom is dead," and Protestants live under "intolerable" conditions.

Of the three Latin countries in which Dr. Mackay found a generally favorable atmosphere for Protestants, Belgium was indicated as the country whose government did the most to protect the rights of religious minorities. The Church leader attributed this to the fact that "Belgium is a type of lay state which has a benevolent interest in religion as such."

In Spain, Mackay said, he found the situation "worse than I had imagined. Freedom was dead. The peace that prevailed was the peace of the sepulchre."

He said that the "overt persecution" which marked the early years of the Franco regime "has been transformed into a subtle, sadistic, inexorable policy of making the social and cultural life of Protestants as intolerable as possible."

"In the expression of their religious life," he said, Spain's 20,000 Protestants "are surrounded with the grim, confining barriers of the ghetto. They may worship in buildings which they possessed before "the Glorious Movement," as the present regime calls the new order in Spain. But no external sign can mark a Protestant place of worship. No publicity can be given to the services. No literature can be published by the congregation. No religious gatherings, however small, can take place in private homes. No authorization can be obtained for the organization of new congregations or the establishment of new places of worship. Protestants can have no recreational clubs for youth. They can conduct no parochial schools for their own children. They cannot circulate Bibles or religious literature through the mails. They cannot become officers in the army because every officer is obliged to accept the Catholic faith.

"For like reasons they cannot become teachers or lawyers, because advancement in all the professions is contingent upon courses in Roman Catholic dogma and the abandonment of every Protestant connection. Most revolting of all is the fact that when any person, man or woman, who was baptized a Catholic becomes a Protestant, he or she finds it practically impossible to be civilly married by a judge."

MEMORIAL CHURCH HONORS ALCOHOLIC

The Harvey Hicks Memorial church, Little Rock, was dedicated to the memory of the Rev. Harvey Hicks, who rose from church janitor to minister of the gospel. The building is said to be one of the most modern in the South.

Mr. Hicks, an automobile salesman, had reached the depths as a drunkard when he was converted by the pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle here. He was given the job of church janitor. When the church founded a mission in the south end of the city in 1936, he was placed in charge as mission pastor.

Through his efforts in personal evangelism and the tithes of the members, the mission was developed into the High Street Baptist church in 1937 and the membership grew to 1,400.

Mr. Hicks died in 1949 after a brief illness. He was succeeded by Robert W. Hicks, business man of Mount Clemens, Mich., who was ordained to take his father's place by unanimous vote of the congregation.

BAPTISTS WARN OF THREATS TO FREEDOMS

The Baptist joint committee on public affairs adopted a resolution warning against any abridgement of American freedoms whether by public officials or "self-styled private vigilantes."

"We urge our people vigorously to oppose those who would destroy those freedoms by organized heresy hunts and character assassination," the resolution said.

The committee, which comprises representatives of four major Baptist groups in the United States, also warned that the low level of public and private morality, if unchecked, is a grave threat to American democracy.

COLLEGE DISCRIMINATION TO BE STUDIED

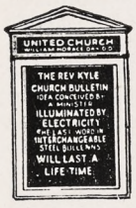
A committee to study racial and religious discrimination in colleges was voted by the national student association meeting in Minneapolis. Another resolution asked for government recognition of CO's on humanitarian as well as now-recognized religious grounds. A resolution asking forgiveness and re-admission of athletes found guilty of accepting bribes was defeated, 165-138. Blame for the scandals in sports was placed upon the "corrupt atmosphere" surrounding college athletics. "To prevent further scandals," the resolution stated, "we strongly believe that intercollegiate sports should be de-commercialized and de-emphasized and returned to the students themselves."

Delegates voted, 220-48, after spirited debated, to approve a resolution opposing "McCarthyism," a term it used to describe "smear campaigns." They beat down an attempt to delete the word which opponents charged was meant as a condemnation of Senator Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin. The resolution had been introduced by delegates from that state who voted unanimously for it.

METHODISTS GIVE MILLIONS

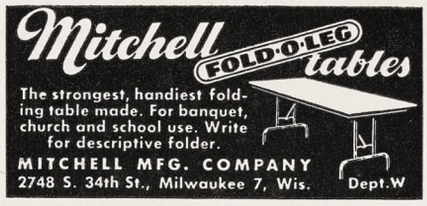
Methodists gave over $16,000,000 in the last fiscal year for their program of benevolences, missions and evangelism.

American Folding Chairs
NEW IMPROVED DESIGN



DURABLE—strong steel frame
SAFE—can't tip, pinch, snag
COMFORTABLE—extra-wide and extra-deep seats, backs
FOLD QUICKLY, quietly, snugly
SEAT STYLES—formed plywood, durably lacquered; or vinyl-plastic upholstered

Write Dept. 133
AMERICAN SEATING COMPANY
World's Leader in Public Seating
901 Broadway [illegible] Grand Rapids 2, Mich.



RAMBUSCH
for PAINTING
DECORATING
ALTARS
LIGHTING FIXTURES
STAINED GLASS
RAMBUSCH
40 W. 13th St. ~ New York 11, N.Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Scriptural—Artistically designed
WORSHIP FOLDERS
Large assortment—Self Selection
Lithographed—Special Days—General use
Ecclesiastical Art Press
Dept. W Louisville 12, Ky.
FREE CATALOG

CHURCH BULLETINS
Every progressive church should use Winters' De Luxe Bulletin Board. Dignified, effective, and economical. Over 7,000 IN USE. Increase attendance, interest and collections. Write today for Illus. Catalog H. E. Winters Specialty Company, Davenport, Iowa.

FINEST PURE IRISH LINEN
For all Church uses
Just received from Belfast a new fine lightweight linen for Surplices in 39"—1.65 per yard. Also qualities and width for Albs, Fair Linen, etc., Patterns and Supplies, Books.
Samples Free
MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
BOX 386 CHILLICOTHE, MO.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

Make Christmas Christian
A church woman gave her rector a check as a thank offering for her friends. What her gift accomplished is related by Bishop Hines. Rectors will want to mail this leaflet to parishioners.
$1 for 25; $1.50 for 50; $2 for 100
THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

PEOPLE

CLERGY CHANGES:

GILBERT V. HEMSLEY, formerly rector of Emmanuel, Adams, N. Y., is now rector of Grace Church, Union City, N. J.

CHARLES W. WOOD, formerly rector of St. Paul's, Rock Creek, Washington, D. C., is now rector of St. John's, Baltimore, Md.

C. L. HERON, formerly rector of St. Martin's, Philadelphia, is now rector of Holy Trinity, Seaman Ave., New York.

ALFRED W. BURNS, formerly rector of Calvary, Bridgeport, Conn., is now rector of Pinkney Memorial Church, Hyattsville, Md., diocese of Washington.

J. J. AMBLER, formerly rector of the Hyattsville, Md., parish is now rector of Emmanuel, Alexandria, Va.

JAMES R. McLEAN, formerly in charge of Mt. Olivet, Pineville, La., is now rector of St. Mary's, El Dorado, Ark.

CHARLES B. HOGLAN JR., recently ordained deacon, is in charge of churches at Conway and Russellville, Ark.

ROBERT H. OWEN, recently ordained deacon, is in charge of churches at Crossett and Monticello, Ark.

HENRY S. SIZER JR., formerly rector of St. James, Florence, Italy, was instituted rector of St. Andrew's, Yonkers, N. Y. by Bishop Donegan on Oct. 3.

DEATHS:

EDWARD G. McCANCE, 46, one time rector of Epiphany, Glenburn, Pa., died Sept. 18 in Miami, Fla., after a long illness.

DONALD PATRICK, vestryman of St. Paul's, Syracuse, N. Y., and a founder of the churchmen's ass'n of Central New York, died Aug. 27.

RUSSELL E. DILL, 59, treasurer of the National Council, died Sept. 27. See news.

MARIE L. CONSTABLE, head of the church school at St. James Church, New York City, died Sept. 26. She was largely responsible for the development of St. James Lessons, widely used throughout the Church.

EDWIN L. WILLIAMS, 70, retired clergyman of Ohio, died Sept. 20.

The Prayer Book
Its History & Purpose
BY
IRVING P. JOHNSON
Late Witness Editor
25c for single copy
$2 for ten copies
The WITNESS
Tunkhannock, Pa.

HOUSE FOR SALE at Keene Valley in Adirondacks Furnished or unfurnished; suitable for year-round living. 1*st floor* two bed-rooms and bath, attractive kitchen, hall and living-dining room with knotty pine paneling and fire-place. 2*nd floor*, 2 bed-rooms and bath. Basement, furnace-room, rooms suitable for workshop and laundry; 1 car garage. Oil-burner, hot-water heat. 2.1 acres of ground, mostly woodland, mountain view, trout-stream. BOX C, WITNESS, TUNKHANNOCK, PA.

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS
Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS
Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.
SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

Exquisite
IRISH LINENS
BY THE YARD
From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States, I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values; unsurpassed quality, imported direct from Ireland. Also transfer patterns, linen tape, and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 3 inches at 75c, 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.00.
MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

THE BISHOP WHITE
PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833
Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.
PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)
Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BACKFIRE

JAMES S. DUNN
Layman of New York

The remarks by Mr. Blandy on the establishment of a new seminary in Texas I read with a great deal of interest. He certainly has a good point when he charges that the leaders of the Church in the East have long neglected the fast growing West. I think too that we can take it for granted that such men as Bishop Quin and Bishop Hines, as well as Mr. Blandy who is to have a large role in the new school, will see to it that there is no lowering of standards.

At the same time it seems to me that the main point of your editorial, on which Mr. Blandy was commenting, was well taken: that the establishment of a new seminary is the concern of the entire Church, not merely one diocese, and that therefore advice should be sought from a commission of General Convention before going ahead.

GLADYS WILLIAMS
Churchwoman of Newark, N. J.

The question I would like to raise, in regard to the new Christian Action group (Witness, Sept. 27) is how the officers and leaders of it are going to decide who are "leftists" and "rightists." I am a school teacher as well as a member of the Episcopal Church and I have gone through a number of sad experiences with organizations, including the teachers union, that set out to purge themselves of "leftists." The net result, it has been my observation, was to purge the most active members, with the less active members devoting all their time to getting rid of them. Who, precisely, is to decide: will the officers of Christian Action call upon Senator McCarthy for information or perhaps the Attorney General or the FBI.

ANDREW J. READ
Layman of Melrose, Mass.

Rome is now trying to control the libraries through that subtle organization, the Christophers. This is amply documented by a lengthy article in the August number of the Christian Register. The Witness should give the matter publicity.

ROBERT B. GRIBBON
Rector at Chillicothe, Mo.

My recollection of the offer made to the ousted West Point cadets by the "unknown benefactor" was that they should not indulge in athletics while at Notre Dame. If I am correct then your sneering item in "Notre Dame Accepts Fired Cadets" (Witness, Sept. 27) is a reportorial sin, a grave discourtesy and a most un-Christian bit of smart-aleck bad taste. It deserves a public apology.

HENRY E. HOWE
Layman of Hartford

An atmosphere of reverence is most conducive to a religious spirit in our churches. I recently had occasion to visit a church of our denomination in a nearby city. Upon entering the vestibule I noticed a large card upon a standard placed so as to catch the eye of those entering the church. Upon this card was the inscription, "Quiet Please. Service in Progress." I was struck with the quiet, dignified attitude of the members of the congregation within. There was none of the whispering or talking which is so annoying to devout churchgoers. The atmosphere was truly reverential. I am recounting this incident with the hope it may be helpful in other parishes.

ST. LUKE'S SCHOOL
Episcopal Day School under the direction of Trinity Parish
Nursery, Kindergarten, Elementary Grades. After School play groups. Coeducational. Moderate tuition. For catalogue and further information communicate with
THE REV. PAUL C. WEED, JR.
Headmaster
Hudson & Grove Sts., NEW YORK 14, N. Y.
Phone WAtkins 4-5960

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL
Coeducational Episcopal Day School
Prepares for leading secondary schools. Sound academic training. Kindergarten thru 8th grade. French and Latin emphasized. Complete testing program. Est. 1894. Music, drama, arts & crafts, sports. Bus service. Hot lunch. Tel: AL 4-2000
E. ALLISON GRANT, Headmaster
88 E. Fourth Ave. (11th St.), N. Y. 3

THE PATTERSON SCHOOL for BOYS

Episcopal School in Blue Ridge Mountains of Western No. Carolina. Accredited. Grades 6-12. Gymnasium, sports, 42nd year. 1300-acre estate. Board and tuition, moderate.
GEORGE F. WIESE, Supt.
COLLEGE PREPARATORY Legerwood, N. C. HEALTH EDUCATION CHARACTER BUILDING

SCHOOLS

FORK UNION MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth New Hampshire

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

"Rich Treasuries of the Memories of the Church's Past Are a Keen Stimulus to Even Greater Achievements in its Future"

—Editorial in The Living Church

A History of the Diocese of Albany
1704 - 1923

By the REV. GEORGE E. DeMILLE, M.A.

Registrar of the Diocese of Albany and Author of "The Catholic Movement in the American Episcopal Church"

"The writing of this history has been both a revelation and an inspiration. Not only has this study demonstrated the inherent vitality of the Episcopal Church; it has also suggested wherein the principle of that vitality lies . . ."

—From the Author's Preface

The story of how the Episcopal Church, prostrated by the Revolutionary War, was revived in the area now included in the Diocese of Albany, and how it has grown into a strong and vigorous diocese, will inspire you also. Priests and laymen, as well as bishops, receive due recognition of their faith and labors.

"An excellent piece of work."—DR. G. MACLAREN BRYDON, Historiographer of the Diocese of Virginia.

Beautifully Illustrated and Clothbound

Per Copy, $2.50

The Anglican Church In Delaware

By the REV. NELSON W. RIGHTMYER

Professor of Ecclesiastical History, The Divinity School in Philadelphia

"After a rapid survey of its excellence, I wrote Dr. Rightmyer my hearty congratulations. This volume adds one more notable volume to the growing list of publications of the Church Historical Society, and leads me to send you once again my admiration and my praise . . ."—DR. FRANK J. KLINGBERG, Professor of History in the University of California at Los Angeles.

"The volume on the early history of the Church in Delaware is excellent. I read every word of it at once upon its arrival. Congratulations for another worthy publication."—DR. MASSEY H. SHEPHERD, JR., Professor of Church History, Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass.

"It is a worthy addition to the Society's distinguished list of publications, and one that illumines an important corner of colonial history."—DR. WILLIAM W. MANROSS, Author of A History of the American Episcopal Church, and other works.

Handsomely Printed and Clothbound

Per Copy, $3.00

A Quarter of a Millennium
Trinity Church in the City of New York
1697 - 1947

Edited by E. CLOWES CHORLEY, L.H.D.

Late Historiographer of the Episcopal Church with foreword by the Rector

The Bishop of London states: "Trinity Church is unique in the whole of Christendom. There is no church like it . . ."

The Story of the 250 Years of this great Parish—its Founding, its Rectors, its many Chapels, its Music, its Schools, its munificent Benefactions, its Ministry to the Underprivileged, its extraordinary record in the upbuilding of the Church in Upstate New York—is a thrilling one. 39 pages of Illustrations.

Handsomely Printed and Clothbound

Per Copy, $3.00

The Province of the Pacific

By LOUIS CHILDS SANFORD

Late Bishop of San Joaquin

This is the first and only history of an American Province. It not only preserves for generations to come the story of the Province of the Pacific, but it admirably presents the development of provinces, ancient and modern; in particular, the efforts to establish them in America from 1781 to date.

"This is an accurate account of the development of the Episcopal Church in the West by the one best qualified to write in terms of the province, of which he was president for many years. Following a brilliant essay by Bishop Parsons, there is the story of the way in which the Church in the West was organized . . ."—DR. RANDOLPH CRUMP MILLER in The Churchman.

Beautifully Printed and Clothbound

Per Copy, $3.00

Address all orders and correspondence to

THE CHURCH HISTORICAL SOCIETY

4205 SPRUCE STREET PHILADELPHIA 4, PA.

The WITNESS

10¢ A COPY

October 18, 1951

MARNIE M. SICKLER
Writes About Seminary Wives

ARTICLE BY PROF. HARRY H. HILBERRY

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 7:30, 8 (and 9 Holy Days except Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 8:30, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers – 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. – 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital – 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m. Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a. m. Holy Communion.
9:30 and 11 a. m. Church School.
11 a. m. Morning Service and Sermon.
4 p. m. Evensong. Special Music.
Weekday: Holy Communion Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.; Wednesdays and Saints Days at 8 a. m.; Thursdays at 12:10 p. m. Organ Recitals, Fridays, 12:10.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer – 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon.
Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D.,
Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 – 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m.
Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.–High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacColl, 3rd, Rector
Rev. Peter Chase, Curate
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 34

The WITNESS
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH

OCTOBER 18, 1951

PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Program for Parish Relations Issued by Washington

Department of Promotion Gives Instructions On Phases of Public Relations

★ A public-relations committee can help to promote your parish's vigor and growth. The task of the committee is to see that the parish's message, in its many forms, gets to the eyes and ears of those who should receive it—and on into their minds and hearts. The task is the same, though details may vary somewhat, whether the parish is large or small. The aim is to increase the understanding of what the parish is trying to do.

The Sunday sermon, for example—rector's task though it is—might concern the public-relations committee in (1) discovering the types of sermon that parishioners find most helpful, (2) getting the sermon topic determined early enough in the week for (3) sending the topic to the newspapers, (4) posting the topic on the outdoor bulletin board, and (5) listing the topic in the Sunday bulletin or calendar, and also in (6) getting more persons into the church to hear the sermon, (7) making the sermon more audible by a public-address system or other means, (8) reporting an outstanding sermon to the newspapers, (9) arranging for hearers to get copies of the sermon for sending to their friends, and (10) otherwise using imagination and energy to give that sermon and its successors the greatest possible impact on the parish and on the community.

Some of the other fields of communication that can pay dividends on investment of time and thought by members of a public-relations committee are: Newspapers (later in this report); Radio and television; The Sunday bulletin or calendar; Your church's outdoor bulletin board; Other bulletin boards in the community; Parish periodicals; Direct mail; Special leaflets, brochures; Mimeographing techniques; Telephone campaigns; Tracts and the tract rack.

Also the parish office: can a stranger find his way? Is the office staffed evenings and week-ends, when persons who are occupied in business hours can seek help or learn about opportunities to serve? Coffee hours, other social gatherings—do they draw in or freeze out newcomers?

Also newcomers to the community—discovering and inviting them; first-timers at services—identifying and welcoming them, getting their names, following them up; The unchurched in the community—how to reach them; Evangelistic calls; An every-member canvass in the spring or at other times, just to get and give information, with no mention of money; A talent search; Reports at annual and other meetings—they don't have to be dull; Anniversaries and other occasions for special events; Movies, film strips; Relations with the community.

Keep sensitive—this is the committee's assignment—to all the ways in which the parish meets the eyes and ears of (1) parishioners and (2) outsiders. Is each impression the best possible? What have other parishes, other denominations learned about solving similar problems? What has the business world learned?

Radio and Television

A public-service announcement may be a "station break" (40 words) or one minute (120 words) about the coming event that you want the public to attend. It is read between programs by the announcer, or during a radio or TV program by the mistress of ceremonies on a woman's hour, or by a disc jockey or some other "personality." Each station uses a selection of such items, free, as part of its public service.

Form: Duplicated is best (avoid crackly thin paper); your name and phone at extreme top, then "Public-service announcement—Use anytime before (date and time of day)." A third down the page, double spaced, the announcement of your event, repeating the "what, when and where" for emphasis, in 40 words. Skip an inch, and write the 1-minute announcement (in case the station has a full minute available)—the same thing in more detail, using 120 words and again emphasizing by repetition the what, when, where.

Mail it to the program director of each radio and TV station ("Radio Broadcasting Companies" in the classified phone directory), also to "personalities" at the station who might use it—disc jockeys, etc. Get the copy delivered at least a week ahead of your event, so it can be fitted into the station's program.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

An interview on radio or TV of someone in your parish who has something interesting to say can give excellent publicity to your coming event. Find a person who has had a newsworthy experience, or anyone whom the public would find it worth while to listen to. Write or phone a radio or TV program director, or one of the radio or TV "personalities" who have programs on which guests are interviewed, and explain why your candidate is interesting. Specify your motive—to get a mention of your parish event in the course of the interview. Your parish's talent search can help reveal interview possibilities.

Listen to others' public-service announcements and guest interviews, learn how the experts handle them, perfect your techniques, and use your imagination to help spread news of your parish activities by radio and TV.

News is an asset that many parishes waste. Every parish makes news, but not every parish puts it to profitable use by reporting it to newspapers.

Here are some news subjects:

1. Sermon topic. In Washington, the Saturday church pages print a selection of sermon topics. Your topic should be on each church editor's desk every Thursday morning. Write: "At (name) Episcopal Church, (street address), the Rev. (full name), rector, will preach at the 11 a. m. service Sunday (date) on (topic)." Then add anything that will distinguish the coming Sunday's events from the usual Sunday's.

2. A special service, corporate communion, anniversary, ordination.

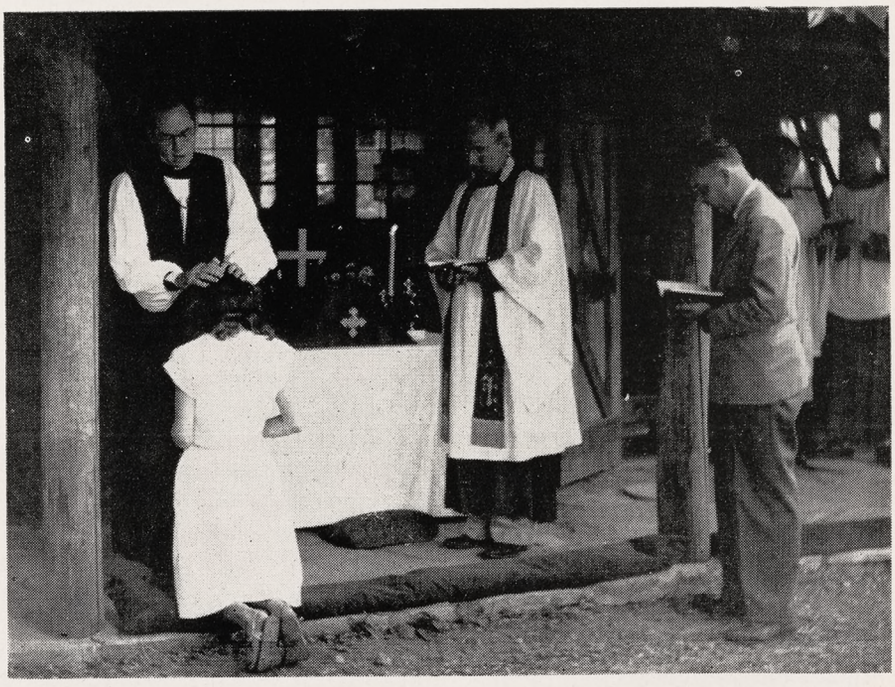
3. A coming meeting of any parish group, a meeting of which more can be said than: "The regular meeting will be held at the usual time and place." A speaker (either from outside or within the group) makes it news, or a subject for group discussion, or a new project. Plan your meeting with an eye to its news value.

4. A change in clergy, vestry, officers of any organization.

5. A bazaar, dinner, tea, entertainment.

Mail to church editor items Nos. 1 and 2 (sermon topic, special service, etc). Deadline Thursday a. m. for Saturday church page.

Women's news goes either to club editor (meetings, etc.) or to society editor (more social events). Papers differ in classifying women's news, but either editor will pass it on. Deadline Wednesday a. m. for Sunday pages; 24 to 48 hours ahead for weekday.



Other news to city editor, a day ahead, usually. The more important the news, the nearer to press time can the newspaper handle it. Mail routine news early.

Form: Typewrite on white paper, double or triple spaced. Send an original or a legible, non-smudgy carbon. Keep a copy for your file.

Use a letterhead, or write at extreme top of page your name and phone, so editor can verify or amplify the facts. Give date of sending. Leave one-quarter page of blank space above the item, for editor to write headline and typesetting instructions.

Write in simple, newspaper style. Have a short first paragraph that tells who, what, where, when (give exact hour). Use full names and titles. (To misspell a name in print is to bear false witness against thy neighbor). At first mention of your church include "Episcopal" in its name. Address envelope to editor by title, not by name.

If nothing appears in the papers after six weeks of reporting your parish news to them, let your diocesan department of promotion look over your carbon copies, to check your understanding of what is news, and how and when it needs to be sent to the papers.

BISHOP MOODY confirms at an outdoor service at the Cathedral Domain

Chicago Church Leaders Mad At Cicero Indictments

By
FREDERICK H. SONTAG

★ "Incredible, crazy, beyond belief" were some of the words used by Chicago Church leaders in describing their feelings towards the indictments recently handed down by the Cook County grand jury in connection with the Cicero riots of this summer, and described in the Witness September 6.

Fighting mad with anger at miscarried justice, Chicago civic leaders are appealing to public spirited citizens all over America for a flood of mail to federal Attorney General J. Howard McGrath of Washington. Only federal action can prevent the Cicero riot case from becoming one big glorified victory for the rioters.

Here in short is what has happened. This summer some 6,000 rioters almost totally destroyed a modern, twenty-apartment building in protest against a young Negro veteran and his family moving into a white neighborhood. After the state guard had quieted the former home of the Al Capone mob, a law suit began to bring to justice the men who had caused the riot.

Over 45 were clearly recognizable in magazine photos. Another 100 could be identified in photos taken by the Associated Press and Chicago papers. Yet did these men face the law? No indeed. The Cook county grand jury let them go free, and instead found guilty the lawyer called in by the young veteran after the riot had started, and others associated with the apartment house. The lawyer, Mr. George N. Leighton, who volunteered his services to Veteran Harvey Clark on behalf of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, was 15 miles away from Cicero when the riot was in progress.

Chicago newspapers have all joined in protesting the jury action, and condemning State Attorney Boyle for doing nothing constructive. Labor, business, and civic leaders told news men they were "without words that were fit to print" to outline their views on the actions of the grand jury which let escape the rioters and law officers who did nothing to enforce the civil rights statutes which applied to this case.

Not one known rioter was indicted, only Cicero police chief Ervin Konovsky was mildly charged with "failure to do his full duty." A Roman Catholic priest said of this action, "The chief may have failed only slightly in the eyes of the law. In the eyes of the Church, he is guilty beyond a doubt of not acting with speed and intelligence in stopping this riot."

After letting the rioters go free, the grand jury turned its legal wrath on volunteer Leighton, the former and present owners of the apartment house, the renting agent, and a furrier who two weeks after the riot was passing out pamphlets. Strangest of all was the attack on the lawyer, who had obtained the federal court injunction which ordered the Cicero police to stop violating the law in threatening physical violence and restraining the Clark family from moving into the apartment they had legally rented.

The Cicero riot was condemned by the majority of American newspapers and radio reporters, and gave Communist Russia a good weapon to use against the democracies among colored people throughout the world. Now it looks as if the misguided grand jury is giving America another black eye by excusing the rioters from any blame, and letting them go home without any penalty, a clear invitation to do the same thing again in Chicago and elsewhere.

The jury indicted Mr. Leighton for many things, including "conspiring to injure property, by causing a depreciation in the real estate market price by renting to Negroes." Giving lawyer Leighton powers of remote control should be of great interest to our armed forces, as he was many miles away yet "is charged with unlawfully, willfully, and maliciously inciting, persuading and encouraging a large number, to wit, about 3,000 people, to assemble and doing unlawful acts, with force and violence, against the personal property of Harvey Clark."

A Chicago newsman told the Witness after reading this strange indictment against the defense lawyer that "no dark skinned person could have remained alive in Cicero, so violent were the whipped-up emotions, prejudices, and passions of the mob."

The most encouraging development in addition to the outburst of indignation from Chicago Church, civic, and news leaders, is the interest in the Cicero riot being shown by U. S. Attorney McGrath. He has ordered a federal, not state, grand jury, to investigate not only the riot and rioters, but the actions of the Cook county grand jury. Department of Justice and FBI agents are working on the case right now. One federal agent who would not permit the use of his name told this reporter that "there may well be other pressures on the Cook county jury besides their own fears and prejudices, and if we can prove our case, there will be fire works."

BISHOP ARTHUR LICHTENBERGER, coadjutor of Missouri, with wife and son

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

"The action of the Cicero grand jury was a denial of every principle of American decency," Senator Paul H. Douglas of Illinois told United Press and the Witness. He said it "violates our basic regard for justice and human dignity" and is "not typical of the people of Illinois nor of Cook county."

Senator Douglas spoke out in the Senate because "I cannot in good conscience keep silent any longer about the shameful story."

The Senator's action was one of great courage and deserves the widest possible praise and support from Episcopal press readers. Douglas, who is at odds with President Truman on the appointment of two justices, now faces the wrath of the Southern Democrats as a "nigger lover." Douglas needs every friend in the Senate that he can muster, as his independent course brings about many problems, however, he decided to call the Cicero affair just what he thought it.

A Southern Senator, well known for his views on colored people, told this reporter "Douglas just blew up his chance of being the vice presidential candidate next year. If he wants to associate with lesser people, that is his business."

Chicago news men told the Witness that criminal elements in Chicago want the case stopped. Witness readers can help bring about a full and complete inquiry and demand action by writing to President Truman and Attorney General Howard McGrath and demanding Christian action in this matter. Of major interest to active Church goers is the absence of action and statements on this riot by the new National Council of Churches, which seems to find this case too hot to handle. As this riot can take place in other American towns, it is important that law violators be brought to justice. Episcopalians might also write to Bishop Sherrill and Bishop Conkling asking what the Episcopal Church intends to do about this matter.

CATHEDRAL SERVICE TELEVISED

★ The Rev. Cyril Richardson, professor of Church history at Union Seminary, was the preacher at the 11 o'clock service October 7 at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. The entire service was televised. Others taking part in the communion service were Canon Green, celebrant; Canon West, who read the gospel and was master of ceremonies; Chaplain A. S. Dewdney of the Home for Old Men and Aged Couples, with Canon Sparks the narrator. The choir of sixty-five men and boys was directed by Norman Coke-Jephcott, cathedral organist.

That afternoon there was a special service of music when anthems by Tye, Holst, Brother James and Vaughn Williams were sung.

DANIEL WEBSTER IS NEEDED

★ Bishop Scaife of Western New York, speaking at Emmanuel Church, Boston, said that the American people would rise up "like a flame" to rebuild and repossess their inheritance if it could hear the voice of Daniel Webster. The occasion was a service attended by 2,500 33rd degree Scottish rite Masons. The bishop was one of 150 to receive the degree at the annual meeting of the supreme council.

"The 'isms' are the inevitable pathologies of a modern democracy if it has lost its soul," Bishop Scaife declared. He said that the whole claim of freedom is inseparable from the religious view and "it is of urgent importance to remember this."

"In the world in which we are now living the utilitarian and liberal conceptions are already under sentence of death. The cause of political and mundane freedom is now bound up with the cause of religion and a supramundane interpretation of the nature and destiny of men and women. If we leave out God and immortality, freedom is indefensible. But that is in fact what we have been doing, and if it is not to perish from the earth, the foundations of liberty must be relaid deeper than our age has understood."

NEGROES HONORED AT SERVICE

★ A service honoring Negroes who have attained responsible positions in Syracuse was held September 28th at All Saints, with the Rev. Frank L. Titus speaking and conducting the service. He also praised employers who do not discriminate and pointed out to high school students the opportunities available for them.

Among the 65 Negroes recognized were Mrs. Alonzo Carter, public school teacher; Fred Mayo, deputy collector in the bureau of internal revenue; Dr. A. P. Johnson, dentist for parochial and public schools; Miss Eloise Rouse, director of teenage work at the YWCA; Willie B. Gilbert, recently appointed to the Syracuse police department and many other Negroes holding responsible positions in industry, retail stores, utilities, and public service and Negroes studying for advanced degrees at Syracuse University.

NORTH DAKOTA GETS BEQUEST

★ The district of North Dakota has received a bequest of $25,000 by the will of the late Mrs. W. Halgren of Fargo to be used to improve and maintain the conference center at Pelican Lake. The district also recently bought a new home for the bishop.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

NEW YORK MISSION PUTS ON FIGHTS

★ It is not only Madison Square Garden that stages boxing matches in New York. On October 9th the New York City Mission Society put on fights at "Madison Avenue Garden" with a festival and garden party which opened their drive for $250,000 to expand its services in neglected areas of the city. There were bargains and good food, with square dancing in the streets in the evening, but it was the scraps between the champions of the two summer camps of the society that attracted the crowds. The matches, which were in the mosquito, flea and flyweight classes, were refereed by Rocky Graziano, former middleweight champion. Nat Simmons, ten, of Camp Minisink, defeated Ronny Fassetta, ten, of Camp Sharparoon. Benny Schwall, nine, of Minisink and Richard Williams, nine, of Scharparoon, fought a draw. Then the big fellows came up, with Joseph Schwall, twelve, of Minisink, knocking Luther Wintrop of the other camp nearly through the ropes for the decision.

Meantime, the World Series game was drawing another crowd at a radio. The hot coffee booth did a brisk business at twenty-five cents a cup, and the Rev. A. C. Alvira, pastor of the Bronx Spanish Evangelical Church, dished out hot Puerto Rican specialties.

Borough President Robert F. Wagner Jr. renamed the block "City Mission Street" at a ceremony at noon. He was assisted by Deputy Mayor Charles Horowitz in cutting a tape at the Fifth Ave. entrance to the block. The early morning wind, however, had played havoc with the first booths erected, and before the afternoon was over most of the booths had been moved to the area nearer Madison Ave., where there was less wind. Mrs. Paul Franken, co-chairman with Mrs. Earl E. T. Smith, had been on hand at 6:30 a. m. to supervise the installation and decorations, since no work could be done Sunday night on account of the rain.

Mrs. Kenneth Sheldon and Mrs. J. Krag Phipps were on hand at 8:30 a. m. to set up the children's grab-bag. There was also a senior grab barrel, at $8 a chance, in which the wares were furs, jewelry and perfume. Mrs. Colley E. Williams and Mrs. Ralph H. Stubbs had recruited more than 100 volunteers who had collected material for the booths and served as saleswomen.

Dr. Kenneth D. Miller, president of the City Mission Society, said the society needed new funds for rehabilitation and building at its nine churches and community centers, for additionly cabins in the two camps and for a psychiatric clinic and increased service to the aged.

EPISCOPAL HOUR RETURNS

★ The Episcopal Hour returns to the air with a transcribed program starting October 28 (8:30 a. m. eastern and 7:30 central time) and will be carried by about 160 stations. The transcriptions are made in the studios of the Protestant radio center in Atlanta, Ga. Speakers on successive Sundays are Bishop Hines, coadjutor of Texas; the Rev. Armand Eyler of Greeneville, Tenn.; Dean Arnold M. Lewis of Jacksonville, Fla.; Bishop Goodwin of Virginia; the Rev. Ray Holder of Raleigh, N. C.; the Rev. Ronald Merrix of Macon, Ga.; Chaplain R. H. Wilmer Jr. of the University of the South; the Rev. Thomas R. Thrasher of Montgomery, Ala.; Bishop Jones of West Texas; the Rev. George M. Alexander of Columbia, S. C.

CHURCHES JOIN FORCES IN EDUCATION

★ In Franklin, Pa., twenty-two churches are cooperating on a community level in a program of adult education. The first session was on October 1 and classes are being given on six consecutive Monday evenings. St. John's, where the Rev. Carl J. Webb is rector, is one of the churches taking part.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S HEAR MRS. SHERRILL

★ Mrs. Henry K. Sherrill, wife of the Presiding Bishop, was the speaker at the first fall meeting of the Auxiliary, October 16th, at St. Bartholomew's, New York.

THE REV. E. H. ECKEL JR., rector of Trinity, Tulsa, Oklahoma, plays the role of one of the priests of Canterbury in a scene from T. S. Eliot's Murder in the Cathedral

PERIODICAL CLUB HAS MEETING

★ The national board of the Church Periodical Club held its autumn meeting at Seabury House, October 2 and 3, with the president, Mrs. William D. Johnson of Pittsburgh, Pa., as chairman.

The CPC is said to be the most informal and least technical of all Church societies. Since the chief purpose of this 63-year-old organization is to provide and distribute good reading matter where it is most needed, its work is popular both with those who give and those who receive. It is much hampered, however, the board reports, because it is unable to have an office staff large enough to keep up with the growing work in parishes and dioceses. "Fifty years ago," one board member said, "the CPC had an office staff of five. Now it has twenty times as much work and an office staff of two."

All funds given directly to the CPC, together with the income from the endowment fund, must be used for books and other reading matter. The only money available for the office is the yearly appropriation from the National Council.

The books committee, reporting through its chairman, Mrs. Edward C. Seed of Upper Montclair, N. J., showed an increasing number of requests filled, providing needed new books for such strategic educational centers as St. Andrew's Seminary in the Philippines, Cuttington College, Liberia, and a theological library in Hongkong, besides aid to chaplains, missionary doctors, nurses, teachers, and others whose professional needs include books of more than average cost.

Report of the treasurer, Mr. Harry L. Dietz of Mamaroneck, N. Y., showed among other items a recent bequest of $1,000 to be added to the endowment fund.

Plans were announced for the triennial meeting to be held September 3-6, 1952, at the Church of the Advent, Boston, just preceding General Convention. The Massachusetts chairmen for the triennial gathering are Mrs. Eliot C. Moody of Wollaston and Mrs. J. Millidge Dyer of Melrose.

The work of the CPC in parishes and dioceses is carried on entirely by volunteers. The parish committees not only secure funds for the use of the national books committee but also distribute thousands of books and magazines. Their reports generally indicate that anyone who likes to read himself is glad to learn how he can provide reading matter for others in need. "The two chief requirements for CPC volunteers," Mrs. Johnson stated, "are vision and initiative."

NEW EDITION OF COMPANION

★ The Church Hymnal Corporation has just published a revised, second edition of the Hymnal 1940 Companion. The preface of the second edition reads as follows: "The joint commission on the revision of the Hymnal welcomes the opportunity afforded by the rapid sale of The Companion to incorporate in a second edition additional information on obscure details received in communications from readers on both sides of the Atlantic. Some additions have also been made to bring up to date the biographies in part II. A supplementary list of additional organ works based on tunes in the Hymnal 1940 follows page 680."

The price of the book remains the same, $4.50 per copy. In boxed combination the Companion plus the Hymnal is $6.25.

YOUTH PLAN OFFERINGS NEXT SUNDAY

Next Sunday, October 21, will be youth Sunday for Episcopalians. The observance is to afford the opportunity of corporate worship by the young people, and also to demonstrate the place of Christian youth in the life of the Church. Young people of the Anglican communion in all parts of the world join in the observance.

The central emphasis is placed on youth as part of the life and work of the Church, and not as a special group whose interests are separate from the main stream. In many parishes young people take part in the chief service held in their churches on this day. In some places, a young person will make the address, others will read the psalms and lessons, others share in the prayers. Parents and other adults see young people in action and are reminded of the very real part which they play in the Church in action every day.

Symbolizing their desire to assist their fellow young people, an annual offering is received on youth Sunday. The project is chosen by the young people who are members of the national youth commission on the basis of emergency need. This year the project is to aid the educational, medical, and evangelistic work of the Holy Cross Mission at Bolahun in interior Liberia, West Africa.

FILIPINO BOYS TRAINED TO BE DOCTORS

★ Five young Filipino men are preparing to be doctors for service to their own people in the Philippines. Their preparation is due to the influence of the Episcopal Church's missionary program in the islands. Until recently, opportunity to prepare for the Christian ministry and for the teaching profession had been provided, but this is the first effort by the mission to develop native medical doctors, to complete the missionary enterprise of teaching, preaching, and healing on an indigenous basis.

BISHOP BROADCASTS TO HIS DIOCESE

★ Bishop Smith of Iowa is broadcasting to the people of his diocese on October 21 on the program of the Church.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EDITORIALS

Proportionate Giving

WITH the approach of the annual every member canvass, the sincere Churchman is honestly puzzled to answer the question "How much should I give to the Church?" He wants to do his fair share for the support of his parish and the work of the diocese and the general Church, but he is perplexed to know what that fair share is, in the light of his own income, his family needs, and his other obligations.

If the Churchman turns to his rector, or to the parish treasurer, for help in his perplexity, he is likely to receive a variety of answers, of varying degrees of helpfulness. The rector may be a firm believer in tithing, over-simplified as the giving of 10% of his income to the Church. But tithing in the Old Testament was based only on certain kinds of income or possessions; moreover it included taxation for educational purposes and for maintenance of various government services — even for the support of an army.

Today the federal and state governments take a large share of our income, generally much more than ten per cent, for many of these purposes. So tithing (which is actually a complicated matter even on an Old Testament basis) is hardly practicable today, for the majority of people. It is, however, an ideal for which we might well strive; and it is noteworthy that many devoted Christian people actually do govern their giving to Church and charity on this basis. At the opposite extreme, the parish treasurer, anxious not to cause offense, may say: "Give as generously as you can; every pledge helps to make up the amount needed."

Another method that is sometimes tried is that of dividing the parish budget by the number of potential contributors, and saying: "If each one gives x cents a week, the budget will be met." There are two fallacies in this method:

In the first place, not every member of the parish is able to give equally—x cents a week may be more than the clerk with a wife and three small children can afford, while it is so small an amount as to be hardly worth considering for the wealthy corporation president with no children and two or three automobiles.

The other fallacy is that each potential contributor is likely to take the suggested average as a maximum for himself, so that those who could and should give more will not do so, while those who cannot give that much will bring the average down below the actual needs of the parish. The result will be reminiscent of the complaint of the Pullman porter who, asked what his average tip was, replied that the average was $2.00, but that nobody had ever come up to the average.

Moreover, while the prospective contributor is interested in the total budget of the parish, and (we hope) in its quota for the diocese and the general Church, the problem for him ultimately boils down to the question of what he himself can give, and what he should give in relation to the gifts of others.

The answer that many Churchmen have found to this perplexing problem is proportionate giving—a standard for contributions to Church and charity not left to chance, or given out of what may be left over after current expenses are paid, but carefully thought out in advance, based upon income and ability, and faithfully budgeted throughout the year.

Let's say that Mr. Jones is a salaried man with a wife and two children. Perhaps he has some additional income from investments or other sources, perhaps not. But he can calculate his year's income fairly accurately in advance.

Arriving at a Figure

THE first thing Mr. Jones does is to calculate his income, from all sources, for the current year. Then he deducts his income taxes, both those withheld and those that he must pay in cash.

★

"Quotes"

O HOW good it is, and how it tendeth to peace, to be silent about other men, and not to believe at random all that is said, nor eagerly to report what we have heard. How good it is to lay one's self open to few, and always to be seeking after thee who art the searcher of the heart. Nor should we be carried about with every wind of words, but we should desire that all things, both within and without, be accomplished according to the pleasure of thy will.

—THE IMITATION OF CHRIST

★

Reprinted from the Living Church of September 30, with their kind permission.

This gives him his net income after taxes—the actual amount that he has at his own disposal for living expenses, contributions, and all other expenditures during the year.

So far, so good. He has complied with Christ's injunction (as commonly interpreted) to "render unto Caesar (the state) that which is Caesar's." (If he didn't, Caesar would soon get after him and he might end up in a federal penitentiary!) But the next step is harder; he must now comply with the other half of our Lord's direction: "Render unto God that which is God's." The temptation is rather to render unto himself that to which he feels he is entitled, and to give God what is left over—if anything.

But actually everything Mr. Jones has is God's. When the offering is presented in the church each Sunday, he joins with the rest of the congregation in singing or saying (or at least mumbling): "All things come of thee, O Lord, and of thine own have we given thee." But sometimes the quarter or half dollar that he has put in the plate has been so small a proportion of "thine own" that only the far-seeing eye of God could recognize it for what it is intended to be.

If Mr. Jones really wants to return a proportional gift of God's own to the original giver of all gifts, now is the time to do it. What proportion shall he give?

Well, take ten per cent as the ideal, since there is genuine Biblical authority for it. He has already taken out his taxes, so he can forget about that. But he knows that his parish pledge will not be the only legitimate charitable demand upon his limited resources. There will be the Christmas and Easter offering, and perhaps other parochial or diocesan appeals—each worthy, each meriting his support. And there will be the community chest, the Red Cross, the cancer fund, and the local hospital. All of these are good causes, all of them are things to which he wants to give as generously as possible.

So he must set aside a part of his tenth for those future demands—say a quarter or a third of it. That amount should be carefully earmarked, in his checkbook or elsewhere, for future contributions during the year—and it should be rigorously reserved for that purpose, and that purpose only.

The rest—perhaps seven per cent of his net income after taxes, is the amount that Mr. Jones concludes that he should pledge to his parish and to the Church's program. So he divides it by 52 (if he makes a weekly pledge), or by 12 (if he makes a monthly pledge), apportions it between the black and the red side of the pledge card in rough proportion to the ratio of the parish budget and the parish missionary quota, and there it is!

That, we have said, is the ideal, at least for Mr. Jones. It has accomplished two things: it has put the Church first, where it belongs, and it has resulted in a pledge that genuinely represents a sacrificial offering of the firstfruits of Mr. Jones' means. He may find that it will require him to cut down on his expenditures for liquor or cigarettes; his wife may have to make her spending for hats and cosmetics a little less; his son and daughter may have to be contented with smaller allowances and more modest Christmas and birthday gifts. That is where the sacrificial element comes in—and it belongs in the picture, too, quite properly.

The Eastman Formula

BUT Mr. Jones' ideal may not be the practical one for Mr. Smith or Mr. Brown. Mr. Smith, perhaps, has an income much larger than he needs; he may well be able to make his gifts total the 15% allowed as a federal tax deduction, or even more. If he can, he has a greater opportunity and a greater obligation than Mr. Jones, and he should live up to it. Mr. Brown, on the other hand, is desperately struggling to educate four children and to make ends meet on a fixed salary that lags far behind the mounting costs of living. What should he do?

No general rule of thumb can possibly suit the circumstances of everybody. But some years ago the Rev. Frederic J. Eastman worked out a plan of proportionate giving, on a minimum basis, that proved adaptable to most of the people in a parish of 350 families of average means. Note the qualification: on a minimum basis. This is not the ideal, upon which Mr. Jones constructed his budget, nor the exceptional, on which Mr. Smith was fortunate enough to be able to construct his.

The Eastman formula, adapted to present-day inflationary conditions, is as follows:

For incomes (or take-home pay) over $5,000 a year:

5% for 1 or 2 in family.
4% for 3 in family.
3% for 4 in family.
2% for 5 or more in family.

For incomes under $5,000 a year, or where unusual medical or educational expenses are involved, these percentages are reduced by 1% in each category; but the minimum should still be 2%. Less than that, unless the circumstances are very unusual indeed, can hardly be considered as rendering unto God even a token of all that is rightfully his.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

What is Accomplished

YET if every family in the average parish gave in accordance with some such table as this, it would revolutionize the finances of the Church. The parish would at last be able to pay its rector an adequate salary. It would be able to make proper provisions for the education of the children in the church school. It would be able to take its full share in the life of the community. It might even be able to employ a curate or a parish worker to make more calls and thus to build up a larger membership. It could do a great many things that it cannot do now.

And it would also enable the parish, perhaps for the first time, not only to meet but to exceed its quota for the Church's program—the missionary and educational and social work of the Church in the diocese, the nation, and the world.

Proportionate giving puts God first, and concerns itself primarily with his kingdom. We have his own assurance that if we seek these things first, all others that we need shall be added unto us. And we have his further words:

"Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again." (St. Luke 6:38).

What more do we who call ourselves Christians need, than these words of our Lord, which both ask us to do our full share and promise that he will do his—and more?

Behind Seminary Scenes

BY
MARNIE M. SICKLER

AS school time has rolled around again, my thoughts turn toward the young women who this Fall join the sisterhood of seminary wives. As one recently graduated from their midst I entertain mixed emotions on the subject. Three years ago I was in the same position.

It was a big decision to trade a familiar life and a steady income for the life of a seminary wife. How strange it was to peer about backstage and to see for the first time the inner workings of the Church. Then the happy moment of discovery that you are not alone—there are also others who have just entered the holy group. As soon as you recover from the fact that the holy group is perhaps not quite so holy as you had expected, but rather is made up of human beings, life becomes more normal.

Almost immediately begin evenings of silence when impulses must be stifled and when the voice of the radio is not heard in the land. The only relief comes when the scholar decides to recite gems from the lectures of the day. At such times you pick up pertinent facts: that there is a difference between an epistle and an apostle, that the ecclesia is not a disease, that a low church does not always have a low ceiling, and that the rabbit mentioned so often is a rabat.

The parties soon begin. The wives hold meetings at which time various sandwiches and desserts are either remembered for future reference or mercifully forgotten. At seminary family parties you garner and file such items as "Betty Jones' Scalloped Potatoes" and "Meat Loaf for 300."

The neophyte's first public sermon is an occasion of unrest at best. After reassuring the preacher and straightening his surplice, you make your way as inconspicuously as possible to a conspicuous pew immediately under the pulpit. Your temperature rises and falls, rapidly punctuated by thumping in the ears throughout the endless service. The last "Amen" finds you wiping your brow with a limp twisted handkerchief. Soon everyone is saying "My, what a fine sermon. How well he did!"—as of course you knew he would do in the first place.

The three years pass swiftly but certainly not without event. Even the summers are busy with parish or field work. A new reverence is acquired and a respect for things holy.

The last year goes the fastest of all. A seminary wife approaches graduation for all intents and purposes without a husband. The impending Marnie M. Sickler is the wife of the Rev. Edward A. Sickler, a graduate of Bexley Hall, Gambier, Ohio. The Sicklers now live in Shaker Heights, Ohio, where Mr. Sickler is assistant at Christ Church.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

canonical examinations render most husbands unapproachable if not downright hostile. But no matter. There is much to occupy your time. Discussions are rampant as to the minimum number of surplices absolutely necessary, the cloth versus the plastic collar, and the relative lengths of cassocks.

As soon as the local standing committee (which you have previously learned does not necessarily stand) pronounces its blessing, the dress rehearsal takes place. The collar pops open . . . or scratches . . . or both. The cuff links can't be found. The rabat is too hot. But the over all effect is somewhat breathtaking—a small preview of the coming ordination.

With the stirring ordination to the diaconate comes a humble but glorious feeling, "This is what we have been working for. How wonderful that we could share those three years together. Dear God, help us to be worthy!"

Stop! Don't Use That Color!

BY

HARRY H. HILBERRY

Professor at Syracuse University

ONE of the recurring problems of almost every parish is the need for occasional redecoration of the church building. Even if the roof hasn't leaked or the furnace smoked, the time comes when paint is dingy and everything has a run-down air. Fortunate indeed are those few parishes with churches to which advancing age adds a patina enriching rather than destroying their dignity and beauty. For most of our churches, however, periodic repainting is necessary not only for maintenance of the fabric, but for the sake of keeping God's house beautiful and worshipful.

Any clean fresh paint is going to make a big difference to a dingy interior but there is an even vaster difference between just any fresh paint and the right color in the right place. There is never a dirth of ideas from the parish, the painters, or from experts. Everyone always has an idea, precise or vague, about what colors should be used. Trouble lies in the fact that the ideas do not agree and that the closer they come to agreement the more danger there is that for many of our finest churches the choice may be wrong. The chances are against the consideration of some of the most important factors which should effect such choices. As churchmen and architectural historian I would like to suggest some of those factors.

Our oldest churches, the real colonial buildings and their immediate post-colonial descendants are admired and revered. There is little temptation to improve them and for the most part great care is given to any preservation or restoration which they demand. The story is very different for the many churches built between the eighteen twenties and the end of the century and it is with them that I am concerned.

The churches built in our own century pose other and difficult problems, but some of those are inherent in the essential insincerity of the buildings themselves. However, even the older ones belong more to our own time. The older members of the parish remember them when they were new. For the most part these won't suffer much from mid-twentieth century ideas of paint. The same thing, unfortunately, cannot be said of the nineteenth century structures. They can be, and unfortunately often are, sadly spoiled in the name of improvement.

As early as the late eighteenth century, romantic mediaevalism began to make itself felt. The basic church form was founded on English Renaissance prototypes but sometimes "Gothik" details were added. Pointed windows, pinnacles, and battlements appear. Early in the nineteenth century some Classic Revival buildings were built, but very early most of our parishes seem to have felt something inappropriate about building Greek or Roman temples. By far the greatest number of churches built were in some variation of the romantic mediaeval revival styles. This is not the place for a detailed history of the changes and developments through the century but some generalizations can be made which may be of value in appreciating a rich architectural heritage which can easily be destroyed.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Not Shams

THE mediaeval revival churches of the nineteenth century vary in appearance from buildings using Gothic or castellated details (frankly as applied decoration) to careful attempts to capture the look of a real Gothic church, yet, with few exceptions, they have some common characteristics. Most important of these is the fact that the builders never lost a sense of basic, forthright honesty. They drew on what they thought of as Christian architectural tradition but they were not antique fakers. One of the most persistent attitudes expressed by church builders both in words and works was a dislike of shams. They were quite conscious of living in a modern world, of using different materials and methods of building. They valued the emotional significance of symbols of the past but they were not building fake mediaeval buildings. They insisted on the honest and expressive use of materials. It is very rare to find truss roofs supporting fake, plaster-stone vaults or wood and plaster used to simulate masonry walls. Many of the buildings were richly decorated and the decoration varied from naive to scholarly, from sophisticated to crude. Still, whether rich or plain, the work of a clever architect or a small town builder, these churches have as a common architectural character the clarity and unity which come from basic integrity.

These buildings have far more than the simple virtues of honest structures, important as those virtues are. There is always a strong sense of the harmonious relationship between the masses of the church as seen from outside and the spaces of the interior, and although many of the chancels seem small today, the spaces are handsomely proportioned and almost always well, if simply planned. The relationship of the decoration to the rest of the design is harder to grasp since, being so easily altered, few of our churches have escaped changes which tend to destroy the originally harmonious relationships. With amazingly few exceptions such a harmony did exist and the greatest number of our nineteenth century churches really deserved to be considered as more than just buildings, as architecture.

The greatest stumbling block to retaining or regaining the original integrity of our churches is the fact that the concept of the sanctuary held by the nineteenth century builders included mystery and richness as ideals. In our antiseptic generation simplicity and floods of light are fashionable. Any attempt to impose the modern fashion on the older buildings is like putting a motor in a surrey. The result isn't a "modernized" buggy but a monster. On the other hand, an attempt to restore the buildings exactly as they were originally designed would be difficult and expensive at best and probably unwise as well as unnecessary. Let me cite an example to illustrate the problems involved and suggestions for solutions.

Color Problem

A TYPICAL, medium sized church built in the seventies needed new paint on the interior. The old paint, a nondescript tan with some stencil work, was dirty and some plaster needed patching. An investigation showed that originally the nave was painted a strong orange with a blue-green ceiling and lots of stencil work. The chancel and apse had had a complicated stencil pattern in no less than six colors, mostly warm. No one even thought of restoring the original colors. If a painter had been available who was willing to do it, the stencil work would have made the cost prohibitive. No one wanted more tan and the general feeling was that the painters' idea of pale gray walls and a paler blue ceiling would make it very stylish. At least it would be lighter and clean. The solution ultimately arrived at is also lighter and clean, but it took a great many other factors into consideration and attempted to recapture some of the character which had been part of the original design.

The multicolor stencil on the chancel and apse had served two major purposes. It had concentrated the greatest richness at the architectural and ritual focus of the building, thus materially contributing to both the aesthetic and religious effectiveness. By echoing the colors in the nave and furnishings it not only served to focus but to tie together and unify the whole design. Something of the same qualities could be achieved by simpler means. Use of a dark red stencil pattern on a gold ground provided richness. The gold echoed the polished brass of the lectern, pulpit and other furnishings and the red picked up the warm tone of the wood.

The orange of the nave wall and the dark blue-green of the ceiling had also been integrated parts of the scheme. They repeated colors from the apse out in the nave. The orange was strong and being in the lower, lighter part of the nave gave it warmth. The ceiling paint was nearly if not quite as dark as the wood trusses and must have been quite successful at giving the feeling of space stretching away into quiet gloom above. Ideally it would probably be well to deliberately recapture that gloom but in the face of the certain negative response of mid-twentieth century people a compromise can be reached which will maintain the aesthetic unity of the building and still remain fairly light. The warmth of the original nave and the unifying color relationship between nave and chancel were recaptured by painting the walls with a specially mixed combination. A light neutral paint was modified with raw umber and a generous amount of the same red used in the stencil. The result seen on a panel in daylight is a rather peculiar pink, but no one seeing it in the church is conscious of it. It is light, but at the same time warm and makes as little contrast as possible with the wood work. For that very reason the same paint works well on the ceiling. It ties in well with the rest of the color and thus draws no attention to itself. It is also the one light paint that will not unnecessarily call attention to the timber truss work. While not lost in gloom, the trusses are not accented as they would be against pale blue and so take their proper subordinate place in the whole composition.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

This is an example of the type of approach that is needed. Each church poses its own set of problems but at the same time understanding and respect for the buildings will suggest the answers. The buildings were never cold, so light grays and blues quarrel with their basic nature. The warmth and darkness of the wood ask for darker paint, but if the color is carefully chosen it can be light. Fortunately the forthright use of materials is vigorous enough so that even painters don't often feel tempted to paint the wood. Fortunately indeed!

Our nineteenth century churches were good. The beauty of a unified design honestly carried out has often been marred by "improvements" but it can be recaptured. It isn't like the strawberry chiffon pie "improved" by the addition of mincemeat.

Decline in Episcopalian Giving

BY
GEORGE W. EDWARDS
Professor of Economics, City College of New York

STATISTICS can be not only dreary but also misleading. This is especially true of Church statistics which contain more than their share of errors. On the surface it would seem that the Episcopal Church has made gratifying financial progress. There has been a substantial increase in the annual contributions received by the Church. Statistics show that for 1929 contributions reached their peak in the 1920's at almost $46 million. After a decline in the 1930's contributions recovered steadily until they attained an all time high at $69 million for 1949. Thus it would seem that over a period of two decades contributions rose by about fifty percent. On the face of things this would seem like a satisfactory trend.

Actually these figures represent a serious financial regress. Over these two decades inflation has taken a heavy tribute from the dollars contributed to the Church. In actual buying power the $69 million received for 1949 represents an amount of about $42 million in terms of 1929 prices. In real buying power the Episcopal Church was therefore receiving less for 1949 than it had derived from its communicants for 1929.

This conclusion is substantiated when the contributions to the Church are computed on a per capita basis. For 1929 the average communicant gave about $36 to the Church and for 1949 he contributed about $41. Nominally he therefore increased his giving by five dollars over these years. In terms of buying power at the 1929 level, he was giving for 1949 only $25. Actually therefore the buying power of the average contributor was cut by more than one-third over these two decades.

The decline in Episcopalian contribution is particularly serious when contrasted with the trends in national income over the past two decades. There is no reason to assume that the income of the average communicant is much different from that of the average American. From 1929 to 1949 the income received by the average American rose very sharply. In 1929 he received $680, while in 1949 he derived an average yearly income of over $1,320 from his wages, interest, profits and other sources. In other words the per capita income of the average American about doubled. Along with other Americans the average Episcopalian undoubtedly shared in this rise in money income over these two decades. The average Episcopalian is now giving a much smaller proportion of his income to the Church than he did in the past. In 1929 he was giving the Church over five dollars out of every $100 of his income, while in 1949 he was giving only three dollars out of every $100.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Thus an analysis of Church statistics rather than showing a gratifying increase, really indicates a decline in the financial support of the Church.

The Living Liturgy

BY

MASSEY H. SHEPHERD JR.

THE LITURGY OF HEALING

IT is a happy coincidence that the publication by the Liturgical Commission of its study on The Order for the Ministration to the Sick has been issued at the same time the WITNESS is offering its readers an excellent new column by the Rev. Clinton J. Kew on 'Religion and the Mind.' Taken together, these two presentations of the Church's healing ministry offer us illuminating insights respecting one of the Church's most constant and significant means of help and grace. We strongly recommend that all the clergy procure and study No. III of the Commission's Prayer Book Studies, which has been prepared by the Rev. Morton C. Stone, and is now available from the Church Pension Fund.

The inadequacies of our present Prayer Book office for the Visitation of the Sick have long been recognized, by the very fact that it is almost never used. Its liturgical form is cumbersome. It is comforting only in the weak sense of the word 'comfort.' Psychologically, it is unsound—not once, for example, does it suggest to the sick patient any cooperation with or prayer for those who administer to him healing gifts. (We have to look in the Appendix of the Prayer Book, among Family Prayers, for anything of this kind). More serious still, the rite suffers from grave theological and ethical defects. It assumes, sometimes explicitly, sometimes tacitly, that all sickness is a visitation by God either to punish or to test. It is perfectly true that much illness, whether of body or of mind, is the result of sin. But God is never the author of evil, but only of good. He 'does not willingly afflict or grieve the children of men' (Lam. 3:33; Prayer Book, p. 45).

In his introductory essay, Mr. Stone shows how our office in the course of history has undergone deformation and decay—largely the result of the medieval abuse of Unction, not as a healing ministry, but as a solemn consecration and absolution for death. The more we have tinkered with it, in successive Prayer Book revisions, the less it has been employed. 'What is needed,' he says quite rightly, 'is not further patching and piecing of the existing Visitation Office . . . but a general reconstruction of a new Order.' This new Order the Commission now presents to the Church for study—and in this case, also for use. For there is no law that would prevent a bishop from duly and properly authorizing the experimental use of the new forms. In fact, they have already been tried, or forms similar to them, in many parishes with great success and benefit.

The only caution I should raise in respect to the use of the new office is that the bishops see to it that proper controls surround its use. No priest should enter upon a healing ministry without proper preparation and study both of the scientific and theological principles of psychosomatic medicine. An ignorant priest can be as dangerous to souls in this kind of ministry as he can be in the confessional, if he does not know what he is doing. But every priest is called upon constantly for some kind of ministration to the sick. The Church has waited too long to offer him sound and adequate liturgical means for this ministry. The present study is a great step forward in this direction.

It is a step forward for many reasons. For one thing it concentrates attention upon the positive goal of healing, not merely the soothing effects of consolation. Secondly it makes the new office essentially a church service of corporate worship. The individual is not isolated, but is outwardly and inwardly borne up by the prayers of the faithful. It also reminds the sick that spiritual ministries and physical medicine are coordinate and cooperative means to one and the same end, wholeness of body and mind and spirit. It does not neglect to deal with sin and all its evil effects; but it makes God's Absolution real and effective. Finally it restores the sacrament of Unction (or whatever you wish to call it) to its primitive and proper place in the life of Christian disciples, bringing them nearer to him who 'himself took our infirmities and bare our sicknesses.'

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Our Paganized Holidays

BY

E. A. CALLANAN JR.
Vicar of St. James, New Castle, Indiana

TWICE, in recent weeks, I have been struck by the calloused paganization of Church holy days. I, who consider myself a son of the modern age and not easily shocked, was first brought up short by the rampage of Hallowe'en, which begins hereabouts on the 1st of October. The release of pent-up aggressions, traditionally associated in this country with the eve of All Hallows, has been extended to a three or four week vandalism. Thus, an original perversion of healthy religion becomes a perversion of a perversion!

Again, with All Hallows just past, I dropped into a local dime store to find it gay with red and green festoons, and the air moaning with crooned Christmas Carols. I thought I was dreaming at first, to find Christmas upon us with Advent Sunday still four weeks away; but, unfortunately, I wasn't. The counter-girl was sympathetic with my expressed dismay, and as she handed me my change, offered: "I'm so sicka them carols over and over I could scream!" I returned consolation then made for the nearest door, hoping I hadn't missed Thanksgiving during my stay.

This led me to do some thinking; it's wonderful how God forces us to think once in a while. Historically, we know that the Church, in her wisdom, took certain pagan festivals, which were well established among the people she was evangelizing, and oriented them around Christmas doctrines. Each season was given its own Christian symbol and its own Christian associations. To take two examples: All Saint's Day was created from the pagan custom of revering the dangerous spirits of the dead, so that the living would not be plagued. It was changed to association with the communion of saints: the dead in Christ, and changed from gloomy necromancy to happy recollections and future promises. Christmas was taken from the morbid rites to the dying sun at the winter's solstice, and associated with the coming to earth of the very light to dwell with man forever.

How We Celebrate

HOW far we as a nation have turned from these traditions can be seen by examining the modern symbols and associations which these same holidays now evoke.

All Saints is now celebrated on its eve by Hallowe'en. The average Church boy or girl does not even know its original significance. The symbols are witches, goblins, ghouls, and the associations are with outright, and prolonged vandalism. Cider and doughnuts, the proper elements of the feast, are the only wholesome remains of this immature rite.

The Christmas symbol is now, of course, Santa Claus, (that jolly caricature of poor St. Nicholas), that magical superman of the upper air, who gives us infantile Americans something for nothing; no, not quite for nothing, for "being good" and for being the scions of mammon. The associations of Christmas are new and strangely un-Christian; we feel called upon to indulge in a kind of giant potlatch, full of the fears of getting less than we give, and of the dismay at giving what we would like to get, and getting what we would like to have given away.

So it is with Easter, Thanksgiving, and many others. Rabbits hatching chicken's eggs, (the former usually refered to in baby-talk as "bunnies,") with the associations of a new hat—it is considered degrading not to have "something new" for Easter. Thanksgiving is associated with the stuffed belly, in its crudest, most gluttonous form; and the "thanks" still remaining is expressed in the sentiment: "thank God we live like Americans and not like those foreigners," said with all the conviction of the Pharisee.

What Can We Do?

WHAT can we do about it? We have allowed holy days to become sin days; days in which we make a superb noise about our fleshly lusts, patting ourselves on the back for our ability to indulge, misuse and violate the holy gifts of God. Sit for a moment with the great steward, looking with eyes which see his starved, oppressed children, and with eyes which see these saturated, aggressive children. Can we feel anything but disgust and shame? Can you not sense an impending doom?

It is not entirely the fault of the laity that this sorry return to paganism has come about. Many ministers have been slow to condemn the business interests and other centers of selfishness which are continually at war against God's kingdom, profaning his holy things. We must all lead the revolt to the conservative, historic position of the Church if it is to come. We desperately need God's forgiveness and grace; when are we going to ask for it?

THE CHRISTIAN AND HIS MONEY
By Bishop Washburn
Ideal for Every Member Canvass
$4 for 100 $2.50 for 50
The Witness Tunkhannock, Pa.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

OXFORD PRESS HAS NEW MANAGER

★ Wilbur Dunham Ruggles, formerly manager of the retail store of the Methodist Publishing House in Kansas City, has been appointed manager of the Bible department of Oxford University Press. He succeeds Leon McCauley, Episcopalian, who is now with the education department of the National Council. He is a graduate of Springfield College and Yale Divinity School, having been ordained in 1935. He served churches in Waterbury, Conn., and in Jefferson City, Mo., and for four years was a member of the Missouri state library commission.

In 1943 he entered the navy as a chaplain and served in the South Pacific. He was discharged in 1946 with the rank of lieutenant commander. A year later he joined the Kansas City branch of the Methodist Publishing House as religious book counselor, later becoming manager of the retail store.

EPISCOPALIANS SHUN RADIO WORKSHOPS

★ No Episcopalians attended the workshop sponsored by the radio and television dept. of the National Council of Churches, it was announced by the Rev. Charles Schmitz, director. This is the third major workshop at which no official Episcopal representatives have been present, and the Episcopal Church is now the only major communion affiliated with NCC which has not had its promotion officials trained in latest radio and TV techniques.

The Rev. Mr. Schmitz also revealed that this year was the first time that no first or second prize for excellence in religious radio and TV had been awarded to an Episcopal church or diocese. Only one Episcopal church, St. John's, Mason City, Iowa, received an honorable mention in a minor category. The reason for the sharp decline in Episcopal winners was attributed to the absence of any programs produced by the Rev. Albert Chambers and Frederick Sontag, formerly of Central New York, who for the past years have won the highest awards given by the contest judges.

Since the disbanding of the Central New York public relations department, Episcopal participation in the above mentioned workshops has declined sharply. NCC officials expressed the hope that other Episcopal dioceses would show interest in this work, and that the National Council of the Episcopal Church would finally send its promotion workers to the workshops, so that all major communions affiliated with NCC could have their personnel adequately trained.

JERSEY CITY CHURCH CELEBRATES

★ Bishop Washburn officiated at a special service on October 7th which marked the 100th anniversary of St. Mary's, Jersey City. The service was followed by a dinner in the parish house. The final service of four marking the event was held the 17th.

BISHOPS DISCUSS EDUCATION

★ Bishops from 22 dioceses arrived late October 1st for the first conference of the year at the College of Preachers on the close of Washington Cathedral, for the conference on Christian education.

Canon Theodore O. Wedel, warden of the College and a canon of the Cathedral, headed the course of study for the conferences as the college embarks on its twenty-second year.

The college offers post-ordination training for clergy through its week-long sessions, and the conference of bishops will follow the same schedule and program outlined for clergy at each conference.

The Rev. Reuel L. Howe, professor at Virginia Seminary, lectured to the group on "Baptism Through Confirmation." Lectures and practice preaching continued through the week and Wedel closed the session with a lecture on "Relationship Theology."

The bishops came from throughout the east and midwest, with Bishop William F. Lewis of Nevada, and Bishop Richard S. Watson of Utah travelling the greatest distance to attend the sessions.

Publishers of Fine Books for over Four Centuries

The significance of Holy Communion in modern life

By THE REV. W. NORMAN PITTENGER, S.T.D.
General Theological Seminary

The Christian Sacrifice

An outstanding religious scholar interprets the relevance of eucharistic worship in the life of the Church today. An inspired interpretation of Holy Communion for every layman, it is thought-provoking for the clergy as well.

Dr. Pittenger traces the historical origins of communion from the New Testament through its development in the early Church. He stresses the essential importance of the rite as the central action of the Christian Church — an action in which Christ is "remembered" — a communion establishing fellowship between God and man in Christ. $3.50

Also by Dr. Pittenger:
The Historic Faith and a Changing World
"He faces up squarely to the problems that confront the Church today."—Living Church

At your bookstore • $2.50

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
114 Fifth Ave., N. Y. 11

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

DETROIT PARISH CELEBRATES

★ St. Matthew's, Detroit, Michigan, has just completed the observance of its 105th anniversary. On September 23 the preacher at the 11 o'clock service was the Bishop Walter M. Higley, suffragan of Central New York and a former classmate of the rector. On September 28 a parish supper was held followed by a social period of dancing in the parish house. On September 30th the preacher at 11 o'clock was the Rev. Birney W. Smith Jr., rector of St. Andrew's, Evanston, Illinois, and a product of the parish.

Erected in 1883 on the present site, this church edifice has recently undergone a process of face lifting and other exterior improvements. The parish house built about 1928 has also been repainted on the outside thus making for a total new look. The present rector is the Rev. F. Ricksford Meyers.

WASHINGTON CATHEDRAL DEDICATES GIFT

★ A special service of dedication was held in Washington Cathedral on October 14, formally to accept the silver altar cross and a matching pair of silver candlesticks given by King George VI of Britain. The cross and candlesticks were given by the king in appreciation of the hospitality shown to British personnel stationed here during world war two. After the dedication, the cross and candlesticks were permanently placed on the altar in the Cathedral Chapel of St. Joseph of Arimathea. Officials of both the British and U. S. Governments took part in the service.

MASSEY SHEPHERD AT SEABURY

★ Over thirty students for holy orders will be matriculated in special ceremonies at Seabury-Western Theological Seminary Oct. 18. The entire seminary community will be addressed by Dr. Massey Shepherd, professor of Church history at the Episcopal Theological Seminary and Witness columnist.

Following the evensong service and matriculation in the chapel, the Rev. John C. Patterson, a graduate, formerly rector of Grace Church, Madison, Wis., and at present headmaster of Kent School, Kent, Conn., will be presented a doctorate.

BISHOP HARRY KENNEDY AT ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S

★ Bishop Kennedy of Honolulu was the preacher last Sunday at St. Bartholomew's, New York. He recently returned from a trip to Japan, Korea and Okinawa and spoke of the opportunities that the Church has in these countries. The rector of the parish, the Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes Jr., served under Bishop Kennedy for a number of years as dean of the cathedral.

The Church Pension Fund

and its subsidiaries
administered for the benefit of the Church

The Church Hymnal Corporation

Publishers of The Hymnal; Hymnal 1940 Companion; Book of Common Prayer; A Prayer Book for Soldiers and Sailors; Book of Offices; Stowe's Clerical Director.

The Church Life Insurance Corporation

Offers low cost insurance and annuity contracts to clergy, lay officials and active lay workers of the Church, either voluntary or paid, and their immediate families. Services include individual insurance programming and assistance to parish officials in preparing and establishing plans for retirement of lay employees.

The Church Fire Insurance Corporation

Low cost fire, windstorm and extended coverage insurance on property owned by or closely affiliated with the Church, and on the residences and personal property of the clergy.

Further information available by addressing any of the above at

20 Exchange Place New York 5, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

NEWS OF OTHER CHURCHES

MERCHANTS AID CHURCH BUILDING FUND

People who live in the neighborhood of the Crooked Creek Baptist church at the northwest edge of Indianapolis are helping build a church every time they buy a sack of flour or fill up the tank with gasoline. This is because 15 merchants of the area came to the rescue of the congregation when funds for its new $125,000 building ran out. Before that, the church had obtained all the contributions it could and had staged paper sales, fish fries and similar ventures. But the new church stood only partially finished.

One merchant, who is not a member of the church and who has tried to remain anonymous, came to the rescue. He offered to contribute to the church a percentage of purchases made by church-going shoppers in his store. Frank Snyder Jr., a member of the church's building committee, spread the idea among other merchants. With the 15 cooperating, the church put out "scrip books" ranging in price from $5 to $50. These books were sold throughout the community to and by members of the congregation. The 15 merchants treat the scrip as cash in payment for purchases. Then they give a percentage of the face value of the scrip to the building fund. In most cases, this is 5%, but a grocery store and a few other merchants who have a margin too small, give a smaller percentage, but on a larger volume of business.

The congregation, one of the earliest in Marion County, was organized in 1837 in a log school. It has been worshipping for many years in a frame building. The new church building is of masonry construction.

LAUNCH LAYMEN'S AREA MEETINGS

The first of a series of nationwide area meetings under the auspices of the United Church Men of the National Council of Churches was held in Utica, N. Y., with laymen representing fifteen denominations as leaders. The top speaker was Wilbur La Roe, former moderator of the Presbyterian Church. He pleaded for a sense of urgency among laymen "because of the threats to our true Christian heritage." He described these as "the let-down in morals both locally and in high places, the widespread betrayal of trust by elected officials, the dangerous disregard of truth, the decline of the dignity of man, and the tendency of goods to become the master of people."

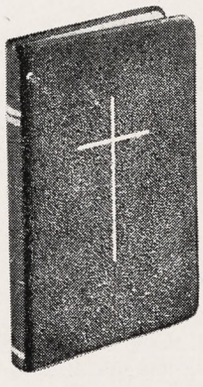
METHODISTS ORGANIZE CIRCUIT RIDERS

A campaign against "socialism, communism and anti-American teachings in the Methodist Church" has been launched by a group of laymen and ministers. Their first target is the Methodist Federation for Social Action, with a spokesman saying that their first task will be to have the Federation ousted from the official Methodist building in New York. The Rev. Jack McMichael, executive head of the Federation, said the Circuit Riders apparently are "a small clique of laymen who are using scare words to try to silence or intimidate the social impetus that grows inherently out of the gospel of Jesus."

STUDENT RELIGIOUS GROUPS PROTEST SEGREGATION

Students at the University of North Carolina adopted resolutions protesting the decision of the university officials to segregate Negro students at football games.

CLERGY AMONG OUTSTANDING LEADERS OF THOUGHT



Eight Atlanta Protestant ministers and two Jewish rabbis are among fifty-seven "outstanding thought leaders" who were honored in that city October 17. They were Methodist Bishop Arthur J. Moore; Rev. Louie D. Newton, Baptist; Dean Raimundo de Ovies, retired dean of the Episcopal Cathedral; Dean John B. Walthour, his successor; Rev. Charles L. Allen, Methodist; Rev. Monroe Swilley, Baptist; Rev. W. V. Gardner, Presbyterian; Rev. Pierce Harris, Methodist; Rabbi J. M. Rothschild and Rabbi David Marx. Others to be selected as being "men and women who, by their oral, written thoughts and civic activities, inspired others to think and act for the good of all," included editors, attorneys, businessmen, college professors, city administrators.

PRESBYTERIANS INSTALL TOP OFFICIALS

Two high ranking officials of the Presbyterian Church will be installed October 23: the Rev. Eugene C. Blake as stated clerk, the highest executive office, and the Rev. Glenn W. Moore as secretary of the General Council.

Harper Deluxe Prayer Books

A Gift To Be Treasured

According to the use of the Protestant Episcopal Church in The United States of America

The Prayer Books listed below are superb examples of fine binding and printing. Printed on Micropake India paper, these books are bound in fine grain Morocco, with the new and improved paper lining called Flextex Edgelining. All styles come in 3-piece, GIFT-PAK box.

INDIA PAPER

Medium Size, 3⅝ x 5⅝", only ¼" thick

H237x—Black Morocco, fine grain, Flextex Edgelined, gold edges, gold cross, GIFT-PAK.....$7.50
H238x—Same as H237x, in Red..... 8.00
H239x—Same as H237x, in Blue..... 8.00

For those who prefer a smaller size Prayer Book, size 2⅞" x 4⅜ x ¼", the listings below are recommended. All binding and printing features exactly the same as in the larger book.

H137x—In Black Morocco.....$6.50
H138x—Same in Red..... 7.00
H139x—Same in Blue..... 7.00

HARPER & BROTHERS, Publishers—New York, N.Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT, Book Editor

Prayer Book Studies. III. The Order for the Ministration to the Sick. By the Standing Liturgical Commission. Church Pension Fund (Church Hymnal Corporation). Fifty cents.

The first volume of Prayer Book Studies, dealing with (I) Baptism and Confirmation and (II) The Lectionary, was published last year. It has received wide and, we believe, careful study throughout the Church. The present volume deserves equal consideration. So serious is the situation that there are many parishes where the Order for the Ministration to the Sick is completely disused. Its archaic language and antiquated theology make it simply unusable. But the extraordinary thing is that the ministry of healing (either by prayer and the laving on of hands or by the use of Holy Unction—or both) is steadily increasing among us. There is great need for a thorough revision of the Prayer Book office.

The Commission has long studied this need, and in the present little work reviews the history of healing in the church, its principles (not antagonistic to the science of medicine), and the reflection of the Church's belief and practice in the successive Prayer Books. Then follows the proposed revision of the Office, with seven alternative "orders" at the very heart of it. Their themes are: the Great Physician, The Commission to Heal, Repentance, Faith, The Holy Spirit, The Holy Name, Holy Unction. Finally there is a Litany of Healing, various selected prayers, and an order for the administration of Holy Unction. The material is magnificent, and the proposed revision marks a great step forward. But the literary form in which this is presented (particularly, perhaps, in the Litany of Healing) leaves much to be desired. There are phrases that simply will not "go" in a liturgical service; there is a notable lack of smoothness in some lines; there are expressions that imply a bad bit of theology; the Jacobean -eth and -est are confused; and in the third prayer on p. 35 something surely has been lost out in the very middle. But these defects will of course be ironed out in criticism and study, throughout the Church, and in actual use. Let us congratulate ourselves that a real step has been taken in the direction of a reasonable, theologically sound, and genuinely devout Order for the Ministration to the Sick.—F. C. G.

Science and the Christian Faith. A Study in Partnership. By Edward LeRoy Long Jr. Haddam House. $1.75.

The title is unfortunate in that it is trite, as the volume is not. Most books of this sort are unconvincing for the person who is using the conflict of science and religion as an excuse for his irreligion. This volume calls the bluff and carries that person beyond his shallow excuse into a true understanding of religious reality. Science and religion meet on religious grounds for "the redemptive function of religion makes it possible to overcome the tragedy that attends the growth of human skill and power."—S. A. Temple.

The Philosophies of F. R. Tennant and John Dewey. By J. Oliver Buswell Jr. Philosophical Library. $6.00.

A doctoral thesis presented at the New York University School of Education. In some sections, such as the discussion of the Ontological Arguments of Anselm and Descartes, his treatment is rather complete; in others, as for example the quotations from Aristotle concerning the philosophy of Heraclitus, where a little knowledge of Greek would have helped his scholarship seems to be a bit weak.—Sydney A. Temple

The Book of Jeremiah. Vol. I (chh. 1-25). By Julius A. Bewer. Harper. 75c.

This is a continuation of Harper's Annotated Bible, which is appearing in pamphlet form but will eventually be printed on thin paper in a large volume or volumes. The text is the Authorized Version, with introductions to the various books and critical notes by one of the most learned and most gifted of modern Biblical expositors. An ideal book for the church school teacher or layman interested in beginning the careful study of the Bible.

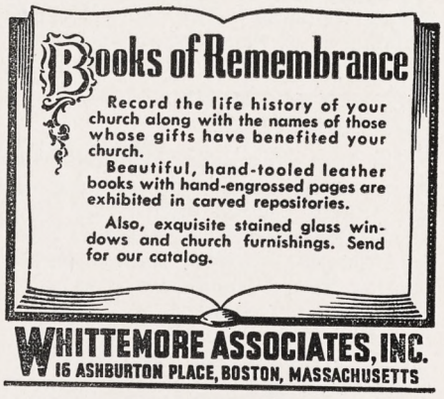
BOOKS RECEIVED

At One. A study of the Atonement. By Father R. F. Palmer, S.S.J.E. London: S.P.C.K.
The immense background of the custom of sacrifice is duly emphasized, and there is a wide-hearted and friendly attitude towards reunion, especially with the Presbyterian and United Churches.

What the Jews Believe. By Rabbi Philip Bernstein. Farrar, Straus and Young. $1.25.
This is a beautifully illustrated expansion of the famous article in "Life." It is extraordinary when one comes to think of it, that the book has only 16 pages of theology, and 78 pages on the Festivals. But this is characteristic. Judaism is a "religion of observance," and to describe what Jews actually believe, one has to know what they do. The same would be true of many another religion, including large parts of the Christian church.

Patterns for Devotion. By Gladys C. Murrell. Abingdon-Cokesbury. $1.25.
Twenty-seven story worship services, replete with poems, prayers, scripture readings, etc., to provide a proper setting for the stories. Clergy who preach children's sermons will find this book suggestive.

The Way into the Holiest. By F. B. Meyer. Baker Book House. $2.50.
A reprint of a once popular exposition of the Epistle to Hebrews by a world-famous evangelist.



Prisoners of Hope. By Herbert C. Alleman. Muhlenburg Press, Philadelphia. $1.50.
Fifteen sermons or addresses, replete with simple and telling illustrations.

The Catholic Movement in the Swedish Church. By Gunnar Rosendal. Seabury-Western Theol. Sem., Evanston. 25c.
The latest Hale Sermon, on an improtant movement in the direction of catholicity and reunion.

The Word Lives On. Ed. by Frances Brentano. Doubleday and Co.

Truth of Life—Key to Understanding. By Ambrose G. Beltz. Philosophical. $6.00.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE RELIGIOUS PRESS

Selected by GEORGE MACMURRAY

CHRISTIAN ATTITUDE ON CHINA: —The Canadian Far Eastern Newsletter, published by a former missionary, James G. Endicott, comes up with some heartsearching questions about the New China.

When you hear harrowing details of the so-called purge described by returning missionaries, ask yourself these questions: 1) Are these details carefully checked for evidence; how much is hearsay? 2) Were these missionaries as concerned about the concentration camps and death by torture which darkened the last years of Chiang's regime? What protest did they or the church make to the spectacle of conscripted troops being starved to death because of graft—3,000,000 of them in southwest China where these facts were carefully checked by relief workers and other foreign observers? 3) Clearly, the silence of the church on these matters, and their lack of protest against sending arms to Chiang, and now against the mass extermination of the Korean people, has made it more difficult for the Chinese Church and has, no doubt, increased suspicion of the activities of many Christians in China. In view of all this, how can the missionaries and the church in Canada best help the church in China and in all the other lands where, as the Quakers point out, the same kind of revolution would take place whether there were communists around or not? All the Asians and Africans are looking at white Christians and asking, "Which side are you on?"

FEEL LIKE CHURCH: —Bishop Conkling, writing for his diocesan paper, says that too many people go to church when they feel like it and stay away when they don't. "To pray and worship and serve when we do not feel like it may not please us in the doing but it certainly is most pleasing to God, not just because it is unpleasant for us but because what we are doing is right."

SEE YOUR CONGRESSMAN:—Your Congressman is probably now home, so the Christian Century suggests that you call upon him to register your opposition to the bill now before Congress. "We believe that the sentiment of the country is against any such system of permanent militarization. But with so much of the press, the veterans' organizations and the Pentagon on the other side, how is a Congressman to know this if citizens don't express themselves? They will never have a better chance to do so than the current congressional recess affords."

Incidentally, the C. C. uses lower case for the gentlemen in Washington—like this: "congressmen," "senators." Paul Hutchinson and his staff better watch out how they treat those servants or they will be cited for contempt.

WHAT OF COLLEGES?—Outlook, official organ of the National Council of Churches, reports an all-time high enrollment in the Protestant seminaries of the country. It states that the new men are badly needed to fill the estimated 15,000 vacant pulpits that exist. However the magazine answers "uncertain" to the question as to whether or not Church colleges can survive. In spite of vigorous campaigns through the summer to enlist students, the enrollment has fallen way down, due primarily to young men being grabbed for the armed forces.

FOR THOSE WHO SERVE:—Massachusetts Church Militant presented this prayer for those who serve our country:

Almighty God, whose fatherly care reacheth to the world's end, we beseech thee to protect and bless all those who serve our country on land, on sea and in the air, in particular the members of this parish.

For their homes give them love and loyalty;

For our nation, sacrifice and service;

For thy Church, reverence and devotion.

In times of training make them strong of body and disciplined in mind;

In times of monotony give them companionship and cheer;

In times of loneliness grant them thy presence;

In times of temptation thine armor;

In times of fatigue, thy strength;

In times of danger watch over them, we beseech thee, and give them courage; and grant that in all things they may be faithful in thy sight; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

SEEPAGE UP OR DOWN:—Editor William Leach of Church Management wants to know what causes the widespread moral degeneracy of our times. Says he:

"Without almost universal agreement on the moral degeneracy of our time some of us are put to it to decide whether the old rule that 'degeneracy seeps down from the top; democracy rises from the bottom,' is still true. We see lots of immorality in the highest places, including international agreements, national statesmanship and on other higher levels. At the same time evidences of a revival of democratic ideals at the lower levels are not too clear. Perhaps the time is near when we shall have to stop seeking a scapegoat for our moral delinquencies and rationalize our own responsibilities in a very bad situation."

HITS UMT:—Universal military training and freedom do not go together, according to the Baptist's Watchman-Examiner, which calls upon all friends of freedom to oppose the militarists in Congress who "are determined to attach this new totalitarian conscription of youth on the draft bill which is before Congress." Expressing doubt that a conscription bill for men 40 to 50 would have a chance of passing, the editorial declares that "a boy of eighteen has as much right to freedom as a man of fifty."

Flagon

A beautiful 9" Flagon of simple design which will add dignity to your Communion Service. Sterling Silver, capacity 1¼ pints, priced at $135.00.

Prices subject to change without notice.

WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED ECCLESIASTICAL BROCHURE GIVING PRICES

Gorham

PROVIDENCE 7, RHODE ISLAND

AMERICA'S LEADING SILVERSMITHS SINCE 1831

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CASSOCKS
Surplices — Choir Vestments
Eucharistic Vestments
Altar Hangings and Linens
Prices Sent on Request
J. M. HALL, INC.
14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.
Tel. CH 4-3306

VESTMENTS
Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves
Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries
Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars
Custom Tailoring for Clergymen
1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951
COX SONS & VINING, Inc.
131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

ST. JAMES LESSONS

A nine course series of instruction for Episcopal Church Schools including illustrated work books—150-250 pages (60c each) and teachers' manuals I, II, III 40c each, IV through IX 60c each).
No Samples - Payment with orders
St. James Lessons, Inc.
865 Madison Ave., Dpt. 5, N. Y. 21, N. Y.

FINEST PURE IRISH LINEN
For all Church uses
Just received from Belfast a new fine lightweight linen for Surplices in 39"—1.65 per yard. Also qualities and width for Albs, Fair Linen, etc., Patterns and Supplies, Books.
Samples Free
MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
BOX 386 CHILLICOTHE, MO.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

Make Christmas Christian

A church woman gave her rector a check as a thank offering for her friends. What her gift accomplished is related by Bishop Hines. Rectors will want to mail this leaflet to parishioners.
$1 for 25; $1.50 for 50; $2 for 100
THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

★ ADDRESS CHANGE

IN MAKING AN ADDRESS CHANGE, PLEASE SEND BOTH THE OLD AND THE NEW ADDRESS AND ALLOW THREE WEEKS FOR THE CHANGE.

PEOPLE

CLERGY CHANGES:

FRANCIS H. SMITH has resigned as rector of St. John's, Lewisboro, N. Y.

WILLIAM RICE has resigned as vicar of the Regeneration, Pine Plains, N. Y. and is now living at Waterville, Conn.

EDWARD LAINE, formerly ass't at the Ascension, New York, is now on the staff of Grace Church, Amherst, Mass.

WILLIAM T. WALSH has retired as rector of St. Mark's, Tarrytown, N. Y.

HARVEY A. GUTHRIE Jr., is now ass't at St. Peter's, Chelsea, New York.

DUNCAN G. PORTEUS is now ass't at Grace Church, New York.

ALEXANDER KETTERSON, retired of New York, is now living at Ocean Grove, N. J.

JACOB A. WINTERSTEIN has resigned as rector of Holy Trinity, West Chester, Pa., for reason of health.

THOMAS ALDRICH, former curate at St. James, Birmingham, Mich., is now rector of St. James, Albion, Mich.

HARRY B. WHITLEY, formerly rector of St. Andrew's, Algonac, Mich., is now curate at St. James, Birmingham, Mich.

JOHN FRENCH, formerly of St. Paul's, Bad Axe, Mich., is now rector of St. Luke's, Ferndale, Mich.

ORDINATIONS:

STEPHEN E. T. KIM was ordained priest by Bishop Kennedy on Sept. 13 at St. Andrew's Cathedral, Honolulu. He is vicar of St. Luke's Korean Mission.

JOHN H. STIPE was ordained priest by Bishop Dun, Sept. 22, at Christ Church, Washington, D. C., where he is now rector.

DEATHS:

H. HENRY SPOER, 78, who retired from the staff of St. Paul's, New York, last spring after forty years in the ministry, died Oct. 2 at his home in Sewell, N. J.

ARCHIBALD C. KNOWLES, 86, for 44 years the rector of St. Alban's, Philadelphia, died Sept. 30. His entire ministry of 52 years was spent in this parish.

The Prayer Book
Its History & Purpose
BY
IRVING P. JOHNSON
Late Witness Editor
25c for single copy
$2 for ten copies
The WITNESS
Tunkhannock, Pa.

HOUSE FOR SALE at Keene Valley in Adirondacks Furnished or unfurnished; suitable for year-round living. 1*st floor* two bed-rooms and bath, attractive kitchen, hall and living-dining room with knotty pine paneling and fire-place. 2*nd floor,* 2 bed-rooms and bath. Basement, furnace-room, rooms suitable for workshop and laundry; 1 car garage. Oil-burner, hot-water heat. 2.1 acres of ground, mostly woodland, mountain view, trout-stream. BOX C, WITNESS, TUNKHANNOCK, PA.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS
Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS
Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.
SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

Exquisite
IRISH LINENS
BY THE YARD
From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States, I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values; unsurpassed quality, imported direct from Ireland. Also transfer patterns, linen tape, and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 3 inches at 75c, 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.00.
MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

THE BISHOP WHITE PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833
Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.
PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)
Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BACKFIRE

LILIAN P. LONG
Churchwoman of Marion, Ala.

I again feel a concern to take issue with Mr. Walsh on his article on Free Catholicism—this time on the second article.

Mr. Walsh uses the word 'catholic' and 'catholicism' a number of times, spelling them with a small 'c'. These words as used by Mr. Walsh must have a meaning that is unfamiliar to most of us. In his article, under World Council as a subtitle, he says, "I come now to Geneva, and to the area of main controversy. What should be our attitude toward the Protestants? I know that many of the more catholic-mind Anglicans would say—Give them a wide berth."

In my Webster's dictionary the word catholic when spelled with a small "c" means universal, general, and liberal. These Anglicans referred to by Mr. Walsh as having a "catholic-mind" must not have any of those meanings for this word or they could not say give any other Christians a wide berth. If they do not admit that Protestants are Christians then they are as intolerant as our brothers in the Roman Catholic Church.

We low Church members of the Anglican communion who belong to the Protestant Episcopal section of God's Church would be sorry to think that our "catholic-mind Anglican" brothers want to give us a wide berth. Mr. Walsh holds out hope for us. In closing his article he says that if the Holy Ghost can't get the Roman Church to do as he wishes—he will give us poor Protestants a chance—He (the Holy Spirit) will re-catholicize us!

It seems to me that all of us who are trying to follow our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, would do well to re-read the parable of the Pharisee and the tax collector. Instead of standing in the corner with the Pharisee and saying, "Thank God we aren't as other men are!," we should compare our lives and the life of our section of God's great Church with the life of Jesus and what he wanted his church to be, and then move over into the corner with the tax collector and say from our deepest hearts, "God be merciful to us sinners."

VIDA D. SCUDDER
Churchwoman of Wellesley, Mass.

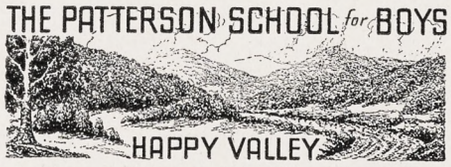
Allow me to express my gratitude for the refreshment given me by the article on Future of Free Catholicism by Chad Walsh. I have never read a statement to show our special Anglican contribution to the ecumenical movement with such complete and illuminated Christian insight. I may add my amused enjoyment of Mt. Entwhistle's adventure.

GEORGE F. TITTMAN
Rector of St. Mary's, Arlington, Va.

Do you know why I am looking so happily at the cover of your October 4th issue? It is because I infer from it that at last we might be getting some of your good, prophetic religion without having to stomach the petty, sub-basement churchmanship you seem to have felt had to be served along with it. And it isn't the Anglo-Catholic brethren I speak for, either.

O happy day—for most of us in the Church!

Or is it?



CHARLES F. WINDSOR
Churchman of New York

Thank you for the analysis of our foreign policy which you reprinted from the Anglican Outlook in the Witness for Sept. 27. It is indeed good to see ourselves as others see us—and humiliating.

ST. LUKE'S SCHOOL
Episcopal Day School under the direction of Trinity Parish
Nursery, Kindergarten, Elementary Grades. After School play groups. Coeducational. Moderate tuition. For catalogue and further information communicate with
THE REV. PAUL C. WEED, JR.
Headmaster
Hudson & Grove Sts., NEW YORK 14, N. Y.
Phone WAtkins 4-5960

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL
Coeducational Episcopal Day School
Prepares for leading secondary schools. Sound academic training. Kindergarten thru 8th grade. French and Latin emphasized. Complete testing program. Est. 1894. Music, drama, arts & crafts, sports. Bus service. Hot lunch. Tel: AL 4-2000
E. ALLISON GRANT, Headmaster
88 E. Fourth Ave. (11th St.), N. Y. 3

THE PATTERSON SCHOOL for BOYS

Episcopal School in Blue Ridge Mountains of Western No. Carolina. Accredited. Grades 6-12. Gymnasium, sports, 42nd year. 1300-acre estate. Board and tuition, moderate.
GEORGE F. WIESE, Supt.
COLLEGE PREPARATORY — Legerwood, N. C. — HEALTH EDUCATION
CHARACTER BUILDING

SCHOOLS

FORK UNION MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth — New Hampshire

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.SC., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield — Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE-MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Schools of the Church

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BARD COLLEGE

Formerly St. Stephen's

A Coeducational College of Liberal Arts and Sciences

FOUNDED 1860

For catalogue and further information write to The Director of Admissions, Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, New York.

DANIEL BAKER COLLEGE

BROWNWOOD, TEXAS

Established 1889. Operated under the auspices of the Diocese of Dallas. Co-educational senior college offering B.A. and B.S. degrees. Special opportunities in teacher training, music education, business administration. The only available undergraduate course in the Episcopal Church in Church Work Training. Member: Association of Texas Colleges.

REV'D W. A. CROSS, M.A., President

REV'D L. A. HASELMAYER, Ph.D., Dean

SAINT PAUL'S POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE

LAWRENCEVILLE, VIRGINIA

Approved by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. B.S. Degree with major in Trade and Industrial Education, B.S. Degree in Home Economics Education, B.S. Degree with major in Elementary Education, B.S. Degree in Secondary Education.

EARL H. McCLENNEY, President

VOORHEES SCHOOL & JR. COLLEGE

DENMARK, S. C.

Co-educational. Accredited by State Dept. of Education of S. C. and the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges. Under the two Dioceses of S. C. and The American Church Institute for Negroes. Expenses reasonable. Limited scholarship aid for worthy students. Apply:

CECIL D. HALLIBURTON, President

Okolona College

Okolona, Mississippi

Co-educational, Private, American Church Institute for Negroes (Protestant Episcopal Church) Established 1902

High School and Junior College - Trades and Industries - Music

For information write: W. MILAN DAVIS President

Today's Training for Tomorrow's Opportunities

St. Augustine's College

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA

1867 — 1951

Accredited Four-Year College for Negro Youth. Co-educational. Music, Pre-Medical, Health and Physical Education, High School Teacher Training, Business, Pre-Social Work, Nursing Education in co-operation with St. Agnes Hospital.

HAROLD L. TRIGG, President

SAINT HELEN'S HALL

Portland 1, Oregon

Historic Pacific Northwest Episcopal resident and day school. Founded in 1869. Co-educational pre-school. Boys admitted to Lower School through grade III. Upper School girls only.

Write for catalog.

The RT. REV. BENJAMIN DAGWELL, D.D.
President, Board of Trustees

JANE ALLEN SAXTON,
HEADMISTRESS

The Cathedral Schools

National Cathedral School for Girls

Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding department, grades 7-12

KATHARINE LEE, Principal

St. Albans

The National Cathedral School for Boys

Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding Department, grades 8-12

CHARLES MARTIN, Headmaster

Address:

Mt. St. Alban, Washington 16, D. C.

St. John Baptist School

FOR GIRLS

Offers College Preparatory and General courses. Music, art, outdoor sports, and a happy home life, with character building extra-curricular activities for resident and day students, under the care of the Sisters of St. John Baptist. In the country near Morristown, New Jersey. Accredited.

For catalog address Box 556

The Sister Superior, Mendham, New Jersey

St. John's MILITARY SCHOOL

Salina, Kansas

Since 1887 St. John's has been perpetuating the cultural tradition of the Church by stressing sound scholarship in Christian atmosphere. Grades 3 through 12. Fully accredited.

COL. R. L. CLEM, Rector

ST. MARY'S HALL

SECONDARY BOARDING SCHOOL

Faribault, Minnesota

Close relationship of students and faculty in residence allows for a maximum of spiritual, academic, and social growth. Preparation for leading colleges. An extensive sports program, including riding.

PHYLLIS M. NEWMAN, M.A.
Founded 1866 Headmistress

IOLANI SCHOOL

Episcopal Church School for Boys

HONOLULU 17, HAWAII

A college preparatory church school for boys. Kindergarten through twelfth grade. Established 1862. Day tuition $225 to $275. Boarding $665 - $775. Summer session. Accredited.

REV. CHARLES A. PARMITER, JR.
M.A., S.T.B., Rector

The MERRICOURT SCHOOL

(Episcopal)

A country boarding school for 40 boys & girls. Grades 1-8 (pre-preparatory). Home-like environment. Sports, extra-curricula program. 26th year. 8 weeks summer camp. For information: Visit, write, or phone 3-3209.

THE REV. M. W. WHITFORD, Hdm.
BERLIN, CONN.

ST. LUKE'S HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING

New York City

Offers a 3 year course in nursing to high school and college graduates. College graduates may be admitted with 9 months advanced credit allowance. For further information write to The Director of Nursing, St. Luke's Hospital, 421 West 113th St., New York 25, N. Y.

HARVARD SCHOOL

Diocesan School for Boys. 52nd Year. Fall term opens September 11, 1951. Grades seven through twelve. Fully Accredited. R.O.T.C. unit. For all information apply to

THE REV. W. S. CHALMERS
Headmaster
3700 Coldwater Canyon Rd.
NORTH HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

Cathedral School of St. Mary

An accredited Episcopal school for girls. Suburban New York City. Day-nursery to college. Boarding—fifth grade to college. Strong college preparatory course. Music, Dramatics, Art. Excellent sports program. Catalog on request.

MARION REID MARCH
Box W, Garden City, Long Island, N. Y.

ST. STEPHEN'S SCHOOL FOR BOYS

ALEXANDRIA, VA.

Grades 3 thru 12 (Day School). College Preparatory. Under the Church School System of the Diocese of Virginia.

Address
THE REV. EDWARD E. TATE,
Headmaster
2405 Russell Rd. ALEXANDRIA, VA.

ST. MARY'S HALL on the Delaware.

Episcopal boarding and day school for girls 8-18. Founded 1837. Thorough college preparation. Fully accredited. Separate lower school. College preparatory and general courses. Music, Art, Clubs, Sports, Dramatics. Near New York and Philadelphia. Catalogue.

FLORENCE LUKENS NEWBOLD
Headmistress
Burlington, New Jersey

DeVEAUX SCHOOL

Niagara Falls, New York

FOUNDED 1852

The Church School in the Diocese of Western New York. College preparatory for boys. Representative form of student government. Small classes. Reasonable charges. Grades 7 through 12.

For information address The Headmaster.

The Church Home and Hospital

SCHOOL OF NURSING

Baltimore 31, Maryland

A three year course of nursing. Classes enter August and September. Scholarships available to well qualified high school graduates.

Apply to Director of Nursing

ST. AGNES SCHOOL

An Episcopal Country Day and Boarding School for Girls

Excellent College Preparatory record. Special courses arranged for girls not contemplating college. Day pupils range from Kindergarten to College Entrance. Boarders from Grade 8 to College Entrance.

MISS BLANCHE PITTMAN, Principal
Albany New York

HOWE MILITARY SCHOOL

Thorough Academic Training in a Spiritual Environment. R.O.T.C. Accredited college preparatory, business courses. Junior School. Small classes. Every boy participates in sports. Balanced program. Episcopal. Established 1884. Summer Camp, boys grammar school age. Catalogue.

COL. B. B. BOUTON
13 Academy Place, Howe, Indiana

The WITNESS

10¢ A COPY

October 25, 1951

ALGER L. ADAMS
Writes on Jim Crow Church

RELIGION NURTURES PERSONALITY

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 7:30, 8 (and 9 Holy Days except Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 8:30, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers — 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. — 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital — 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m. Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a. m. Holy Communion.
9:30 and 11 a. m. Church School.
11 a. m. Morning Service and Sermon.
4 p. m. Evensong. Special Music.
Weekday: Holy Communion Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.; Wednesdays and Saints Days at 8 a. m.; Thursdays at 12:10 p. m. Organ Recitals, Fridays, 12:10.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer — 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon. Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D.,
Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 — 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m.
Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacColl, 3rd, Rector
Rev. Peter Chase, Curate
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 35 The WITNESS OCTOBER 25, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

STORY OF THE WEEK

National Council Asks Payments For A Record Budget

Plans Are Announced For Early Training Of Key Laymen For Next Year

★ The National Council, meeting at Seabury House October 10-12, heard that payments on expectations to September 30 were $159,550 below the amount expected and $517,651 below the amount required to cover the nine months share of the budget. A resolution was therefore unanimously adopted pointing out that if dioceses will pay what they promised "we shall set a new record of giving for the work of the Church" and therefore calling upon parishes and dioceses "to bring all contributions to the missionary work up to date as soon as possible, and to maintain regular payments in full until the end of the year. A loyal response will enable us to achieve the new record which the year 1951 has promised and will give our valiant missionaries the support they so richly deserve in their service for Christ through the world."

Robert D. Jordan, head of promotion, told of this year's layman's training program with 2,500 laymen having been trained in 82 of the 88 dioceses and districts. "Where dioceses and laymen follow the plan exactly as taught in the training conferences, the reports are always good," he declared. Another year the fall program for the canvass will conflict with General Convention so it is planned to have training conferences in May and June. The men so trained will be used as their bishops wish, perhaps addressing deputies to General Convention, speaking at summer conferences and camps, addressing youth groups, etc.

The Council voted to create a publishing house in the building in Greenwich, Conn., which was purchased some months ago. It will be known as the Seabury Press, with the Rev. John Heuss, director of education under whose department it will operate, explaining to the Council members that it will publish, promote and distribute the materials produced by the department. Leon McCauley, formerly with the Oxford Press, whose selection as manager was announced months ago, was formerly elected to the position by action of the Council at this October meeting. To aid in the establishment of the press a contribution will be received from an individual donor, through the Episcopal Church Foundation.

Appropriations for new work on Okinawa, providing for a residence, church, parish hall and station wagon, were approved.

Another mobile educational unit, similar to the one that has been visiting various parts of the country under the leadership of the Rev. Walter Williams, is being organized, with the Rev. Grant A. Morrill, formerly the rector of Trinity, Hamilton, Ohio, as the leader. Mr. Heuss also announced that the third book in the Church training series, "The Faith of the Church" by Chaplain James Pike and Prof. Norman Pittenger is now out. New study courses in the family plan will be forthcoming soon, as well as a 40-session Bible course. The department will also have additional training conferences for lay people this fall and winter, and a new series of conferences for the clergy. It was reported that so far over 3,000 clergymen have been involved in the training plan, and 1,000 more will attend conferences before General Convention.

The Rev. Roger Blanchard, head of college work, told of plans for a west coast training course for men and women working in colleges. He reported that there was a growing interest in college work, indicated by the fact that he has invitations to present the program to 66 diocesan conventions, 98 Auxiliary meetings and seven provincial synods.

The town and country division of the domestic missions department reported that 108 seminaries and 11 women workers had received training in rural work, with special assignments of work having been given to an additional 37 students.

It was announced for the department of social relations that Mrs. Charles S. Monroe (Gwen Owen) will serve in the division of health and welfare services on a part time basis. Also the Rev. M. M. Weston, formerly on the staff of St. Philip's, New York, joins the staff of the department. He has had wide experience in industrial relations, community organization and business.

The Council authorized the

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

department "to gather factual material on all social agencies of the Church (there are 281 of them—hospitals, homes for aged, homes for children, etc.) and to set this forth together with interpretation, standards, and goals for the guidance of the Church and the agencies; and that the cooperation of bishops, diocesan departments and agencies is requested for the prosecution of this study to the end that this special pastoral ministry of the Church may be carried on to the greater glory of God and the healing of his people."

The resignation of Mary M. Brace as education secretary of the division of youth, was received with regret.

Three guest bishops addressed the Council: Bishop Kennedy of Honolulu who told of his recent trip to inspect and study the work of the Church in Japan and distant Pacific islands; Bishop Binstead of the Philippines who told of progress in rebuilding there; and Bishop Hudson of Newcastle, England, who brought greetings from the SPG in this 250th anniversary year.

Bishop Binstead's address resulted in the Council appropriating $75,000 from undesignated legacies, in addition to what had previously been appropriated to the Philippines from the reconstruction and advance fund.

The Council elected Harry M. Addinsell of New York, as treasurer to succeed Russell E. Dill who died recently.

Mr. Addinsell is a member of the National Council and a member of its departments of finance and of promotion. He is an investment banker. He is a vestryman of St. Bartholomew's Church, and of St. Paul's Church, Glen Cove, Long Island.

CANVASS INNOVATION IN WASHINGTON

★ St. Alban's, Washington, is putting on a new kind of every member canvass starting October 29th. Committee members are calling on parishioners, not to talk finances, but to invite them to a box supper at the church. At these family gatherings the Rev. Felix Kloman, rector, and members of the vestry tell of the work of the Church, in the world, the diocese, the parish. They are having a series of suppers in order to keep each gathering relatively small. They are even providing baby sitters, with the young adults group of the parish fanning out to do the job. The budget of the parish, one of the largest in the city, is $61,800 for next year.

JOHN JACOB NILES, American ballad singer, member of Christ Church, Lexington, Kentucky, at work on his oratorio, Lamentation, which had its opening at Terre Haute, Indiana, and was received enthusiastically

SCHOOL OF RELIGION IN HOUSTON

★ A school of religion got under way October 15th in Houston, to meet on successive Monday evenings. Courses are being given by Bishop Hines on "God and the Bible"; the Rev. Skardon D'Aubert on the "History and Devotional Use of the Prayer Book"; "Christian Healing" will be taught by the Rev. Claxton Monro.

PRAYER MEETINGS FOR PEACE

★ More than 7,000 New Yorkers braved torrents of rain to participate in three prayer meetings for peace in Korea, sponsored October 7 by the Interfaith Committee for Peace Action. A number of clergy of the Episcopal Church were on the sponsoring committee. A highlight was a message from Clarence Pickett of the Friends Service Committee who said: "Here this afternoon one sees in a miniature the world in which we live. We are of all shades of color, of widely varying creeds and come from many cultures and countries. But we are united on this occasion around one common central yearning of the human heart. We pray with all our hearts that the scourge of war may be removed from mankind."

Ted O. Thachrey, editor of a New York daily, said: "Life is not possible in an isolated, dividing and warring world" and he urged that the demand for negotiations, that take place after every war, precede war. "If not," he concluded, "mankind will be set back 100 years for every single year of delay."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Philip Morrison, nuclear physicist, in a hard-hitting attack, exploded the myth that there can be magical or harmless wars. He applauded the prayer meetings and vigils for peace, pointing out that "we have not yet seen the involvement of the bomb thus far in Korea. And this is a consequence of the determination of the peoples of the world that this weapon shall not be lightly used. We can go further—we can secure negotiations and peace among all the great powers."

Chairmen of the meetings were the Rev. Willard Uphaus, the Rev. Thomas Kilgore, the Rev. Edward McGowan. One of the speakers was the Rev. Charles A. Vertanes of the Armenian National Church. There was also a message from Bishop W. J. Walls of the A. M. E. Zion Church in which he declared that the Church "must not give up the belief that men can live on this planet without destroying each other. It must keep up its drive in this atomic age to save us all from the following of sinful tempers and selfish ambitions into the most destructive war of all times. I wish your meetings God's blessings and a divinely appointed success."

PROTESTANTS LAUNCH RELIGIOUS SCHOOL

★ Some 800 students have been enrolled in a new Protestant school of religion under the auspices of the Massachusetts Council of Churches. The school, sponsored by ten major Protestant denominations, is being held Monday evenings through Nov. 5 in four downtown church buildings in Boston. They are Congregational house, Episcopal diocesan house, St. Paul's Cathedral, and Unitarian headquarters.

Nineteen separate courses are being offered with special emphasis on preparing teachers for all age groups. Two hundred students are enrolled for a course entitled "Why I Am A Protestant." The course is taught by Bishop Norman B. Nash. Rabbi Maurice L. Zigmond is teaching a course on Jewish festivals.

Two schools formerly were held during the fall months, sponsored by the diocese of Massachusetts and the Congregational Conference. These have been discontinued in favor of a unified effort by all denominations.

CHURCH WORKERS TO PASS CIVIL DEFENSE LINES

Workers in the every member canvass planned by the diocese of Rhode Island will have no difficulty passing police and civil defense lines to make calls if they are equipped with special stickers, according to Huntington Hanchett, canvass chairman. The canvass will be held Nov. 4, the same day as a statewide civil defense test. Mr. Hanchett said that he had notified each parish of the sticker requirement for canvass workers, urging parish chairmen to obtain them from the diocesan office.

BISHOPS' RALLY WELL ATTENDED

★ About 4,000 persons attended a bishops' rally of the 58 parishes and missions in the Westchester section of the diocese of New York, which was held in White Plains on October 14th. It was held at the county center, with Bishop Donegan, diocesan, Bishop Boynton, suffragan, and Bishop Gilbert, retired, participating. The principal speaker was Bishop Lewis of Nevada. It was one of the best attended meetings ever to be held in the diocese.

LAYMEN OF HAWAII SPONSOR CONCERTS

★ The laymen's league of Honolulu sponsored concerts last month by two young men who have made quite a reputation in the States for their musical talents. Charles Davis was formerly organist and soloist at St. Stephen's, Wahiawa, and James Shigeta, a former student at Holy Trinity School, made appearances for the benefit of churches in the district. Both of the men have made fine impressions singing with Bing Crosby and others.

PARISH ERECTS HUGE CROSS

★ A cross weighing over seven tons and towering 75 feet skyward from the sidewalk has been erected in front of St. Stephen's, Columbus, Ohio. The Rev. Almus Thorp, rector, said that the cross, made of steel, probably will be painted and spotlighted at night. The church is on a street that borders the campus of Ohio State University.

FRESNO WANTS RATIO TWO TO ONE

★ There is said to be a considerable demand in Fresno, Calif., for a high church parish. At one time Dean Malloch recommended that the next church should be an Anglo-Catholic one. However it is the announced policy of Bishop Walters that no community should have such a parish until it has at least two parishes which he described as "normal."

MRS. J. A. KELLAM receives communion on her ninetieth birthday at Calvary, Wilmington

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

OHIO CHURCHMEN PROTEST ATTACKS ON FREEDOM

☆ Rectors of Episcopal parishes in Columbus, Ohio, last week joined with other ministers in issuing a formal statement denouncing recent actions of President Truman and Ohio State University's board of trustees as attacks on "the freedoms we cherish." The statement was directed against Truman's recent executive order to heads of federal departments and agencies to set up official information censors to pass on the release of all information relating to the work of various executive agencies. It was aimed also against the state university's board of trustees' ruling requiring screening of all campus speakers by university president Howard L. Bevis before the speaker can talk on the campus.

The two actions, the church group maintained, challenged basic American freedoms "so flagrantly that we are moved to declare ourselves against them and call for their reconsideration."

The university action was taken after Harold Rugg, professor emeritus, Teachers College, Columbia University, delivered a series of mid-summer lectures. Two Columbus newspapers and various veterans' organizations took issue with certain statements made by Rugg, assailing him for allegedly attempting to indoctrinate students with socialistic philosophies.

The clergymen, who called for reconsideration of the actions, said the formal statement was issued after informal discussion of the issues by several of them and solicitation of others on how they felt about the matter. Among those who issued the statement were: Ohio Methodist Bishop Hazen G. Werner; the Rev. Donald Timerman, executive secretary of the Franklin County Council of Churches; Ellwood Maunder, of the Ohio area Methodist office; various Methodist, Congregationalist and Episcopal pastors; and Rabbi Jerome D. Folkman.

"Both actions attack freedoms we cherish," the statement said. "The action of the board of trustees attacks freedom of speech and freedom of conscience. The President's action is seen by us as a direct threat to freedom of the press. An unreasoned, undemocratic attack upon academic freedom does more than undermine the coveted freedom of speech and conscience; it prepares the way for the undermining of other freedoms, including freedom of the press. Our churches and our better educational institutions are seeking to open men's minds to the truth and to empower their wills to seek sanity and serve altruistic ways to aid men who are seeking to serve our troubled world by declaring things which they sincerely believe are in accord with their religious convictions."

"If an occasional rogue speaks untruth, that is not nearly so serious a thing as that free men, cowering behind their own unwillingness or inability to defend the truth, should refuse to hear, to judge and to act. To shut another man's mouth is another way of closing one's own mind and neither America, nor religion, nor the press, nor the future are safe if such a sad state is encouraged or endured. We urge all our fellow citizens to consider thoughtfully the deep implications of the two actions we have cited above," the statement said in conclusion. "We summon them to express their convictions by joining with us in efforts to prevail upon those who represent us on the board of trustees of OSU and in the White House to rescind their recent rulings cited above."

PLAN CHAPEL AT COLLEGE

☆ The district of San Joaquin is to purchase land near the new Fresno College campus for the purpose of building there a club house with chapel for Episcopal students as soon as the need becomes evident.

UNITED CHURCH MEN LAUNCHED

☆ The United Church Men, a department of the National Council of Churches, was launched with meetings and a service in Cincinnati on October 7th. Charles P. Taft, an Episcopalian, was among those taking part in the service. A message was read from President Truman in which he called upon the men to "turn their hearts and souls from rancor and hatred to love and the spirit of true brotherhood."

The President's message followed by less than ten days a somewhat similar plea addressed to a group of Protestant churchgoers in Washington. Mr. Truman then chided the world's religious leaders for their failure to devise a common affirmation of faith at a time of great peril. He had urged them to unite in a crusade for peace.

Without mentioning the President's Washington statement but in apparent reference to it, the churchmen pledged to do "everything within our power to build a stronger and more vigorous program of applied Christianity for the Protestant laymen of the nation."

Asked to comment on Mr. Truman's Washington address, Lem T. Jones of Kansas City, Mo., chairman of the new lay group, said in an interview that while he preferred to make no direct statement it was his hope that eventually the "spirit of Christ might be made to dwell in the lives of all men of all faiths, creeds and races."

He declared that the immediate purpose of his group was an effort to "put in the church pew seventy-five out of every hundred men who do not now attend Sunday services."

The inaugural service began with a processional of Cincinnati laymen, denominational leaders bearing banners of their respective churches, and the officers of United Church Men. Leading the procession was a cross and an open Bible.

Described as the first church-sponsored laymen's organization to be established on an interdenominational level, it will seek to cultivate interracial, interfaith and international goodwill in local communities.

Convinced that men's church work has too long been regarded as the "occasion for just another club," the organization will endeavor to "hold up the hands of the pastor, to make his way easier, and to bring about the finest possible partnership between the ministry and the laity for the building of the Kingdom."

SEEK TO DEFINE CHRISTIANITY

★ Horace Van Metre, an Episcopalian of Waterloo, Iowa, is the attorney for relatives of the late Dr. W. B. Small of that city whose will set up a trust fund of $70,000 the income of which was to be disbursed to "persons who believe in the fundamental principles of the Christian religion and who are endeavoring to promulgate the same." Ten nephews and nieces, the closest heirs, are contesting the will on the grounds that "there is no common agreement as to what constitutes the fundamental principles of Christianity" or its promulgation.

Hearings started with three witnesses appearing in behalf of the trustees of the estate. They were the Rev. Charles S. Hempstead, Cedar Falls, district superintendent of the Methodist Church; Dr. Russell D. Cole, president of Cornell College, a Methodist school at Mount Vernon; and Dr. Miron A. Morrill, professor of English at Cornell. All three testified that Christians can be defined as those who believe in the Apostle's Creed, the Holy Trinity, God and the divinity of Christ, and a confession of faith. "I believe these are the basic concepts of Christianity, and are common to all Christian denominations, whatever their other differences may be," said Dr. Cole.

Attorney Van Metre asked them what they considered the "true Bible." This resulted in a discussion about the relative merits of the King James Bible, the Revised Standard Version of the Bible, and the Douai Bible. The King James version is used by most Protestant denominations and the Douai by the Roman Catholic Church. The witnesses said they favored the King James Bible, bringing the comment from Van Metre that the issue represented "a basic difference of belief."

Mr. Van Metre also questioned the witnesses as to whether they believed in the infallibility of the Pope, when speaking on religious matters, and in the recently-announced dogma of the assumption of the Virgin Mary. The witnesses said they did not accept either of these.

The attorney said that when the court reconvened he would introduce expert witnesses of his own to testify that it is not possible to define Christians for legal purposes. "The will cannot be enforced," he argued, "because neither the beneficiaries nor the purpose to which the income has to be used are capable of ascertainment."

Few knew that hearing of the suit was to start and there was only a small turnout of spectators. A large crowd was expected when the hearings resumed. "It did us all good," said Bailiff Charles G. Sweitzer. "We agreed that such a case revives and strengthens our religious life. It makes one do some thinking."

OLDEST CLERGYMAN KEEPS BUSY

★ The Rev. William Northey Jones, 85-year-old rector emeritus of St. Peter's Church, Perth Amboy, N. J., though technically retired, is believed to be the oldest clergyman of the Episcopal Church who manages to keep busy throughout the year, after official retirement. He has been doing parochial work in the south during the winter months, returning to Connecticut for the summer. Last winter he conducted regular services at Trinity Church, Jasper, California. During his sixty years of active ministry, he has served parishes in six dioceses, and has held many diocesan offices.

FRESNO HAS PLANS FOR NEW CHURCH

★ The district of San Joaquin, as a part of a long-range program, plans to establish a church on an interracial basis in West Fresno. The area is not properly churched, except for Roman Catholicism, which has four churches there. A report of a committee points out that "it would be significant to see what a conservative denomination might do with one."

ROYDEN YERKES GIVES HALE LECTURES

★ The Rev. Royden K. Yerkes is giving the Hale lectures this week at Seabury-Western Seminary on "The Doctrine of Sacrifice."

TEXAS LAYMAN LEADS IN HONOLULU

★ Bertram Parker, layman of Corpus Christi, Texas, is to lead laymen's conferences in Honolulu starting October 25th on the Church program.

ERANZ WESTON has been the senior warden of St. John the Evangelist, Newberry, Florida, for forty-five years

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CHAPLAINS RETURN FROM KOREA

★ The armed forces division of the National Council has announced the return from Korea of two Episcopal chaplains. Chaplain Lewis Sheen, formerly on the staff of St. Andrew's Cathedral, Honolulu, has been assigned to Fort Benning, Ga., and Chaplain Russell Kuhsch, in the army since 1943, has been assigned to duty at Fort Jackson, S. C.

AUXILIARY ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

★ New officers for 1951-52 were elected by the national executive board of the Woman's Auxiliary at its meeting in Seabury House, October 5-8: chairman, Mrs. Theodore Wedel of Washington, D. C.; vice chairman, Mrs. Robert Arneson, Oswego, Oregon; secretary, Mrs. Southall W. Tate, New Orleans. New committee chairmen: United Thank Offering, Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker Jr., Austin, Texas; personnel, Mrs. Edward G. Lasar, St. Louis; finance, Mrs. Lewis D. Pilcher, Petersburg, Va.

Acting on nominations received from Mrs. Robert R. Vance of Worthington, Ohio, who is chairman of a nominating committee, the board elected Mrs. Alfred M. Chapman of Washington Crossing, Penn., to be presiding officer, and Mrs. David R. West of Minneapolis, assistant presiding officer, for the triennial meeting of the women of the Church, to be held in Boston next September.

The board has two new members: The women of the fifth province have elected Mrs. Vance to replace Mrs. H. W. Whinfield, who has taken up new work in Michigan which makes board membership impractical; and the Girls Friendly Society has appointed Mrs. G. Russel Hargate of Elyria, Ohio, to represent them in place of Mrs. Elwood L. Haines who is now on the National Council staff.

Appropriations voted by the board from the United Thank Offering or other funds included money for physics laboratory equipment at St. Paul's University, Tokyo; furnishings (altar, pews, etc.) for a new church at Rosario, Southwestern Brazil; repairing a cement floor at St. Faith's House, Salina, Kansas, where flood waters came in under the building. This was the only request received by the board for help in flood damage.

Also voted was a gift toward building the cathedral church in Maebashi, diocese of North Kwanto, Japan, which is to be a memorial to Bishop John McKim (born 1852, bishop in Japan 1893-1935). Also, help in building St. Michael's primary school, South Tokyo, much needed to receive the young graduates from eight surrounding church kindergartens. The gap between kindergarten and secondary school has long been a deficiency in the Church's educational system.

The board approved the request of the Bishop of Utah to transfer an appropriation previously made for a church in a small town, to be more effectively used toward All Saints mission in a new and rapidly growing non-Mormon section of Salt Lake City.

A young Chinese woman, Miss An-Veng Loh, completing a period of study in the United States, has found it impossible to return to China, much to her distress. She asked whether she could be given "a really hard job" and has been assigned by the Bishop of Nevada to an isolated mission at Battle Mountain where the late Deaconess Julia Clark expected to work. As Miss Loh's living quarters will be extremely simple, and as she has had no occasion to acquire personal furnishings and possessions, the board is sending her an unsolicited gift for such necessities.

Except the Presiding Bishop, the board's only visiting speaker was Miss Luella Reckmyer of the National Council of Churches, who has recently returned from a trip to Germany. In connection with relief in general, the board had word that supplies in the second-hand clothing bins of Church World Service are very low and the need continues; it is much preferred that gifts of clothing be sent without designation of any one country since prompt shipment sometimes depends on being able to seize whatever shipping opportunities occur.

SIXTEEN YEAR OLD ORGANIST

★ Nancy Booth, sixteen, a junior in high school, is the organist of St. Mark's, Waterloo, Iowa. This summer she spent ten days at the Evergreen conference in Colorado where she attended the school of organists. Rector Perry M. Gilfilan reports that Nancy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Booth, are both active in the work of the parish.

NORTH CAROLINA HAS SURVEY

★ The diocese of North Carolina is conducting a survey under the direction of Bishop Richard Baker to ascertain how the Church may meet the opportunities for expansion and service in the state. He says that the survey is designed to establish some of the needs in relocating churches and to indicate trends for the next ten years.

BENSON FORD TAKES OFFICE

★ Benson Ford, son of the late Edsel Ford, has been installed as a co-chairman of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. There are also Roman Catholic and Jewish chairmen. Mr. Ford is an Episcopalian.

HARVEY FIRESTONE GETS AWARD

★ Harvey Firestone Jr. of Akron, Ohio, received the Philander Chase medal from Kenyon College on October 20th. It is an annual award "to an outstanding Church layman for devoted and distinguished service."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EDITORIALS

Crusade For War

THE recent National Council "every member canvass" brochure, "Christ works through You," has raised a lot of questions. The controversy looms over the opening three paragraphs, about one-third of the text, as follows:

"The thrilling stand of our small army on the battlefields of Korea is an inspiring chapter in American military history. These are our front line soldiers. These are the men who stand against almost overwhelming odds in the mud, in the heat, in the bitter cold, in a foreign land. These are the front line soldiers.

"But behind the front lines, there is another army. We, at home, are members of that army. Ours is the task of supply and encouragement. Some few of us work in plants producing the materials of war, but far more of us give only of our means so that the front line soldiers may have the tools of war.

"There is another worldwide struggle of which so many people are only dimly conscious. It is a fight to make the world Christian—the only ultimate solution to the problem of world peace . . ." The paragraph goes on citing the personal devotion of our missionaries.

The first question raised is, "Should our support of Christ be based upon a parallelism with the destructive effort of the military forces of the United States in Korea?"

The leaflet opens with unqualified praise of that warfare. It goes on as a consequitur, "There is another worldwide struggle." Is Christ's redemption of the world just "another" struggle. The general text hardly suggests this struggle of the Church is any different in kind or purpose from the Korean war. Instead of the Church's mission being "another" struggle, shouldn't it rather be a "different" struggle, with different aims, different methods, and different purposes?

Are we to argue that the goodness of the struggle in Korea is the certificate of our struggle to bring in the Kingdom of God? Are the moral issues of war and peace so clearly drawn in Korea that American policy can be said to equal the mission of the Church to redeem the world? To plead national necessity is one thing; but is the need of the nation necessarily the will of God? Does the need of the nation dictate the terms of redemption? Or are we, the Church, to redeem the world through Christ—the whole world?

As to the morality of any war it is pointed that Lambeth as late as 1948 excoriated war "as a method of settling international disputes," saying it is "incompatible with the teaching and example of our Lord Jesus Christ." Should the considerable body of Christians who are sincere pacifists under this meaning be told of the "battlefields of Korea" as an argument to support the Church's program in "another" war?

Doesn't this military illustration paint the Church as a sort of war bride of the war machine at a shot-gun wedding?

Further, "Should dubiously moral matter be used to present the urgency of the need of Christ's work."

Total war, with its napalm bombs, atom bombs, "area bombardment," and razing of whole villages to rout our snipers and guerillas, destroying women, babies, old people, innocents' property, may be hard-headedly d e f e n d e d as part of the brute evil necessity of war. But, is this a fit parallel for the work of God?

For example, can we use preoccupied sadistic torture to illustrate Christian singleness of purpose? Can we use the mechanics of burglary to illustrate opening doors to Christ?

Explanation has been made that the illustration has been used only on technical grounds of capturing the popular imagination.

As to this, it is observed that the Dodger-Giant pennant race and the World Series occupied far more space on the newspaper front pages than the Korean war. Yet, we hardly believe that would be appropriate illustration of the horribly serious tasks facing the Church in this war-

★

"Quotes"

GIVE me a good digestion, Lord,
And also something to digest.
Give me a healthy body, Lord,
With sense enough to keep it at its best.
Give me a healthy mind, Lord,
To keep the good and pure insight,
Which, seeing sin, is not appalled,
But finds a way to set it right.
Give me a mind that is not bored,
That does not whimper, whine or sigh;
Don't let me worry overmuch
About the fussy thing called I.
Give me a sense of humor, Lord;
Give me the grace to see a joke.
To get some happiness from life
And pass it on to other folk.

—Left by an unknown worshipper in Chester Cathedral, England

★

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

divided and distraught world.

Taking a different approach, questioners ask, "Is the illustration honest?"

The leaflet speaks of "our small army." Yet militarily, we control both the air and the sea. We bombard at will. Our soldiers are well equipped, now after a faltering start a year ago. The mechanization of our forces is such that we consider one man equal to six or seven of the "mass" opposing enemy. Further, the illustration suggests only infantry when the great weight of our superiority is in the air. And is it honest to speak of a "small army" when behind it is not only the greatest military industrial potential the world has ever known, but also the forces of the member nations of the United Nations, which somehow are not mentioned? Is it, then, only "our army" which is bleeding and dying?

And the folder cites "another army" behind our lines saying, "Ours is the task of supply and encouragement. Some few of us work in plants producing the materials of war, but far far more of us give only of our means so that the front line soldiers may have the tools of war." But do we have a choice in giving? Isn't our "giving" taken willy-nilly by taxation? (Presumably the every member canvass appeal is voluntary). And, incidentally, is the only part we have in the war to provide bayonets to disembowl the enemy or explosives to blast him to bits; or shouldn't we also be praying for peace?

Finally it is asked, "Has the desire to make a phony sentimental appeal purposefully pre-warped the picture?"

As to the "front lines" in a "foreign land" it is wondered if that will fill with fervor for Christ's cause, Indian Christians, or Siamese, or even many Japanese. From Honolulu, on this point, a priest wrote, "That is just the trouble for many Asiatic non-Communists, Christian and non-Christians alike, we are much too far from home, in this 'foreign land.' Millions are saying, 'Get out and go home!'"

As to the balance of the piece, apart from the nationalistic jingoism, "Christ works through You" refers only to "schools, books, hospitals, medical supplies, churches and prayer books," as the works we are to accomplish by our giving. As meritorious and as sorely needed as is support of all these works, those two pathetic lines (out of the twenty-five given to stating the need) seem pitifully weak, self-serving, and woefully lacking in dynamic idealism.

Maybe explanations can meet all these questions. But, we ask for ourselves, why ship out material that has to be argued? We must agree that this throwaway reads more like a "Crusade for War" than an appeal to establish the Kingdom of the Prince of peace and love.

But now that the material is printed—now what?

One priest wrote to the National Council, "I do think the Episcopal Church might do a lot better by way of appeal to Christian witness than it has done in this year's mailing piece. As I said above, if I asked your department to send me 100 copies of it, I, of course, will pay for them; but if not, I'll return them when I receive the necessary postage, 87¢. Otherwise, they'll go down the drain."

CHURCH JIM CROW

BY

ALGER L. ADAMS

Member of Witness Editorial Board

AMHED MUSTAPHA, a former consular agent of Istanbul, Turkey, told me the following story. The Turkish embassy had given a reception for the general staff members of the new nations of Pakistan and India in Istanbul. Representatives of Iran, Syria, and the Far-Eastern nations predominated. Several Africans were present.

"America," the Voice of America man said to a group, "is the land of greatest freedom in the world. In speech, in press, in personal liberty."

"But what about your colored people, the Negroes?" a representative of the Cominform of the Soviet Union asked.

"Our country has the highest standard of living. A man receives more for his day's labor in goods than in any nation."

"But what about your Negroes?"

"Our cities are the most modern and sanitary. Our schools are the best. We spend more per capita for education than any other nation."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

"But what about your Negroes?" the Communist insisted.

"We are a God-fearing nation, founded by devout Christians. Our faith under-girds our whole approach to living."

"But what about your Negroes?"

Sidi Mustapha told me that this dialogue is repeated endlessly wherever we face the Soviet Union in the cold war.

When we try to explain, in Siam, we are questioned about Cicero, Ill., where white Christians led the attack upon a Negro family who wanted to move into a house another Negro owned. The excitement about this incident discomforted Gov. Thomas E. Dewey on his recent Far Eastern junket. Or, in Burma, we are asked to explain why the Rev. Mr. Heathcote, a Negro minister, is such an oddity because he pastors a "white" congregation. On the Korean front, Chinese Communist prisoners were eating with their Negro guards. They asked if eating together would be permitted in the jim crow South. In Delhi, we are asked why the home of an eminent Chicago scientist is bombed because he is a Negro.

And wherever Christian missionaries offer the message of God's redemptive love, hostile propagandists ask about segregated churches. They wonder why over 99.5% of America's 6,500,000 black Christians are in all-Negro churches.

In Japan and Okinawa, where so much of the foreign effort of the Episcopal Church is expended, we are asked why the Episcopal Church includes less than one-tenth of one percent of the Negro Christians in America, when we are one of the largest non-Roman bodies.

Everywhere, our foreign preaching is met by the question, "What about your Negroes."

The Church's Mission to Negroes

THE Church's mission to Negroes began when the Church of England first came to America. At first, it embraced all people, without regard to race. Despite difficulties, the very early records of parish churches show that babes of African descent were brought to holy baptism and incorporated into the Church of Christ. The children of slaves or servant class were diligently instructed in the Church catechism; and at the proper time, brought to the Bishop for confirmation.*

In 1620, English common law held that a "slave who had been christened or baptized became enfranchised." This was recognized in Virginia in 1624, as John Phillips was permitted to testify as a freeman and a Christian in the trial of a white man, because he had been baptized twelve years previously in England.

But in 1667 Virginia passed a law ". . . that the conferring of baptisme doth not alter the condition of the person as to his bondage or freedom; that diverse masters, freed from this doubt, may more carefully endeavour the propagation of Christianity by permitting children, though slaves, or those of greater growth if capable, to be admitted to that sacrament."

Thereafter, it became general that baptism did not confer the same status for a Negro as for a white person.

In 1701, the Society for Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts sent out a missionary to the Yammonsee Indians of South Carolina. But when they proved too wild, he took on the slaves and white colonists whom he found "to destitute of spiritual guides and all means of grace."

In 1743, two Negro slaves were purchased and trained as teachers in a school operated by the society in Charleston, S. C. Negroes were then being brought into the established Church in great numbers.

But the work of evangelization was limited only to those who had been carefully trained. The planters lived in constant fear of their masses of slaves and were uneasy about Christianity. The whole work was carried on with great caution. When the Baptists and Methodists moved in, with greater freedom, they swept the day. The ignorant emotional preacher, promising a homeland (from which the Negro had been forcibly torn) was a persuasive appeal to the slave's spiritual yearnings.

But up to the time of the revolution, this evangelization was entirely within the dominant white master's church. Some planters hoped Christianity would make the slaves more docile, but one Carolingian wrote, "We have no coloured churches independent of the whites. Such organizations are not deemed expedient." The spectre of slave revolt haunted the slaveocracy.*

In 1787, the religious picture changed. Richard Allen, an ex-slave, and his friends Absalom Jones and William White, attended St. George's Methodist Church in Philadelphia. Following is an account of what happened, written by Allen many years later:

"We viewed the forlorn state of our coloured brethren and saw that they were destitute of a place of worship. They were considered a nuisance.

"A number of us usually sat on the seats placed around the wall; and on Sabbath morning,

* History of the Afro-American Group of the Episcopal Church, by the Rev. George F. Bragg.

* History of the Negro, by Dr. E. Franklin Frazier.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

we went to church. And the sexton stood at the door and told us to go in the gallery. He told us to go and we would see where to sit.

"We expected to take the seats over the ones we formerly occupied below; not knowing any better. We took those seats.

"Meeting had begun and they were nearly done singing, and just as we got to the seats, the elder said, 'let us pray.' We had not been long on our knees before I heard considerable scuffling and loud talking. I raised my head up and saw one of the trustees, H—— M——, have hold of the Rev. Absalom Jones (at the time of writing he had become a priest in the Episcopal Church) pulling him off his knees and saying, 'you must get up! You must not kneel here!'

"Mr. Jones replied, 'Wait until prayer is over.'

"Mr. H. M. said, 'No! You must get up now, or I will call for aid and force you away.'

"Mr. Jones said, 'Wait until prayer is over; and I will get up and trouble you no more.'

"With that, he beckoned to one of the other trustees, Mr. L—— S——, to come to his assistance. He came and went to William White to pull him up.

"By this time, prayer was over, and we all went out of the church in a body and they were no more plagued by us in the church . . . notwithstanding we had already subscribed largely towards furnishing St. George's Church, in building the gallery, and laying new floors."

On April 12, 1787, the Free African Society was organized by the Messrs. Jones and Allen. This became the African Church and ultimately, St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, Philadelphia. The Rev. Absalom Jones was regularly ordained as the first priest. The Rev. Richard Allen became the founder of African Methodist Episcopal Methodism among Negroes.*

Thereafter, all-Negro sects and churches grew. Membership in white denominations rapidly shrank; and the rule ultimately became to segregate them into separate congregations.

There followed a dormant period in which general Christianity showed no uneasiness in the Negro's relationship with his fellow Christians. About 1930, churches began to be concerned with the Negro's place in secular society. While no programmatic attack was made on the status quo, the major denominations expressed themselves, to a greater or less degree, by making specific comment on social useages, such as lynching and discrimination in employment. No denomination mentioned or recognized the issue of segregation within local parishes until after world war two had reached a crisis after 1941.

* The Negro in Our History, by Carter G. Woodson.

In 1943, the Episcopal Church National Council adopted "Guiding Principles, designed to govern the Church's Negro Work." This statement opposed segregation by indirection. In 1946, the Federal Council of Churches took a stand against segregated churches and urged member churches to work toward the goal of racially mixed churches. During this time, top denominational offices became interracial at a white collar level. Professional and ecclesiastic personnel to "represent" the Negro were included, with the "Negro representative" typically limited to Negro affairs. The diocese of New York was the only place in the Episcopal Church where a Negro was assigned to an administrative post not directly concerned with Negroes. In 1947, a Negro priest was appointed editor of their diocesan monthly magazine, although he was not given the title until 1949.

With the quickening of the cold war in 1948, the Negro issue became more than a matter of Christian conscience. "What about your Negroes?" is tied up with national survival.

The Complexion of Today's Church

TWO statements on the Negro's place in the Church have been published by the official Church. In 1943, the National Council issued "Guiding Principles, designed to govern the Church's Negro Work." In 1950, the diocesan convention of Delaware passed a resolution against segregation.

The "Guiding Principles" said: "It is a first responsibility of the Church to demonstrate within its own fellowship the reality of community as God intends it. It is commissioned to call all men into the Church, into a divine society that transcends all national and racial limitations and divisions . . . (Omission the National Council's). Especially in its own life and worship there can be no place for barriers because of race or color. — 1937 Oxford Conference Report.

"We believe that this statement expresses the more Christian basis for judging the prevailing conditions which affect our Negro members and the principles for determining policies and programs for our work involving members of every race. The fact that all these principles cannot be realized at once in their fullness should not prevent us from keeping them before us as the Christian goal.

"The four principles stated are:

"One; Fellowship is essential to Christian worship. Since there are no racial distinctions in the mind of the Father, but 'all are one in Christ Jesus,' we dare not break our Christian fellowship by any attitude or act in the house of God which marks our brethren of other races as unequal or inferior.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

"Two; Fellowship is essential in Church administration. Through the privilege of exercising initiative and responsibility in Church affairs, through fair representation and voting power in all its legislative assemblies, will Negro Churchmen be assured that their fellowship in the Episcopal Church is valid and secure.

"Three; High standards must be maintained in every department of our work with the Negro. This principle applies to buildings, equipment, maintenance, personnel and general policy in the case of institutions, and especially to training and support of the ministry. Where separate facilities are still maintained, they should provide the same opportunities as those which are available to other racial groups.

"Four; It is both the function and the task of the Church to set the spiritual and moral goals for society, and to bear witness to their validity by achieving them in her own life. The Church should not only ensure to members of all races full and free participation in worship; she should also stand for fair and just access to educational, social, and health services, and for equal economic opportunity, without compromise, self-consciousness, or apology. In these ways the Church will demonstrate her belief that God 'has made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on the face of the whole earth'."

The National Council statement was made more specific in 1946 when the Federal Council of Churches, in Columbus, Ohio, renounced the "pattern of segregation in race relations as unnecessary and undesirable, and a violation of the gospel of love and human brotherhood."

Dean J. Brooks Mosley of the Cathedral Church of St. John, Wilmington, proposed the following resolution to the diocesan convention of Delaware, May 10, 1950:

"Whereas, the Christian community is and has always been committed by the divine will to the ideal of brotherhood and fellowship:

"And whereas, the Christian community is and has always been committed by the divine will to the ideal of brotherhood and fellowship:

"Therefore be it resolved, That this convention of the diocese of Delaware, meeting in Dover on May 10, 1950, re-affirms the fundamental Christian principle that people of all races are welcome to worship in any of our Episcopal Churches at any time; and, if communicants, to receive holy communion in any Episcopal Church."

This resolution was adopted without argument, unopposed.

As there was no other published statement of policy available, the head of every diocesan Christian social relations department and the 168 dioceses and missionary districts was asked if there is "a published or settled policy on 'mixed' (racially) congregations."

Except in Bethlehem, Delaware, Massachusetts, and New York, the answer was that "there is no published or settled policy on 'mixed' congregations." This was the answer from communities as diverse, for example, as Rhode Island, Georgia, Minnesota, Ohio, Alabama, Iowa, Oregon, Colorado, California, et. al. In about two-thirds of the replies, the explanation was offered that there "are very few Negro Episcopalians."

In Massachusetts, the Rev. Howard P. Kellett quoted Bishop Norman D. Nash, as saying "our settled policy is that there is not to be any color line and that as far as the diocese of Mass. is concerned, there will be no more distinctly colored parishes. In other words, we definitely take the stand that we do not intend or desire to have any policy of segregated parishes."

In the diocese of Bethlehem, Bishop Frank W. Sterrett advised the Rev. Thomas B. Smythe that the bishop had a policy of welcoming "Negro people into white congregations."

The most dramatic contrast in policy in handling Negro Episcopalian reported was between New York and Long Island. The Rev. Leland B. Henry from New York wrote, "Twenty years ago, there was a striking instance of Episcopal intervention when Bishop Manning compelled the opening of the church doors of a white parish which had refused to admit Negro members . . . It involved a spectacular scene when the bishop, in full Episcopal regalia, directed city marshals to force the door of the church."

In Long Island, across the East River from New York, a church refused to accept Negroes into the congregation. The church building was finally sold, in 1944, to an over-crowded nearby Negro congregation for $50,000. The sale was effected under threat of selling to a non-denominational "spiritual" group.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Next week Mr. Adams will present some of the replies to the questions he asked the heads of diocesan social relations commissions.

THE CHRISTIAN AND HIS MONEY
By Bishop Washburn
Ideal for Every Member Canvass
$4 for 100 $2.50 for 50
The Witness Tunkhannock, Pa.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

One Thing Needful

BY
IRVING P. JOHNSON
Founder and First Editor of The Witness

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE greatest disappointment in Church life today is not, in my judgment, the theological difficulties which receive so much attention in certain quarters; nor is it in any great moral obliquities on the part of those who belong to the Church. The disappointment lies in the absence of friendliness in our parishes.

Whenever one tries to emphasize this quality in parish life, one is at once cognizant of certain cross-sections of parochial life that seem to prohibit any real unity of spirit in Christian warfare.

In the army these cross-sections are temporarily obliterated and the son of the toughest citizen is often the buddy of the scion of the most illustrious family.

The taboos of caste life are forgotten in the common denominator of the khaki uniform, and the exigencies of war.

But somehow the cause for which Christ and the martyrs gave their life-blood, does not seem to be a real enough warfare, so that "the rich and the poor must work together and the Lord is the maker of them all."

I am conscious wherever I go that there is a false emphasis in the household of faith in which the fellowship of the spirit is sanctified to other ideals, and the one great objective of the master is set aside for other considerations.

Best Families

THE Church as it exists, so often consists of little coteries of the best families; or such strata of the earth's social soil as contain pay dirt.

Too often the only point of contact is that of the church treasurer, an annual visit of the pastor, and an urgent invitation to attend a sale at the parish house.

As an institution in which all are members one as another, such contacts are neither refreshing nor inspiring.

Excellent people, who crave a few warm friends and a circle of intimate mutual understanding, find themselves outside of a rigid caste, formed by a few best families who have long enjoyed mutual fellowship one with another and so use the church as an opportunity for social enjoyment, perfectly satisfactory to themselves; absolutely unpenetrative to anyone else; and very limited in its kindliness or enthusiasm.

There is no more delightful atmosphere than that which is created by a limited number of selected families who know and practice the ritual of good society and enjoy the mutual confidence and respect of one another. One cannot fault their taste, but one may doubt that they are fulfilling the purpose of their master in seeking their own personal comfort instead of paying more attention to "the least of these their brethren."

Excellent People

THESE excellent groups of excellent Church people form one of the most difficult cross-sections in parochial life.

They are so nice to one another, that one "looks at heaven and longs to enter in;" but they are so frigidly distant to anyone who violates their ritual code or fails to respect their peculiar excellence that one goes away humming "From Greenland's Icy Mountains."

It has been demonstrated time and again that no one can break into communion with these saints; therefore one waits with eagerness for the time to come when they themselves will awake to the fact that there is nothing in common with their little caste and the fellowship of Christ.

If it is true that these groups regard themselves as the most gracious Christians in God's world, then they need to learn that the Church of the Nazarene is not a bottling works, and grace was meant to flow out of gracious people to the least of these their brethren, and never be bottled for home consumption merely.

Unfortunately for the effectiveness of the Church's work, there are so often in these groups of really conscientious, cultivated Christians, a few equally charming people who are thoroughly worldly; who seem to be able to resist the call of the parson, charm he ever so wisely, and who dominate the rest. In other words, the really spiritually-minded parson runs into a cross-section of social caste, which holds together by stronger centripetal motives, than any centrifugal efforts of Christian grace can overcome.

The Church automatically ceases to become a refuge for sinners, except such sinners as wear the livery of respectability, and become a hothouse for the propagation of rare orchids and costly poinsettias.

Surely Christ never intended that and I am afraid will not appreciate it.

Caste System

THERE is a joyousness of life in expansion; in strength that assists weakness and confers blessings.

There is stagnation and paralysis in the caste idea; and not only do those without get no real benefit from those within, but the possessors of these good things stultify themselves by their failure to communicate their strength.

The religion of Jesus Christ brought together all sorts and conditions of people, who formed a brotherhood in which their common love and common life proved a power for good in a world of caste.

There is something in the caste idea that is hateful to God's benevolence, and there is something in the perpetuation of caste that is fatal to those who rest in its anasthesia.

It is a powerful opiate and those who indulge see beautiful visions and produce ghastly results.

The idea of fellowship—real, genuine brotherhood, is basic in the gospel of Christ and it is that phase of religion that is most difficult to realize and most rare in its achievement.

The fellowship of Christ involves all sorts and conditions of people, rich and poor, wise and simple, employer and employe, master and servant who do not allow their earthly differences to mar the unity of their spiritual fellowship.

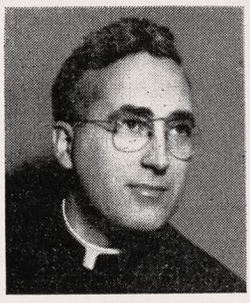
It is a communion in which the poor are not proud, and the rich are not patronizing, but in which every element of society realizes that each is one ingredient only of a common whole; and that God is endeavoring to blend the diversity of human life into a unity of human fellowship—so that the diversity is not lost and the unity is something real.

To accomplish this result it is not the poor and ignorant who need to be converted to the program, but rather it is the cultivated Christian who needs to be converted to the program of Christ.

The hope for a new order must come from those who are the best of the old order and they must make the sacrifice which will win the support of the humble and the meek.

Our own Church people must eventually learn to love the person that they do not like and do the thing that they do not want to do as good soldiers of Jesus Christ.

We have too many nice people in the Church who pray to God with reservations. "O Lord what wilt thou have me to do that I want to do already" is the real petition that many soldiers of Christ use to lull their own consciousness to sleep, for God never hears them.



Religion And The Mind

BY

CLINTON J. KEW

RELIGION NURTURES PERSONALITY

"I AM a mother of three children. How can I best teach them the Christian way of life? Should they memorize parts of the Bible and the Prayer Book? I love my children and want their personalities to grow."

This is a letter from a thoughtful modern parent. It is encouraging to think that such parents are interested in spiritual as well as physical growth.

But personality is not something given by parents to their children. We do not inherit it. We do not inherit our father's walk or our mother's fear of the dark. We learn their behavior. We are chips off the old block in an emotional sense as well as a physical one. Biologically we do not inherit our father's indifferences to religion.

We are born into a complex world where we must learn to live together as human beings. Such learning develops personality.

Parents become the child's chief interpreters of both the cultural and religious patterns of life. They must give their children opportunities to develop their lives in situations which are psychologically, emotionally and spiritually sound. Many fathers and mothers use what might be valuable teaching experiences and fill them with anxiety, frustration and unhappiness. If children are dealt with in the same impersonal manner in which the father mows the lawn or mother makes a cake, they will introject the indifference of their elders' behavior, and what is even worse, the children are denied the mature love which they need. If the ground work is well prepared in the home, the road to maturity will be travelled by the children with a minimum of trauma. A large percentage of the behavior disorders which come to our clinic have had their inception in emotional soil prepared years before by the defective workmanship of well-meaning fathers and mothers.

It is of vital importance too, for us to understand that a child's first lessons in religious principles begin, not with teaching about God, but about eating and keeping clean. For instance, the behavior which his parents demand of him is identified with good, while the behavior which brings disapproval and a possible loss of love, is soon understood to be bad. The child cannot possibly have a broad concept of the religious implications involved in his behavior pattern. But the child can learn what is thought to be good and what is felt to be bad.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Most important of all, the personal lives the parents lead become determining factors in the growth of each child. The child will take over the anxiety pattern of the parents, their faith, their suspicion, their security or their insecurity. The personality of the child will mirror the lives of his parents; their ways become his ways. He too feeds on the same spiritual and emotional food. Fathers and mothers should so live that they will nurture their children in a steady growth toward maturity. Let us aid, not hinder our children's growth.

The child who feels rejected and unwanted, usually suffers some personality disturbance. Broken homes with family tensions are the most fertile areas for maladjusted and distored children. Family problems begin to disappear when the child is accepted and loved. Unruly and aggressive or overly passive children soon lose these undesirable features when they are loved in a true healthy way.

If the home base is kept secure and intact, the child can go into the wider community and face the world unafraid. Suppose he does receive hurts; suppose someone makes fun of him, still he can face these knocks undaunted, because underneath, deep within him is security and stability.

Sometimes I think that our children are closer to God than we are as parents. Our Lord tells us that we must be like children if we are to enter the Kingdom of God. First of all, we must get our lives in order. Our love, our kindness, our frankness, and our devotion to God, will do more for our children than all the books we can ever read.

You may tell your child to believe in God, tell him how important it is for the peace of the world, urge him to learn passages from the Bible and force him to attend church school, but if he suspects you are cheating him by not believing all these things with your heart, soul and mind, he will never become very enthusiastic about giving himself to them.

Christianity was first taught by a personality who lived. It has been passed on to us through living personalities. The things you want your child to learn most are assimilated through shared experiences. Each child learns by seeing and doing. With so much symbolism and doing in our worship, parents can do much to insure steady growth, by pointing out the invisible behind each symbol and by living according to those invisible realities. Our Lord has admonished us so to live. He tells us: "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven." If you want your children's personalities to grow, then grow spiritually yourself with them, becoming one with our Lord.

Questions should be addressed to Mr. Kew at St. Luke's Church, S. Fullerton Ave. & Union St., Montclair, N. J.

Football and Church

BY

WILLIAM P. BARNDS
Rector of St. Matthew's, Lincoln

ONE Saturday morning a parishioner remarked to me that he was going to a football game that afternoon. He said "I'll be at church tomorrow. If I go to the football game I have to come to church." It was said in passing, but his remark indicated a point of view we could wish all Christians who go to Saturday football games might share. If all Church people who go to football games came to church the Sunday following church attendance would show a decided increase during the autumn. This is not a plea for any less football, but rather that football devotees be equally faithful to their church. The same exhortation applies to other amusements. If a person is able to go to the theatre, parties, play golf, go fishing and hunting, he is also able to go to church.

There are many church people who are in church regularly, whether it is always convenient for them or inconvenient. They count it a privilege to worship God every Sunday. For others, who find it harder to develop the habit of church going or who as yet do not value the privilege, we suggest that they take as their practical guide the rule "If I go to a football game, or a movie, or play golf, or ride any hobby, I will also be in church."

Are you going to a football game this week, or are you planning to listen to one on the radio, or see one on television? Are you going to church Sunday?

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

NEWS OF OTHER CHURCHES

PROGRAM TO BOOST THE CHURCH

Citizens of Poundridge, N. Y., launched a novel experiment to demonstrate the "value of a church in the community." They participated in a four-day rally to boost interest in and increase attendance at the town's only house of worship—Poundridge community church.

The program featured an old-fashioned community gathering, addresses by clergymen, including one by a Roman Catholic priest, a picnic, spelling bees, square dances, and visits by churchmen to Poundridge homes.

Chiefly responsible for the rally was a group of the church's laymen. They decided it was time Poundridgers participated in the church. The laymen put up large posters all over town and sent invitations to most of Poundridge's 1,200 citizens to attend the events.

According to the Rev. William Studwell, minister of the church, the goal of the program was "fill that church!" Raising the $6,500 church budget for this year was incidental, he explained.

METHODIST LEADERS BACK STEPHEN FRITCHMAN

The un-American Committee has stirred a real controversy in Los Angeles over the calling to testify of the Rev. Stephen Fritchman (Witness, Sept. 27). Hundreds of letters have been received by local newspapers and many have been printed. One of them was from the Rev. George A. Warmer, district superintendent of the Methodist Church, denouncing the committee. He termed the committee's activities "pressure par excellence against freedom of religion, right of assemblage and free thought in the realm of morals. All Protestantism must recognize that this is the path Hitler traveled to power. "It is McCarthyism in flower."

Warmer stated that the committee "declares war on the right to think and let think and damns the conscience makers as subversives even though no overt act can be attached to their operations."

COURT SUPPORTS RELIGION AT MINNESOTA

A district court of Minnesota has denied a request of a Minneapolis attorney to ban religious activities at the University of Minnesota. W. L. Sholes, the petitioner who is an alumnus, contended that the university authorities were violating the constitutional principle of separation of Church and state in permitting the use of facilities for furthering the activities of religious groups on the campus. He has indicated that he will appeal the decision to the state's supreme court.

JERSEY JOE WALCOTT FOR RELIGION

Jersey Joe Walcott, world heavyweight champion, pledged to devote his best efforts to spreading Christianity at a special outdoor service held in Washington to honor Elder Lightfoot Solomon Michaux, who has been a radio evangelist for twenty years. More than 20,000 admirers of the evangelist at the meeting, held in the baseball park, heard Oscar R. Ewing, federal security administrator, urge that men be judged for themselves and not on the basis of race or creed.

UP TO 100% PROFIT
FREE IMPRINT SAMPLES
NO EXPERIENCE NEEDED

IT'S EASY TO EARN BIG MONEY!

Sell ARTISTIC Christmas Cards

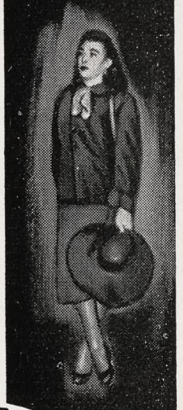
Earn all the extra money you need with ARTISTIC Cards. It's so easy! Just call on people you know and show them FREE SAMPLES of NAME-IMPRINTED Christmas Cards. Amazing values at 50 for $1.25 sell on sight. You make up to 100% profit in your spare time! Many other money-making Personalized lines: Stationery, Napkins, Notes, Matches, Coasters.

MAKE $50 EASILY! Our 21-Card $1 Christmas Assortments pay you $50 for selling 100 boxes. Also show new Metallics, Religious, Humorous, Everyday, other Assortments. Sensational $2,500 Cash Prize Contest. Send Coupon — Start earning from samples at once.

MAIL TODAY FOR SAMPLES!

ARTISTIC CARD CO., INC.
417 WAY ST., ELMIRA, NEW YORK
Rush Assortments ON APPROVAL and FREE Imprint Samples. Include $2,500 Prize Contest details.

Name_____
Address_____
City_____ Zone___ State_____



The powerful and poignant story of.....

A MAN WHO TURNED HIS BACK ON GOD...

His hopes shattered by a tragic love... he abandoned the path of his Faith...

...Only to find human devotion, in another woman's blind love, turning him once more to true belief.

"JOURNEY INTO LIGHT" starring

STERLING HAYDEN
VIVECA LINDFORS
THOMAS MITCHELL
with LUDWIG DONATH • H. B. WARNER • JANE DARWELL
Directed by STUART HEISLER • Produced by JOSEPH BERNHARD
Co-produced by ANSON BOND • Original Screen Story by ANSON BOND
Screenplay by STEPHANIE NORDLI and IRVING SHULMAN
A Bernhard Productions Presentation • Distributed by 20th Century-Fox

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

DECLINE IN ECONOMIC STATUS OF WORKERS

Churches and religious organizations are employing fewer workers and paying them poorer salaries in comparison with private industry than they did 22 years ago. The report on national income of the dept. of commerce discloses that in 1950 religious organizations, which includes churches, were giving full or part-time employment to 218,000, about 4,000 less than in 1929. In 1950 the average income for a full-time worker for a religious organization was $2,276 a year; whereas the average for all occupational groups in the U. S. was $3,024. The income of those engaged in religious work in 1929 was 14% higher than the national average; last year it was 25% less. No other occupational group has suffered a similar loss of status. In a 21-year period in which employment has increased in occupations covered by the report from 37 million to 50 million, only two major occupational groups have shown a decline in number—housemaids and clergymen.

WOMAN PASTOR GIVES TO BAIL FUND

Members of the Congregational Church of South Hartford, N. Y., have given a vote of confidence to their woman pastor, the Rev. Marion Frenyear, who contributed to the bail fund for Arnold Johnson, accused Communist leader. The congregation voted 18-3 against taking any action censoring her, the vote climaxing a special meeting called by the five deacons after each had been visited by a delegation for the American Legion. Arnold Johnson was a student at the Union Theological Seminary at the time Miss Frenyear was also there. He was later the secretary for Henry Sloane Coffin, president of the seminary, and after that the secretary of Sherwood Eddy.

Miss Frenyear told the congregation that she had not seen nor heard from Mr. Johnson since their graduation until she received an appeal to contribute to his bail fund. She said she sent him $500 with a letter in which she wrote that she did not agree with his political views but did believed he deserved a fair trial.

LESS SEXY CLOTHES DEMANDED

Roman Catholic high school girls in Chicago have launched a campaign to induce stores to stock up on less sexy clothes. The campaign was launched when 60 girls, claiming to represent 25,000 others, demanded that the stores furnish something besides low-cut dresses and strapless evening gowns.

COLUMBIA RIVER SITES ARE STUDIED

A motorcade seminar comprising 25 national Church administrators and local civic officials are inspecting the Columbia River Valley in Oregon this month as a preliminary step in planning future churches. Sponsored by a department of the National Council of Churches, the idea is to divide sparsely populated desert lands among denominations a decade in advance of the time when they will be fully irrigated and settled. Following the tour the group will take part in the national convocation of the Church in Town and Country, to be held at Portland, Oct. 30-Nov. 1.

DISCIPLES LAUNCH EXPANSION DRIVE

A ten-year drive to recruit 4,500 new ministers and 250 more missionaries for the Disciples was launched at a six-state conference held in Washington. The drive is also being promoted in other areas. It is also hoped to raise the present three million dollar missions budget to six million through a program of "double giving."

INTERFAITH BAZAAR IN NEW YORK

An interfaith harvest bazaar will be held in Greenwich Village next month, sponsored jointly by the Village Presbyterian Church and the Village Temple. The two congregations occupy the same premises and carry on many activities together.

LUTHERANS URGE SOCIAL SECURITY FOR PASTORS

Social security for pastors was urged by the division of welfare of the National Lutheran Council, a cooperative agency for eight Lutheran bodies with a membership of 4,000,000. The report said that extension of social security to the ministry is desirable because of their low salaries, their usual lack of a home at the time of retirement, and the inadequacy of the present pension program of the Church.

RURAL CHURCHES DISAPPEAR

Growth of city churches and the disappearance of many rural churches were reported at the Texas synod of the Presbyterian Church. Since 1920, Presbyterian churches in cities of 100,000 have increased from 17 to 53. Only one church was dissolved in a city of this size. But nearly a third of the rural and small town churches disappeared during the same period, often for lack of a pastor.

METHODISTS ASK FIGHT AGAINST UMT

Universal military training was opposed at the annual session of the Methodist Church of the western North Carolina area.

ADDRESS CHANGE

IN MAKING AN ADDRESS CHANGE, PLEASE SEND both THE OLD AND THE NEW ADDRESS AND ALLOW THREE WEEKS FOR THE CHANGE.

ATTENTION PLEASE

The editorial office of The Witness is now located at

12 West 11th Street
New York 11, N. Y.

However, since news editing and business matters are looked after by the managing editor, we ask that all correspondence, news, magazine exchanges, etc., be sent to our office of publication:

The WITNESS
Tunkhannock, Pa.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CHURCHES OVERSEAS

CHURCHWOMAN SETS UP FREE FOOD STALL

Determined to make practical Christianity work, Mrs. Barbara Green, a pretty young mother of two, has been successful in putting a free food stall into operation in Victoria, Canada, city's market building. The food is given away free to the needy. All they have to do is come to the market, place their order and walk away with the food without paying a cent. Food is contributed from "surplus" by food sellers, marketers, gardeners and farmers.

Mrs. Green thought "help thy neighbor" should be lifted out of the Bible again and put to work in the streets and homes of Victoria, British Columbia's capital city. After weeks of delay during which many technical obstacles had to be overcome a stall was given her at the market. Mrs. Green cleaned and painted the stall and appeared one Saturday morning to await the results of newspaper publicity that had been given the project. By noon, when the needy were scheduled to begin calling, a half ton of foodstuffs had been delivered, supplementing a few small purchases of food which Mrs. Green had made herself "just in case."

By the second Saturday, tons of food had poured in, and the plan snowballed. Volunteers came to help. Market workmen aided with the heavy moving in their spare time, and an assembly line of housewives was set up to handle the food packaging. Paper bags were supplied after Mrs. Green made an appeal. Now Mrs. Green writes dozens of letters each week thanking people who have donated food and help. She visits wholesalers, hotels, restaurants and dairies, wheedling food for the stall.

GERMAN CHURCH GROUP FIGHTS REARMAMENT

Agitation by the "Confessional" wing of the Evangelical Church in Germany against rearmament has steadily increased. It is this section of the Church which was strongly anti-Nazi in the Hitler days. Present activities include mass distribution of leaflets, speeches by both pastors and laymen to muster opposition to the creating of a West German army and any contribution toward an all-European defense force. Leaders are Pastor Martin Niemoeller, president of the Church of Hessen and Nassau; Pastor Herbert Mochalski of Darmstadt; the Rev. Gustav Heinemann, president of the all-German synod. They hold that rearmament would divert billions of marks needed for social welfare projects and would finally lead to war, making Germany a battlefield like Korea.

INDIA ANGLICAN BISHOP HITS AT SECTS

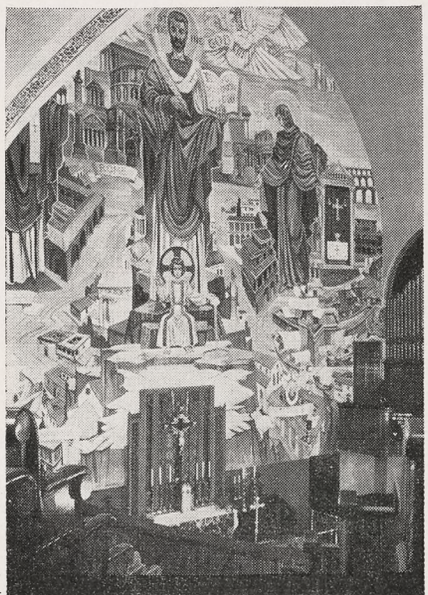
Charges that the Jehovah's Witnesses and other sects are carrying on "a sort of guerrilla campaign" against the Church of India, Pakistan, Burma and Ceylon were made by Anglican Bishop Christopher J. G. Robinson of Lucknow in a pastoral letter. The bishop said that other sects "poaching on the reserves of the Church" were the Seventh-day Adventists and various groups of Pentecostalists. According to Bishop Robinson, the greatest danger arising from the sects' activities is among children and young people, who "fall for the attractively printed literature which is distributed free of charge." He said it is the duty of the Church to protect the younger generation from "this insidious propaganda."

CATHOLIC LAYMEN URGED TO FIGHT COMMUNISM

A summons to R. C. laymen everywhere to join forces to fight Communism was sounded by Cardinal Pizzaedo in an address before the World Congress for the Apostolate of the Laity, attended by about 1,000 representatives from 74 countries. Youth delegates from 29 countries also met in Rome and formed the International Federation of Catholic Youth. Problems affecting young people in eastern Europe, Russia, and Asia was the major theme of the three-day meeting. It was decided to set up special centers for the training of young men and women who may one day be able to go as educators and leaders to "these unhappy countries."

AN USUAL STRIKE IN IRELAND

R. C. girls working in a pajama factory near Londonderry went on strike when their assistant forewoman returned to work following her marriage to a Presbyterian. They demanded that she be fired but the management declared that the private lives of its employees were no concern of the firm.



PERU LIFTS BAN ON PROTESTANTS

Peru's ban on non-Roman Catholic broadcasts has been lifted and Protestants have returned with their programs. Delegates to a conference of Latin American Evangelical radio experts expressed hope that broadcasting freedom might soon exist throughout Latin America. The delegates, who came from Mexico, Costa Rica, Panama and Ecuador took steps to create a Protestant radio chain. Messages of support were received from broadcasters in Bolivia, Haiti, Guatemala and Argentina where a ban on Protestant broadcasts has existed for two years.

NEW R. C. BISHOP SEES GROTEWOLD

Newly appointed Roman Catholic bishop of Berlin, Wilhelm Weskamm, was formerly received by President Otto Grotewohl of the East German government. He had previously made courtesy calls upon the mayors of both East and West Berlin.

The Waldensian Church of Italy at its annual synod urged the Federal Council of Italian Evangelical Churches to remain alert to the issue of full religious freedom for non-Roman Catholic bodies.

DECORATION

By the use of painting in simple ornament or elaborate themes with figures, walls are enriched and become the source of meditation. Rambusch decoration may be seen in these churches:

St. Augustine's Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.
(Designed and painted by Allan Crite)
Grace Church, Honesdale, Pa.
St. James Church, Chicago, Ill.
St. John's Church, Elizabeth, N. J.
St. Paul's Church, Flint, Mich.

RAMBUSCH 40 W. 13th St. New York, N.Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE RELIGIOUS PRESS

Selected by GEORGE MACMURRAY

NO JUST WAR: — The Catholic Worker, which comes nearest to being an R. C. paper with a social conscience, is fed up with the talk of a just war. For two thousand years, it points out, Catholics have talked of just wars in the cloister and fought unjust wars on the battlefields. Argue, if you will, that morality is ridiculous when it comes to war. But once admit, as the Catholic does, that even war is subordinate to the law of God and love of Christ, and there is no choice when we see the evil, no "deliberate, premeditated" destruction though the victory would be great. We must refuse the military and everything connected with it. We must maintain a witness for Christ, and this is practical, for it is the world's only hope.

LACKING IDEALS:—We go through dozens of Church magazines to discover what positions they are taking on vital issues. It is significant that it is only the unofficial papers in all denominations that take vigorous positions on anything important. The official jobs, like the Outlook, the new organ of the National Council of Churches, and Forth, our own official mouthpiece, present handsomely printed magazines with often exciting pictures. But you have to search a long time to find an idea. The Episcopal Church has always prided itself on its unofficial weeklies that are free to say what they want on issues that are controversial. Let lack of support put them out of business—any of them—and the Church will lose a lot of its vitality.

UNITED NATIONS:—This it United Nations week (Oct. 21-27) so that most of the religious journals are editorializing about it. Most of them deplore that it has not fulfilled its promises. Blame is placed upon the Soviet Union for the most part, though a few editors insist that we have taken it over to use for our own selfish purposes. But all seem to agree with the Christian Evangelist, organ of the Disciples, that "In the world as it is today, order and peace cannot come by accident. Nations must cooperate for collective security. They must organize their community so that order can be maintained without the loss of freedom. By working through the United Nations it is our hope to establish peace and to build, in partnership with other free peoples, a world of liberty and justice."

CHURCHES ARE MINOR:—Christian-Evangelist, official organ of the Disciples, has a bit to say that you can ponder when you want a bit of steel for that church or parish house. The magazine says that the plain fact is that Washington officialdom has concluded that critical materials placed in implements of war will perform a greater service for God and country at this time than in new or remodeled places of worship. Last month President Truman declared at the laying of the cornerstone of the very building in which the NPA is housed, that America has reached the peak of prosperity. Up four flights in a magnificent elevator in this $25,000,000 building and the visitor is informed that the threat of war has relegated church construction to a minor position.

Bargain Package For a Dollar

THE PRAYER BOOK: ITS HISTORY AND PURPOSE by Bishop Johnson
MAKE CHRISTMAS CHRISTIAN. What One Woman's Gift Accomplished
WHY WORSHIP? by Charles Herbert Young
THE WORK OF A BISHOP by Bishop Lawrence
THE CHRISTIAN AND HIS MONEY by Bishop Washburn
THE MARRIAGE SERVICE by Hugh McCandless
PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS ON RUNNING A PARISH by Bishop Lawrence
MEANING OF THE REAL PRESENCE by G. A. Studdert-Kennedy
WHY BELIEVE IN JESUS? by Albert H. Lucas
MISSIONS DEMAND UNITY by Bishop Azariah of Dornakal

All for One Dollar. Cash with Order Please

THE WITNESS Tunkhannock, Pa.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT, Book Editor

The Doctrine of Our Salvation: An Introduction to the Theology of Atonement, of the Church, and of the Sacraments. By Paul Stevens Kramer. Exposition Press. $3.00.

This book has three classes of readers in mind: candidates for holy orders seeking a review, those reading for holy orders, and laymen; the discussion is at the college level. Technical terms are avoided or defined, the questions answered are those of the church-goer rather than the professional theologian, dates are given where quotations are used, and the discussion is confined to essentials.

The chapters are on man's nature, the fall and original sin, salvation, the atonement, the Church, grace, and the sacraments. In each case there is an account of the origin of the doctrine or usage, a survey of its history and what the Church has understood by it, a statement of the doctrine as held by this Church, and a word on its meaning and relevance today. The exposition is clear and graceful throughout, studded with a valuable selection of citations from the Fathers and some pertinent passages from contemporary writers; and there is a brief bibliography for each section. The book has the clarity of one "taught over" before being published. Dr. Kramer knows from experience as a teacher and a churchman what needs explaining and what is superfluous.

Perhaps three critical words are in order. First, the religious earnestness that does much to "carry" the book to the reader is accompanied by the conservatism that seems to characterize healthy religion, and this leads the author to use the New Testament rather uncritically upon occasion, e.g. in the use of sayings of Jesus from the Gospel according to St. John, making difficulties particularly where he refers to the Book of Acts in connection with baptism and confirmation. Second, there is no adequate discussion of justification by faith. This is surely one point where Anglicanism has taken and must take the Reformation seriously; and the discerning layman will need guidance in reconciling this doctrine with that of the sacraments. Third, alas, there is no index.

These points aside, here is a book we have needed—a hard one to write, standing between the ponderous technical treatise and the insipid pabulum or the impossible brevity of "popular" manuals.—Holt Graham.

The Wings of Faith. By H. V. Martin. Philosophical Library.

Dr. Martin interprets Kiergaard's Christianity in terms of faith, a faith which is neither feeling, nor reason, nor even that which is coordinate with reason, but something unique and supernatural. True faith is a miracle, a miracle where man is confronted with God and finds himself transformed. Faith is individual life face to face with God, life in which God is so real that a man can no longer "love the world, neither the things that are in the world." The man of faith is a naked soul standing before his God.—John S. Marshall.

Morals and Man in the Social Sciences. By J. V. Langmead Casserley. Longmans. $2.75.

This new book by Professor Casserley is of significance for both the theologian and the social scientist. Sociology is revealed as valid within limits, but its positivistic method disregards the most significant dimension of human life. It disregards the metaphysical dimension, the dimension in which man is related to God and experiences sin and grace. Here man brought into contact with eternity finds the criteria by which he may judge of the things of time. —John S. Marshall.

God in Education. By Henry P. Van Dusen. Scribner. $2.00.

On the issue of religion in the schools, many well-meaning Protestants in seeking to avoid the Scylla of Roman Catholic advantage steer right into the Charybdis of secularist domination. Hence the importance of this first-rate analysis of the latter danger by an outstanding Protestant spokesman. Comprehensive, it covers all levels of education. Included is a devastating critique of the Supreme Court's McCollum (anti-"released time") decision.—James A. Pike.

The Struggle of the Soul. By Lewis J. Sherrill. Macmillan. $2.50.

Dr. Sherrill, now at Union Seminary in New York, traces the struggle to be a person, from infancy onward through life. "The guiding thread chosen for this purpose is the dynamic self as it encounters God at the various stages of human life and responds perhaps by outgoing faith; or perhaps by shrinking back in a self-protecting compromise, or even in full rejection; or perhaps by passing on without knowing it has met God at all." These are all seen and described in thoroughly circumstantial terms, as alternatives at succeeding levels of the struggle, in which living becomes the concrete and significant business in which we are always in the balance of life and death. Planners of educational programs, pastors who really deal with people—all sorts of the Church's ministers—will find it useful.—Charles Penniman.

BOOKS RECEIVED

Better A Day. Ed. by John P. Leary, S. J. Maccmillan. $4.00.

"God the Father Almighty." By Chad Walsh. Forward Movement Publications. 15c.

This is the first of a series of tracts written by contemporary authors on the great doctrines of the church. If the rest are up to the high standard of this one, as we are sure they will be, the series will make a great contribution toward a better understanding of the Christian religion.

The choice for generations

OXFORD Prayer Book 07316x is a deluxe edition of the medium-size Prayer Book used in churches. It is printed on Oxford's ultrathin India Paper in a type large enough for reading in dimly-lit churches. Bound in French Morocco, $6.00. At your bookstore.

Free—write to Suite W2, OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS, for your copy of Our Father—a 48-page commentary on The Lord's Prayer by sixteen bishops, with a foreword by the Presiding Bishop.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
114 Fifth Ave., New York 11

Publishers of Fine Books for over Four Centuries

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CASSOCKS
Surplices — Choir Vestments
Eucharistic Vestments
Altar Hangings and Linens
Prices Sent on Request
J. M. HALL, INC.
14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.
Tel. CH 4-3306

VESTMENTS
Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves
Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries
Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars
Custom Tailoring for Clergymen
1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951

COX SONS & VINING, Inc.
131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

Sudbury CHURCH WORSHIP AIDS
Have your dealer show you the wide variety of well made church appointments we produce
FOR COMPLETE CATALOG SEND TO
SUDBURY BRASS GOODS CO.
55 SUDBURY STREET, BOSTON 14, MASS.

FINEST PURE IRISH LINEN
For all Church uses
Just received from Belfast a new fine lightweight linen for Surplices in 39"—1.65 per yard. Also qualities and width for Albs, Fair Linen, etc., Patterns and Supplies, Books.
Samples Free
MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
BOX 386 CHILLICOTHE, MO.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

Make Christmas Christian

A church woman gave her rector a check as a thank offering for her friends. What her gift accomplished is related by Bishop Hines. Rectors will want to mail this leaflet to parishioners.

$1 for 25; $1.50 for 50; $2 for 100

THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

★ ADDRESS CHANGE

IN MAKING AN ADDRESS CHANGE, PLEASE SEND BOTH THE OLD AND THE NEW ADDRESS AND ALLOW THREE WEEKS FOR THE CHANGE.

USEFUL JOB wanted for mature priest; diocesan administrative experience; sound preacher and teacher; not happiest in parish visiting. Married, two children. Box X, The Witness, Tunkhannock, Pa.

PEOPLE

CLERGY CHANGES:

LYLE SCOTT, formerly rector of Trinity, Athens, Pa., and of St. Paul's, Troy, is now rector of St. Mary's, Reading, Pa.

EMMERT M. MOYER, for 20 years a minister in the Evangelical United Brethren Church, is now ass't at Christ Church, Reading, Pa.

DWIGHT FILKINS, formerly curate at Grace Church, Oak Park, Ill., is now rector of Christ Church, Streator, Ill.

CHESTER C. HAND, formerly ass't at Christ Church, Winnetka, Ill., is now vicar of St. Paul's, Brookings, S. D.

JOSEPH M. KITAGAWA, formerly chaplain to Japanese-Americans in the diocese of Chicago, has accepted appointment as instructor in the history of religious at the Federated Theological School of the University of Chicago.

HUBERT S. WOOD JR. was instituted rector of Christ Church, Sherburne, N. Y. on Oct. 3 by Bishop Peabody. He was formerly ass't at St. Paul's, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia.

AINSLEY M. CARLTON, formerly a non-parochial priest of Colo., is now rector of St. Anne's, Oceanside, Calif.

JAMES R. WHITTEMORE is now on the staff of Christ Church, Grosse Pointe, Mich.

HARRY NICHOLSON has given up charge of Christ Church, Henrietta, Mich., because of illness.

THEODORE T. Y. YEH, formerly ass't at St. Peter's, Honolulu, is now curate at St. Elizabeth's, Honolulu.

HENRI PICKENS, formerly of Christ Church, Kealakekua, Hawaii, is now rector at Goochland, Va.

KENNETH A. PERKINS, chaplain, formerly stationed in Hawaii, is now stationed with the 12th naval district and is living at Richmond, Cal.

JON N. SINCLAIR, formerly vicar of St. Andrew's, Providence, is now rector of Trinity, Bristol, R. I.

LEONARD B. RASMUSSON, formerly rector of the Atonement, Philadelphia, is now rector of St. Timothy's, Brooklyn, N. Y.

LAY WORKERS:

ELIZABETH HUNTER, a graduate of Converse College, is now director of religious education at St. John's, Roanoke, Va.

The Prayer Book
Its History & Purpose
BY
IRVING P. JOHNSON
Late Witness Editor
25c for single copy
$2 for ten copies
The WITNESS
Tunkhannock, Pa.

HOUSE FOR SALE at Keene Valley in Adirondacks Furnished or unfurnished; suitable for year-round living. 1*st floor* two bed-rooms and bath, attractive kitchen, hall and living-dining room with knotty pine paneling and fire-place. 2*nd floor*, 2 bed-rooms and bath. Basement, furnace-room, rooms suitable for workshop and laundry; 1 car garage. Oil-burner, hot-water heat. 2.1 acres of ground, mostly woodland, mountain view, trout-stream. BOX C, WITNESS, TUNKHANNOCK, PA.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER
FABRICS + WINDOWS

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS
Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS
Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.
SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

Exquisite
IRISH LINENS
BY THE YARD
From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States, I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values; unsurpassed quality, imported direct from Ireland. Also transfer patterns, linen tape, and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 3 inches at 75c, 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.00.
MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

THE BISHOP WHITE
PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833
Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.
PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)
Apply The Rev. Allen Evans, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BACKFIRE

ALEXANDER F. GILMAN
Layman of Chicago

Chad Walsh ought to look up the story of Lot's life. It is a strange thing how these Old Testament stories apply as well today as they did when they were written. Instead of looking back and being turned to a pillar of salt Protestantism must take off its blinders and look at this whole matter of religion from the eyes of God as revealed in the Bible and not through the eyes of the individual writers of that book.

The Holy Ghost is at work all right but it is not leading us to a "purified catholicism" unless by that Mr. Walsh means a reformed catholicism. He is at work in the Roman Church as well as all the rest and particularly so in America where the Roman Church in advanced quarters is far more Protestant than the Protestants themselves.

I have just returned from a hurried trip to Denver where I had the privilege of attending Morning Prayer at St. John's Cathedral. It was the most glorious service I had attended in 45 years. Dean Roberts has more than proved that Morning Prayer can be just as inspiring as the communion service. You ought to take a peek at what he is doing. It will open a lot of people's eyes.

I have no patience with the continual talking about our being Anglicans and Catholics. After all this is America and our fathers set out to set up a Church as well as a government that was free from the entanglements with monarchy of the old world. They succeeded pretty well until our clergy started looking back.

MRS. ALTILLA NORMAN
Churchwoman of Bainbridge Island

Washington

It has occurred to me that it would be pleasant to send a Christmas gift to the parish church in which I was baptized and later confirmed in my little home town in Virginia. My giving of any sort has to be embarrassingly small but the thought gives me so much pleasure that I think perhaps other people who may not have thought of it might like to make a similar gift of a subscription.

ANSWER: If others care to act on this idea we will be glad to send an annual subscription for $3 (regular price $4) to the church, the rector if not already a subscriber, parish library or reading room, head of the Auxiliary, etc.

SCHOOLS

Shattuck School

FOUNDED 1858

Shattuck integrates all parts of its program: religious, academic, military and social to give high school age boys an environment in which to grow "in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man." Summer School-Camp. Catalogue

REV. SIDNEY W. GOLDSMITH, JR.
RECTOR AND HEADMASTER
Box W, Shumway Hall
SHATTUCK SCHOOL FARIBAULT, MINN.

CENTRAL SCHOOL OF RELIGION
(A Correspondence Institution)
6030 Lowell Ave., Indianapolis 19, Ind.
College level courses since 1896. Bible, Theology of O. & N. T., Pastoral Psychology, Church Publicity, Religious Education, etc. Complete interrupted studies at home. Excellent faculty. Reasonable. Write to Secretary for further information NOW.

ST. LUKE'S SCHOOL
Episcopal Day School under the direction of Trinity Parish
Nursery, Kindergarten, Elementary Grades. After School play groups. Coeducational. Moderate tuition. For catalogue and further information communicate with
THE REV. PAUL C. WEED, JR.
Headmaster
Hudson & Grove Sts., NEW YORK 14, N. Y.
Phone WAtkins 4-5960

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL
Coeducational Episcopal Day School
Prepares for leading secondary schools. Sound academic training. Kindergarten thru 8th grade. French and Latin emphasized. Complete testing program. Est. 1894. Music, drama, arts & crafts, sports. Bus service. Hot lunch. Tel: AL 4-2000
E. ALLISON GRANT, Headmaster
88 E. Fourth Ave. (11th St.), N. Y. 3

THE PATTERSON SCHOOL for BOYS

Episcopal School in Blue Ridge Mountains of Western No. Carolina. Accredited. Grades 6-12. Gymnasium, sports, 42nd year. 1300-acre estate. Board and tuition, moderate.
GEORGE F. WIESE, Supt.
COLLEGE PREPARATORY Legerwood, N. C. HEALTH EDUCATION CHARACTER BUILDING

FORK UNION MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth New Hampshire

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions,
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE-MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Schools of the Church

BARD COLLEGE
Formerly St. Stephen's
A Coeducational College of Liberal Arts and Sciences
FOUNDED 1860
For catalogue and further information write to The Director of Admissions, Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, New York.

DANIEL BAKER COLLEGE
BROWNWOOD, TEXAS
Established 1889. Operated under the auspices of the Diocese of Dallas. Co-educational senior college offering B.A. and B.S. degrees. Special opportunities in teacher training, music education, business administration. The only available undergraduate course in the Episcopal Church in Church Work Training. Member: Association of Texas Colleges.
REV'D W. A. CROSS, M.A., President
REV'D L. A. HASELMAYER, Ph.D., Dean

SAINT PAUL'S POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE
LAWRENCEVILLE, VIRGINIA
Approved by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. B.S. Degree with major in Trade and Industrial Education, B.S. Degree in Home Economics Education, B.S. Degree with major in Elementary Education, B.S. Degree in Secondary Education.
EARL H. McCLENNEY, President

VOORHEES SCHOOL & JR. COLLEGE
DENMARK, S. C.
Co-educational. Accredited by State Dept. of Education of S. C. and the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges. Under the two Dioceses of S. C. and The American Church Institute for Negroes. Expenses reasonable. Limited scholarship aid for worthy students. Apply:
CECIL D. HALLIBURTON, President

Okolona College
Okolona, Mississippi
Co-educational, Private, American Church Institute for Negroes (Protestant Episcopal Church) Established 1902
High School and Junior College - Trades and Industries - Music
For information write: W. MILAN DAVIS President
Today's Training for Tomorrow's Opportunities

St. Augustine's College
RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA
1867 — 1951
Accredited Four-Year College for Negro Youth. Co-educational. Music, Pre-Medical, Health and Physical Education, High School Teacher Training, Business, Pre-Social Work, Nursing Education in co-operation with St. Agnes Hospital.
HAROLD L. TRIGG, President

SAINT HELEN'S HALL
Portland 1, Oregon
Historic Pacific Northwest Episcopal resident and day school. Founded in 1869. Co-educational pre-school. Boys admitted to Lower School through grade III. Upper School girls only.
Write for catalog.
The RT. REV. BENJAMIN DAGWELL, D.D.
President, Board of Trustees
JANE ALLEN SAXTON,
HEADMISTRESS

The Cathedral Schools
National Cathedral School for Girls
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding department, grades 7-12
KATHARINE LEE, Principal

St. Albans
The National Cathedral School for Boys
Day students, grades 4-12
Boarding Department, grades 8-12
CHARLES MARTIN, Headmaster
Address:
Mt. St. Alban, Washington 16, D. C.

St. John Baptist School
FOR GIRLS
Offers College Preparatory and General courses. Music, art, outdoor sports, and a happy home life, with character building extra-curricular activities for resident and day students, under the care of the Sisters of St. John Baptist. In the country near Morristown, New Jersey. Accredited.
For catalog address Box 556
The Sister Superior, Mendham, New Jersey

St. John's MILITARY SCHOOL
Salina, Kansas
Since 1887 St. John's has been perpetuating the cultural tradition of the Church by stressing sound scholarship in Christian atmosphere. Grades 3 through 12. Fully accredited.
COL. R. L. CLEM, Rector

ST. MARY'S HALL
SECONDARY BOARDING SCHOOL
Faribault, Minnesota
Close relationship of students and faculty in residence allows for a maximum of spiritual, academic, and social growth. Preparation for leading colleges. An extensive sports program, including riding.
PHYLLIS M. NEWMAN, M.A.
Founded 1866 Headmistress

IOLANI SCHOOL
Episcopal Church School for Boys
HONOLULU 17, HAWAII
A college preparatory church school for boys. Kindergarten through twelfth grade. Established 1862. Day tuition $225 to $275. Boarding $665 - $775. Summer session. Accredited.
REV. CHARLES A. PARMITER, JR.
M.A., S.T.B., Rector

The MERRICOURT SCHOOL
(Episcopal)
A country boarding school for 40 boys & girls. Grades 1-8 (pre-preparatory). Home-like environment. Sports, extra-curricula program. 26th year. 8 weeks summer camp. For information: Visit, write, or phone 3-3209.
THE REV. M. W. WHITFORD, Hdm.
BERLIN, CONN.

ST. LUKE'S HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING
New York City
Offers a 3 year course in nursing to high school and college graduates. College graduates may be admitted with 9 months advanced credit allowance. For further information write to The Director of Nursing, St. Luke's Hospital, 421 West 113th St., New York 25, N. Y.

HARVARD SCHOOL
Diocesan School for Boys. 52nd Year. Fall term opens September 11, 1951. Grades seven through twelve. Fully Accredited. R.O.T.C. unit. For all information apply to
THE REV. W. S. CHALMERS
Headmaster
3700 Coldwater Canyon Rd.
NORTH HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

Cathedral School of St. Mary
An accredited Episcopal school for girls. Suburban New York City. Day-nursery to college. Boarding—fifth grade to college. Strong college preparatory course. Music, Dramatics, Art. Excellent sports program. Catalog on request.
MARION REID MARCH
Box W, Garden City, Long Island, N. Y.

ST. STEPHEN'S SCHOOL FOR BOYS
ALEXANDRIA, VA.
Grades 3 thru 12 (Day School). College Preparatory. Under the Church School System of the Diocese of Virginia.
Address
THE REV. EDWARD E. TATE,
Headmaster
2405 Russell Rd. ALEXANDRIA, VA.

ST. MARY'S HALL on the Delaware.
Episcopal boarding and day school for girls 8-18. Founded 1837. Thorough college preparation. Fully accredited. Separate lower school. College preparatory and general courses. Music, Art, Clubs, Sports, Dramatics. Near New York and Philadelphia. Catalogue.
FLORENCE LUKENS NEWBOLD
Headmistress
Burlington, New Jersey

DeVEAUX SCHOOL
Niagara Falls, New York
FOUNDED 1852
The Church School in the Diocese of Western New York. College preparatory for boys. Representative form of student government. Small classes. Reasonable charges. Grades 7 through 12.
For information address The Headmaster.

The Church Home and Hospital
SCHOOL OF NURSING
Baltimore 31, Maryland
A three year course of nursing. Classes enter August and September. Scholarships available to well qualified high school graduates.
Apply to Director of Nursing

ST. AGNES SCHOOL
An Episcopal Country Day and Boarding School for Girls
Excellent College Preparatory record. Special courses arranged for girls not contemplating college. Day pupils range from Kindergarten to College Entrance. Boarders from Grade 8 to College Entrance.
MISS BLANCHE PITTMAN, Principal
Albany New York

HOWE MILITARY SCHOOL
Thorough Academic Training in a Spiritual Environment. R.O.T.C. Accredited college preparatory, business courses. Junior School. Small classes. Every boy participates in sports. Balanced program. Episcopal. Established 1884. Summer Camp, boys grammar school age. Catalogue.
COL. B. B. BOUTON
13 Academy Place, Howe, Indiana

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The WITNESS

10¢ A COPY

November 1, 1951

ST. PETER'S HOME, DETROIT
Boys Line Up for Afternoon Snack

How Clark Appointment Was Handled

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 7:30, 8 (and 9 Holy Days except Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 8:30, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers — 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. — 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital — 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m.
Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a. m. Holy Communion.
9:30 and 11 a. m. Church School.
11 a. m. Morning Service and Sermon.
4 p. m. Evensong. Special Music.
Weekday: Holy Communion Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.; Wednesdays and Saints Days at 8 a. m.; Thursdays at 12:10 p. m. Organ Recitals, Fridays, 12:10.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer — 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High).
Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon.
Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D.,
Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 — 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m.
Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacColl, 3rd, Rector
Rev. Peter Chase, Curate
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 36 The WITNESS NOVEMBER 1, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Mark Clark Appointment Timed By the Administration

Publicity Departments of the Roman Church Got the Jump on the Opposition

★ The appointment of General Mark Clark as the first American Ambassador to the Vatican was highlighted by one of the slickest inside deals ever witnessed on the American press scene. Because of its importance to every Episcopalian, we are reporting below the story of the Clark appointment as seen by Washington and New York newsmen.

The whole affair was dominated by a smooth working Truman-Roman Catholic press tie-in, while Protestant circles were lost for hours.

The story broke for the press a few minutes after noon, Saturday, Oct. 20, when Irving Perlmeter of the White House staff brought into the press room a 4-line announcement which he called "hot" according to Bob Moora of the N. Y. Herald Tribune. It told of the Clark appointment. When Perlmeter was asked Clark's religion affiliation, he first said he didn't know, then he said it was "Protestant," and finally, he brought out the Congressional Directory and stated it was "Episcopal." Reporters were not so naive as to believe that the White House hadn't checked on Clark's religious affiliation. It was the tip off that the whole thing had been carefully rigged.

Only a few minutes after the White House flash had gone out over the news wires, Francis Cardinal Spellman, Roman Catholic Archbishop of New York, had issued a statement expressing his view that the appointment was "logical, practical, etc." The Cardinal's statement could not have been written in the little time after the White House announcement, as the ink on the Spellman releases was fully dry, and did not smudge, indicating that it had been run off some time before. Also, the press section of the National Catholic Welfare office in Washington, the Roman press office in Washington, was fully manned on Saturday afternoon, which is not the usual practice.

Carefully Planned

That the whole thing had been carefully planned for weeks to coincide with the closing of Congress, enabling a recess appointment was made clear by United Press which quoted Gen. Clark from Columbia, S. C.: "Several months ago the President sent for me and asked me to come to the White House. There he told me what he intended to do." The Associated Press reported that the whole thing had been carefully staged so that Clark would go to Rome while the Senate was on vacation, and when it finally came to a vote "Congress next January would find it difficult to turn down the man on the job."

Clark's own relations with Rome were highlighted by an exclusive article in the N. Y. Times which said: "At Fort Monroe, Va., where Clark has had headquarters, friends reported yesterday that he had sent birthday gifts to the Pope every year since the war. The Rev. J. O. Schmidhauser, pastor of St. Mary's Star-of-the-Sea Roman Catholic Church said: "There have been amicable exchanges between General Clark and Pope Pius since the campaign in Italy."

Rome Comments

Roman press comments in favor of the appointment plugged themes, both of which will become familiar to the American public in the months to come. One, the appointment would help fight Communism, with a strong undertone that the Roman Church was the really sole leader among Churches in this. Two, that the Vatican was a listening post which the USA couldn't afford to ignore. The Roman press relations man in New York who argued these points with reporters also quoted at once that opposition would come from the Communists, "so you see who really opposes this!"

Throughout the afternoon and evening, three leading New York public relationsmen, members of the Cardinal's committee on the laity, were closeted with Cardinal Spellman to assist him in case of need. The National Council of Churches was closed, its press officer was not located for many hours, and the press men of the National Council of the Episcopal Church were totally missing.

While Cardinal Spellman sat within one block of AP, Bishop Sherrill attempted to fight the war of words from Greenwich, which is too far away from effective news centers. The Bishop's statement was excellent, and brought much praise for its clarity and good sense. But it was slow in coming, and throughout the afternoon and evening, never caught up to the Roman statements of praise which preceded it on the wire. The AP listed Bishop Sherrill's statement only as the third of four expressing opposition, which indicated to many that the NCC was not being accepted as a spokesman for non-Roman Churches by the press.

National Council

The National Council of Churches, which was formed partly for just this type of emergency, was very slow in getting started, and seemed caught completely by surprise. Even with its over 500 employees, it was unable to man its press facilities adequately by Saturday evening.

News men wished that Bishop Sherrill would come to Manhatten and with Bishops Donegan, Gilbert, Oxham, and Dr. Cavert issue a statement. All these men were available, and would have made a good picture "sending a telegram of protest to President Truman." But not a single opposition photo moved over the wire.

Comment from Washington legislators was promptly received. Ten Roman Senators and Congressmen strongly endorsed the move. Only one man had the courage to oppose it, Baptist Senator Olin Johnson of South Carolina. One noted Protestant legislator literally fled from reporters, saying in his office "Do you want me to commit political suicide? I'm up for election next year, and the Romans can beat me, while the National Council of Churches hasn't even had a meeting of Protestant legislators here yet. I can't afford to let my views be known, as my own bishop can't even back me."

Many interesting by-products of the story came to light as the evening wore on. In all stories, the NCC was called "Protestant spokesman." The failure in the past on NCC's part to promote that it was speaking for "Anglican and Orthodox Churches" came to roost, as the reader just got a "protesting impression," while it would have been much more effective had the NCC been clearly recognized as speaking for a "larger number."

Bishop Comments

One bishop of the Episcopal Church, who issued a statement only after receiving a promise that he would not be quoted by name attributed General Clark's "willingness to play ball with Rome on the failure of the House of Bishops to elect a bishop for the armed forces as instructed by General Convention. I fear that Bishop Sherrill's veto of that military bishop is going to cause him many regrets and many problems for us, as I honestly think that if we had had a military bishop visiting our men, including the generals, like Clark, we would have gotten through to him. You should see the wonderful job the Roman military bishop does in my diocese's army camps when he comes through."

Quick praise from the Vatican on the appointment soon came over the news wires. It is hard to believe that the Cardinals who were quoted were not "in the know" before the news was told to the American people and press.

In addition to the outstanding statement by Bishop Sherrill in opposition to the appointment, Dr. Charles Goff of the First Methodist Church, Evanston, Ill. caught the fancy of newsmen by his documented statement that "Mr. Truman broke his clear assurance to representatives of the Federal Council of Churches that he would not move in the direction of appointing an Ambassador to the Vatican."

Another Line

White House press secretary Joe Short indicated another official line later in the afternoon when he said that "the appointment is in the national interest," according to an International News Service report.

Cardinal Spellman, who has met frequently with Washington legislators, something which non-Roman leaders have failed to do, also got dividends from this when one legislator said he "knew nothing having been done against Communism by the World and National Council of Churches, while I have a handful of clippings showing what my (Roman) Church has done." Press work was paying off.

Major radio networks, monitered from noon Saturday to noon Sunday played up the appointment, praise for it, and that there was "some Protestant opposition," always implying there was some, and lots of support too. CBS, which is considered the best news network, lagged in quoting the Sherrill and other statements. It was a story of too little and too late, for the reply was never made strongly enough to catch up with the original statement. A survey of ten major Eastern newspapers also shows that the "Protestors" came away second best. While the Roman press men worked smoothly, news men said the NCC representatives and other Protestants "ran around in late circles."

What to Do

With Clark safely installed at Rome with an interim appointment, and Roman forces preparing to see that he stays there by a masterful public pressure campaign, Anglican public relations man with some practical experience in dealing with Rome made these suggestions to the readers of the Episcopal Church press.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

1. Write and wire your Senators and Congressmen, those of your state and any others you think you can influence.

2. Write or wire President Truman telling him to withdraw the nomination. He won't but you should encourage him and your legislators to kill the appointment.

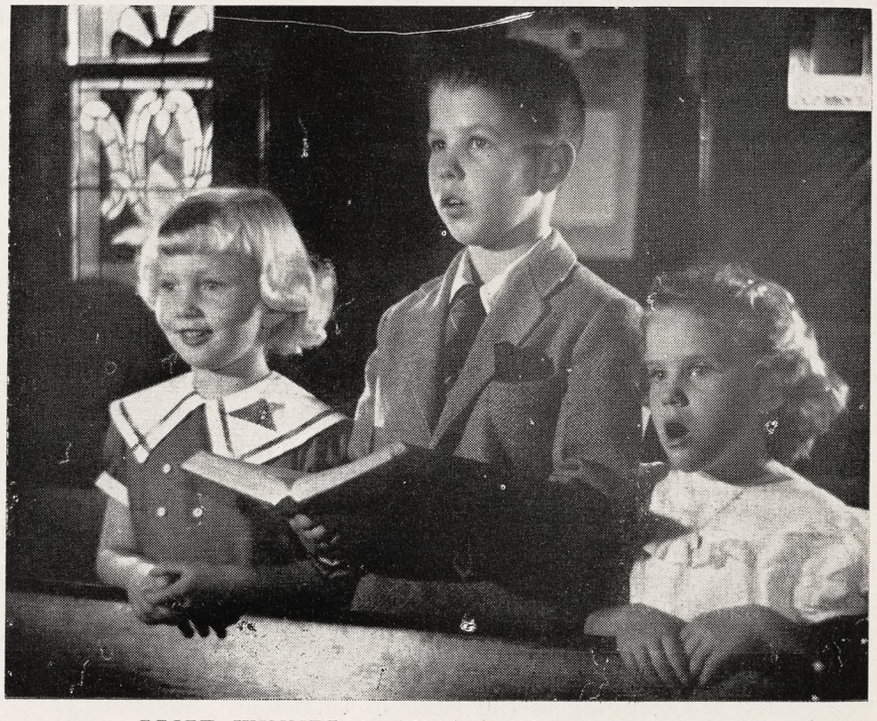
3. Contact your local, state, and National Council of Churches and see that they organize protest meetings, delegations to Washington, letters to newspapers and radio stations, and mass visits to your vacationing Washington legislators.

4. Organize your diocese on this question, so that your diocesan magazine will carry articles on this, your bishop and rector will preach on this, see that statements on this are handed to the press.

5. Write or wire the National Council of Churches and Bishop Sherrill assuring them of your support, prayers, and urge them to stop trying to handle Rome with amateurs. This job needs skilled public relations men, and it is time our Church obtained the services of laymen skilled in mass communications. Urge Bishop Sherrill to obtain the signature of all other bishops protesting this act, and to go and see the President himself to let him know the views of the Episcopal Church.

By Sunday noon, Oct. 21st, two Roman Cardinals had personally called the White House to express their "appreciation and bestow their blessing." Episcopalians might bear this in mind, for besides the actions outlined above, this whole matter should be committed to prayer at regular services.

ERIE TO ELECT NEW BISHOP



★ A special convention for the election of a bishop to succeed Bishop Harold Sawyer has been called by the standing committee of the diocese of Erie. It will be held at St. Paul's Cathedral, Erie, November 20th. Thomas L. Small of Erie is the president of the standing committee.

CHURCH PEACE RALLY IN LONDON

★ Over 300 delegates, representing all the Churches in England, including the Roman Catholic, held a congress on "Christians and the Crisis" in London on September 29th. The chairman was Canon Collins, chancellor of St. Paul's Cathedral, and leaders of various communions were the speakers. A forceful resolution was passed in the belief that Christians "if they will act together can provide the solution to the whole problem of world peace." They called for a conference of Christian leaders from East and West for this purpose.

Believing that all international problems can be settled by negotiation, they called on "Christians to oppose all cold war propaganda of hatred and fear as alien to the spirit of Christ, while condemning any assaults on fundamental human rights." Accordingly they urged the British government to open negotiations between the great powers for a concerted effort to use the world's resources for the establishment of a humane standard of living for all peoples. The delegates also called for "an end to the deplorable carnage and destruction in Korea by making every effort to bring the existing negotiations to a successful conclusion."

At the close of the congress there was a march to Trafalgar Square with clergy in vestments, with crosses carried as well as peace slogans, and with the band of the Salvation Army providing the marching tunes. The evening of the conference Canon Collins preached the fourth of a series of sermons on world peace in which he read the resolutions from the pulpit of St. Paul's that had been passed and recommended that they be read in churches throughout England.

PRIZE WINNER in Michigan picture contest is this church school scene, taken by Myron R. Johnson of Midland for a campaign at St. John's directing attention of parents to importance of church schools

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EDITORIALS

Keep the Good Word

SOMETIMES we are tempted in this Church of ours to put in a good word for the term Protestant. Its inclusion in the title of the Church is an embarrassment to some of the brethren. Some of our bright young men, it is said, come out of seminary vowed and determined to separate the hated word altogether from Episcopal. The achievement of this would be a life work well justified, or so it seems, to hear some of the talk. Catholic is the fashionable word, Protestant almost a disreputable one among many of the clergy, although not among the laity, the majority of whom still consider themselves Protestant.

The truth is, of course, that this Church is not an "either-or"; it is a "both-and," both Catholic and Protestant. The former is a great word and we rightly claim it, but to the man on the street it has only one association and its use otherwise is simply confusing. Nor does it help much to go on insisting on the distinction between Roman Catholic and other brands. To 150 million Americans Catholic stands for the Pope, Latin Masses, and everything that goes with it, and we might just as well face the facts.

This is not to say that we are to give the word up entirely, although we feel its connotation makes it of doubtful value in our public relations. Perhaps we shall have to find another word. Meanwhile let's stop apologizing for and talking nonsense about the word Protestant. It's positive and an affirmative word, not at all a "protesting" term as some of its enemies should know. It stands for the Bible, the word of God, over against the word of man as the final standard and authority of Christian belief and practice. It stands for the democratic tradition in both Church and state, for the laity recognized as belonging to the Body of Christ as well as the hierarchy. It stands for the sovereignty of God as opposed to all of man's idolatries, making even the Church subject to his judgment. It stands for justification by faith, the wonderful good news of the offer of God's amazing love to undeserving sinners like us, the very heart of the gospel of Christ.

It's a great word, this word Protestant, and it belongs in our tradition. Let us not be ashamed of it, but rather let us boast of it in this Church.

★

"Quotes"

I REGRET that at this time, when national unity is so imperative in meeting this peril which confronts our nation and the world and in achieving the goal of world peace, the President has seen fit to initiate an action in the naming of an ambassador to the Vatican which is bound to result in unhappy controversy and great division. An overwhelming majority of the Churches of the National Council of Churches in the USA have already expressed their opposition to this proposal which contravenes the American principle of the separation of Church and state, and places one Church in a preferential position. I hope and believe this proposal will be opposed by the great majority of fair-minded Americans of every religious conviction, and will be either withdrawn or defeated in the Senate.

—HENRY K. SHERRILL
Presiding Bishop

★

Adventure in Journalism

THE Southern Churchman has reorganized and after December 1st will be published as Episcopal Churchnews. The new publication will be larger, more comprehensive and more attractive. We have already noticed the new type fonts which are a definite improvement.

The news policy of Episcopal Churchnews will be nonpartisan and objective. Readers are assured that news selection, news writing, and headline writing will be separate from editorial policy. Bishop Gibson, president of The Southern Churchman Company Inc., which will publish Churchnews said: "News is news and editorial policy is editorial policy and never shall the two be forced to live together on Episcopal Churchnews."

The editorial policy of the new publication will be strongly evangelical in the basic Christian meaning of the word, and not in the limited sense to denote a party or group in the Church. Religious liberalism or any other 'ism' which can find no justification in Scripture or the Book of Common Prayer will be vigorously fought. Editorials will be controversial, and will deal with the vital issues of the day and attempt to pinpoint the position the Church takes on these issues. Editorial policy will uphold the Book of Common Prayer and its theology, support the cause of Christian unity, and be strongly missionary.

Response to announcement of the publication of Episcopal Churchnews has been amazing and encouraging to the editors. We know that all concerned with the new publication have given thoughtful and prayerful consideration to their project. In this day when religious journalism is a hazardous undertaking, we salute their courage, and wish them good luck and God's blessing on their undertaking.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Church Practice of Segregation

BY

ALGER L. ADAMS

Member of Witness Editorial Board

THE heads of the Christian social relations departments of the dioceses were asked the following questions on segregation of Negroes:

"Are there Negro-white congregations? Have the good offices of the diocesan or other official body been active in any situation revolving around Negroes seeking membership in white congregations? Could you advise of the principles used in arriving at a settlement? If there are 'mixed' congregations, how did they come about? What problems arose? What is the present condition of those congregations' spiritual life? Were there Negro clergy ministering to white congregations, regularly assigned or as supply?"

The Rev. Mr. Henry, reporting for New York, made the most definite answer to the question, "Are there Negro-white congregations?" He said, "If by a Negro-white congregation one means a congregation that has been for a period of years and presumably will continue to be truly bi-racial, the answer must be, 'No.' The history of the diocese of New York has been that when a shift in population brings Negro members into a parish, there is a period of transition of a few years during which the proportion of Negroes increases. In most cases, when the percentage has reached as high as 40%, Negroes are given representation on the vestry. Therefore, the movement is accelerated until at the end of three or four years, the parish which was once a white parish, and then during the transition a bi-racial parish, becomes in its present status a Negro parish. This has been the history of several parishes, the one with which I am most familiar being Trinity, Morrisania, where the transition began about 1940 and was completed by 1950.

"I understand that St. Paul's Church, Bronx, is now passing through the transition period and has a Negro membership of about 40%. The Chapel of the Intercession of Trinity parish is just entering upon the transition period (Editor's Note: The neighborhood is 90% Negro). It is still predominately white, but with a few Negro members."

According to the foregoing definition, the balance of the American Church is segregated. There are not more than three congregations which can lay claim to Negro-white membership.

The Rev. Robert L. Baxter, from the missionary district of Spokane, wrote, "We have traditionally had one 'Negro congregation,' St. Thomas, Spokane. For some years now (perhaps ten) this congregation had been ministered to by the rector of Holy Trinity Church, Spokane, a segregated congregation. About three years ago it became difficult to heat St. Thomas' building in the winter months, so the people of that congregation began having a service at Holy Trinity, clear across town. Gradually, the two congregations merged. Services are no longer held at St. Thomas' although the congregation is listed separately and reported separately. St. Thomas' was never located conveniently to the homes of its members anyway.

"It sounds a bit more impressive than it is. St. Thomas is a very small congregation with few if any children and young people. But we do have a non-segregated congregation in the missionary district of Spokane . . . Outside of the See city, there are lone Negro communicants who have drifted here from areas (such as Chicago) where there is substantial work and worship on the basis of segregation."

Other Exceptions

A BROOKLYN, Long Island, church with thirty-five Negro members of a church of 465 and a church in Massachusetts make up the other exceptions. Of Massachusetts, the Rev. Mr. Kellett said, "For example, in Christ Church, Cambridge, on a Sunday morning, one would find a good sprinkling of Negroes in the congregation.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

One would also see several in the choir and generally one or two serving as acolytes."

The general pattern for the balance of the Church throughout the nation is for two or three Negro families to maintain membership in individual parishes, with exception of the South-East where segregation is the flat rule.

As a typical situation Bishop William R. Moody of Lexington (Kentucky) wrote, "We have but one small Negro parish in our diocese . . . The very small number of Negro communicants in the rest of the diocese attach themselves to the local parishes ministering to white congregations."

Or again, the Rev. Thomas B. Smythe wrote from Bethlehem that segregated St. Philip's, Reading, Pa., had been started at the request of two Negro families in 1927. They had been members of St. Mary's there. After 1942, this mission was closed and the congregation joined St. Mary's. He observes that St. Mary's now has only three Negro families as "they have not felt too welcome, perhaps lonely, and their attendance and interest has waned." In this latter situation, the bishop had made a policy of racial integration known.

The most consistently given exceptions to blanket the rule of segregation were cathedral congregations, e. g., Albany, Massachusetts, Delaware, Harrisburg (Pa.), New York, and San Joaquin (California). At St. James, San Joaquin, Dean James M. Malloch went on to say, "I would like to see a Negro church or an interracial church started in West Fresno, where there is a large population of Negroes, Mexicans, Italians, and others."

Some of the explanation given for there being no interracial congregations were: New Orleans, Louisiana, "State does not permit!" and "Negroes have their own churches." Diocese of Virginia, "Segregation is still a state law in Virginia. We still have separate congregations, and no action has been taken toward 'mixed' congregations." Spring Hill, Alabama, "The Negroes are as confused as to their wishes and the ultimate solution as the whites." Fond du Lac, "We have no Negroes living in this diocese (Wisconsin). In fact, some of our cities have unconstitutional regulations, perhaps not a written ordinance, but a tradition that is enforced, which forbids Negroes to live in those cities." The writer noted that last summer 5,000 Negro Jamaican cherry-pickers lived in the neighborhood. "These men are Britishers, and most of them members of the English Church in their homeland. But they do not attend services up here." Terre Haute, Indiana, "Our town of 62,000 contains possibly 6,000 Negroes who seem of their own desire to support and frequent their own churches."

The sharpest unmitigated picture of segregation in the Episcopal Church is drawn by the assignment of clergy.

In no diocese are Negro clergy assigned by the bishop to other than Negro congregations. White clergy are assigned to Negro congregations. There are only two instances where individual parishes used a Negro priest in a parochial capacity even on a temporary basis, Massachusetts and New York, Grace Church, Hastings-on-Hudson.

No exceptions to the rule were cited by diocesan reports.

An Outside Report On Us

"THE Protestant Church and the Negro"—A Pattern of Segregation, by Frank S. Loescher, is the most complete work done within recent years on the racial behavior of Christian bodies. It was published by the Associated Press of New York, copyrighted by the Young Men's Christian Associations, in 1948. He studied 78,000 churches; 4,000 Episcopal.

He found 116 Episcopal churches with Negro-white membership, twenty-seven in New York, twenty-five in Massachusetts, eight each in California, Connecticut, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, six in Ohio. Of the other twenty-six, only five were in southern or border states (Delaware, Kentucky, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Virginia), each with only one or two members.

The total number of attenders was reported as 470. One church in Worcester, Mass., accounted for 145. A "downtown" Brooklyn church had 35. However, four rectors volunteered the information that the "Negro young people tend to drop out during or after adolescence" and seek out "their own church for social life." Three ministers reported that they believed there would be feeling on the part of their white members against an increasing Negro membership. White church members are reported to have asked, "Why don't they go to colored Episcopal churches?"

In 43 churches, Negroes are members of some church social organization. But all of these are in the north. 80% are in Massachusetts and New York.

Loescher's figures should be read against the background of 4,000 Episcopal churches with 2,500,000 members. There are 60,326 Negroes reported members of 347 segregated Episcopal congregations.

While the picture is not simple it is generally true that Negroes are segregated into separate congregations, 99.4% of them. Negro clergy are strictly segregated in pastoral assignments.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Next week Mr. Adams will write on how segregation works in the Episcopal Church.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Religion and the Mind

BY

CLINTON J. KEW

JEALOUSY

"MY husband tells me that I am a very jealous woman. I know he is right because my love for him is very strong. He works behind a counter in a store and I become disturbed when he talks and jokes with the customers. I love my husband dearly. Isn't jealousy the basis of Christian love? Don't be afraid of hurting my feelings."

This woman has asked a question which is fundamental in the lives of everyone. Probably every person passes through a stage of jealousy. First of all, jealousy is certainly not the basis for Christian love, nor does it indicate that one's love for partner is strong and enduring. The motivation of jealousy is self-love or narcissism. Whenever there is a threat that someone else will receive the love which the jealous person wants the uncomfortable feeling of anxiety or hate arises. The woman is afraid that the customers will receive the attention she craves. She does not want to share her husband in this normal social way.

This will be better understood if we can consider the stages of love in the growth of personality. First of all, there is the infantile love which is concerned only with the self. The new-born baby is only interested in his needs when he is born. This is quite normal as it is the way God has made babies. Secondly, this love changes as the child learns to love those who take care of him and love him. We might call this half-way or self-love. The child loves those who love him. Thirdly, there is mature love. In this phase the person loves and expects nothing in return. We can call this Christian love. A person will even give his life for another.

A jealous person has only gone half way in his growth. He has progressed from the infantile love to the second phase, where he loves only because he receives something in return. Therefore, a person found in this phase is a jealous person because he is selfish. Such people become disturbed when there is a threat; namely, that someone else may receive the attention he or she wants.

Many novels and movies today seem to imply that a jealous person loves more intensely and is more fond of the partner. Actually, a jealous person is less loving and less fond. Speaking of jealousy as rivalry is pure nonsense. One who fears unfaithfulness in another is usually not dependable. Where there is real love, it never fails. Jealous people can't really love. It is not difficult to point out instances where love fails first in the jealous person. How can there be love when there is jealousy and hostility? How can one who is jealous be lovable? The motivation of jealousy is due to fear and hostility rather than love. Haven't you observed a jealous person becoming hateful whenever there is a rival around to threaten the relationship?

A jealous person depends on someone else for love. He doesn't freely give himself. Because there is such dependence, love for him must be in evidence continually. One man urged his wife to put their four months old son out for adoption because he felt the son stood in the way of his wife's love for him. Members of a family often quarrel because they fear there will be favoritisms. Some people even sulk and become ill if another member of the family is receiving the love which they desire. Jealousy wants the center of attention. The lady's man and the woman flirt are really selfish people because they make constant bids for attention. Don Juan wanted all the women to love him, but he didn't have enough love to marry even one.

The question of jealousy is important in the life of every family. How can we best solve it? It should be handled first in the family situation where it can be worked through carefully. Here, members of the family will learn to share and give to one another. Large families produce emotionally healthy children because of the give and take. If it is not successfully solved in the family, it may cripple the individual in his social and business relationships throughout life.

Jealousy can be eliminated in the friendly relationship of the school and the church. Interests which widen one's horizon become theraputic agents in resolving this handicap.

A mature person will help one to grow from the half-way phase of love to mature love. As jealous tension decreases life becomes more harmonious. Many parents fail to realize that much of the quarreling at home among children is based upon selfishness. Moving out of the narrow family circle to the wider community broadens one's concept of life.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Jealous people use other people as tools. There is nothing worthwhile within them to support them; there is no Christian love. A man who is married to a jealous woman must keep showing her signs of his love for her by buying her trinkets, jewelry and the like over and over again.

As long as there is selfishness, Christian love is impossible.

A jealous person must give up his selfishness and love others for what they are. As a Christian, we must love the things that God has made. The love of God is the inspiration of the love of man. And those who love others give practical expression of their love for God. We become saints, not by aiming at sainthood, but by loving God and our neighbor with all our heart, mind and strength. Christian love even transcends death, for death has never conquered love.

A New Man

BY

ANSON PHELPS STOKES JR.
Rector of St. Bartholomew's, New York

IT is important to know what Christianity offers, for, if we seek from our religion that which it does give, we are bound to be disillusioned. Its primary gift is rebirth. It offers to make us new men.

Some seek in religion for a new world. Indeed Christ preached the coming of a kingdom, but it would only fully come at the end of time. Yet men in their hearts could get a foretaste of it in the present. The new world would come tomorrow but new men could be created today.

Some look to religion for comfort and happiness. Again, there is reason for their hope, for, if all men followed Christ, it would be a happier world. Yet Jesus had to endure a cross. He conquered sin and death, but he did not abolish them. His chief gift is not a life without pain, but the power to face life as new men.

What makes a man? There is, first of all, his heritage. There is truth in the point of view that a man is shaped by his background, yet that background is not purely one of physical inheritance. A regiment can give a soldier a background of traditions and ideals. Surely the Christian Church offers to every man a heritage second to none. Have you not seen an illiterate Italian or Pole, who nevertheless carried himself with dignity because he was a member of a world-wide Church with an ancient heritage? Surely that is not the prerogative of Rome alone. Every child that is baptized has a heritage. Saints, apostles, martyrs, have lived and died for him; and God has given his only Son for him. If only the full meaning of the phrase, "a child of God," could become real to men, there need not be any inferiority complexes. It would tell each man that he is no creature of the state or of natural forces alone, but one infinitely dear to the God of creation. Christianity makes men new by giving them a new heritage.

We need parents, but we also need associates —brothers and sisters, playmates and schoolmates, colleagues, friends, and neighbors. What happens at baptism? Of course, if it is merely thought of as placing a little water on the child's forehead, not much does occur; but if one regards it as the entrance into a new and larger family, a child is indeed transformed. Consider an unwanted and forlorn child, suddenly adopted into a fine and loving home. The very moment that a child crosses the threshold, he is made new. So it is with us as we enter the Church.

St. Mark says that Jesus ordained his apostles "that they should be with him." It was by association with him that they became new men, and all through history men and women have become new by association with Christ in prayer, devotion, and discipleship. Pastor Niemoller in prison said that he was upheld by the prayers of Christians from the Arctic to Africa. What associates we as Christians are privileged to have! We become new men through our new associates.

Man is not just a creature of his heritage in the past or of his present associations. Many, like Ethel Waters, have overcome the most unpromising surroundings, simply because they had an outlook on those surroundings that would not countenance defeat. Christ offered men a new outlook. To Jews who had been brought up in the hope of a kingdom, he said, "The kingdom is at hand." They misunderstood him at first and thought of the kingdom in temporal and political terms. But slowly he made real to them that, though their outward circumstances might not change, they were heirs of the kingdom, and they could not only hope for it in the future but could share it as in their hearts they became subjects of the King.

THE CHRISTIAN AND HIS MONEY
By Bishop Washburn
Ideal for Every Member Canvass
$4 for 100 $2.50 for 50
The Witness Tunkhannock, Pa.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

NEW ENGLAND HAS SYNOD

★ The Presiding Bishop was the headliner at the synod of the province of New England, meeting at Christ Church Cathedral, Hartford, October 23-24, with the women of the province meeting the two days previous. Also addressing the synod was the Rev. John Heuss, director of the division of education of the National Council.

FIRST CONSECRATION IN OKLAHOMA

★ When Dean Winslow R. C. Powell is consecrated bishop coadjutor of Oklahoma tomorrow, November 2, it will be the first consecration of a bishop of the Episcopal Church to be held in the diocese. Since there is no church large enough for the event, the service is being held in Oklahoma City's municipal auditorium. The Presiding Bishop is the consecrator and is also to speak at an inter-Church dinner in the evening.

HALLOCK ELECTED IN MILWAUKEE

★ The Rev. Donald Hallock, rector of Grace Church, Hinsdale, Ill., was elected bishop coadjutor of Milwaukee on the seventh ballot. He received 33 clerical votes out of 60, and 28 lay votes out of 49. The clergymen receiving the next highest votes were the Rev. Howard S. Kennedy, rector of St. James, Chicago, and the Rev. Killian A. Stimson, rector of St. Mark's, Milwaukee.

DEAN WALTHOUR ELECTED IN ATLANTA

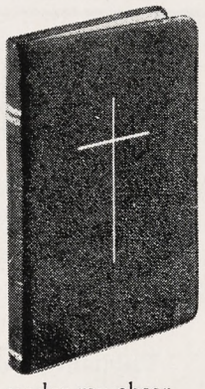
★ Dean John B. Walthour of the Cathedral of St. Philip, Atlanta, was elected bishop of Atlanta on the 16th ballot. He received 22 clerical votes out of 36, and 19 1/3 votes out of 31 1/3. Clergymen receiving the next highest votes were Dean Warnecke of Newark, N. J. and the Rev. J. Milton Richardson, rector of St. Luke's, Atlanta. Walthour has said that he will accept.

SECOND PROVINCE PROTESTS

★ The synod of the province of New York and New Jersey, meeting in Buffalo October 23rd, disapproved of President Truman's appointment of an ambassador to the Vatican. The resolution was introduced by Bishop Donegan of New York.

NEWARK CLERGY PROTEST

★ The following telegram was sent to the President of the United States, and Senator H. Alexander Smith of New Jersey: "The Newark clericus, a representative organization of the clergy of the Episcopal diocese of Newark, N. J., at a meeting in Morristown on October 22nd, unanimously and emphatically protest the appointment of General Mark Clark, or any other person, as ambassador to the Vatican."



DEAN HIRSHSON SPEAKS AT PORTLAND

★ Dean Louis M. Hirshson of Christ Church Cathedral, Hartford, was the preacher at a service of rededication held at Trinity, Portland, Conn., on September 30th. The rector, the Rev. Malcolm Van Zandt, celebrated, assisted by Archdeacon R. L. Harding.

★ ADDRESS CHANGE

IN MAKING AN ADDRESS CHANGE, PLEASE SEND BOTH THE OLD AND THE NEW ADDRESS AND ALLOW THREE WEEKS FOR THE CHANGE.

When buying a Prayer Book ask for Harper Editions and enjoy—at no extra cost— all these exclusive features

MICROPAKE INDIA PAPER the finest India paper ever made in America. Harold P. Landers, Business Manager, Massachusetts Bible Society, says of Micropake: "Of all India papers from any part of the world that have come under my observation, this is definitely the best." (Micropake is now in use on all small and medium-sized Harper India paper editions.)

FLEXTEX EDGELINING the new, improved method of applying strong, flexible paper linings to give the finished appearance of a full leather lining. (Now used on many paper-lined editions of the Prayer Book.)

GIFT-PAK the 3-piece box that keeps your Prayer Book fresh and clean and gives you a handsome gift wrapping in blue and gold, free of retail store price marks. (Now used on a large majority of Harper Prayer Books.)

Ask to see Harper Prayer Books

On sale at leading booksellers everywhere

HARPER & BROTHERS, New York 16, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

KEY LAYMEN MEETING IN SOUTH CAROLINA

★ Twenty-five key laymen of South Carolina met October 6-7 at the diocesan house in Charleston to hear Albert Roberts Jr., business man of Florida, present the program of the Church. Bishop Carruthers spoke on the program of the diocese. Every congregation in the diocese is now being visited in preparation for the canvass.

SCHOOL OF RELIGION IN NEWARK

★ The diocese of Newark sponsored a school of religion on four Monday evenings in October. Speakers were Mrs. Samuel Shoemaker of New York; Robert C. Clothier, president-emeritus of Rutgers; John S. Whale, principal of a private school in England; Bishop Angus Dun of Washington; Prof. A. T. Mollegen of Virginia Seminary.

In addition to these lecturers, others to present courses the second hour were the Rev. Benjamin Minifie, rector of Grace Church, Orange, and a member of the editorial board of the Witness; the Rev. Alfred J. Miller, rector of Christ Church, Ridgewood; the Rev. John D. Wing of New York; the Rev. Benjamin Axelroad of Newark, together with five other clergy all of whom spoke on the Urban Church; the Rev. Jefferson Bennett, the Rev. A. A. Monteiro, the Rev. Kilmer Myers, the Rev. William Griffin, the Rev. George W. Weber.

MARY FAWCETT CO. HAS CHANGE

★ Mary Fawcett Co., for over 30 years suppliers of Irish linens for all church uses, is now owned by Mr. & Mrs. T. R. Fawcett of Marblehead, Mass. Mr. Fawcett has been associated with the business for the past twenty years but has been an inactive partner, since he has been in the linen business in Boston. He has now bought the entire interest of Mrs. Ruth Gribbon and will conduct the business from Marblehead.

RACE DISCRIMINATION HIT AT SYNOD

★ The 400 deputies to the synod of the province of Washington, meeting in Wilmington, unanimously adopted a resolution expressing unalterable opposition to racial discrimination of any kind. The resolution pointed out that segregation exists in all but one of the province's dioceses.

BISHOP NASH PREACHES TO STUDENTS

★ Bishop Norman Nash of Massachusetts was the preacher at a service at Trinity, Boston, October 7th, sponsored by the Canterbury Club of the parish. The service, the first of the fall season, was preceded by a supper for the students of the area.

The Church Pension Fund

and its subsidiaries

administered for the benefit of the Church

The Church Hymnal Corporation

Publishers of The Hymnal; Hymnal 1940 Companion; Book of Common Prayer; A Prayer Book for Soldiers and Sailors; Book of Offices; Stowe's Clerical Director.

The Church Life Insurance Corporation

Offers low cost insurance and annuity contracts to clergy, lay officials and active lay workers of the Church, either voluntary or paid, and their immediate families. Services include individual insurance programming and assistance to parish officials in preparing and establishing plans for retirement of lay employees.

The Church Fire Insurance Corporation

Low cost fire, windstorm and extended coverage insurance on property owned by or closely affiliated with the Church, and on the residences and personal property of the clergy.

Further information available by addressing any of the above at

20 Exchange Place New York 5, N. Y.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT, Book Editor

The Faith of the Church. By James A. Pike and W. Norman Pittenger. The National Council of the P. E. Church (281 Fourth Ave., N. Y. C.), $1.50.

This is Volume III in a series of six which the National Council is publishing for study and guidance in the writing of the new lesson materials, under the magnificant religious education program launched by Dr. John Heuss and his associates. This volume achieves the impossible — it provides a textbook of Christian doctrine which will be accepted, we trust, by all schools of thought and theology in the Church. The forebodings of those who assumed that each group would have to write its own text are —to say the least—premature. This is a simple exposition of Christian doctrine that will interest every layman, whether church school teacher or not.

The Life We Prize. By Elton Trueblood. Harper. $2.50.

Searching every corner of personal and social life, the author insists that the stern realities of the present make imperative the facing of this question, so generally evaded: What men ought to want in life. Characteristic of his books we again have incisive analysis, relentless insistence on facts, deep comprehension of the many elements that enter into the problem. A forceful "apologetic" (could there be a worse word?) for the Christian faith; timely, clear, forceful.

Good Times Today and Tomorrow. By Gates-Peardon. Macmillan.

This is a third grade reader and a part of Macmillan's plan for basal readers plus supplementary books of similar vocabulary. It is so delightful in its clear print and colored pictures, however, so widely varied in its vivid stories of city, country and foreign children, as well as of birds and animals, that it would make a welcome gift for any child between seven and ten.—Helen M. Grant

Self-Understanding. By Seward Hiltner. Scribner. $2.75.

An illuminating and inspiring approach to the crippling emotional tensions and the areas of inner darkness of the human spirit, presented by one well qualified to combine the insights and interpretations of religion and psychology. Dr. Hiltner describes and illustrates a basic attitude one might take toward his difficulties, as a first step toward release and redemption. The implications of this understanding of the self are developed in such significant areas as: wholesome and unwholesome anxieties, ethical conscience, psychological freedom, and the rightful role of sex.—Frank W. Herriott

A Time to Keep. By Peter Neagoe. Coward-McCann, Inc. New York. $3.00.

A charming account of peasant life and customs in Transylvania as seen through the eyes of the author whose life there as a child was enriched by the warmth of his home and typical devotion of friends.

With a sensitive perception of the simple and human traits of his Romanian countrymen, Mr. Neagoe recounts tales of folklore and daily happenings of the home with a poignancy and genuineness which bring delight and appreciation to the reader. —R. M. A.

Faith and Duty. By N. H. G. Robinson. Harper. $3.00.

Following an analysis of the various doctrines of man presented by Barth, Brunner, Niebuhr, and F. R. Tennant, Dr. Robinson, who writes in an unusually tight and incomprehensible style, finds a solution to our human and divine situation in the following sentence: "A belief in the completeness of natural man's sin is compatible with a belief in his less than total moral imperfection, and compatible therefore with a belief in his responsibility, his ability to respond to God's gracious self-revelation in Jesus Christ His Son." Such an answer, we feel sure, will interest none save a few scholars who have the patience and courage to find their way through Dr. Robinson's semantic wilderness. — W. B. Spofford Jr.

Christian Knowledge of God. By James H. Cotton. Macmillan. $2.75.

By the judicious use of certain aspects of Royce's theory of knowledge, Dr. Cotton points out the way, as he sees it, by which the mind of man actually reaches God. The whole mind is involved and in the act of faith subjective attitude combines with objective evidence to bring us face to face with the transcendent God of Christian revelation. Here we have a new synthesis in which Royce and James join with Barth in a pragmatic existentialism.—John S. Marshall

RELIGIOUS CHRISTMAS CARDS

Christmas Card Boxes, $1.00 each

I The Story of Christmas in Text and Picture 16 cards

II 20 Hummel Christmas Cards

Christmas Card Packets, $1.00 each

4X Four 25c Cards

10X Ten 10c Cards

20Xa Twenty 5c Cards

20Xb Twenty 5c Single Mowbray Cards

Anglo-Franciscan Pocket Kalendar

Feasts and Fasts for 1952

15c each – 8 for $1.00

THE GRACE DIEU PRESS

Maryhill Mount Sinai, L. I., N. Y.

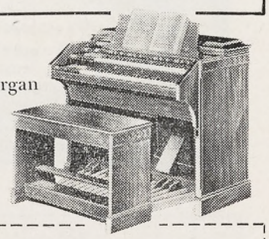
The only organ in tune for life

The Hammond Organ is the only church organ in the world that cannot get out of tune† . . . ever! It provides glorious music of perfect pitch, regardless of changes in weather or humidity. This trouble-saving, money-saving feature is only one of many reasons why, year after year, more churches choose the Hammond Organ than all other comparable instruments combined.

PRICES START AT $1285*

For the Spinet Model (not shown); f.o.b. Chicago.

HAMMOND ORGAN



MUSIC'S MOST GLORIOUS VOICE

*Includes Federal excise tax, rebated to churches.

Concert Model has a 32-note AGO pedal keyboard and an additional †Pedal Solo Unit tunable to preference by the organist.

CHURCH MODEL

The Hammond Organ is used in over 27,000 churches.

FREE! TWO BOOKLETS

Send coupon now while quantities last.

☐ "Are You Wondering About Organs?"

☐ "49 Tested Ways of Raising Money for a Church Organ"

Hammond Instrument Company

4231 W. Diversey Ave., Chicago 39, Illinois

Name.....

Street.....

City.....Zone.....State.....

© 1951, Hammond Instrument Company

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

ALTAR GUILDS
Full range of finest qualities Pure Irish Linen for all church uses. Immediate delivery; prices unchanged.
Samples Free
MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
Box 325 Marblehead, Mass.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

ROBES
Pulpit, Choir and Confirmation Robes; Paraments. Fine materials; beautiful work; fair prices. Catalog, samples on request. Mention items needed.
DeMOULIN BROS. & CO.
1188 S. 4th St., Greenville, Ill.

Scriptural—Artistically designed
WORSHIP FOLDERS
Large assortment—Self Selection
Lithographed—Special Days—General use
Ecclesiastical Art Press
Dept. W Louisville 12, Ky.
FREE CATALOG

ALTAR LINENS
BY THE YARD
From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States. I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values and qualities imported from Ireland. Also ecclesiastical transfer patterns, beautiful household table damask and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.
MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

GOWNS

• Pulpit and Choir •
Headquarters for
RELIGIOUS SUPPLIES
Church Furniture · Stoles
Embroideries · Vestments
Hangings · Communion
Sets · Altar Brass Goods
CATALOG ON REQUEST
National CHURCH GOODS SUPPLY COMPANY
821-23 ARCH STREET, PHILADELPHIA 7, PA.

Make Christmas Christian
A church woman gave her rector a check as a thank offering for her friends. What her gift accomplished is related by Bishop Hines. Rectors will want to mail this leaflet to parishioners.
$1 for 25; $1.50 for 50; $2 for 100
THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

PEOPLE

ORDINATIONS:

WALTER C. RIGHTER, in charge of All Saints, Aliquippa, Pa., was ordained priest by Bishop Pardue on Oct. 6 at the Ascension, Pittsburgh, Pa. Also ordained priests were DONALD B. DUNCAN, in charge of St. Thomas, Barnesboro, and Trinity, Patton, Pa.; DONALD R. PRIESTLEY, in charge of the Good Shepherd, Pittsburgh, Pa.; HOBART E. DOUGHERTY, in charge of All Saints, Rosedale, Pa., formerly in charge of St. Mary's, Braddock, and St. Alban's, Pa.; JOHN F. SLEE, ass't at the Ascension, Pittsburgh, Pa. Ordained deacon, JAMES M. FRYE, in charge of the Transfiguration, Clairton, Pa.

DEATHS:

E. REGINALD WILLIAMS, 72, rector of St. Mark's, Milwaukee, from 1913 until his retirement in 1935, died suddenly in New York of a heart attack on October 18th.

EGERTON E. HALL, rector of the Church of the Crucifixion, New York City, died October 15. He was the author of a number of books and held honorary doctorates from several colleges.

CHARLES A. HOUSTON, 70, a prominent layman of the diocese of New York, died Oct. 16 at his home in White Plains, where he was for many years the warden of St. Bartholomew's. He was a member of the standing committee of the diocese and was a member of the executive committee of the Witness Advisory Board.

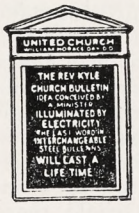
LAY WORKERS:

MARY ELIZABETH BELL, formerly director of education at the Advent, Brownsville, Texas, now holds the same position at the Good Shepherd, Corpus Christi, Texas.

CLERGY CHANGES:

WALDO HUNT, formerly rector of St. John's, Wayne, Mich., is now on the staff of All Saints, Pontiac, Mich. and in charge of the mission at Drayton Plains.

GEORGE W. BEALE, formerly rector of Trinity, Rocky Mount, Vt., is now rector of St. John's, Bedford, Va.



TURNER W. MORRIS, formerly rector of St. Mark's, Charleston, N. C., is now in charge of St. Paul's, Martinsville, Va.

I Want to Contact New WRITERS
who are interested in cashing checks of $1 to $100, offered every day. The easiest way to write for pay. No previous experience necessary. Send for FREE DETAILS. No obligation.
SAUNDERS M. CUMMINGS
468 Indep. Bldg., Colorado Springs, Colo.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS
EST. 1877

ST. JAMES LESSONS

A nine course series of instruction for Episcopal Church Schools including illustrated work books—150-250 pages (60c each) and teachers' manuals I, II, III 40c each, IV through IX 60c each).
No Samples - Payment with orders
St. James Lessons, Inc.
865 Madison Ave., Dpt. 5, N. Y. 21, N. Y.

CHURCH BULLETINS
Every progressive church should use Winters' De Luxe Bulletin Board. Dignified, effective, and economical. Over 7,000 IN USE. Increase attendance, interest and collections. Write today for Illus. Catalog H. E. Winters Specialty Company, Davenport, Iowa.

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS
Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS
Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.
SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

THE BISHOP WHITE
PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833
Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.
PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)
Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

HENRY E. HOWE
Layman of Hartford, Conn.

It seems to me that a Christian spirit is needed in the world today as never before. Nation seems set against nation, capitalist against socialist and communist. Propaganda floods the press and radio, teaching that there is no good in our opponents. Armed force is employed instead of peaceful persuasion. Is the spirit of Christ present in all this warmongering? Or love for one's fellowman?

It seems as though the Church has a great responsibility in fostering international goodwill. We know that big business, the Roman Catholic Church and the military are opposed to peace. But the Protestant Church, realizing the horrors of war and its dangerous possibilities in an atomic age, must stand firmly for world peace and goodwill. To do less is unworthy of its high mission.

D. R. McQUEEN
Student at General Seminary

For a long time I have been enjoying reading the Witness. For a brief time I subscribed to your magazine but, very frankly, did not find it as newsy as the Living Church. I am compelled to say that I now find the Witness to be a vastly superior magazine than to what it was two years ago. Keep up the good work, because the evangelical policy is desperately needed. I like Mr. Barrett's "Entwhistle Adventures."

MRS. F. C. WILDER
Churchwoman of Ipswich, Mass.

The Witness is very interesting to me. I buy it each Sunday at my parish church. I have found help in many articles, especially in those by Massey Shepherd.

A. F. GILMAN
Churchman of Chicago

When a Protestant Episcopalian says that the Apostolic succession is a great stumbling block to Church unity as Chad Walsh does in his article (Witness, Oct. 4) I am reminded of the man who said, "I thank God I am not as other men are." We forget that if the English bishops had not been selfish and worldly minded, the Church of Scotland (Presbyterian) would have had the same kind of Apostolic succession as the Episcopal Church has. The Methodists were denied it for the same reason. We're just lucky—that's all. This of course assumes that God takes great stock in the Apostolic succession. He didn't have to have it when he sought out Abraham and Moses.

FLOY F. WHITNEY
Churchwoman of Stamford, Conn.

Do you think that the satirical article describing the visit of a clergyman to a seminary (Mr. Entwhistle, Oct. 4) will tend to increase the contributions of Episcopalians to their seminaries or their respect for their clergy?

ANSWER: We have an idea that most laymen will agree that Mr. Entwhistle showed very good sense in going to a doubleheader between the Yankees and the Indians, rather than attending a lecture on "Existential Kerygma"—envious perhaps, but understanding. I could not attend that particular doubleheader, but I was on hand in the Yankee Stadium when the Yanks beat the Red Sox twice to wrap up the pennant, with Reynolds pitching a no-hitter and DiMaggio blasting a three-runner into the stands. An audience with the President of the U. S. would not have kept me away.—W. B. S.

MRS. A. N. WARNER
Churchwoman of Titusville, Pa.

My thanks to you and the Rev. Chad Walsh for his fine articles in your recent issues. It is gratifying to think of the splendid influence he must have in his life and work at Beloit College.

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL
Coeducational Episcopal Day School
Prepares for leading secondary schools. Sound academic training. Kindergarten thru 8th grade. French and Latin emphasized. Complete testing program. Est. 1894. Music, drama, arts & crafts, sports. Bus service. Hot lunch. Tel: AL 4-2000
E. ALLISON GRANT, Headmaster
88 E. Fourth Ave. (11th St.), N. Y. 3

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

FORK UNION
MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth New Hampshire

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE-MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

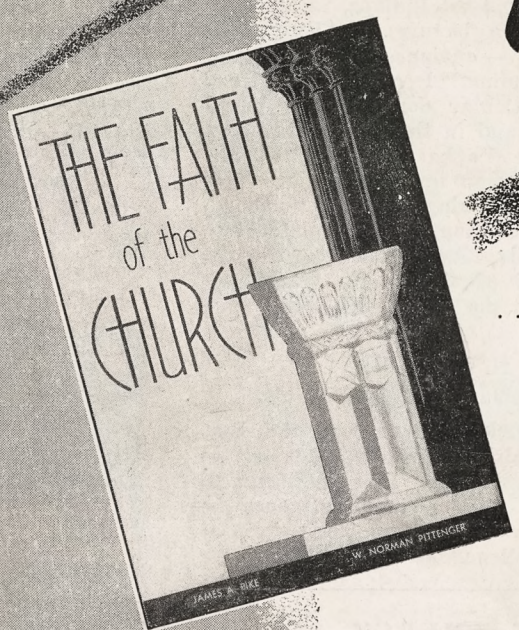
Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.



THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

ANNOUNCES THE PUBLICATION

OF THE THIRD BOOK IN THE CHURCH'S TEACHING SERIES . . .

$1.50

. . . one that every Christian should read—An appealing presentation of the faith of the Church by two of its scholars.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL
281 Fourth Ave., New York 10, N. Y.

Please send me ..... copies of
THE FAITH OF THE CHURCH

I enclose $.....

Name .....

Address .....

City ..... Zone.... State.....

The WITNESS

10¢ A COPY

November 8, 1951

CHRIST CHURCH, CAMBRIDGE

Dr. Grant Reviews the Biography of a Church

ARTICLE BY CHARLES E. RAVEN

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 7:30, 8 (and 9 Holy Days except Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 8:30, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers — 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. — 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital — 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m. Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a. m. Holy Communion.
9:30 and 11 a. m. Church School.
11 a. m. Morning Service and Sermon.
4 p. m. Evensong. Special Music.
Weekday: Holy Communion Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.; Wednesdays and Saints Days at 8 a. m.; Thursdays at 12:10 p. m. Organ Recitals, Fridays, 12:10.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer — 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon. Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D.,
Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 — 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m. Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacColl, 3rd, Rector
Rev. Peter Chase, Curate
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 37 The WITNESS NOVEMBER 8, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

No Agreement On Fundamentals Pastors Tell Iowa Court

Unique Equity Suit Brings Out Disagreements On Basic Doctrines of Christianity

★ Seven Iowa pastors testified in court at Waterloo that there is no real agreement among Christians on the fundamental principles of Christianity. They said that even the most eminent students of theology are at variance on the issue of "what is a Christian." The clergymen told district judge Shannon B. Charlton that this issue has been debated for centuries. The Churches of the world down through the years have disagreed on doctrines and interpretations of the Bible, they said.

Testimony of the seven ministers of various denominations brought to an end the hearing of an equity suit filed by heirs to the estate of the late Dr. W. B. Small, wealthy Waterloo physician and civic leader, and his wife, Florence (Witness, Oct. 25). The heirs, who are nieces and nephews of the couple, contested the will of Dr. Small under which he set up a trust fund of $75,000 to persons who believe in the fundamental principles of the Christian religion and in the Bible and who are endeavoring to promulgate the same. His will, drawn in June, 1936, named four trustees to supervise the distribution of the fund "to such persons and for such purposes as they may feel are directed by God the Father, Jesus Christ the Son, and the Holy Spirit and as they believe would be acceptable to me and meet my approval."

Dr. Small, who died in 1939 at the age of 77, did not specify whether the persons to share in his trust should be students for the ministry, pastors, missionaries or those devoting their lives to other forms of Christian service.

Two of the original trustees — the Rev. J. E. Johnson, a Methodist who became president of a Waterloo bank, and John S. Tuttle, an attorney and Baptist — have died. Directing the trust fund since the death of Mrs. Small in 1949 have been Carleton Sias, attorney and a Congregationalist, and R. W. Waite, banker and a Methodist. Their hands are tied at the moment pending a decision from Judge Charlton on the suit challenging their right to pass the funds to Christians of their selection. That ruling may be many weeks in coming. The court took the matter under advisement. Attorneys for the heirs and the trustees filed their written briefs and were to have another 15 days to file replies before the judge begins his deliberations.

Black Hawk County's main courtroom in Waterloo, Iowa, was filled with a hushed audience as witnesses for the heirs gave their versions of Christian principles, beliefs and differences.

Testifying were the Rev. Lewis L. Dunnington, pastor of First Methodist church, Iowa City; the Rev. Charles W. Philips, pastor of First Unitarian church, Des Moines; the Rev. W. D. Oetting, pastor of Immanuel Lutheran church, Waterloo; the Rev. G. E. Melchert, pastor of Trinity Lutheran church, Waterloo; the Rev. Robert L. Ryerse, pastor of Walnut Street Baptist church, Waterloo; the Rev. Robert Spahn, Catholic chaplain for students at Iowa State Teachers College, Cedar Falls, and the Rev. C. J. Gunnell, rector of Christ Episcopal church Waterloo.

Heard earlier as witnesses for the trustees were the Rev. Charles S. Hempstead, Cedar Falls, district superintendent of the Methodist Church; Dr. Russell D. Cole, Cornell College president; Dr. Miron A. Morrill of the Cornell faculty, and S. A. Cohagan, Waterloo, longtime friend of Dr. Small who told of the physician's activity in the Methodist Church and his many contributions to religious work.

Questioned by the heirs' attorneys, Horace Van Metre, an Episcopalian, and Robert Buckmaster, Mr. Gunnell declared that there is no common agreement on the fundamentals of the Christian religion.

Mr. Melchert said there are many differences in the beliefs of various Churches and peoples in them. He pointed to the variance on communion—regarded by some Churches as a sacrament but looked upon by others as a "memorial service."

Mr. Ryerse testified that Baptists do not accept the Catholic Douai version of the Bible. He contended that "modernism has permeated the majority of Churches today" while the number of Churches clinging to the older teachings has declined.

Father Spahn, who appeared at the hearing only because he had been subpeonaed to offer the Catholic opinion on the issue, said he had made a study of all religious teachings and had noted their many differences with one another and with the Roman Catholic faith.

Mr. Phillips told the court he was reared as a United Presbyterian, later served as an ordained minister of the Disciples of Christ and two years ago became pastor of the Unitarian church. He said there are differences of religious beliefs among the people of a single congregation as well as between the many Churches.

Mr. Dunnington said he felt there is no meeting of minds on the fundamentals of religion or the Bible. He added that there are "many things" in the Apostle's Creed that cannot be accepted by many Christians.

Attorney Van Metre told Judge Charlton before submitting the case for a ruling that "the trust (set up by Dr. Small) is utterly unenforceable." He said that to apply the terms of the will the court would have to "decree the fundamental principles of Christian religion and the Holy Bible." He then observed that cases decided by other courts have held that "it is not the province of the courts to inquire into religious beliefs."

CLINICAL TRAINING FOR SEMINARIANS

★ Stating that clinical training provides the seminary student with the opportunity to come face-to-face with life in its starkest form, Prof. Reuel Howe of Virginia Theological Seminary, addressing the national conference on clinical pastoral training, held in Boston said that such training confronts the student with the terrifying needs of the present human situation for which Christ has made provision.

Stating that, today, clinical training is a necessary complement to the ordinary seminary curriculum, Howe said that he would like seminary students in clinical training as early as possible so that "they might be confronted by themselves, other men and the great human problems, so that they will come to the seminary classroom humble and ready to learn."

Approximately one hundred persons active in the clinical training movement, including hospital and prison chaplains, seminary professors and students and psychiatrists and social workers, attended the two-day conference dealing with the over-all theme: moral responsibility in counseling and psychotherapy.

During the course of the conference papers on the theme were read by Prof. Stanley G. Estes, Harvard University; Prof. Joseph F. Fletcher, Episcopal Theological School; Prof. Thomas J. Bigham Jr., General Theological Seminary; Rev. Wm. Rickel, Rankian Institute for Psychoanalysis; Rev. Robert D. Morris, Episcopal Hospital, Philadelphia; Dr. Marian Putnam, Roxbury, Mass.; Dr. Andras Angyal, Boston; and the Rev. David E. Roberts, Union Theological Seminary.

On the first day of the conference, which was restricted to seminary personnel involved in the clinical training program, discussion centered around the problems arising in students as a result of the clinical training experience and the dynamic nature of the student - supervisor counseling relationship in the clinical training program.

CENTRAL NEW YORK HAS CANVASS MEETINGS

★ Bishop Peabody was the headliner at five meetings held last week at central points in preparation for the canvass. Also addressing each meeting was Deborah L. Vaill, consultant on education for the diocese.

CLERGY OF LEXINGTON go into a huddle: Clarke Bloomfield, rector of the Good Shepherd, William D. Smith, rector of Holy Trinity, Georgetown, James W. Kennedy, rector of Christ Church, E. Laurence Baster, chaplain at the University of Kentucky

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EPISCOPALIAN HEADS FINANCE COMMITTEE

★ Charles R. Hook, Episcopalian and chairman of the board of a steel company in Middletown, Ohio, is the chairman of a 100-member committee set up by the National Council of Churches to assume responsibility for its financial and business operations. When the committee met October 17 in New York, Roy G. Ross, associate secretary, told them that the Council has a budget of over $4,000,000 and employs more than 500 persons. He also reported that the Council engages in 60 types of church work, operating programs that affect more than 31,000,000 members. Other Episcopalians on the committee are H. W. Prentis of Lancaster, Pa., former president of the National Association of Manufacturers; Harper Sibley of Rochester, N. Y., former president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and Harvey Firestone Jr. of Akron Ohio.

LABOR-MANAGEMENT FORUMS

★ A unique project in labor-management understanding will be offered by the Presbyterians and Episcopalians of Trenton, N. J., beginning November 5 at the synod hall of Trinity Cathedral. The project will be a series of forums with four Monday evening meetings conducted in co-operation with the Rutgers institute of management and labor relations. The project, which is the second of its kind in New Jersey, is patterned after the very successful Church and labor management forum conducted by the northern New Jersey Episcopalian and Presbyterian Churches last spring.

The Trenton forum will begin at 8:00 p.m., Monday evening, November 5, with a discussion of "The historical background of labor-management relations." Richard H. Wood, director of the State University's institute, will be the speaker and discussion leader. Dean Frederic M. Adams of Trinity Cathedral will serve as moderator.

On November 12, Henry W. Johnson, president of the New Jersey manufacturers association will take the platform to describe "Management's contributions and responsibilities to sound labor management relations." The moderator for this meeting will be the Rev. William T. Hanzsche, pastor of the Prospect Street Presbyterian Church.

The third forum on November 18, will present labor's responsibilities for sound labor-management relations. Charles Serraino, regional director of the textile workers union of the CIO, will represent labor. Moderator on this occasion will be the Rev. Gerald R. Minchin, rector of St. James Church.

DEAN ADAMS

Following the historical background and presentations by both labor and management of their responsibilities in sound labor-management relations, the forum on November 26 will take up the Churches' contributions and responsibilities in the picture. Bishop Theodore R. Ludlow, suffragan of Newark, will present the subject. The Rev. Edward A. Morris, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, will serve as the moderator.

PIKE NAMED DEAN OF CATHEDRAL

★ Chaplain James A. Pike of Columbia University has been named Dean of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, by Bishop Donegan. The nomination was unanimously confirmed by the trustees on October 31st. The new dean will probably take office early next year.

SOUTH CAROLINA AUXILIARY

★ Bishop Bentley, vice-president of the National Council, was the headliner at the annual meeting of the Auxiliary of the diocese of South Carolina, which met at St. Michael's, Charleston, November 6-7. Mrs. E. G. Peoples of Oxford, N. C., president of the province, also spoke, as did Bishop Carruthers.

BOTH MITCHELLS VISIT FORMER PARISH

★ Bishop Walter Mitchell, retired of Arizona, and his brother, Bishop Bland Mitchell of Arkansas, returned to their native parish, Christ Church, Rolla, Mo., this week to take part in the week of celebration in connection with the dedication of a new church. The former preached on the 4th and the latter is to be the preacher this Sunday. The church is to be dedicated November 12th by Bishop Scarlett, with Bishop Lichtenberger preaching. The rector of the parish is the Rev. O. V. Jackson.

FAITH FESTIVAL IN CLEVELAND

★ Bishop Burroughs, coadjutor of Ohio, was the chairman of the Protestant Festival of Faith which attracted a throng of 8,000 in Cleveland's public hall. The service, at which Prof. Reinhold Niebuhr of Union Seminary was the speaker, opened with a procession of several hundred robed clergy, and two choirs of 300 voices each. Knights Templar, in full dress uniform, formed an honor guard.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

New York Clergymen Protest Vatican Appointment

★ A group of New York clergy, among them a large number of Episcopalians, signed a carefully drawn statement on October 30th protesting against the appointment of General Clark as ambassador to the Vatican.

The text of the statement follows:

"We welcome the announcement that President Truman will not dispatch the first American Ambassador to the Vatican until Congress has acted, but this does not dispose of the major issue. We believe that the President should immediately withdraw the nomination.

"At a time when national unity is of utmost importance the President has needlessly started a controversy, which, throughout the Congressional recess and when Congress again assembles, will bitterly divide our people and do immeasurable harm. He has forced millions of our citizens into a position where, motivated by no anti-Catholic prejudice and hating religious dissension, they must nevertheless, for conscience' sake, protest against what seems to them an intolerable negation of basic American principles.

"We who sign this statement have worked long and hard to achieve more fraternal relationships with our Roman Catholic fellow citizens; we oppose the appointment of an American ambassador to the Vatican from no intolerant and bigoted motive. We would equally oppose any similar preferential treatment of any other Church, including our own. We oppose the President's action because it singles out for preferential official recognition a particular Church; because the pretense is invalid that the Vatican State and the Church of Rome are so distinct that an ambassador to one is not an ambassador to the other; and because we cannot accept the plea that, since other nations have ambassadors to the Vatican, we should violate the basic American principles of equality of all religious faiths in the eyes of our government in order to have one too.

"We recognize the importance of Roman Catholic influence in the struggle against communism, and we understand the President's desire to secure co-operation between the Vatican and the free governments. But Protestantism also is prevailingly anti-Communist, and in the World Council of Churches is organized on a world-wide scale. Protestant co-operation with the free governments, in general, and with the United States, in particular, could also be legitimately sought. But suppose that in order to make such co-operation effective, the appointment of an American ambassador is necessary, is incredible. There are ample means, short of such violation of American principles, by which the co-operation of both Roman Catholic and Protestant leaders in the struggle against totalitarianism can be achieved.

"We are convinced, therefore, that the President's action is a needless and tragic blunder; that it will issue in deplorable dissension among our people; that, in the end, it would prove to be as practically imprudent and ill-advised as it certainly is false to the traditional principles of our republic; and that the mistake can be remedied only by a prompt and final withdrawal of the nomination of an American ambassador to the Vatican."

Episcopalians to sign the statement were Bishop Charles K. Gilbert, retired; Roelif Brooks, rector of St. Thomas; Arthur Kinsolving, rector of St. James; Louis W. Pitt, rector of Grace Church; Anson Phelps Stokes Jr., rector of St. Bartholomew's.

Among other leading churchmen to sign were Henry Sloane Coffin; John Sunderland Bonell; Phillips P. Elliott; Franklin C. Fry; Harry Emerson Fosdick; Douglas Horton; Robert McCracken; John A. Mackay; Norman Vincent Peale; Edgar F. Romig; Theodore F. Savage; Ralph W. Cockman; Joseph R. Sizoo; Henry P. Van Dusen.

FRIENDSHIP FOOD SHIPS LEAVE

★ Bishop Armstrong, suffragan of Pennsylvania, was among the religious leaders of Philadelphia to take part in a ceremony aboard a ship loaded with food for hungry and homeless people in Europe and Asia. Three ships sailed October 28 bound for the Near East, Europe and India with 18 carloads of grain, corn syrup, cerials and dried milk, contributed by the rural people of the United States. A Texas "friendship ship" will leave Houston next month with cotton, peanuts, wheat and rice for Japan and Korea, and another is scheduled to leave shortly from Chicago.

END OF SEGREGATION IS URGED

★ Southern Episcopalians have recommended that Negro seminarians be admitted to theological seminaries in the south. Delegates to the synod meeting in Birmingham, Ala., voted 66 to 25 to urge such action on the boards of trustees of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., and the Episcopal Seminary at Lexington, Ky.

The adopted resolution recommended that all Episcopal seminaries in the south accept "students of all races." Bishop Moody of Lexington, chairman of the synod's social relations committee, presented the resolution at the request of diocesan groups who cited the extreme shortage of Episcopal ministers for the Negro population. The resolution will be presented at the next meetings of the boards of trustees of the two schools.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

It said the department of social relations of the synod does not believe it either "desirable or advisable to establish a segregated seminary for theological education in our province" but does believe "we should open the existing seminaries in the south to students of all races."

ANNE GUTHRIE HEADS GIRLS FRIENDLY

★ Anne Guthrie has been named the national executive secretary of the Girls' Friendly Society. She has held similar positions with the YWCA and in recent years has been particularly interested in the UN. Since 1947 she has attended every General Assembly and is now in Paris to attend the Assembly there. She is to continue lecturing on the UN and other subjects which has made her a well known figure in colleges and lecture halls, combining this work with that of the society.

SYRACUSE TO HAVE NEW CHURCH

★ Bishop Malcolm Peabody broke ground on October 19th for a new church for St. Thomas' in North Syracuse. Assisting at the ceremony was Bishop Walter Higley, suffragan, and the Rev. Paul B. Miller. The congregation of about 250 persons has been holding services in a rented hall.

SEWANEE AUXILIARY HAS MEETING

★ The Woman's Auxiliary of the province of Sewanee held its meeting at the Advent, Birmingham, October 23rd and 24th with representation from all fifteen dioceses. The synod of the province was meeting concurrently and the two groups met together for the evening service on the 23rd and holy communion the following morning.

Business conducted by the Auxiliary included the acceptance of the budget of $1100 for 1952 and the passing of a number of resolutions. Also on the agenda was the election of Mrs. Walter Matherly, Florida, to be vice-president and chairman for the United Thank Offering and Mrs. John Morson, Mississippi, to be provincial representative on the national executive board, taking office following the Triennial of 1952. Nominations to serve on the provincial departments were Mrs. Robert Haden, Western North Carolina on the department of education and Mrs. Irwin Hyatt, Atlanta, on the department of college work.

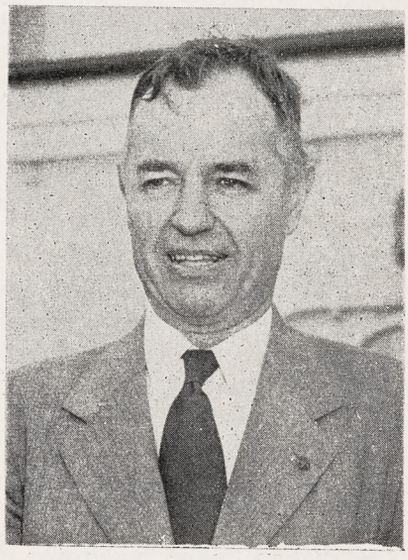
Speakers were Bishop Carpenter of Alabama; Bishop W. R. Moody of Lexington; Miss Edna Beardsley of the Auxiliary staff at National Headquarters; Mrs. Francis O. Clarkson, Charlotte, N. C.; Rev. James Kennedy of Lexington, and the Rev. Arnold Nash of Chapel Hill, N. C.

PARISH AT KENT CELEBRATES

★ St. Andrew's, Kent, Conn., celebrated the 125th anniversary of the building of the present church, September 23-30. Highlights were a musical service by the senior choir, a pageant of the history of the parish, a birthday party with Bishop Hatch as speaker, a dance and a closing service of rededication.

NASHVILLE MISSION TO BE PARISH

★ Christ Church, Nashville, Tenn., has voted to approve the petition of St. George's, a mission of the parish, for parish status. The chapel has been a marked success from the day it was opened. The petition will now go to the convention of the diocese which meets at Christ Church in January. A resolution for the transfer of certain properties to the new parish was also approved at the meeting.



ST. PAUL CHURCH DEDICATED

★ The dedication of the new $200,000 Messiah Church, St. Paul, Minn., took place on September 23rd, climaxing eight years of hard work on the part of the congregation. They started in 1943 with a building fund of $6.14. The Rev. Robert Wolterstorff is the rector, coming to the church in 1940 when it was a tiny mission.

The voices of not only the parish choir but members of the St. Paul civic opera chorus joined with Mary Downey's organ to sing her original requiem at a service on October 7th which was a part of a month of celebration.

EAU CLAIRE STUDIES CLERGY SALARIES

★ The clergy of the diocese of Eau Claire have asked the committee on the state of the Church to make a study of salaries and allowances, looking toward increases. They ask further that the report, which will be presented at the diocesan convention, make it clear that car allowances do not cover the cost of operation and replacement. The recommendation of the clergy is that minimum salaries for single clergy be raised from $2,100 to $2,400 and house and for married men from $2,400 to $3,000 and house. Parishes that are now paying above these minimums are asked to make proportionate increases.

CHARLES P. TAFT, Episcopalian of Cincinnati, declined appointment as ambassador to the Vatican last January and advised the President against such a diplomatic mission. White House confirms the Taft statement but without comment

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CHURCH LEADERS MEET IN ATLANTA

★ National Church leaders will meet November 27-29 at Atlanta, Ga., for three conferences: the southeastern inter-Church convocation and meetings of the general board and the headquarters committee of the National Council of Churches. Themes will be "the task of making this a nation under God" and "the challenge of the Churches working together" in the community, the nation and the world. The convocation will be held at St. Luke's, while the two related conferences will be held at All Saints.

At the opening service there will be addresses by Bishop Sherrill, president of the National Council, and by Bishop Arthur J. Moore, Methodist of the Atlanta area.

There will also be meetings for special groups in audio-visual aids, worship and the fine arts and church architecture.

Other special topics to be taken up by seminar groups include: religious liberty and the separation of Church and state; religious activity and freedom in the public schools; evangelism; the Churches' approach to children and young people; the Churches' relation to such problems as changing racial attitudes in the southeast, technical assistance projects overseas and relief and reconstruction abroad. A fellowship luncheon for the delegates will be held Wednesday at All Saints.

Sessions will also consider the problems of Christian cooperation in their local, state, national and world aspects. The convocation will conclude with a consecration service at St. Luke's.

BISHOP BAKER FAVORS CLARK APPOINTMENT

★ Bishop Baker, coadjutor of North Carolina, produced a man-bite-dog story last week. With literally thousands of protests on the Clark appointment being reported by Religious News Service, he stands alone among Protestants to favor it. "It seems to me that it is good for us to have a representative of our government in that important center of the world," he said. "If the presence of General Clark can ease the tensions between any elements in this troubled world, it will be good."

CANTERBURY CLUB IN MISSOURI

★ Under the leadership of Jack Pierson, law student in St. Louis and national secretary of the Canterbury Clubs, student organization, a diocesan association has been organized in Missouri. The advisors are the Rev. Harold Bassage, rector of Calvary, Columbia, a center of student work, and Prof. R. O. Sutherland of the Missouri School of Mines. Clubs at ten colleges are members of the association.

SYNOD URGES STUDY OF CROWDED DAREAS

★ The synod of the province of Washington approved a resolution offered by Mr. O. R. Singleton of Washington urging the next General Convention to set up a joint commission to study mission work in crowded industrial areas.

CANVASS MEETING IN BETHLEHEM

★ Bishop Hunter of Wyoming and the Rev. Rankin Barnes, secretary of the House of Deputies, were the headliners at a series of meetings held in the diocese of Bethlehem in connection with the every member canvass.

SHATTUCK SCHOOL SCHOLARSHIP

★ Some Minnesota boy of high school age who is an active member of a parish or mission of the Episcopal diocese of Minnesota will be awarded a full scholarship at Shattuck School, Faribault, Minnesota. The Rev. Bernard W. Hummel of Edina, president of the standing committee and chairman of the committee on Christian education, has announced that an anonymous donor had provided for this full scholarship to be awarded annually to a worthy boy of known financial need.

The applicant must be recommended to Shattuck School by the department of Christian education. Competitive examinations will be held. The scholarship will be awarded the first time when Shattuck begins its ninety-fifth year in September 1952.

PROMPT PROTEST OF BETHLEHEM

★ The bishop and executive council of the diocese of Bethlehem was prompt in protesting the appointment of General Mark Clark to be ambassador to the Vatican. A resolution was submitted by the social relations department, the Rev. Thomas B. Smythe, chairman, on October 22nd and promptly passed. The resolution calls upon President Truman to "withdraw the nomination in the interest of the unity of our country."

NEWARK AUXILIARY HAS MEETING

★ Mrs. Charles Griffith of Glen Ridge, N. J., was the speaker at the meeting of the Auxiliary of Newark, November 8th. She has just returned from a trip to India, Pakistan, Siam, Burma and Japan.

PERIODICAL CLUB TO MEET

★ The Rev. V. H. Strohsahl, a missionary recently returned from the Philippines, is to be the speaker at a meeting of the Church Periodical Club of New York on November 15th. The meeting is in the parish house of the Resurrection at 2:30.

MOTION PICTURE LIBRARY FOR MISSOURI

★ The diocese of Missouri is developing a library of documentary motion pictures for use in the religious education and missionary training programs in parishes and missions.

EDITORIALS

Clark Appointment

PROTESTANT America reacted immediately and unanimously to the appointment of an ambassador to the Vatican. Much has already been said in every newspaper across the land, but there were two aspects of President Truman's action that especially disturbed us.

One was the timing of the appointment at the very last minute just as Congress was adjourning. The legislators went home without confirming General Clark and without taking the necessary legal steps to permit an army officer to hold a diplomatic post. It now appears that the matter will remain open for months to come, thereby allowing the President and the Congress plenty of time to assess the situation from every political angle. The result will be considerable controversy and division in many quarters, and we can not but raise questions about Mr. Truman's motives for acting when and as he did. 1951 is a Presidential-election year, and it might serve his ends well to court the Roman Catholic vote and to embarrass the opposition by raising the issue of religious bigotry. Otherwise why was the appointment made at a moment when the required confirmation and legal exception in the case of General Clark must now wait for months? We have approved of many stands the President has taken, but this time it does not appear that he has taken anything like a stand.

We are also disturbed by the talk of sending an ambassador to the Vatican for the purpose of a united front against Communism. We can have nothing but abhorrence of any attempt to get us into a holy war, or to line up the Churches in support of the armaments race. Rome has long opposed Communism, but primarily as one totalitarianism against another. The clash in Europe has not always been one of freedom versus tyranny, but often between one kind of over-all control or the other. We do not want to see Communism spread, but we do not believe the solution is in a policy of containment alone. And it is most certainly not in a holy war or in lining up with reactionary groups. The solution is also in economic and educational measures. It is also in Senator McMahon's point four program of raising living standards all over the world. It is also in the realm of ideas and of bread, both of which America has the heritage and the capacity to provide. Needed only is the faith, faith in more than bombs!

★

"Quotes"

TAKE time to work—it is the price of success.
Take time to think—it is the source of power.
Take time to play—it is the secret of perpetual youth.
Take time to read—it is the foundation of wisdom.
Take time to be friendly—it is the road to happiness.
Take time to dream—it is hitching your wagon to a star.
Take time to love and be loved—it is the privilege of the gods.
Take time to look around—it is too short a day to be selfish.
Take time to laugh—it is the music of the soul.

Old English Prayer

★

Where Danger Lies

McCARTHYISM is the most dangerous force in American politics today. This must be the judgment of anyone who follows the news closely, and sees the poison of this name-calling technique spread across the land. The Wisconsin Senator, whose fitness for public office is now up before a Senate committee, has repeatedly branded as Communist every person and every policy not meeting with his approval. In a single recent week he might well have been charged with the American Legion's resolution demanding the removal of Secretary of State Acheson, and for the rejection of Philip Jessup as Ambassador-at-Large by the Republican members of the investigating Senate committee.

Those who have studied the evidence know full well that McCarthy has destroyed the American people's confidence in their State Department on charges that have never yet been substantiated. And yet he goes right on repeating them, and their very repetition has the disastrous effect of the big lie technique.

Again his statements about Dr. Jessup had no basis in fact. Two of the Republican Senators who voted against the Ambassador admitted that he "has not and never has had any connection with the Communist party." One of them went on to admit that what he called a lack of public confidence in Dr. Jessup might be mainly due "to the concerted campaign of unfair and unprincipled attacks made on him." We share his view.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

We can only call this method of confusing national issues and undermining the reputations of loyal citizens by shouting Communist at every turn as immoral and outrageous. And the sad part of it all is that so many, in their hatred of the administration in Washington and in their fear of Socialism, are willing to play along with this evil thing, even to use McCarthyism when it suits their purposes. We would remind all of our citizens that there are worse dangers in American life than Communism or Socialism, at least more immediate ones. Fascism is such a danger. McCarthyism uses its techniques and would ally us with its champions at home and abroad. Would that a voice might go up from every decent and righteous source, a voice of protest in the name of freedom and of truth! Meanwhile congratulations to President Truman for persisting in his appointment of Dr. Jessup on an interim basis.

Need of Creative Fellowship

BY
CHARLES E. RAVEN
Former Vice-Chancellor of Oxford University, England

AMONG all the great invasions westward from Asia into Europe, among all those epoch-making movements which sent the Aryan race from its origin in the highlands of the Himalayas over into our western world, there is none so striking as the invasion carried out by a Jewish evangelist and a Greek doctor when they set sail to go into Macedonia; science and religion carrying the good news of Jesus Christ to the people of Europe.

Paul, leader in that great enterprise, never reached, I think, so high and full a level of freedom and fulfillment as he did in the city of Corinth. The expedition, you remember, had started not too propitiously. At Philippi he had been scourged and imprisoned, and then had stood upon his dignity. "They have beaten us openly uncondemned, being Romans, and have cast us into prison; and now they cast us out secretly. Let them come themselves and fetch us out." That is not a good beginning for a Christian evangelist. And when he went on to Thessalonica he did what he afterwards described as huckstering Christ, preaching sensationalism and the coming of the Lord from heaven with the trumpet and the archangel of God; and the ultimate result was to produce waves of shallow enthusiasm and apocalyptic expectation which he had to write two letters to control and assuage. And then to Athens where he became the professor, talking learned theology as a don in a university to students. There are few things more pathetic than the thought of that flaming evangelist controlling himself within the conventions of a lecture room. And again they mocked.

So he came to Corinth, humiliated, and sure that he had only one thing to say: Christ, and Christ crucified. And, consequently, he won through to his own freedom, self-emptied of all except that in Christ was his life, and his message, and his power to serve. And so the great miracle happened, and under the very shadow of the Temple of Aphrodite Pandemos, the center of immorality in the whole of that very immoral period of human history, Paul so acted upon the folk who heard him that he could send to them I Corinthians: 13, to a people for whom every variant of decent love had been profaned and corrupted, "Love suffereth long." And in this second so-called letter of his, in this quiet, joyous thanksgiving, that after much tribulation, he and his Corinthians are now of one heart and mind, after telling them the wonderful news that if any man be in Christ, a new creative act has taken place, the old had passed away, behold, all things are become new; all things old and new are of God, God who has reconciled us unto himself in Christ Jesus and given unto us the ministry of reconciliation.

Note of Urgency

HAVING poured out his message to them, he strikes the note of immediacy and urgency which is the essential sequel of the gospel. For, indeed, the good news of Christ is the news of eternal life, that here and now, in all our fears and despairs and hatreds we can live eternally in the faith, and hope, and love which are the very opposite of such fear and despair and hate. For you and me, at this great crisis of human history,

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

(for you especially upon whom God lays responsibilities of leadership such as no nation has carried for many centuries) for us in these days that message of immediacy with its promise of fullness of life for the individual and creative fellowship for society should come, speaking to our condition. Fullness of life for the individual, creative fellowship for the society—that means an answer to the two major problems of our time, as they sometimes seem to me.

First, the problem in the change of the significance of time. We hear an immense amount about the shrinkage of space, not enough, I think, about the shrinkage of time. A year ago I was preaching in a little wooden church in New Zealand which my grandfather built a hundred years ago. My father went out with him—a child—and spent six months on the journey—a Canterbury pilgrim from England to New Zealand. I went to preach in that church in six days! There is the measure of the speeding up of time. You and I, God forgive us, have got somehow to energize these natures of ours, speed up the full tempo of our living lest we be too late, lest that dreary epitaph be written once more over the grave of a Christian generation. Sheer power for living is the first thing we need.

And the other great problem is the problem of leadership. When at my university we lately installed two great men as chancellors, at the installation of the first, the greatest of our living historians in England, George Trevelyan, speaking of great men, concluded his speech with the words, "But when we talk about great men there is one thing we must never forget, they do so much harm in the world." And when, this summer, General Smuts' successor was installed, he himself said the same thing in different words, saying, in effect, "Leadership is the prerogative and should be the goal of democracy. The leader, the fuhrer, is the last refuge of the mob."

Creative Fellowship

WE have got to discover the secret of creative fellowship if democracy is not to remain, as hitherto it has been, like one of Plato's ideas, eternal in the heavens but never adequately manifested here upon earth. We all know that unless we can discover the thing that was first manifested at Pentecost, a human society which transcends the sum total of the wisdom of the members who compose it, unless we can discover for democracy that secret, an integration which sets each member free from armoring himself against the others, a common ideal so that no one member wishes, as too often is the case nowadays, if he cannot impose his own will upon the rest of the committee, at least to prevent anyone else from doing his will, and make, consequently, a commitment to a highest common factor of a rather low grade which is all we get out of democracy too often these days. Unless we can unlock the secret of creative fellowship, there seems to me no hope as against the organized tyrannies of the totalitarians.

But along with those creative possibilities of the gospel, fullness of life and creative fellowship, along with those positive aids to full living, there is also, and for us as a preliminary, the indispensable, negative aid. We are, God forgive us, a generation weighted down with fear, and despair, and hatred. You have only to listen to the radio or to look at any newspaper columnist to see it. We live crushed; and, therefore, it is well to remember that Paul in writing to Corinth gave to his people the exact opposite, the exact antidote to that condition. Think out his message someday; think it out now if you will, and in terms of the two most familiar utterances in his epistles, the thirteenth verse of the thirteenth chapter of the first letter to Corinth, "Now abide faith, hope, love, these three," and the thirteenth verse of the thirteenth chapter of the second letter, the still more familiar words, "The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the fellowship of the community of the Holy Spirit," and see how that message, for the two verses belong together, how that message did make effective power for individual life and creative fellowship for society.

The gracious gift of the Lord Christ is that good gift which exalts and abases, which repeats for you and me the primal and eternal message of all religions which is adoration and penitence, the two being one, which sets a man free from his ambitions and his fears and thrills him with the eternal life of God. Jesus did that for the men and women who companied with him. He has done it all through the ages and is doing it now. Faith, that passionate loyalty which from its surrender to him, springs up into an incarnation of his very self, "I live yet not I, Christ lives in me." And the miracle of St. Paul's experience is that he saw how it changed radically the two basic human relationships, the relationship to God and the relationship to our fellows. He saw that the old ideas of God as sultan, Lord of hosts, God of battles, Judge of the earth, all that was out of date; that if Jesus was indeed the image of the invisible God, then God was himself as Jesus had proclaimed, our Father, and love was the primary quality of his being. Love, not omnipotence; love, not justice; love, not sovereignty.

And if that be true, it makes sense of this creation, all this mystery of suffering and sin which is surely meaningless unless God's creative work in the world is the bringing of free, responsible children to fullness of life; unless, in other words, he cannot treat us ever as if we were pawns or chessmen, but always as responsible agents who can only be won by the way of the cross. In other words, unless we see human beings as sons and daughters of God in chains, and that is not easy, knowing our own selves; that is not easy in view of the monstrous wickedness of which mankind is capable, but unless we can see human beings in that way, I do not think we can get rid of despair. I am very sure that if we are prepared to make the venture, and insist that this world is God's world, and that God is Father and Love, then we can hope, then we can appreciate St. Paul's words when he said that God makes all things to cooperate for good to them that love him, and can recover that fullness of life which is crushed by despair, hamstrung, imprisoned, stifled.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

And with the change in our attitude towards God comes the initiation of a new relationship towards one another. If human beings are what Christ reveals them as capable of becoming, and if we are indeed emptied of our pride, by the discovery of life in Christ, then there becomes possible that miracle which took place first at Pentecost when the multitude of them that believed found themselves to be of one heart and one soul. And when all the wasted energies which our separateness and self-consciousness, our ambitions and fears, squander upon controversies, all that power welded together into a unity, an integrated selfhood by the spirit of the living God becomes available. In partnership with others such as St. Paul foreshadowed in that community, the very Christ, with all his healing power, becomes again incarnate.

That is the message he gave to his Corinthian folk: fullness of life for themselves, creative society for one another; release from fear and despair and hate and ability to live in faith and hope and love. It is not for a stranger to say how far you and we and mankind are falling short in this great day or how far we are from even the beginnings of that way of living, but it is perfectly plain that if, in Christ Jesus, we accept the belief that God is love, then certain methods of dealing with other human beings become intolerable and impossible. You cannot treat human beings as you treat an ant's nest in your garden, as folk merely to be wiped out because they happen to stand in your way, if God is Father. And, similarly, we cannot be content with these campaigns of witch hunting and smearing of lies, if we are called as a Christian people into the fellowship of the Holy Spirit.

"Now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation. When ye see these things coming to pass—the terror and the great darkness—then lift up your head for it is then that your salvation draws nigh."

Segregation

How It Works

BY

ALGER L. ADAMS

Member of Witness Editorial Board

NUMERICALLY, the Episcopal Church has converted an infinitesimal part of that body of Negroes who are Christians. Against our 60,000-odd we must compare: 4,021,618 in the National Baptist Convention, Inc.; 868,735 African Methodist Episcopal Church; 489,244 African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church; and 382,000 Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, to say nothing of a vast majority belonging to so-called "free" churches. There are estimated to be approximately 6,500,000 black Christians in our nation.

But what is the status of that segregated church in being?

The bi-racial sub-committee of the department of Domestic Missions reports tell a dismal story. This committee was created in 1943 to further the Church's work among Negroes.

In the areas where he is most populous the Negro has been housed in inferior buildings. By the National Council spending only $200,000 (from reconstruction and advance fund) $858,420 value of property was rehabilitated from an almost unuseable state, although it had been used by Negroes in the South. Negro clergy, until recently were paid at a lower salary scale than white clergy in many sections, especially where the majority of Negroes live. As late as November 12, 1947, there were dual salary scales reported. Many Negro clergy held secular jobs to eke out a living.

Until the last ten years, the Negro was without voice or vote in the diocesan convention in those dioceses where he makes up from 30 to 60% of the general population. In South Carolina, at this writing, he is still barred from the diocesan convention.

The Negro churchman meets in segregated conferences whose subject matter is the same as any general conference, with no recognition of the need to struggle for equality admitted on the agenda. Such conferences are, for example among many, the provincial conference of Church Workers Among Colored People in the third province; the Houston, Texas, conference where six white clergy willingly submitted to the ignomy of segregation which Negroes have forced upon them; the national conference of Church Workers Among Negroes held at St. Augustine's College, Raleigh, N. C.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The bi-racial sub-committee was continuously concerned about "the low quality of the Negro clergy" serving these segregated congregations. Yet it was not until 1950 that the jim crow "Negro" seminary, Bishop Payne Divinity School, which formerly included reading and writing in its curriculum, was closed.

It was reported again and again, that white clergy, serving all-Negro congregations made for tiny, stultified groups, without realizing any of the missionary potential in the areas in which they existed. They reported tiny congregations in areas where the Negro population is as follows: Memphis, 130,000; Chattanooga and Knoxville, 20,000; New Orleans, 196,000 (where the Roman Catholic Church is making interracial parishes); Houston, 86,000; and the west coast where Negro Episcopalians are non-existent.

Frequently, these white priests are dedicated men. Others maintain their miserable little "chapels" as stoppers to Negro membership. In Fernandina, Florida, the white priest refused the courtesy of the Negro altar to a visiting Negro priest on a Sunday. These "chapels" exist so that any Negro who "strays" into a white congregation can be told where the "colored church" is.

It was noted that in New York, Philadelphia, Miami, and Chicago there are large flourishing congregations. These are based principally upon a West Indian recruited membership, trained in the Anglican Church outside of segregation. St. Philip's, New York, a historic parish, is the second largest congregation in the entire American Episcopal Church, indicating Negroes can be brought into the Church.

The work of the bi-racial sub-committee is noteworthy, itself, for three reasons. They reestablished the physical fabric of many churches Negroes use. They have developed their purpose from a narrowly limited working within jim crow to devoting one-third of their agenda to matters of race relations since 1943. Both secretaries have evaded the siren call to be established as suffragan bishops in charge of "colored work" nationally.

SUMMARY

The Church is inarticulate upon the condition of Negroes in the Church. A generalized National Council statement, one diocesan resolution, and the statements of four bishops being the extent to which the Church's position has been defined.

In practice, the Episcopal Church is strictly segregated. Where exceptions exist, they are numerically insignificant, although they indicate integration could work. Negro clergy have a limited, segregated, second-class ministry.

The segregated church is not good, materially, administratively or spiritually. Exceptions prove, however, the Negro could be a good Churchman if given an equal opportunity.

In answer to the question, "What about your Negroes?" Episcopalians must answer either, "We don't care!" or "We have failed."

Editor's Note: Next week Mr. Adams will deal with conclusions that may be drawn from this and previous articles.

Talking It Over

By W. B. SPOFFORD SR.

THERE are a number of very good reasons why President Truman should either withdraw the appointment of General Clark to be the ambassador to the Vatican, or the Senate refuse to confirm it. They have been stated in this paper in our news columns and in the editorial this week. But it is a perfectly logical appointment, solidly in line with U. S. foreign policy which has been almost universally endorsed by Church groups and leaders. The National Council of Churches approved making Japan a member of the new axis and it goes along with the program of rearming Germany in order that this late enemy may likewise hook up with the Washington-London-Tokyo-Berlin show.

Madrid also, which has ruthlessly persecuted Protestantism, was added without the slightest protest on the part of any official Church group, with the exception of the Quakers who alone among Church groups have a grasp of international events and do something about it.

So why the objections to adding the Vatican? Certainly it is in the forefront in the effort of reactionary forces to crush peoples movements all over the world and ought to make an effective ally of Washington, today's headquarters of the heirs of Hitler.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

It does not seem to me that the storm of protests come with much grace from Protestant leaders who have allowed John Foster Dulles largely to call the turn in recent years. I have not seen in any of the papers that this notable Protestant has protested the Clark appointment and I'll lay a plugged nickel on the line that he won't. Maybe he'll soon say he is for it and if he does many of the present protestors will say: "Maybe we ought to give the matter second thought."

A Social Gospel

BY

IRVING P. JOHNSON

Founder and First Editor of The Witness

THE word "social" and the word "society" have the same parentage; they are both derived from the Latin word socius, which means a companion. Yet the two words are just like two branches of the same family—the one branch seeking virtue and the other branch seeking prosperity.

They are like the two ladies who were said to have lived upon the same square, but not in the same circle with one another.

Christ preached a social gospel and by this is meant that he came to found a household of faith in which rich and poor meet together and acknowledge one Father; in which there is no respect of persons but master and servant meet at a common table and profess a common brotherhood; in which the learned are not arrogant and the ignorant are not bitter; in which the opulent are not vain and the poor are not envious; in which the cultivated are extremely courteous to the masses and the common-folk are gladly respectful to those in authority.

No one can read the gospel of Christ, or the words of St. Paul, or the history of the early Church without realizing that the strength of the gospel was the sincerity of the fellowship between all sorts of folks; just as it was in the trenches during the war.

But the "Social Gospel" has a brother which resembles him in many ways, but yet is most unlike him in other respects.

So much do the two look alike that many people cannot tell them apart and yet they are very different at heart.

An Unholy Fellow

THIS brother we may call the "Society Gospel." He too starts in the fellowship of Christ and seemingly carries out the will of the Master with equal earnestness, but he is really a rather unholy fellow.

He accepts the fellowship of the gospel with certain reservations.

Instead of saying, "Father, what wilt thou have me to do?" and then setting out to do it at any cost; the Society Gospel hedges and says, "Father, what wilt thou do for me?"

Instead of saying, "What can I do for the least of these my brethren in order that they who have never had much, may have something that I can give them?" the Society Gospel says, "What can I do for those who are beneath me without identifying myself too closely with them?"

Instead of saying "What can I give up in a worldly way that I may be an influence for good in spiritual things?" the Society Gospel says, "How can I do some spiritual work without affecting my social standing?"

I have watched the game for many years both from the standpoint of the poor missionary and from the seats of the mighty, and I have come to the conclusion that it is much earier to convert people to an option on the Kingdom of Heaven than it is to get them to invest in the fellowship of the humble. Not that this high mightiness manifests itself in the crude and rather stupid way that one sees depicted in the movies, but in a far more subtle and genteel way so that it can deceive even the very elect.

One doesn't find Christians with that haughty arrogance which is so offensive to God and man; but rather with a cultivated aloofness which charms you with its gracious manner, while it freezes you with its distant frigidity.

It is Christian in that it is willing to give light, but pagan in its inability to provide heat.

Its love is platonic and is far more interested in some theory of universal brotherhood than it is in the practice of a more localized humanity.

It believes thoroughly in a community chest as the least bothersome way of feeding Lazarus. It is not indifferent to Lazarus' sores but rather calloused as to his blood relationship.

When the Christian religion began, it sprang from the soil; not from palaces or academies. Its first protagonists were peasants; its early adherents were mostly poor people. There were not many rich, not many powerful in those early days.

Until Constantine gave it imperial sanction, it was singularly free from social climbers. Then the constituency rapidly changed and the Church became the home of academic learning and social culture.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Embellishments

THE humble drifted into sects where they ceased to be meek; or the meek endured a situation in which they were forced to be humble.

Certainly one does not wish to exclude learning and culture from the courts of the Lord's house, but one can pay too big a price for these embellishments, for there are more basic virtues which they must not replace but adorn.

There is nothing more delightful than men who are learned gentlemen and also humble Christians, but the Church has suffered from those who have felt that it was enough to be the one without concerning themselves much as to whether they were attempting to be the other.

One can never quite get away from those verses in the song of the Blessed Virgin, when she exultingly sings of the time when God shall exalt the humble and the meek and send the haughty empty away.

The words have to me a very real meaning and I rather fancy that Europe would be a joyous place today, if prelates and princes had spent more time on the significance of these words and less on the pomps and vanities of their respective official positions.

Arrogance in Christians of high estate has made envy, malice and all uncharitableness among the rank and file.

But we are not so much concerned with the pomp of popes as we are with the disposition of bishops, priests and deacons; and less with the pride of kings than with the self-conceit of wardens and vestrymen.

They just don't seem to learn how to become the friend of publicans and sinners as the Master was and would have us be; nor do they seem to take in the tremendous spiritual importance of the prayers of the poor.

The Common People

I KNOW that it is as difficult a task for the cultured and prosperous to be humanly considerate of the uncouth and improvident, as it is for the uncouth to learn manners and the improvident to learn thrift.

It is well for us to recollect that this is a world in which a shepherd boy became the great King of Israel, and a ploughboy the great poet of Scotland, and a rail-splitter the great President of our Republic, and a carpenter the King of Kings and Lord of Lords.

It would seem, not only un-Christian but also unintelligent, not to appreciate the latent value of the common people, and to realize that the world owes more to cots and cabins than it does to mansions and palaces.

"The Cotter's Saturday Night" is a truer exposition of the dignity of human life than is the "Soul of a Bishop" from one who never was a bishop and has somewhat of an indefinite soul. It is this one touch that is lacking both in our ministry and in our laity—we have permitted ourselves to be artificially removed from the tang of the moor which produces the delicate odor of violets and hether and are too prone to revel in the rather sickening odor of hot-house neurotics.

The Church of England lacked this saving graciousness toward the lowly when it forced the Wesleyans out of its communion and caused them to lose the one thing which the members of the Mother Church lacked, viz. — humility and meekness.

For humility is not identical with poverty nor is meekness lacking among the prosperous.

In fact, a cross section of human society would show that humility and meekness are not necessarily related to worldly prosperity or the lack of it.

The pity of it is that the Church has never seemed to appreciate these qualities in her own constituency.

Possibly it is the hardest lesson which Churchmen have to learn that the Church of the Nazarene does not fulfill its function by providing its members with a pleasant atmosphere of learning and culture.

Learning and culture are rather a by-product of Christian influence than its basic output. An arrogant bishop, a smug rector, a worldly vestryman are offensive to the ethics of Christ's gospel, however acceptable they may be to a little coterie of constituents who applaud them.

The Tests

THE test is not one, however, of external manners but of an internal attitude, a basic disposition. Perhaps the test which a Christian man ought constantly to apply to himself are these:

Do I really worship God or do I try to refashion him to suit my temporal condition?

Is my attitude toward the least of these my brethren that of the Christ or of the Pharisees?

Am I more impressed with my own sense of rectitude or my consciousness that I am an unprofitable servant?

Do I consciously act differently toward those whom I regard as my equals and those whom I regard as social outcasts?

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Am I satisfied to move in a little clique of attractive people or do I really want to know and help those who are unattractive?

In other words, am I a follower of Dives or of Christ? Is my concern more that of purple and fine linen, of sumptuous fare and congenial friends than of the sores of Lazarus, his loneliness and his unattractiveness?

As Vice-President Marshall very happily put it in analyzing our modern charity: "I am not opposed to scientific charity, but I do not favor the introduction of science to the exclusion of the personal and heart approach."

And so I might say that I am not opposed to a highly educated and cultivated Christian consciousness unless it fails to carry the human touch of Jesus Christ into the personal contact of Christians with publicans and sinners. Any other kind of Christian fellowship is Christianity with Christ left out.

Of course the reason why so few of us are of the kind whom the common people gladly hear is just because it is the hardest job that confronts us.

It is not easy deliberately to forsake that which is congenial in order that we may do that which Christ expects of us, for, after all, the Christian life is a difficult task for it consists essentially in doing that which we do not want to do and it is loving the person whom we do not like.

Unity Or Uniformity?

BY
FREDERICK W. BLATZ
Rector of St. Paul's, Westfield, N. J.

IT is often asked, when the so-called high and low parties in our Episcopal Church are mentioned, "Why can't we all be the same? How much less confusing it would be if we could all be alike." Yes, and it might be a little dull, too.

The crux of the matter is, will you have uniformity, or do you want unity? If you have uniformity, you will have everybody doing exactly the same thing, with great precision in detail and no allowance for variation. Nothing of what the engineers mean when they speak of "tolerance."

Well, if we are to have uniformity in the Church, we shall have to decide upon a standard and a norm. What shall it be, or whose shall it be? We shall also have to do something about the fact that human beings are each one unique, and the way to God is never exactly the same for one man as it is for another. Indeed, we shall have to figure out something about the many roads that lead to heaven. Can we block them all off, save one—the one we happen to like?

Uniformity, you see, finally becomes altogether absurd. When we ask for uniformity in the Church, we are really saying that our own way should become the standard for all, and all men should be as we are. For myself let me say, God forbid!

Now, unity in the Church is a totally different matter. In unity we can have diversity and still be one. We can be low churchmen or we can be high churchmen and still be Episcopalians, and still more be members of the body of Christ, which is the Church. This, in fact, is the great strength of our Episcopal Church, that we do understand the meaning of diversity in unity. We understand how people who think differently can still worship together, and in spite of their differences can be loyal to each other and to their fellowship as a whole.

We have this great gift in our Anglican heritage, and we should learn how to use it more and more, not for ourselves alone, but for the glory of God and the extension of his kingdom among men.

THE PRAYER BOOK
Its History and Purpose

By
IRVING PEAKE JOHNSON
Founder and First Editor of The Witness

Just the book to place in the hands of the inquiring lay person. Chapters are on Its Origin; Its Career; Its Purpose; Its Contents; the Holy Communion; Morning and Evening Prayer; The Sacramental Offices; and a final essay on using the Prayer Book.

25c a copy — 10 copies for $2

The WITNESS
Tunkhannock Pennsylvania

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Recent Books from the Scribner Religious List

BRYAN GREEN

The Practice of Evangelism

A practical book for the minister or layman by a world-famous evangelist. The author deals with conversion, how it happens, the place of the local church as a center, evangelistic preaching, the role of personal work, mass meetings, publicity and cooperation with other denominations in an evangelistic mission. Here is a book which shows how evangelism can serve the interests of Churches everywhere. $3.00

CARL H. KRAELING

John the Baptist

The first important American book to be written about this religious immortal in many years. John the Baptist's dynamic message is presented here with originality and imagination. $2.50

RUDOLF BULTMANN

Theology of the New Testament

Translated by Kendrick Grobel
One of the world's greatest Biblical authorities explains the central message of the New Testament from both an historical point of view and an accurate, up-to-date interpretation. $3.50

LEONARD HODGSON

The Doctrine of the Atonement

The author of The Doctrine of the Trinity makes another important contribution to contemporary religious thought. Creation, redemption, punishment and forgiveness are lucidly explained by this profound and creative theologian. $2.50

Also by Dr. HODGSON

Christian Faith and Practice

A book of tremendous interest to minister and layman alike — presenting Christianity as a creed to be believed and a life to be lived. $2.25

THEODORE PARKER FERRIS

Go Tell the People

"His lucid analysis of preaching, its purpose and power will be greatly appreciated by all who feel that more than ever the Church needs a powerful prophetic ministry." THE LIVING CHURCH $2.00

At your bookseller

· CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS ·

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CRITICS PRAISE DRAMA AT ST. JAMES

★ Christopher Fry's "A Sleep of Prisoners," the first professional play to be performed in an American church, received a generally warm reception from drama critics here. It is a play about good and evil and the courage of men who have the faith to explore the meaning of God. The production, which opened at St. James, New York, for a limited engagement, was named as the most distinguished play brought forth by the Festival of Britain.

One of Mr. Fry's verse dramas, the play concerns four prisoners of war who are confined together for one night in a church in a foreign country. They are exhausted from a long march and the strain of battle and captivity. The audience, who find themselves in the same setting as do the characters, share with them the sensation of captivity in a world of violence and the search for a solution. This was the playwright's intention. He said he chose a church setting for his play as a "newer experiment in dramatic illusion."

The church chancel serves as the stage where four rough bunks are placed. Most of the action occurs here, but the organ loft and aisles are also effectively used. There is no curtain, no intermission, nothing to break the illusion.

Occupying the four bunks are a hard-headed corporal, a quiet, elderly wise little country man, David King, man of action, and Peter Able, man of inaction. The play has no sooner begun than David is at Peter's throat, unable to tolerate the passive man's indifference to their immediate plight and to the state of the world in general. He is prevented from throttling Peter by the others, and the four settle down for the night. The rest of the play deals with their dreams and each man's interpretation of the emotional crisis which has taken place.

The atmosphere of the church, the youngest prisoner reading flippantly from the Bible left open on the lectern, and their own Sunday school memories result in each man's dreaming a story from the Old Testament. The fight and the preoccupation with war make each dream a story of violence — Cain and Abel, David and Absalom, Abraham and Isaac, and Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego in the fiery furnace. Throughout the dreams, the recent words, actions and experiences of the four prisoners blend subtly with the Bible stories.

The last dream, which is Nebuchadnezzar's furnace, is shared by the three younger men who see the little old man as a fourth figure in the flames with them. He explains to the others that their survival, and their significance, lies in patience, love, and honesty. The younger soldiers realize that it was by the power of the old man's love and trust in goodness that they were still able to live in the furnace, although it was "heated seven times hotter than it was wont to be heated."

CONFERENCE ON THE MINISTRY

★ The annual conference for young men interested in the ministry will be held at Bexley Hall, Gambier, Ohio, November 9-11. Bishop Hobson of Southern Ohio and Bishop Burroughs of Ohio will be among the leaders.

Priest of Prayer Book Churchmanship as Associate Rector. Prefer married man under 45. Adequate salary, excellent housing. Write in confidence. Box A, Witness, Tunkhannock, Pa.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

WRITTEN FOR THE LAITY!

By men thoroughly qualified to do it. "The most impressive fact is that the CHURCH HISTORICAL SOCIETY and the HISTORICAL MAGAZINE have solved the problems of presenting any and all aspects of the life of the Church at any time in any area."—DR. FRANK J. KLINGBERG, Professor Emeritus, University of California, Los Angeles.

The

Genius and Mission of the Episcopal Church

By

JOHN SEDBERRY MARSHALL, Ph.D.

Professor of Philosophy,
The University of the South

AMONG our several notable brochures, this is one of the greatest. In this world of warring ideologies, that for which the Episcopal Church stands is set forth in lucid language which any intelligent layman or laywoman can readily understand. Our own enthusiasm for this number has mounted with all the stages of its publication. It is attractively printed, and worthy of its predecessors in our list of publications.

Publication No. 31
The copy, 25c; 5 copies, $1

How We Got Our Prayer Book

By EDWARD HENRY ECKEL, S.T.D.

Rector of Trinity Parish, Tulsa, Oklahoma

THIS STORY was specially written by the Rector of one of our great parishes in the Southwest for his own people, and it is one the laity throughout the Church will welcome. Dr. Eckel, who was a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University, has that rare combination of intellectual equipment and the gift of writing effectively for the laity. This brochure is one of the handsomest we have ever published, and it is worthy of the greatness and dignity of the Prayer Book. It is printed in two colors and illustrated.

Publication No. 30
The copy, 25c; 5 copies, $1

Who Wrote the New Prayers in the New Prayer Book?

By JAMES ARTHUR MULLER, Ph.D.

Late Professor of Church History in the Episcopal Theological School

THIS publication has proved so popular that we have ordered another printing. It was Professor Muller's last contribution to scholarship, and the most widely appreciated by the Church. It makes your Prayer Book live, because it tells the story that lies back of most of the 100 new prayers added to the American Prayer Book of 1928.

"For years he patiently collected all the available information in regard to the authorship of the prayers added in 1928 . . . He has done much more than trace authorship; in many a case he gives the story that lies behind the prayer in question . . . There are only eleven whose authorship he was unable to identify . . ."—Dr. JOHN WALLACE SUTER in The Anglican Theological Review.

Publication No. 20
The Copy, 50c

Cross on the Range--

Missionary in Wyoming

By SAMUEL E. WEST, D.D.

Rector, St. James' Church, Wichita, Kansas

DR. WEST was a "Wyoming missionary" for thirteen years—from 1912 to 1925. He ministered to "all sorts and conditions of men," in an era of transition from horseback to automobile.

"Thank you ever so much for taking the trouble to write it. We should have more of this sort of thing in the American Church. As a matter of fact, our Church life is really rich in missionary experience and life, but all too little of it finds any permanent book form. You have made a real contribution to the missionary annals of this Northwest."—Dr. STEPHEN E. KEELER, Bishop of Minnesota.

Publication No. 21
The Copy, $1

Address correspondence and orders to

The Church Historical Society

4205 SPRUCE STREET PHILADELPHIA 4, PA.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CONFERENCE ON DRAMA

★ Representatives from the National Council's departments of youth, college work, Christian education and town and country, together with delegates from the Woman's Auxiliary and department of audio-visual aids, met in New York to discuss ways and means of coordinating the current work being done nationally in religious drama, and to consider plans for expanding the use of good religious drama in the total work of the Church. At the meeting, Miss Sallie Bird Vandervert, student at Windham House, reported on the work that the Church of England is doing in this field, as she learned of it on a religious drama workshop tour of England this past summer. As a result of the conference, the group voted that the staff of the national town-country Church Institute, Roanridge, Mo., consider the establishment of a drama work-camp next summer, to explore the correct use of dramatic techniques in the town and country field. It is expected that such a work-camp would be one of the regular collegiate work-camps currently being sponsored by the department of college work.

LIBRARY FOR CHILDREN AUXILIARY PROJECT

★ A chapter of the Auxiliary at Christ Church, Pensacola, Fla., that is composed of young business women is collecting books for children and is operating a circulating library for the homes for children in the city.

AUDIO-VISUAL AIDS SOCIETY

★ Students of the Church Divinity School of the Pacific, Berkeley, Calif., have organized the seminary society for audio-visual aids. Students of the Pacific School of Religion and the Baptist Divinity School were invited to attend the initial meeting. The aims include training students in audio-visual techniques, establishing critical standards for examining existing techniques and producing materials useful in the field. They plan monthly screenings of religious films and a seminar. One of the founders is Mal Boyd, former TV-radio partner of Mary Pickford.

SEVENTH PROVINCE HAS SYNOD

★ The synod of the seventh province met at St. Mark's, San Antonio, Texas, October 23-25 with Bishop Bentley, vice-president of the National Council, the headliner. There were forums on architecture, music, finance and education. Deputies to the synod met with the delegates to the Auxiliary meeting to hear reports by officers of the National Council, with the Rev. C. Greshman Marmion, rector of Incarnation, Dallas, presiding.

THE CHURCH PENSION FUND

and its subsidiaries

administered for the benefit of the Church

THE CHURCH HYMNAL CORPORATION

Publishers of The Hymnal; Hymnal 1940 Companion; Book of Common Prayer; A Prayer Book for Soldiers and Sailors; Prayer Book Studies; Book of Offices; Stowe's Clerical Directory.

CHURCH LIFE INSURANCE CORPORATION

Offers low cost insurance and annuity contracts to clergy, lay officials and active lay workers of the Church, either voluntary or paid, and their immediate families. Services include individual insurance programming and assistance to parish officials in preparing and establishing plans for retirement of lay employees.

THE CHURCH FIRE INSURANCE CORPORATION

Low cost fire, windstorm and extended coverage insurance on property owned by or closely affiliated with the Church, and on the residences and personal property of the clergy.

Further information available by addressing any of the above at

20 EXCHANGE PLACE NEW YORK 5, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT, Book Editor

The Biography of a Church. A Brief History of Christ Church, Cambridge, Massachusetts. By Gardiner M. Day. Privately printed.

Most parish histories are rather dull reading except to those who are already familiar with the scenes and events described. They usually have long lists of rectors, wardens and vestrymen and various dates, recording their terms of service. And all this is certainly fine and as it should be. The Church is the oldest institution in the western world and its annals are certainly worth preserving. But here is a parish history that is different, full of exciting adventure and thrilling suspense.

The first Christ Church in Cambridge, Mass., was built in 1759 in the neighborhood of Harvard College and on the very edge of the intellectual center of New England Puritanism. The rector, the Reverend Mr. Apthorp, was described as "a very amiable young man of shining parts, great learning, and pure and engaging manners." He built the church, with the help of funds from the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. It often happens in building churches that the cost exceeds the estimate. Although it had been voted that the cost was not to exceed £500, it actually cost £1300. Incidentally, since the S. P. G. is celebrating its 250th anniversary this year, it is interesting to know that not only the church in Cambridge but a number of others were assisted by the society. Moreover, a fact that is not commonly known, when Harvard's college library was burned in 1764 the S. P. G. sent £100 worth of books to replace it.

When Mr. Apthorp was accused of unfairly invading Puritan territory and also of personal ambition, he left Cambridge and, returning to England, devoted himself largely to classical and historical studies. Among other things he wrote a book replying to Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire.

The next incumbent was an imposter who had come upon the ordination certificate of a deceased clergyman and had erased the clergyman's name and inserted his own. He claimed to have been educated at Oxford, but now and then he mentioned Cambridge. Unfortunately, he was famous as a liar and thief and there was not a house in the parish that had not contributed to his collection of household silver. This little incident throws light on the difficulties of remote control as it existed in the 18th century, and is one more illustration of the bad policy followed by the Church of England in refusing to send bishops to the colonies.

After this sad incident the S. P. G. was much more careful and the next rector arrived in 1767. Under his ministry the parish continued to grow and everything was tranquil and happy. The new rector, Winwood Serjeant, was a man of peace, not interested in polemics but devoted to shepherding his little flock of fifteen or twenty families.

The most critical time was during and after the Revolution. The rector and congregation of Christ Church fled in the summer of 1774, and the church had no regular services for 16 years, excepting a service for General and Mrs. Washington in 1775 and a funeral service in 1778. Troops were quartered in the church and, during the unfortunate funeral of a British lieutenant, the townspeople completely wrecked the interior of the church, destroying the pulpit, reading desk and communion-table and the bellows and pipes of the organ, and everything else they could lay their hands on.

The author pays a great tribute to the lay readers who kept the church going during its first 84 years, even when there was no rector. After the Revolution, the church was still suspected of Tory sympathies and was disliked because its liturgy was essentially the same as that of the Church of England.

A new era began, however, in 1839 when Nicholas Hoppin arrived. This young clergyman was a graduate of Brown University and the General Theological Seminary and he remained at Christ Church for 35 years. He was a man of high Christian character, says Mr. Day, and "a superb pastor in his devotion to the church and in his faithful ministry to his flock. He was a quiet scholarly type of man, well versed in theology, who had achieved particular competence as a student of early Church doctrine and practice." (p. 50).

The remaining incidents and events, down to the present day, are somewhat less spectacular than those of the Colonial period, but the story is an interesting one of steady growth and widening service throughout the whole Church, as well as in the parish and community of Cambridge—and not least among the students of Harvard University. Christ Church, Cambridge, is one of the great parishes of the Episcopal Church and Day's interesting history is a worthy account of its origin, growth, and expansion down to the present. The volume is handsomely illustrated and there are interesting appendices containing documentary material.

—F. C. G.

RELIGIOUS CHRISTMAS CARDS

Christmas Card Boxes, $1.00 each

I The Story of Christmas in Text and Picture 16 cards

II 20 Hummel Christmas Cards

Christmas Card Packets, $1.00 each

4X Four 25c Cards

10X Ten 10c Cards

20Xa Twenty 5c Cards

20Xb Twenty 5c Single Mowbray Cards

Anglo-Franciscan Pocket Kalendar

Feasts and Fasts for 1952

15c each – 8 for $1.00

THE GRACE DIEU PRESS

Maryhill Mount Sinai, L. I., N. Y.

WOODWORK

Altars, screens, paneling and other furnishings, fashioned by Rambusch craftsmen, add to the beauty and dignity of these churches:

St. Bartholomew's Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.

St. James' Church, Hyde Park, N. Y.

St. John's Church, Sharon, Pa.

Trinity Church, Hewlett, N. Y.

Trinity Church, Paterson, N. J.

RAMBUSCH 40 W. 13th St. New York, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Church Furniture
FOR EVERY NEED AND BUDGET
Pulpit and communion sets, fonts and lecterns available for early delivery. Chancel furniture, carvings, Bodiform Pews, folding chairs, tables and Sunday School furniture also available.
Write Department 133
AMERICAN SEATING COMPANY
901 Broadway N.W., Grand Rapids 2, Mich.

CASSOCKS
Surplices — Choir Vestments
Eucharistic Vestments
Altar Hangings and Linens
Prices Sent on Request
J. M. HALL, INC.
14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.
Tel. CH 4-3306

VESTMENTS
Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves
Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries
Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars
Custom Tailoring for Clergymen
1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951
COX SONS & VINING, Inc.
131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

ALTAR GUILDS
Full range of finest qualities Pure Irish Linen for all church uses. Immediate delivery; prices unchanged.
Samples Free
MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
Box 325 Marblehead, Mass.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

ALTAR LINENS
BY THE YARD
From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States. I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values and qualities imported from Ireland. Also ecclesiastical transfer patterns, beautiful household table damask and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.
MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

Make Christmas Christian
A church woman gave her rector a check as a thank offering for her friends. What her gift accomplished is related by Bishop Hines. Rectors will want to mail this leaflet to parishioners.
$1 for 25; $1.50 for 50; $2 for 100
THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

PEOPLE

CLERGY CHANGES:

JOHN Q. CRUMBLY, formerly rector of St. Alban's, Kingstree, S. C., is now the rector of the Redeemer, Avon Park, Fla.

JOHN N. BROCKMANN, formerly rector of St. Paul's, Elko, Nev., is now rector of Trinity Pro-Cathedral, Sacramento, Cal.

STEWART C. HARBINSON has retired as rector of Emmanuel, Wakefield, Mass., and is to return to England.

B. LINFORD EYRICK, formerly rector at Martha's Vineyard, Mass., is now rector of St. Mark's, Hoosick Falls, N. Y.

JOHN THORP, formerly curate at St. Peter's, Albany, N. Y., is now rector of Emmanuel, Wakefield, Mass.

ROBERT O. CLEMENT, recently ordained deacon by Bishop Hall, is now vicar of St. Mary's, Penacook, N. H.

GORDON C. GRAHAM, formerly social service sec'y of the diocese of Long Island and editor of the diocesan paper, was instituted rector of St. Andrew's, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Oct. 28. He is a member of the Witness editorial board.

ARTHUR J. TORREY is now locum tenens of St. Mary's, Staten Island, N. Y.

GREGORY A. E. ROWLEY, formerly locum tenens of the Advent, Jeanette, Pa., is now in charge of St. Matthias, Grafton, W. Va. and St. Paul's, Philippi.

JOHN T. DeFOREST JR., formerly in charge of the Messiah, Pulaski, Tenn., and St. Mary's, Fayetteville, is now ass't rector of St. Mark's, San Antonio, Texas.

JOHN R. JONES has resigned as rector of St. Alban's, Danielson, and Trinity, Brooklyn, Conn.

LEIGHTON P. ARSNAULT, formerly rector of St. Paul's, Greensboro, Ala.. is now rector of Christ Church, Bowling Green, Ky.

STEPHEN SKARDON, formerly rector of Trinity, Pinopolis, S. C., is now rector of Mt. Olivet, Pineville, La.

DEATHS:

ELLEN T. HICKS, 85, missionary in the Philippines and Puerto Rico for over 31 years, died in Sarasota, Fla., October 21.

Everyone's Talking About This Wonderful, Easy Way To Learn Music!
Send for FREE BOOK telling how quickly and easily you can learn YOUR favorite instrument—even if you don't know a note of music now! You play delightful pieces from very first lesson. Properly— by note. Make amazing progress at home, in spare time, without teacher. Only few cents per lesson. 850,000 STUDENTS!
FREE BOOK and Lesson-Sample Just send name and address. No obligation; no salesman will call.
U. S. SCHOOL of MUSIC
Studio A5411 Port Washington, N. Y.

THE Safety COOKING SPOON
MADE OF STAINLESS STEEL HANDLE WILL NOT GET HOT
U. S. AND CANADIAN PATENTS
See that hook
No laying the spoon down to muss up the stove.
No letting the spoon slip into the pot.
Made in an 8 and 10 inch length with a brilliant polish. The set of 2 sent p. p. if not carried by your local dealer.
Set in gift box. $1.50.
AN IDEAL GIFT FOR ANY BRIDE OR HOUSEWIFE.
A Fast Seller. — Sales people Wanted Everywhere.
FROHOCK-STEWART CO. 49 Harris Ct., Worcester, Mass.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE·BRASS·SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS
EST. 1877

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS
Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS
Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.
SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

THE BISHOP WHITE PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833
Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.
PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)
Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

DON FRANK FENN
Rector of St. Michael and All Angels, Baltimore

I appreciate very deeply the editorial (Witness, Oct. 25) on the proposed mailing piece of the national department of promotion. I am very glad to say that this is not being used in the diocese of Maryland and certainly not in my parish. I think the approach was very badly taken and I certainly believe that the Christian Church cannot become enmeshed with the current war movement. If we are to be the instrument of our dear Lord for the salvation of the world we have to learn to differentiate between sin and sinners. We may and should hate Communism as it is presently seen, but if we are true to the Christian religion we may not hate the Communists, Chinese, or Russians, or any other kind. They are God's children, to be saved if possible with the glorious good news of the gospel. That some of the Christian Churches fail to see this is due in some measure to the present awful state of the world. I also seem to remember certain basic principles laid down by our Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God, such as "love thine enemies," "bless them that curse you," "do good unto them that despitefully use you and persecute you."

I would not be misunderstood. I believe that probably the present action of the United Nations in Korea is essential for the future well-being of the world, under the present corrupt conditions of humanity. I also believe that unless the United Nations can be strengthened into a world government limited by law to the areas of peace, the present corrupt conditions will increase until the world degenerates to such an extent that the last war will indeed be fought. The Church, however, must not become entangled with these material and earthly movements of war and hatred, but must forever honestly and earnestly point out the sins that lead to conditions which we deplore. It seems to me that the department of promotion would do well if it were more deeply concerned about the basic faith of the Church, which makes the mission of the Church absolutely necessary, rather than to look for catch phrases, which makes it seem as though the Church had no mission whatsoever.

HARRY RUSSELL
Churchman of Louisville, Ky.

I shall look forward with a great deal of interest to the remaining articles by the Rev. Alger L. Adams. He made an excellent start in the issue of October 25. We in this part of the country, at least some of us, have been working on this problem over the years, but I must say with meager results. Certainly the Church should be in the forefront of the battle against discrimination and segregation but the fact is that we lag far behind. Your magazine takes a lead on many vital issues and I for one admire you for your courage.

ELIOT WHITE
Clergyman of New York City

Please accept warm thanks for your editorial, Crusade for War (Witness, Oct. 25). This is heartening, timely and refreshingly uncompromising. I have just written to the National Council stating that I entirely agree with and endorse your critique of that all-but-incredible brochure condoning the "frightful cruelties and murderous invasion of Korea," the quotes cover only my own words in my letter to them, and I added that I wish, as a clergyman of this Church since 1895, to disassociate myself from any share in the sentiments of the publication.

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

The Prayer Book
Its History & Purpose
BY
IRVING P. JOHNSON
Late Witness Editor
25c for single copy
$2 for ten copies
The WITNESS
Tunkhannock, Pa.

FORK UNION
MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth New Hampshire

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE-MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CHRIST WORKS THROUGH YOU pledge!

EVERY MEMBER CANVASS

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL • Protestant Episcopal Church • 281 Fourth Avenue • New York 10, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The WITNESS

10¢ A COPY

November 15, 1951

ROSCOE THORNTON FOUST
Rector of the Ascension and Witness Editor

WRITES ON SITUATION IN GERMANY

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 7:30, 8 (and 9 Holy Days except Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 8:30, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers — 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. — 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital — 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m. Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a. m. Holy Communion.
9:30 and 11 a. m. Church School.
11 a. m. Morning Service and Sermon.
4 p. m. Evensong. Special Music.
Weekday: Holy Communion Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.; Wednesdays and Saints Days at 8 a. m.; Thursdays at 12:10 p. m. Organ Recitals, Fridays, 12:10.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer — 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon.
Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D.,
Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 — 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m.
Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacColl, 3rd, Rector
Rev. Peter Chase, Curate
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 38 The WITNESS NOVEMBER 15, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Church Woman Tells of Retreat At House of Redeemer

Three Days of Seeking Solitude With God Opened Doors Which Had Been Closed

★ The very word retreat, to the average churchwoman, suggests something other-worldly. It speaks of cloistered nuns, or monks, who have retreated from the workaday burdens of this world into a spiritual realm which is not for those of us with ordinary obligations. Too often we confuse "retreat" with "running-away-from."

To think in terms of making a retreat is almost to think in terms of something vaguely occult for the average middle-of-the-aisle Episcopalian. If we are aware of a yearning to drop our burdens momentarily in retreat we are careful not to speak of it among our Church friends. They might think we were "going off the deep end." After all, we are members of our Church in good standing. What more can there be?

I lived through all these conflicting thoughts during the past year while the inner urge to make a retreat kept growing, whether I willed it or not. The yearning would not be stilled. I made inquiries through the Order of The Holy Cross at Mt. Calvary, Santa Barbara, California, since I happened to be near there at the time. A kindly response was received—"For men only."

It was an article in a New York newspaper which gave me my first inkling that spiritual inspiration such as a retreat offers was available for churchwomen, as well as for laymen, at the House of the Redeemer, 7 East 95th Street, New York City. When I wrote for information, requesting that I be registered for a week-end retreat in Lent, I was amazed to discover that no reservations were available until the middle of May!

The retreat center was opened in November, 1949, and almost immediately was flooded with requests for entry. It would seem that Lecompte Pierre du Nouy, the great scientist, had true vision when he wrote in "Human Destiny" that the human race had about completed its biological development, and henceforth would embark upon the spiritual quest in earnest. Certainly the House of the Redeemer can testify to the fact that men and women of all ages are s e e k i n g something more than they can get by faithful attendance at church services.

When finally accepted for a retreat the next big problem confronted me. How does one prepare for a retreat? What are its mysteries? I knew of no one in our parish who had ever made a retreat. I mentioned to our clergyman that I was going to make a retreat. He congratulated me. Thought it would be "spiritually refreshing." T h a t was the extent of my preparation. I felt a little embarrassed at having mentioned it, and wondered if he thought me one of the "deep-enders." No instructions were received from the House of the Redeemer so I had to go there "cold," as it were.

But I did not come away cold!

The House of the Redeemer, a recent gift to the Episcopal Church, is an old New York mansion built in the days when palatial homes were de riguer for people of great wealth and fashion. Its walls have witnessed notables of America and Europe at the gay peak of fashionable parties. Now they echo to the soft chanting of a handful of Sisters of Saint Mary in their daily devotions. They hear the whispered prayers of retreatants, and would, if they could, lift their eyebrows in astonishment at the silence which envelops all during a retreat.

Retreatants go directly to their single rooms upon arrival, meeting only at meals, in the library, and in the lovely little chapel. We numbered eighteen (capacity), from college age to the seventies, from the young girl with torn shoes and runs in her hose, to the well tailored woman who wore her diamonds with restraint. There is no set fee. Each contributes according to their means.

Silence is the rule. At first complete silence seems embarrassing. Small talk occupies so much of our worldly lives. There is almost a compulsion to speak in the halls, at meals, or in the elevator. That compulsion quickly passes and in its place one feels oneself at peace with one's vis a vis, without words. They, too, are struggling for a deeper spiritual awareness. There is a sense of mutuality seldom experienced in the outer world.

Typed instructions for the retreat are in each room. We learn that "a retreat demands . . . a sense of the worthlessness of earthly things, with a desire to turn to God, or some light or impulse from God which leads or a sense of sin moving the soul with a longing for penitence; in fact, some drawing of the soul by God towards solitude, where it may find him."

"A retreat is this solitude."

"Each retreat ought to raise the soul to a higher level."

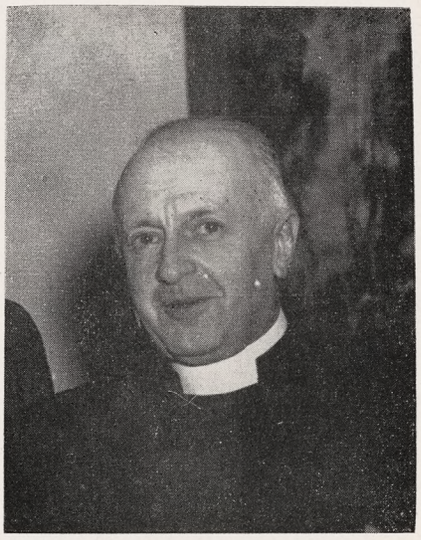
It was this aspiration, "raising the soul to a higher level," which occupied each retreatant, and their director. In prayer, and in meditation, each retreatant feels through their common mutuality, a sense of growth of the spirit. Outside New York swirls and clamors, its night lights blot out the stars above, while in the House of the Redeemer, in silence, each individual quite easily concentrates upon his inner quest.

The retreat services are conducted by a priest, using high Church ritual. For many who have had no experience except with the low Church service some sense of confusion results but it is quickly dissipated. The priest is available during all of the retreat for confession, and for conference. Practically all retreatants avail themselves of these blessed privileges.

The first instruction given was, "Relax. Do not try to resolve personal problems. The Holy Spirit cannot get through when you are trying to resolve your own problems. Be still. Let God come through your contemplation of him."

In our busy parish life of conducted services, good works, and all the teaching so very necessary, we often are exhorted to meditate, to contemplate. But rarely are we offered any opportunity to experience what seems to most Church people spiritual feats set aside for the great order of the priesthood.

My retreat at the House of the Redeemer offered me my first real instruction in the reality of concentrated meditation. It is truly amazing what happens when meditation unlocks the doors of the inner woman! What confusions quite naturally can be resolved!



Most retreats open Friday and close Monday morning. Business people often leave Sunday evening. There is a definite program, and definite theme for meditation. The program includes early mass, a conducted meditation in mid-morning and mid-afternoon, and the services which constitute the daily devotions of the Sisters of Saint Mary in charge of the house, matins, lauds, none, vespers, and compline. Attendance is not compulsory but few services are missed by any retreatants.

The theme for our meditations was the study of the moral virtues of prudence, justice, fortitude, and temperance, and their relation to the Christian virtues of faith, hope, and love. In the prevailing atmosphere of gentle love which emanated from the devotions of the cloistered Sisters of Saint Mary, in the mutual devotions of the retreatants, in instruction, and the quiet hours of meditation, revitalized faith, fresh hope, and deeper love were born.

Three days of living in silence, of seeking solitude with God, gave me something I have never received in any church service. It opened doors which had heretofore been closed. Not closed because I did not care. Not closed because I did not long to have them opened, but closed because I did not know how to begin to open them. Such was the result of a churchwoman's first retreat.

PROTEST VATICAN APPOINTMENT

★ The general board of the National Council of Churches, with Bishop Sherrill presiding as president, unanimously passed a statement on October 31st protesting the appointment of an ambassador to the Vatican. The statement declares that it is "wrong in principle, useless in practice and would produce consequences both far reaching and disastrous to the national unity of the American people."

BISHOP SHERRILL

SOCIAL WORKERS MEET IN CLEVELAND

★ A conference for social workers was held at Trinity Cathedral, Cleveland, October 18. Leaders were Bishop Burroughs and Prof. Thomas J. Bigham Jr. of the General Seminary.

ACQUIRE CORNER IN HONOLULU

★ The district of Honolulu has purchased a corner in that city for $150,000 which will be cleared and improved for the beauty of the cathedral grounds as soon as leases now held by business firms expire.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Fletcher Gives Interpretation Of Vatican Appointment

★ "The Christian Church is the only international institution today that can mediate the world struggle," said the Rev. Joseph F. Fletcher, professor of social ethics at the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, Mass., who spoke Nov. 4th at a public forum at the Church of the Holy Trinity, Brooklyn. "All other international bodies have been split into two political camps: trade unions, scientific societies, organizations of lawyers, doctors and the like. All are divided. Even the U. N. has become predominantly the agency of one camp as against the other. Only the Christian Church remains. Its international ties are tenuous and are being maintained under great stress. But we must view the attempts of the World Council of Churches to preserve even a semblance of ecumenical reality with the utmost sympathy and patience. Enormous pressures are seeking to make difficult or impossible the Church's essential work of reconciliation. We must not lose sight of this fact. We must not become discouraged and abandon the Christian Church as an agency of international understanding."

Asked his opinion of the appointment of General Mark Clark as American ambassador to the Vatican, Fletcher said, "The establishment of diplomatic relations with the Vatican seems to me an unwise and unhappy step that increases rather than decreases the possibility of war. The Vatican, as the President correctly said, has the best information service in the world today. This is because its innumerable concordats permit it to maintain its agents in many countries. But to put this information at the disposal of those American war-makers who are bent upon containing and overthrowing Communism will further reduce the mediating function of the Christian Church and increase the suspicion with which all Christian clergy and workers will be viewed in Communist countries. The net result can only be the deepening of the chasm between East and West."

Prof. Fletcher said he was convinced that the Vatican did not want all-out war and would actually like to restrain, if it could, those American Roman Catholics who are beating the war-drums for an anti-Communist crusade. At the same time, he added, it seems unavoidably clear that the historic antagonism of the Vatican to the Orthodox world, coupled with its political maneuverings to maintain its own interests against liberalism and socialism, has added tremendous fuel to the emotions of the present cold war beyond any legitimate justification of the objective social realities. "President Truman," he declared, "though himself a Protestant, is advocating a closer working relationship between American cold-war policy and Vatican policy that can only benefit the Vatican. The first groups to find themselves the victims will be the Protestant minorities of Europe and the Soviet Union."

When asked why the Vatican so hates Communism, Fletcher replied, "The real reason is not its economic theory, because Christianity could easily make its peace with that, but the principle of equal treatment of all religious bodies which has denied exclusive privileges to the Roman communion in areas where there are large bodies of Roman Catholics. It is this that the Vatican finds intolerable. But the Vatican also knows that East-West war means the physical destruction of large masses of its people, and that Europeans generally are against any such conflict. The Vatican does not want atomic war but at the same time follows policies designed to favor its own long-range interests."

"In the past," concluded Fletcher, "the Christian Church has accepted a doctrine of the just war as constituting under certain circumstances the lesser of two evils. War in the past had a limited scope. There was some personal confrontation of individuals, and the possibility of some moral discrimination operating in its conduct and termination. But since the obliteration bombing of Rotterdam, a new type of warfare has come to confront moral theologians. The earlier Stuka raids still pinpointed their objectives. Obliteration bombing and atomic weapons have introduced the fact of indiscriminate annihilation. War today is completely indiscriminate, non-selective, impersonal, totalitarian and uncontrollable when once started. For the first time, Christian ethics must reconsider its doctrine of the just war. Modern war cannot any longer be considered the lesser of two evils; it has become the final and absolute evil —sheer anarchic annihilation."

He praised the rank-and-file among the Churches for demanding prayers for peace, and for putting pressure on the top religious leadership to take a more vigorous stand against the war drive. "After many months of conscientious thought and study, I have come to the conclusion that the Soviet Union has everything to gain by peace, and everything to lose in an atomic war. I wish that I could be moved to say the same of the thinking of our leadership in Washington. We have an economic stake in government subvention for rearmament. It is growing every month. There are many factors in the world making for the present East-West tension but this is the one most serious threat of actual war. The Church leadership of the United States is financially dependent upon money drawn from an arms-supported economy. That is why Church leadership will only be as vocal as the people in the pews compel it to be."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SOUTHWEST PROVINCE HAS SYNOD

★ Bishop Bentley, vice-president of the National Council and Bishop Lichtenberger, coadjutor of Missouri, were headliners of the synod of the province of the Southwest in San Antonio, Texas, Oct. 23-25. The former was preacher at the opening service in St. Mark's Church and gave a sketch of the missionary work of the Church in past years and a glimpse of the present status. He stated that despite a retreat from China there are now more Episcopal missionaries than ever before. Bishop Lichtenberger, speaking at the synod dinner to some 300 guests, was given the headline, "Christian Asset is Optimism Plus." His subject was "The Church Faces the World" and his emphasis was on Christian hope.

Both the president of the province, Bishop Jones, and the secretary, the Rev. Harold Gosnell, were on home territory —the former, the bishop of West Texas and the latter, the rector of the host parish. There were present delegates from all eight dioceses and three missionary districts of the province and fifteen members of the National Council were in attendance. Among the reports of general interest was one given by the Rev. William G. Wright of El Paso, Texas, chairman of the department of missions for the province. This was a statement of growth during the ten years 1940-1950. The clergy increase was 124; average increase in contributions 313 per cent; gain in communicants 36,426; gain in church school enrollment 14,866.

The synod, following the leadership of Bishop Sherrill and the National Council took action as being opposed to the appointment of an envoy to the Vatican.

Pre-synod meetings included a conference of the Deaconesses of the province in St. Paul's Church under the leadership of the rector, the Rev. H. Paul Osborne.

The Daughters of the King of the province held an assembly with Bishop Jones giving a meditation at holy communion and conducted the service of rededication. There were four pre-synod educational forums, two under leadership of the national department of religious education—the Rev. Walter Williams on Church music and Church school teaching led by Miss Mary Louise Villaret and Miss Eleanor Snyder. Two of the forums had local leaders—church architecture by Mr. Henry Steinbomer, member of the diocesan architecture commission of West Texas and financing the new church by Mr. Frank Gillespie, chairman of the Church extension committee of the diocese.

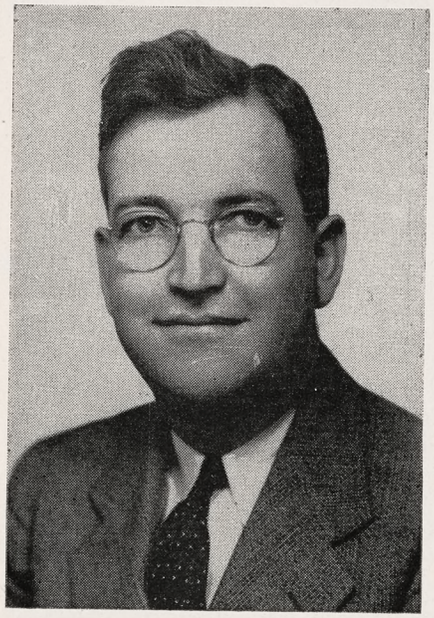
The Woman's Auxiliary of the province met under the leadership of the vice-president, Mrs. C. A. Lick Jr. of Fort Smith, Ark. Delegates were present from all dioceses and districts. There was a joint session with the synod and Mrs. Percy Pennybacker of Austin, Texas, member of the national executive board, and Miss Avis Harvey shared in a panel on "The National Council in action." These two also presented for the Auxiliary two levels of work—the parish level and the diocesan level. All the projects previously adopted were continued. These include contributions to Seabury House, to provincial youth commission, to Navajo mission, San Juan, N. M., to Negro mission in Forest City, Ark. and to St. Paul's High School Balbalasing, Philippine Islands.

WASHINGTON PUSHES PARISH LIBRARIES

★ The promotion department of the diocese of Washington has issued a six page, mimeographed report on how to organize a parish library. It is the work of Margaret Hill who is librarian of St. John's, Bethesda. It deals with matters of financing, location, furnishings, hours, cataloguing, classification, and selection of books and tracts. It concluded with a list of recommended books on the Bible, history, the Church, prayer, missions, theology and present day problems, biograph. There are but two works of fiction listed, the Robe and the Big Fisherman by Lloyd C. Douglas.

STUDENT CENTER AT IOWA

★ A new student center is nearing completion at the University of Iowa. It is being financed jointly by the Advancement Corporation and Trinity Church, Iowa City, and costs about $40,000. The center was far enough along to enable the annual student-faculty dinner to be held there this fall.



BISHOP HUNTER of Wyoming addresses meetings in the east on the fall canvass

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

PITTSBURGH DISCUSSES PUBLIC QUESTIONS

★ An institute on public questions opened in Pittsburgh, Pa. on October 16 and continues for six successive Tuesday evenings. The whole thing began last spring when Bishop Austin Pardue called together a number of Episcopalians and Presbyterians in his diocesan office to propose the idea. The affair is sponsored jointly by the Episcopal and

CAMERON HALL

Presbyterian Churches and by union representatives, with the support of the department of community relations of the council of churches of Allegheny County. The school is conducted on a non-sectarian basis with all welcome, whether members of any religious group or not. Likewise both non-union and union workers are welcome.

Sam Sponseller, regional director of the CIO, was the first speaker on the guaranteed annual wage. The Rev. Charles O. Rice, chaplain of the Association of Catholic Trade Unionists; James L. McDevitt, state president of the A. F. of L., and the Rev. Cameron P. Hall of the National Council of Churches were the speakers on October 23rd on the Taft-Hartley law.

The third meeting was devoted to pensions, health and welfare programs, with Bernard Greenberg, representative of the Steel Workers; John P. Tomayko, also of the Steel Workers, and John P. Busarello, president of the local United Mine Workers the speakers. On November 6th Anthony Luchek, director of labor educations service at Penn State, and Col. Edward Gallip, secretary of the Pittsburgh Hotels Association, led in the discussion of union participation in community activities.

That very hot subject, the significance of inflation for labor, was dealt with this week by Prof. George Kosmetsky of Carnegie Tech, and the final meeting of this series will be November 20 on labor and education with Irwin Kuenzli, officer of the American Federation of Teachers and Prof. William Yeager of the University of Pittsburgh the leaders.

Bishop Pardue states that these initial meetings have been so successful that another series will be held presently. The co-chairmen of the committee are the Rev. Oliver R. Floyd, rector of the Advent, and the Rev. James G. Miller, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, a downtown church where the meetings are held.

CEDAR RAPIDS CHURCH CELEBRATES

★ Grace Church, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, celebrated the 100th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone with a series of services, October 24-28. A large portion of the original church is still standing. The Rev. Ralph Higgins of St. Mark's, Evanston, Ill., was the speaker at a dinner held as a part of the celebration. Remodelling at a cost of $10,000 has just been completed.

DALLAS PARISH PROSPERS

★ The story of St. Luke's Church in Dallas, Texas, is literally a miracle of Christian faith and evangelism. The story of St. Luke's reads like a chapter in the life of the early Church. In August, 1949, seven families came together in the suburbs of Dallas to establish a church. Four months later St. Luke's was admitted to full parish status in the diocese of Dallas. Eight months from the beginning fifty families composed the church and a building program was begun.

By the end of 1950 over 200 people regularly attended church at St. Luke's, and this last May the congregation moved into its new church home with a membership of baptized persons totaling 627.

LEADERS URGE PEACE IN KOREA

★ Heads of three theological schools and a Nozel prize winner were among the 417 prominent Americans to send a letter to President Truman on November 5th asking that he exert the full strength of his office "to a supreme effort to bring the fighting in Korea to an end and achieve a truce that will lead to a full restoration of peace." Emily Greene Balch, who received the Nobel award in 1946, was among the signers as were President Herbert Gezork of Andover-Newton Theological School, Dean John M. Atwood of the school of religion of St. Lawrence University, and President John Long of Southern Christian Institute.

Among Episcopalians to sign the document, which was initiated by the Church of the Saviour, Brooklyn, N. Y., were the Rev. Arnold Bode of California; Bishop Walter Mitchell, retired of Arizona; the Rev. Fleming James and Mrs. William P. Ladd of Connecticut; Prof. Vida D. Scudder and the Rev. George L. Paine of Massachusetts; the Rev. Eric M. Tasman of Newark; the Rev. Charles B. Ackley and Kathleen Sayre of New York. Three editors were among the signers: the Rev. Guy E. Shipler of the Churchman and the Rev. Roscoe T. Foust, and the Rev. Joseph H. Titus, chairman and member respectively of the editorial board of the Witness.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CONFERENCE ON ALCOHOLISM

★ Called together by the Rev. Almon R. Pepper, director of the department of social relations of the National Council, a number of people interested in the problem of alcoholism met at Church Missions House October 30 for an all-day session.

The purpose of the conference was to discover ways in which the clergy and the Church generally can be made to see the importance of work with alcoholics. The group agreed that it is important for Church people to realize that alcoholism is a disease and that alcoholics are sick persons who need special ministry as well as treatment from community resources. It is also important for as many of the clergy as possible to have training in the special skills and understanding needed for this ministry. Further, it is important for the Church to become concerned and active in the prevention of alcoholism.

The immediate motive for the conference was the success of a state-wide conference for clergy and their wives successfully completed in North Conway, N. H., October 8 and 9. Experts from the clergy, physicians, public health administrators, and others formed the faculty. So much was attained by the conference that those who organized it felt that it could well form the pattern for similar conferences in other areas. The conference, originally begun for the Episcopal Church, was expanded to become interdenominational. It is recommended that other conferences follow this same pattern.

Among the agreements reached at last week's conference were (1) the continuation of plans already begun for a regional conference to include Western Massachusetts and Connecticut; (2) an intensive program of recruiting for the Yale summer school of alcohol studies. Fifteen Episcopal clergymen already attended this school during the past nine years. A goal of ten to fifteen persons was set to attend this coming summer. And; (3) it was agreed that the Rev. David Works and Mr. Ernest Shepherd of the New Hampshire commission on alcoholism would prepare an outline for suggested regional seminars including an interpretation of the various sections of the program,and, in addition, a brief bibliography of material available on the subject. It was agreed that the department of social relations would secure as widespread distribution of this publication as possible.

During the conference the new joint publication of the department of education and the department of social relations was presented and discussed. The pamphlet is entitled "Strong Drink is Raging." It is part of a series entitled "Parishioners Are People," intended for adult study. The leader's guide of the series also includes a section on alcohol and outlines parish projects in the field. The pamphlet is prepared for general use and presents educational material not only on alcoholics but the problem of alcohol in general.

MUSCATINE PARISH CELEBRATES

★ Bishop Smith of Iowa, Dean Johnson of Davenport and the Rev. B. G. Miars of Burlington took part in the service on November 11th that marked the 100th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of Trinity Church, Muscatine, Iowa. Evensong and confirmation were followed by a reception in the parish house to which all members of other churches in the town were invited.

MILWAUKEE RECTOR IS CRITICIZED

★ The Living Church and a Milwaukee Congregational minister have taken exception to a sharp attack on the Roman Catholic Church made by the Rev. Stoddard Patterson, rector of St. Paul's. In a sermon Mr. Patterson urged his listeners to "vote for Protestants at the polls —Protestants who will uphold the Protestant traditions."

The Living Church, without mentioning Mr. Patterson, declared in an editorial: "We don't think that recognition of the Vatican means a surrender to the Roman Catholic Church, or that it jeopardizes the American doctrine of separation of Church and state. It may in time even serve to clarify that doctrine, which is urgently in need of constructive rethinking." The magazine said it hoped that the appointment of an ambassador to the Vatican will not be "seized upon as an occasion for religious intolerance and prejudices, or for political strife in a presidential election year." The editorial called the appointment "unwise," however.

Mr. Patterson's sermon also drew a reply from the Rev. Paul Gia Russo, of Pilgrim Congregational Church. "The essence of the Christian gospel is to transform fear and hate into faith and love," Mr. Russo said. "Religious leaders will never supply the constructive needs of our people by preaching sermons that are designed to elicit fear and hate for other institutions.

"God created . . . people, not Protestants or Catholics, but people. It is we ourselves who create the differences that separate us from our common humanity. Until we rediscover this humanity and live and die for its betterment, we will be a sad, miserable and unhappy people."

He said that Protestant and Catholic churches should strive to minimize their differences, shun politics and "produce morally responsible people."

WILLIAM B. GIVEN JR. NEW PRESIDENT

★ William B. Given Jr. of New York, president of the American Brake Shoe Co., is the new president of the Episcopal Church Foundation, succeeding Pierpont V. Davis.

EDITORIALS

Faith of Our Fathers

AS we write this we have not seen the annual Thanksgiving proclamation. Certainly we can never, as did the Pharisee, give thanks that we are not as other men are. In the stern cold light that beats down from heaven and reveals all men's unworthiness we of the United States can hardly claim that, because of superior material satisfaction, we are more "blessed" than other nations. When we think of these things we can only experience a deep sense of humility. We must look elsewhere for things to be devoutly thankful for.

There are many. But if we were Mr. Truman in the year 1951 we would state it simply and thus: let us be thankful for the faith of our fathers as expressed in the Bill of Rights. For that is perhaps the most precious heritage we have received, a strong bulwark against those who would assault our personal and civic freedoms. More to be treasured is it than gold.

In December of 1791 history, wherein we can see the hand of God, was made in the Congress Constitutional Convention as the first ten amendments to the Constitution were passed; our Bill of Rights. Listen to the first: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press, or of the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances." Glorious words!—faith of our fathers! And, in amendment number five, . . . "nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life and limb; nor shall he be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor to be deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process of law."

There they stand! The McGraths, the O'Connors, the McCarrans and the McCarthys may strive to destroy or weaken them—but still they stand! Wrote Justice Rutledge in 1942, "With world events running as they have been, there is a special reason at this time for not relaxing the old personal freedoms won, as this was, through centuries of struggle. Men now in concentration camps could speak to the value of such a privilege if it were or had been theirs. There is in it the wisdom of decades if not centuries."

We could almost wish that each congregation in this our land could sing and ponder each Sunday — and certainly Thanksgiving Day — that hymn which is our quote for this week.

Let us lift up thankful hearts that "through the truth that comes from God, mankind shall then indeed be free."

★

"Quotes"

Faith of our fathers, living still
In spite of dungeon, fire, and sword:
O how our hearts beat high with joy,
Whene'er we hear that glorious word:
Faith of our fathers, holy faith!
We will be true to thee till death.

Our fathers, chained in prisons dark,
Were still in heart and conscience free:
And truly blest would be our fate,
If we, like them, should die for thee.
Faith of our fathers, holy faith!
We will be true to thee till death.

★

Special Pleading

WE Christians have acquired some strange and unnatural habits in the matter of church attendance. We have forgotten who we are. Were it not so, it would hardly be necessary to give thought and energy to "drives" for coming to services on special Sundays, or to invite the members to come into their own house.

Look at it this way. Suppose the housewife, when she purchased food for Sunday dinner had to see to it that the head of the house, at the same time, engaged in a campaign to persuade the members of the family to be present to share the dinner—or perhaps issue a properly worded invitation to each member of the household extolling the virtue of the Sunday dinner which no one could afford to miss! Such behavior and such an interpretation of family life would certainly be open to question, if not deserving of psychiatric examination. There are certain things which a family which is worthy of the name does without coaxing, just because it is a family. Courtesy and love bind the members together and with respect to certain fundamental things there is no need to assume that the individuals need special attention and preferred treatment before they will behave in a natural way.

In just as intimate a way the Christian Church is a family. In just as natural a way those who realize this come together on Sunday morning without urging or special invitation, to share with the family both the feast of good things which their Lord provides, as well as the common difficulties he may ask them to share. And unless Christian worship is a spontaneous expression of family solidarity, free from the taint of special pleading, it will fail in its avowed purpose of generating a contagious spirit of love which will eventually transform and change the world.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Need it be added, at this every member canvass time, that the same judgment may be made of our unspontaneous giving?

Brothers In Spite of Everything

BY
ROSCOE THORNTON FOUST

WESTERN GERMANY is a busy place. Everywhere things and people are in motion. Within a year stagnation has become a thing of the past. The future and the shape of things to come with that future may be uncertain, but the present is at hand to be dealt with and life goes on with increasing urgency. There is a ready, if not eager, awareness that Western Germany's prosperity still rests on the solid foundation of $400,000,000 annual U. S. aid, and the continued allied occupation is by no means a cause of rejoicing, but the feeling is strong especially in Berlin that the American, French, and British occupation forces should by no means retire until the Soviet Union is willing to do likewise.

This brings us at once to the heart of the matter, for in Berlin in small is found everything that is elsewhere writ large. Here hopefulness and hopelessness are intermingled. Here democracy and the police state meet toe to toe. Each tries to out-guess and out-maneuver the other as well as out-bid the other for the allegiance of the people. As goes Berlin, so will go Germany and the rest of Western Europe. Nowhere is this basic struggle so vividly seen as in the contest for the minds and hearts of the youth of Germany. It is to this subject that the balance of this article is addressed.

Youth Movement

WITH the Russian occupation of East Germany and East Berlin there began a strenuous program to indoctrinate the minds of the younger generation with Communist tenets. These young Germans from the East, chosen for such preferred treatment, seem to have responded with uncritical enthusiasm to what was offered as a new and better way of life. These youth leaders formed the background of the Communist Youth rally in East Berlin in August. To their number was added not only many thousands of other German youth, but thousands of young people from almost every country of the globe, fired to enthusiasm by the interest of new comradeships and stirred genuinely by the appeals for "friendship" and "peace" adopted as the keynotes of the gathering. The purpose of this story is not to evaluate the motives of the organizers of the rally, which are certainly suspect, but rather to understand if possible the effect of the speeches, the marches, and the mass appeal on those who listened to the harangues and took part in the demonstrations, who in many cases had succeeded in reaching Berlin only after surmounting the obstacles rather foolishly put in their way by British, American and French authorities at various stages of their journey. The only outcome of such treatment was to make these youngsters who are not easily discouraged heroes in their own minds and in the eyes of their fellows.

That which demands our sober and earnest attention is the effort Russia and the other Communist countries are making with a disturbing measure of success to capture the youth of the world for Communism. Many factors are in their favor. They understand the values of organization psychology, particularly crowd psychology. By any standards when a million and a half young men and girls march for something like eight hours in ordered ranks through the streets of East Berlin it is a most notable and successful occasion. The Nazi of Hitler's day could produce nothing better. The organizers of the demonstration may well congratulate themselves for a huge success, but the psychology was more important than the organization, for the ability to play skillfully on the impulses of youth did far more for the Berlin rally than the ablest organizers in the world could achieve. To recognize that is all important, for the Communists cannot be left in possession of this field. It must be contested and it will not be contested with any hope of success unless the Communists can be out-played at their own game. If that is to happen there must be a clear understanding of what the methods of the game are.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

What is disturbing about the Communist game as played in East Berlin this summer or throughout the world anywhere, any time, is not what is bad in it, but what in appearance at any rate is good. Their slogans are "friendship" and "peace." Surely there is nothing the world wants or needs more—not merely peace in the sense of warlessness but genuine friendship between nations. Nor is there anything better calculated to appeal to youth which by nature is generous and warm in its impulses, given to camaraderie, genuinely idealist, fired by the thought of building bridges between nations. The Russians know all that and are astute enough to make capital out of it. They are doing what the Western nations might be doing with far better right. Granted that rallies of the Communist model are not congenial to any nations which pride themselves on their democratic ideals and aspirations, it is none the less fatal to let Russia snatch and make off with the very standards beneath which we must all one day live together.

Effect Abroad

ONE thing is certain, that most of those who went to the youth rally in Berlin from other countries will have found there things which they never found at home. Many of them we honestly believe are bad, but that would not be a true judgment of all of them. The very fact of the contacts made in the good comradeship established with the youth of other lands is something of solid value in itself. It is a truth which the democracies recognize, but which is made available for all too few. Another good is this:—whereas Hitler's Nuremburg rallies and gatherings were menacing and alarming because the motive power behind them was purely national, the Communist rally was ostensibly international, like the United Nations, even granting the strong probability of many wolves lurking beneath sheep-like disguises. This question is still relevant. Where in Paris, London, or New York would it be possible to organize a parade of one million, five hundred thousand young people of all nations to support what the United Nations stands for? One reason of course why there is so great an uncritical response to the Communist appeal is that, especially in youth, the critical faculty is undeveloped. This normally comes later in life as memory grows longer and experience widens. If then one side of the picture can be made sufficiently attractive, the other can for the moment be ignored. There has to be created an air of genuine enthusiasm shared in by many people to create a climate and soil favorable for the later growth of the true fruits of freedom for which the soul of every man longs.

It is easy, too easy, to criticize the obvious faults of the Communist regime in Russia or anywhere in the world. McCarthy and his followers are really taking the paths of least resistance as they grasp greedily for political power. They are the delight of the Kremlin, for they distract our attention from the positive ideals which, if endorsed more strongly, believed in more firmly, and practiced more zealously at home and abroad might well succeed in commanding more support than Communism is able to attract. What we lack is imagination and driving power—lacking because we assume too easily and readily that all elements of our cause are just and that God may safely be trusted to give the victory to his allies with or without their help. The history of nations who ignore God or take him for granted is that sooner or later a stronger nation than they which may defy God will come upon them and take from them all the security wherein they mistakenly trusted.

Last Best Hope

THIS would suggest that the last best hope of man on earth would be a sincere and honest return to God and a return to the Christian Church which in its remnants at least seems to have survival power in a crumbling world. This fact too was demonstrated in Berlin this summer. For five days, starting July 11th, tens of thousands of men and women converged on Berlin, travelling by any means possible, many of them on foot, to demonstrate to the world through their coming together that "we are brothers in spite of everything." German Christians of all ages from both East and West had come together to bear united witness to that eternal truth. "Church Day" it was called, and some three hundred thousand came to keep it, in what Bishop Dibelius called the greatest assembly of European Protestants. They completely packed the Berlin Olympic Stadium for the concluding service. It was a fitting and impressive finale to a fine effort to demonstrate Protestant Christian solidarity, but for all of that it seemed, at least to this observer, to lack the contagious zeal which the Communist rally was to show a few days later. Perhaps this is an unfair comparison. The progress of this movement has been truly phenomenal in a very short time. It began with a comparatively small conference in Hanover in July 1949. In 1950 the second meeting held in Essen was attended by many thousands, and now a year later we find some three hundred thousand lay men and women together in one place for a conference on applied Christianity. If its growth and enthusiasm can continue to spread and if its meaning can be made plain to the young people of Germany, perhaps we in the Western world may learn from them how to deal with the forces set in motion by a pagan world, of which Communism is but one. They can only be effectively resisted by being out-thought and out-lived, not only by the few who make the grave error of thinking that they have all the time there is in which to accomplish a miracle, but by the multitude who should know by this time that the brave new world for which they have lived and died is already here and is theirs for the taking. The Christians of the world have the capacity and the vision to deliver both the goods and the good;—Communism can only promise to do what Christians have left undone, at best, and then fail miserably in performance. But if the Western world waits until this failure is obvious to those who have been attracted by the promises, it will be too late, for we will long since have squandered our goods in battle and laid waste the good earth with our bombs. In this devastating process the good we thought to protect and preserve will have become the evil by which other men curse and die.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Church Statement

IF we will look only briefly at the cogent expression of some of the thinking which inspires this Church Congress of German laymen, it will be apparent how directly they have gone to the root of the matter. It would be wrong, they say, to regard this convention as a mass demonstration. "The thousands assembled by no means merge into an anonymous crowd but we still would like to emphasize that the drifting forces on which the Church Congress rests originate from the anonymous multitude known as the laity."

Again "modern man all at once finds himself both mature and skeptical; both infinitely knowledgeable and alienated at the same time from the faith of his forefathers; both admirably efficient and at the same time diffident in the attitude of his soul; courageous in his daily struggle for survival on the one hand and haunted by a very agony of fear on the other."

It continues . . . "the Church of today should not confine itself to being a self-sufficient circle consisting of the pious congregating in careful exclusiveness, but should be a body of men and women determined to take upon their conscience the grave unsolved problems of our century—man and machine; man and state, man and man, with a high sense of responsibility for these vital concerns.

"The Church should boldly tackle the burning questions of peace or war, of the rights and functions of the worker within society, and of what is to be the future of our children. The Church should do so not merely in an official capacity as the established ordained Church, but as a body of the faithful, as a community inspired by the consciousness of serving one Master.

"This community must become a troop of lay members of the Church finally abandoning the fatal privateness of their Christian faith and becoming instead a sworn vanguard carrying the message of the New Testament into the very midst of modern every day life. They should leave behind them the out-dated conceptions of the former obsolete era and have the courage to be modern and up to date and wide awake, firmly resolved to revise and throw overboard what is not in tune with our time."

They go on to enumerate five essential demands which must be met in order to cope with the grave situation with which the world is confronted today. They have in mind particularly, of course, the urgent problems of a divided and threatened Germany, but they apply equally to the world situation:

"One, an honest matter of fact evaluation of the realities of the present;

"Two, a firm and valiant attitude in view of our inescapable responsibility toward the courage of historic development;

"Three, a firm Biblical foothold on the fundamentals of the truth of God;

"Four, an undivided manly obedience toward God's majestic and gracious command;

"Five, genuine charity toward our brethren and sincere willingness to sacrifice and serve."

If this should mean that the Christian Church in Germany has seen the folly of answering the questions that nobody is asking (as the Church of England was described as doing in London this summer), then perhaps we may detect a note of alarm in what the controlled press of Eastern Germany said about Church Day—that it was the Christian counterpart of the Communist People's movement and that there was no difference between the peace of the Gospel and the peace that the Communists fight for. Christians may indeed sound an alarm which may be heard throughout the world if they are ready to wake up before it is too late.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Church Jim Crow

We Lag Far Behind

By ALGER ADAMS

WHAT conclusions may one draw from the facts presented in my previous articles?

One startling fact glares forth in this study. Episcopalians are smugly self-satisfied with things as they are. There is a blind unawareness of there being anything wrong, on the part of 95% of the white clergy. There is hardly a glimmer to indicate that the "Guiding Principles" have percolated to grass-root level.

The diocese of Quincy (Illinois) is typical. "I do not know how many negro (small "n" for Negro his) members of the Church there may be in the diocese. Not a large number, but there are some. They are not organized into separate congregations, but belong to the parish where they are located . . . there are no negro (small "n" his) priests in the diocese."

The pattern of this reply is repeated in diocese after diocese. First, the statement there are very few Negro Episcopalians (there are 70,000 Negroes in the Quincy area against an approximate 690,000 population). Second, the assurance that they are not segregated. And, lastly, the fact that the clergy are lily-white. In the South, segregation is stated and defended.

In no instance, except San Joaquin, is there any awareness of the failure of the Church to reach Negroes. In only one case was there any sense of the reason why there are so few Episcopalians (West Texas), or any critical self-examination as to where the Church's missionary effort has stopped. In Fond du Lac, the informant reported forced unconstitutional lily-white communities without a twinge of Christian conscience, the secular law in this case being more Christian than the Church. In the diocese of Lexington (Kentucky) the writer said, "The number of Negro churchmen is too small to constitute a 'problem'." This from an area in which Negroes make up almost 15 to 20% of the total population.

Saving the exceptions noted, Church jim crow is accepted as matter of fact existence, to go on without end. For these, there is no sense of the affront of making a racial division in the body of Christ. There is little more, in some cases, than a querulousness that questions are being asked; and from Alabama, an attempt to switch the blame for the failure of the Church's mission to Negroes over to the victims, the Negroes.

The general attitude of the Church is quiescent. There is no compulsion to act on the issue of Church segregation immediately. This lackadaisicalness is best illustrated in the "Guiding Principles."

The preamble to that statement says, "The fact that these principles cannot be realized at once in their fullness should not prevent us from keeping them before us as the Christian goal."

The principles "cannot be realized at once," presumably then, only in the dim future. We are only called upon to be "keeping them before us," an observatory, speculative attitude, certainly not a call for action. A future "goal" is substituted for immediate conviction and action. We are not exhorted to act at once, to unify the body of Christ. We are pleased to "move slowly."

With the exceptions of the late Bishop Manning and the diocese of Delaware, nowhere is the authority and weight of the Church brought to bear to build a non-segregated unified Christianity.

Two horrible examples of "moving slowly" were displayed at the "Second Interdenominational Institute on Racial and Cultural Relations" held last summer at Lincoln University.

A white minister, as one of the major speakers, told of a great triumph in race relations in his church which is located in a predominately Negro neighborhood. After describing a most envolved series of meetings, discussions, etc., taking place over the period of two years, he announced proudly to the institute that his congregation now has two Negro members, among the 300 whites. And he added, "I think it is important to stress again, this matter of moving slowly."

We wonder how much more slowly he could have moved (without standing still); and if what he is really saying is that "progress" is going to take so long we won't have to be worried with it? We wonder what would have happened to the early Church if St. Paul and others had faced paganism and heresy with this pussyfooting approach.

Or to cite the other instance from this conference which included delegates from eighteen states, twelve to thirteen Christian bodies, and representatives of all the races and nationalities of America.

Dr. Henry Lee Willet made a statement on Hospitals: "The committee on social education and action of the Presbytery of Philadelphia believes that the Presbyterian Church is losing a glorious opportunity for Christian leadership in the field of race relations. The question, for instance, as to whether to open the nursing school of the Presbyterian Hospital to any qualified girl regardless of her color, is a small thing in itself. But the committee believes that a definite courageous stand on this question by the outstanding Presbyterian leaders who comprise the hospital's board of directors would give a tremendous boost to the morale of the city's Negro population; would ease race tensions and frustrations, and would give courage to those who believe the Church should practice what it preaches."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

As comment, we note that in 1950, the year previous, the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses disbanded. They had been organized to fight discrimination because of color in nursing. Because so many barriers in nursing had been thrown down, they felt they had no further function. They noted that the end of the color-line had been because of the severe shortage of nurses since World War II. And here, a year later, at a Christian conference, a Christian body pretends they are making a great demonstration when they are only doing what everybody else had been forced to do long before.

Intellectually Dishonest

THE Church is often intellectually dishonest about jim crow. At the Philadelphia General Convention, a canon against segregation died for want of a second on the grounds that this Church has never recognized segregation. But we practice it, almost without exception. Statements from the dioceses were replete with comments like "we have no negroes (usually small 'n')," which is certainly not facing the issue of how segregation has excluded the Negro from our family.

The infamous "separate but equal" canard, which is used to justify jim crow in the South, is part of the National Council's "Guiding Principles." The Supreme Court declared this concept a non-reality in the case of institutions of higher education. But here, the Church through default of clarity, gives aid and comfort to the segregationalists, and so limps far behind the secular society to which she should be giving moral leadership.

In those same "Guiding Principles," under "principle three" reference is made to raising the standards of segregated facilities. This is excellent as far as it goes. Obviously evil jim crow will not be destroyed by taking away what small comforts the Negro receives in his duress. But the intellectual dishonesty of the principle is that it stops with improving the jim crow pig-sty. It does not go on to say what the Church should do about those conditions which make jim crow institutions necessary.

What Does it Mean to Jesus Christ?

WHAT does it mean to Jesus Christ? Simply, it means the kingdom of God is held back and blocked by our spiritual blindness, our moral cowardice, and our double-tongued dangerously close approach to mortal sin in not knowing good from evil.

With the destruction of the Communist party as an effective social apparatus a vacuum has been created in the field of race relations. Heretofore, they represented the most aggressive and revolutionary force, which was not concerned with "going slowly" but with changing the world. Our Church is now challenged to fill that vacuum—as the Roman Catholic Church is racing to do. But we must see the solution of the race problem not as a thing of "slow education," but rather as springing from conversion to the spiritual life in Christ which is divinely impatient with all sin, with all that cuts men off from a full and unlimited participation in the kingdom of God as one of his children.

Murder is not met with "education." Fornication, violence, gluttony, covetousness, pride, vanity, avarice, are not met by the Church "going slowly" and "being careful not to destroy the values we have." Society is not organized around the proclivities of the law-breaker; but in race matters, the Church is prone to forget that sin is not conquered by compromise, but by a simple choice between God in Christ and self.

We cannot continue limping between God and ourselves. We must choose between life and death.

NOTE: A concluding article on What Can Be Done will appear next week.

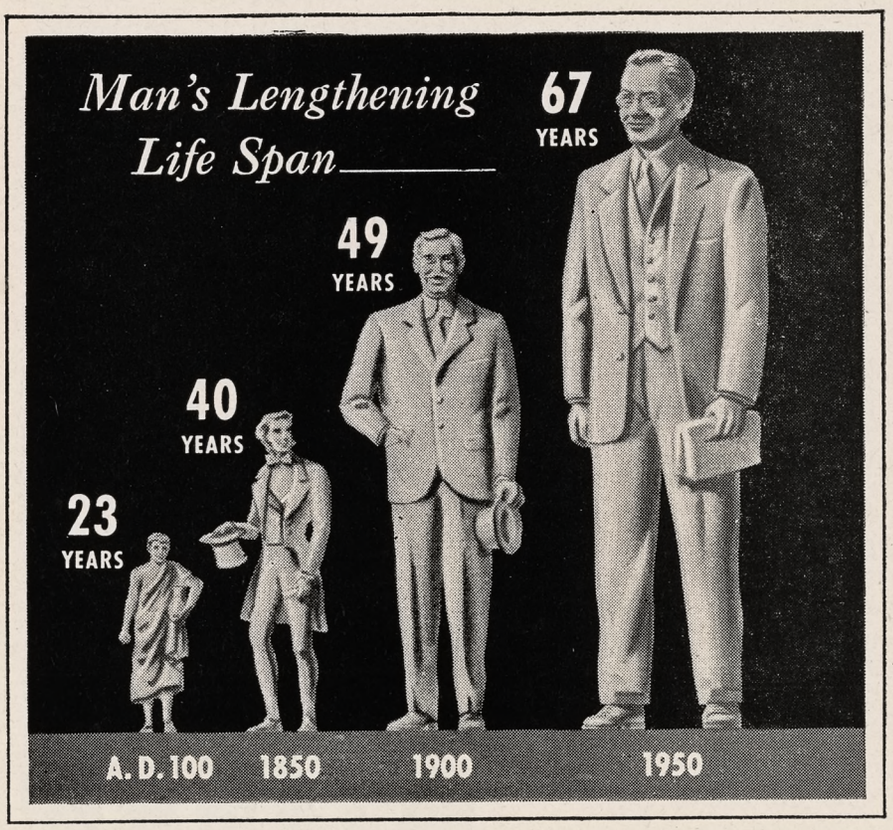
Religion and the Mind

BY

CLINTON J. KEW

LET GOD ENTER YOUR HEART



"MY minister told me to let God enter my heart and I would be happier. Do you have any practical suggestions?"

For a long time before electricity was made available for mankind, people all over the world could see the lightning during storms. Some were

(Continued on Page 16)

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The Greatest News for the Human Race in 1900 Years!

Science Gives You LONGER LIFE . . . New Booklet Offers You Hints for Better Health to Enjoy Your Later Years!

Longer life is yours today—thanks to modern science!

Here is the amazing record—

Since the turn of the century, over 18 years have been added to a man's average life span!

In the days of the Roman Empire, the average length of life was 23 years. In the United States it climbed to 40 years by 1850 . . . to 49 years by 1900 . . . and now the average life span here is over 67 years and life expectancy is still increasing.

This tremendous increase in life expectancy gives us many more years to enjoy the blessings of the earth. But—we cannot be completely happy in those later years unless we are enjoying good health.

To point the way to the good health you must have to fully enjoy longer life, the makers of Ovaltine have prepared an informative booklet, which is yours for the asking.

Here's to Longer Life . . . May Yours Be Healthy and Happy!

Long life means little without good Health!

Proper nutrition is important to good health. As people grow older, they need more of certain food elements to keep up their strength and vitality.

Since adequate amounts of these needed food elements are often lacking in the diets of older people, there is a widespread need for an easily digested food supplement such as Ovaltine to supply the missing elements. Besides filling in this nutritional gap, Ovaltine can frequently be helpful when elderly people begin to have trouble with digestion or mastication or sleep.

FREE Booklet Gives Pointers on How to Get the Most out of Life After 60!

Learn how you can best enjoy the longer life that science gives you today. Get your copy of a fascinating new 24-page illustrated booklet filled with tips and pointers on how to get more out of life in the later years.

The booklet is a storehouse of valuable information on many subjects of interest to older folks and those who care for them. Besides a discussion of such things as the nutrition problems of elderly people and signs of dietary deficiencies, the booklet contains general health rules and other priceless information to help older adults live out their "Golden Years" in health and happiness and contentment.

Valuable Free Booklet Offers Guide to Health and Happiness

Send for your copy of this free 24-page, illustrated booklet "Longer Life . . . and Better Health To Enjoy It!" Use coupon at right. Do it now!

Send for YOUR FREE copy

OVALTINE—L-4
360 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago 1, Ill.

Please send me a FREE copy of your illustrated booklet, "Longer Life . . . and Better Health To Enjoy It!"

NAME.....

ADDRESS.....

CITY.....

ZONE..... STATE.....

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

afraid of it and thought that the gods were angry with them. Others paid no attention to the storm because they felt it was simply an act of nature. Still others observed the flashes with interest and some even wondered if the energy could be used for mankind. All of these people were aware of the blinding light and saw the destruction to trees, houses and people.

Then one day this energy was made available for mankind. Someone had been able to bring the lightning down to the earth in a form in which man could examine and use it. Today this power is so commonplace that we take it for granted.

For a long time many people have observed the strange healing power of God. Some people do not believe that all things are possible with God and therefore they pay little attention to it. Others think that possibly it may work in the lives of some people, but it certainly does not for them. Again there are other people who know that God's strength can heal people spiritually and make them new living creatures.

Just as man had to make a direct contact with electricity in order to use its power, so must man make a direct personal contact with God, the source of all strength. Faith is that contact with God's spirit. It helps us to ride every storm; it fortifies us for all the vissicitudes of life; it makes us real men and women. All of us have the ability to possess faith which is really love plus understanding. The following steps will help us to use our faith ability so that our contact with God will be made and his strength flow into our lives.

One, faith is the opening of the door between our souls and God. We can best open this door by throwing away all the obstructions which hinder it. We must clear the path of all blockings. When we close the door with hate or worry, God does not come in. The degree to which we are capable of opening the door is the measure of help we secure from God.

Two, God shows no favoritism. He comes to everyone. Even the most despicable of human souls can receive him. No matter who you are or where you live, God will come if you will but clear the way.

Three, God will help you clear the way. He will not ask us to do anything we are unable to do alone. Strange indeed, but God will give us added strength to do the job.

Four, God will give us more love and strength than we are able to receive. He always gives in measures greater than we can contemplate.

Five, prayer is one of the best methods of preparing the way. Not that we are to tell God what we want, but that we pray for what he thinks we need most. A flashlight is useless in the dark until we press the button. When we do so we can observe the pitfalls around us, but also all the possibilities.

Six, we should try to love someone or something every day. God comes when we try to love. Love is the strongest force in the world; yet sometimes we live as though it never existed. Will you love someone or some cause?

Seven, try to surrender your will to God. The spark which sets off the dynamite blast cannot hurl away tons of dirt. The spark plays a minor role as far as energy is concerned, but it plays a very important role in releasing the energy in the dynamite. Our wills can be the spark to set into operation God's energy. Then God, and not our fears and worries, will rule our lives. When we surrender to God we submit our deepest moral self, our unconscious, to God. Here in the unconscious lies our greatest source of strength.

Eight, God's power will strengthen us for every task, every emergency. It will transform us. The chain of resistance will be broken as soon as we give him simple faith. What we cannot do for ourselves, God can do for us.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

BISHOP STRONG AT CATHEDRAL

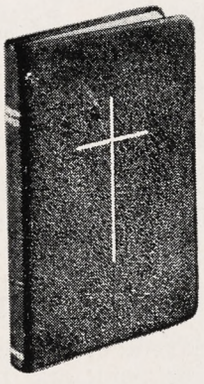
★ Bishop Philip N. W. Strong of New Guinea, (South-west Pacific), was the preacher at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, November 11th. A graduate of Cambridge University, after working in several English parishes, he was consecrated bishop of New Guinea in 1936.

American and Australian armed forces, seeking to land in New Guinea after its invasion by the Japanese in World War II, were amazed to find what looked at first like wild, dangerous, curly headed black natives, were actually good Anglican Christians, who succored the wounded in every possible way, so that the white soldiers, sailors, and marines called them the "Fuzzy-Wuzzy Angels."

After the destruction, rape, and murder which marked the Japanese campaign and their defeat, the mission was rebuilt only to suffer devastating havoc and death when the Mt. Lamington volcano exploded January 21, 1951, spreading death for eight miles around, and wiping out schools, hospitals and mission stations. Bishop Strong is in the United States seeking money with which to rebuild that which has been destroyed.

SPORTS WINDOW DEDICATED

★The new sports window of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine was blessed by Bishop Donegan on October 21st. The address was by Julian S. Myrick, former chairman of the Davis cup committee. The gifts of many individual sportsmen and the proceeds from athletic contests have helped toward the cost of the window. Mrs. Griffith B. Coale, daughter of the late Bishop Manning, was the one to suggest such a window and did the unveiling. The large window, 25 feet high and 12 feet wide, shows twenty-eight sports —about everything you can think of except prize fighting which possibly is not a sport.



BISHOP EMRICH WANTS DISCUSSION

★ Bishop Emrich of Michigan has called for a level-headed, fair and kind consideration of the appointment of an ambassador to the Vatican. In an open letter to people of the diocese he said that "argument does not necessarily divide; only anger, unfairness and unkindness separate us one from another. Americans should remember that, whatever their sincere differences may be, they share a common religious and moral heritage which in these dark days should drive us together and not apart. If we are kind, avoid careless words and maintain a careful regard for truth, there is no reason why in mature debate our unity should not be deepened. We should also remember that at the gate of heaven St. Peter will not be concerned with our attitude toward an ambassador to the Vatican; he will ask us rather whether on earth we loved and were peacemakers."

HAITI MISSIONARY SPEAKS IN IOWA

★ Miss Kathryn Bryan, missionary to Haiti, addressed six district meetings of the Iowa Auxiliary, October 22-31. A graduate of Le Moyne College, Memphis, Tenn., she received her professional training at Windham House, New York, and has a masters degree from Columbia in religious education.

Harper Deluxe Prayer Books
A Gift To Be Treasured

According to the use of the Protestant Episcopal Church in The United States of America

The Prayer Books listed below are superb examples of fine binding and printing. Printed on Micropake India paper, these books are bound in fine grain Morocco, with the new and improved paper lining called Flextex Edgelining. All styles come in 3-piece, GIFT-PAK box.

INDIA PAPER

Medium Size, 3⅝ x 5⅝", only ¼" thick

H237x—Black Morocco, fine grain, Flextex Edgelined, gold edges, gold cross, GIFT-PAK.....$7.50
H238x—Same as H237x, in Red..... 8.00
H239x—Same as H237x, in Blue..... 8.00

For those who prefer a smaller size Prayer Book, size 2⅞" x 4⅜ x ¼", the listings below are recommended. All binding and printing features exactly the same as in the larger book.

H137x—In Black Morocco.....$6.50
H138x—Same in Red..... 7.00
H139x—Same in Blue..... 7.00

HARPER & BROTHERS, Publishers—New York, N.Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE RELIGIOUS PRESS

Selected by GEORGE MACMURRAY

PILLARS OF THE CHURCH:—Presbyterian Life tells the story of an old deacon who at a prayer meeting invariably closed his testimony with the words, "I may not be making much progress, but I'm established." Not long afterward, this pillar of the church was found in his sulky, the wheels of which were up to the hubs in mud. A fellow churchman who had often listened to his testimony could not resist saying with a smile, "Well, deacon, you're not making much progress, but you're established."

Sometimes I think we do valiant servants of the Christ a disservice when we call them "pillars of the church." For what the church really needs is pioneers, not pillars. We know that Jesus did not rest his case with the pillars of the church of his day. He sought out pioneers instead.

BISHOP AND PRESS!—"When a bishop says something religious it is most often ignored; when he says something political it is fully reported," writes the Bishop of Manchester in the Diocesan Leaflet for September. The bishop remarks that the newspapers are not wholly to blame, for they have to cater for their readers. "The real reason is that many journalists think that the public is uninterested in the Christian faith and believe that salvation —if there is such a thing—can come only through political measures and programs."

The bishop's remarks were provoked by the misinterpretation by some of the newspapers of his address to the Manchester diocesan conference in which he challenged the diocese to a great united effort of evangelism. Many Manchester churchpeople were disturbed to read in the local press the same evening the startling announcement: "'Blitz Communism' plan by North-West Clergy," followed by the statement that "Clergy throughout the Manchester diocese in September, 1952, will begin a two-year campaign against Communism."

In reply, the bishop says: "It is not the Church's task to fight Communism—but to preach the Gospel."

THE NATURE OF THE SPECTER:—The Watchman-Examiner calls attention to the famous opening line of the Communist Manifesto—"there is a specter now haunting Europe—the specter of Communism." The Baptist paper points out the growth of the specter and makes a keen analysis.

Our response to the specter of Communism has often been that of children running panic-stricken from a haunted house—a response compounded of terror, hysteria, and fear. Such a response is dangerous, because frightened people are not capable of making intelligent decisions or of adopting stern and consistent policies to combat the evil.

The first answer to Communism, then, is to divest it of its spectral qualities—to see it as it really is and to understand it fully; for Communism is not an invisible ghostly power. It is a movement created by man, operated by man, and subject to the same limitations and frailties as all other man-made movements.

QUICKIE:—Origin of this got lost between the scissors and the paste: One trouble in this country is the number of people who are trying to get something for nothing. Another is the high percentage of those who succeed.

THE CHURCH PENSION FUND

and its subsidiaries

administered for the benefit of the Church

THE CHURCH HYMNAL CORPORATION

Publishers of The Hymnal; Hymnal 1940 Companion; Book of Common Prayer; A Prayer Book for Soldiers and Sailors; Prayer Book Studies; Book of Offices; Stowe's Clerical Directory.

CHURCH LIFE INSURANCE CORPORATION

Offers low cost insurance and annuity contracts to clergy, lay officials and active lay workers of the Church, either voluntary or paid, and their immediate families. Services include individual insurance programming and assistance to parish officials in preparing and establishing plans for retirement of lay employees.

THE CHURCH FIRE INSURANCE CORPORATION

Low cost fire, windstorm and extended coverage insurance on property owned by or closely affiliated with the Church, and on the residences and personal property of the clergy.

Further information available by addressing any of the above at

20 EXCHANGE PLACE NEW YORK 5, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

NEWS OF OTHER CHURCHES

PROTESTS OVER VATICAN CONTINUE POURING IN

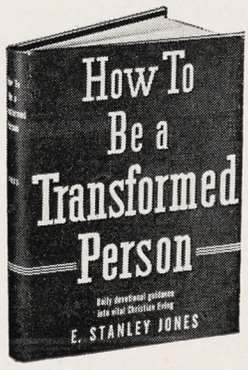
Protests over the appointment of an ambassador to the Vatican continue to snowball. Southern Baptists, through the Rev. J. D. Grey, president of their convention, said that calling the Vatican, which covers 108 acres, a political state was unrealistic and added that if it was "then every representative of the Vatican in this country should be registered as a representative of a foreign government." — A group representing the American Council of Christian Churches, fundamentalists, plan a pilgrimage to Washington in January to protest. — Florida council of churches condemned the action, following an address by Roswell Barnes of the National Council of Churches who called the appointment a "reckless thing . . . dictated by political expediency."—Telegrams of protests were sent the President by leaders of the northern California - western Nevada council of churches.—Ministers of Chicago voted to send a three-man delegation to present their views to the Illinois Senators.—The Council of Bishops of the Methodist Church is planning a "sustained and organized protest." — Methodists of Philadelphia and vicinity have sent letters of protest to the President and the Pennsylvania Senators.—The two Alabama Senators, Lister Hill and John Sparkman, have already assured a group of ministers of that state that they will oppose the appointment.

COLLEGE PRESIDENT IS BACKED BY TRUSTEES

The board of trustees of the University of Ohio have upheld their ruling giving President Howard Bevis power to decide who may speak to students and faculty groups. First to be barred was Cecil Hinshaw, Quaker, who was to have spoken under the auspices of the Friends Service Committee. He was barred because he is a pacifist, said the university president. The Ohio council of churches has protested the gag rule without mentioning the university by name.

UNUSUAL RULING IN CO CASE

It is not what a religious denomination teaches but how an individual interprets that teaching that should decide whether a man is a valid conscientious objector. So declared Harry E. Watkins, federal judge, in the case of Howard Everngam, a 23-year-old Roman Catholic, who refused to be inducted and was charged with violating the selective service act.



DR. SOCKMAN LATEST TO BE ACCUSED

An overflow crowd of teachers turned out at a meeting of the Iowa education association to hear the Rev. Ralph W. Sockman, New York Methodist, whose appearance had been protested by veteran groups who charged that he was a pacifist and had been associated with an alleged Communist-front organization.

Let E. STANLEY JONES show YOU

How to Be a Transformed Person

in his NEW book of Daily Devotional Readings

To Be Published November 26

Toward a new, mature, transformed life—HOW TO BE A TRANSFORMED PERSON will help you —Gain a new attitude of serenity, with roots that go down into ultimate Reality

—Release your mind from worry and dissatisfaction, into peace and confidence

—Achieve radiant health in body, mind, will, and emotions

—Find the spiritual strength that will sustain you through all the storms of life.

Scripture, meditation, prayer, and affirmation for every day in the year—logical steps to transformed and effective living!

384 Pages
Pocket Size
Just $1.50

* * *

AT YOUR BOOKSTORE Abingdon-Cokesbury

Publishers of Fine Books for over Four Centuries

The significance of Holy Communion in modern life

By THE REV. W. NORMAN PITTENGER, S.T.D.
General Theological Seminary

The Christian Sacrifice

An outstanding religious scholar interprets the relevance of eucharistic worship in the life of the Church today. An inspired interpretation of Holy Communion for every layman, it is thought-provoking for the clergy as well.

Dr. Pittenger traces the historical origins of communion from the New Testament through its development in the early Church. He stresses the essential importance of the rite as the central action of the Christian Church — an action in which Christ is "remembered" — a communion establishing fellowship between God and man in Christ. $3.50

Also by Dr. Pittenger:

The Historic Faith and a Changing World

"He faces up squarely to the problems that confront the Church today."—Living Church

At your bookstore • $2.50

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
114 Fifth Ave., N. Y. 11

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CHURCHES OVERSEAS

UNITARIANS ASSAIL SMEAR TECHNIQUES

Smear techniques and witch-hunting were denounced in a sharply-worded resolution adopted here by the general conference of the American Unitarian Association, meeting at Montreal. But the delegates voted down another resolution, drawn up by a committee of west coast United States Unitarians, calling for abolition of the House un-American Activities Committee. The issue came up as a result of hearings held in Hollywood recently by the House committee. The Rev. Stephen H. Fritchman, minister of First Unitarian church, Los Angeles, was summoned to testify before the committee as to his alleged pro-Communist sympathies.

The adopted resolution stated: "Freedom to hold and to express opinion is a cornerstone of liberty among free peoples and any undue interference with that freedom menaces their liberty. No freedom is more important than freedom of a minister to speak as his conscience dictates and to preserve inviolable the pastoral relationship with his congregation.

"Individuals and groups in the U.S. have increasingly made a practice of accusing other individuals and groups of Communist affiliation or sympathies; and while these accusations have frequently turned out to be groundless, they have repeatedly resulted not only in serious injury and injustice to numerous innocent individuals causing them to lose their jobs and incur unpopularity, but have also put such fear into the hearts of others not accused or even suspected of Communist affiliation or sympathies that they dare not express their views, however legitimate. It is intolerable that the ignorant and the irresponsible members of the community should succeed in controlling public and private opinion."

BRITISH CHURCH PAPER IS SUSPENDED

Soaring production costs have doomed The Guardian, 105-year-old weekly of the Church of England. Its last number appeared October 15th. An editorial in the Church of England Newspaper, commenting on the event, chided the Church for the failure of the magazine to survive. "What is the Church thinking of to allow this tragedy?" it asked. "The publication of information and the exchange of ideas is essential to the Church. All sections must be catered for. Yet to my knowledge, not on one single occasion has the religious press, as such, received official backing that amounts to anything."

The Manchester Guardian, liberal newspaper, also voiced its regret over the fate of The Guardian. It said, editorially, that "if well-informed and unbiased comment from an entirely independent journal is no longer acceptable to members of the Church of England, then the omens are bad. It may be some comfort to the editorial staff to know that their newspaper ceased publication when it still deserved the adjective 'great'."

RE-READ PEACE APPEAL IN GERMANY

Bishop Otto Dibelius of Berlin, chairman of the Council of the Evangelical Church in Germany, recommended that the peace appeal issued by the Church last year be read again from the pulpits of all member churches. Drafted at a meeting of the synod at Berlin in April, 1950, the peace appeal urged the German people to be on guard against "propaganda fostering enmity between peoples and preparing for a new war." It asked also that all German Evangelical churches pray regularly during services for world peace including especially prayers for "those governments upon whom lies a special responsibility for war and peace."

Bishop Dibelius said the renewed reading of the appeal had been requested by the Brethren Council of the Confessional Church of which Pastor Martin Niemoeller is president. He stated that although the appeal is more than a year old "it contains many things which apply to all times and all situations."

DECORATE PRIESTS IN POLAND

A group of priests headed by Dean Jan Czuj of the school of theology of Warsaw University have been presented with high state decorations at a public ceremony. Other recipients were the Rev. Roman Szemraj, director of the League of Priests for Freedom and Democracy: the Rev. Henrik Weynski of Cracow; Prof. Kozubski, also of the theological school at Warsaw.

UTILITY ANGLICAN CASSOCK

$22.50

This superior Rayon Faille Cassock has lined sleeves and full rayon lining to the waist. It is light weight and price includes a two piece cincture of same material. Tailored to perfection for durable wearing qualities.

Made in traditional style in our own workshop by America's oldest Cassock makers.

Suitable for all-year wear. Complete satisfaction is guaranteed.

FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE USE COUPON

COX SONS & VINING, INC. WITNESS 11-15-51
Established 1837
133 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N. Y.

Please send_____Anglican Cassock with cincture of same material.

Chest_____ Height_____ Collar Size_____

Sleeve Length_____

Name_____

Address_____

Town_____ State_____

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT, Book Editor

The Sovereignty of God and the Word of God; Creation and Grace; Christian Humanism; The Self and Its Hazards; Freedom in God; Christianity and Society; Guides to the Thought of Karl Barth, Emil Brunner, Jacques Maritain, Karl Jaspers, Nicholas Berdyaev, and Reinhold Niebuhr, respectively. Philosophical Library. $5.00.

These six little "Guides" are just what the beginner or the layman needs to explain to him what the shooting is all about in modern philosophical theology. The lists of books for further reading will help him to go further with his studies.

The Reader's Bible. Oxford University Press. $6.50.

The Oxford and Cambridge University Presses are famous for their fine Bibles, some of them, like the Bruce Rogers Bible, running into a lot of money. This one is a superbly printed edition of the King James translation, including not only the Apocrypha but also "The Translators to the Reader" which is usually omitted in modern reprints. The chapter divisions are kept (but not the little summaries); the verse numbers are omitted; prose is printed in paragraphs and poetry is printed in poetic form with an even left margin (begging no questions about parallelism!). Finally, every division of the Bible has a brief, accurate, scholarly introduction. Maps are used as end pages. The type is large and clear. This book was designed to be a "layman's Bible." It achieves this purpose without question and ought to be one of the most widely read editions ever published.

The Road to Bithynia: A Novel of Luke, the Beloved Physician. By Frank G. Slaughter. Doubleday. $3.50.

This quasi-historical romance covers the period from the stoning of Stephen to Paul's imprisonment in Caesarea. Luke the physician is masterfully drawn with the aid of ancient medical sources; otherwise he represents 20th century logic and sense over against a hot-headed, overambitious Paul, who, among other things, selfishly obstructs the love of Luke and Thecla.—Paul W. Meyer

The Life of the Soul. By Samuel H. Miller. Harper. $2.00.

No pious meditation this, nor platitudinous. Written with the insight of a poet and the realism of a surgeon, it is a virile, astringent, and refreshing book. Dr. Miller has the ability to make old truths, like newly polished silver, gleam again. Uniquely original and compelling in presentation and thought.—Joseph H. Titus

A Little Treasury of British Poetry. Edited by Oscar Williams. Scribner. $5.00.

The latest volume in the series of "Little Treasury" books is an exquisitely beautiful printing of several hundred British poems (858 pages) with many pages of plates, selected from a wide range of authors, from Sir Patrick Spens and the old ballads, down to Sydney Keyes and T. S. Eliot. It is one of the most beautiful gift books of the year. Better than that, it is one of the most beautiful books to read!

Where Jesus Walked. By Frank McCoy Field. Exposition Press. $3.

A trip to the Holy Land can be either a very disappointing thing or a gloriously inspiring experience. For Dr. Field it was the latter for he saw with the eyes of his soul as well as the eyes of his body. Against a background of years of Bible interest the author takes one through the sites of the Holy Land, living above the sukh in the walled city of Jerusalem and on the hillside of the Christian city of Nazareth.

The tour was made before the Middle East war and division when travel was free on both sides of the line. Now Nazareth and the places of Jesus' boyhood are in Israel, while most of the Old Testament sites are on the Arab side of no man's land. One can still visit both sides, however and tours are regularly arranged through the American Christian Palestine Committee. The next best thing to a personal trip to Palestine is Dr. Field's interesting volume.—Sydney Temple

The Lord's Prayer. By Hugh Martin. Macmillan. $1.50.

We have recently urged that more sermons be preached—in series—on the Lord's Prayer. This little book is one of the best for a series of meditations to accompany such a series of sermons. The author's scholarship is up-to-date—see what he says about "Lead us not into temptation," which means "Do not allow us to be subjected to the ordeal of trial and suffering, but if we must face it give us strength to endure and remain faithful" (p. 112).

The Story of the Christian Church. Morehouse. $1.05.

A series of broadcast talks, by Dom Gregory Dix and others, on the history of the Church. Brief, readable, beautifully printed.

The Monks who Worried. By Russell Collinge. Sheed and Ward. $1.

Another "peace of mind" book, by way of clever cartoons and a pungent moral.

RELIGIOUS CHRISTMAS CARDS

Christmas Card Boxes, $1.00 each

I The Story of Christmas in Text and Picture 16 cards

II 20 Hummel Christmas Cards

Christmas Card Packets, $1.00 each

4X Four 25c Cards
10X Ten 10c Cards
20Xa Twenty 5c Cards
20Xb Twenty 5c Single Mowbray Cards

Anglo-Franciscan Pocket Kalendar

Feasts and Fasts for 1952
15c each — 8 for $1.00

THE GRACE DIEU PRESS
Maryhill Mount Sinai, L. I., N. Y.

This beautifully designed Visiting Communion Set made of sterling silver, with crystal mounted Cruet, forms a most welcome gift for church or clergyman. Price of 5 pieces, complete with Case, $95.00.

Prices subject to change without notice

WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED ECCLESIASTICAL BROCHURE GIVING PRICES

Gorham

PROVIDENCE 7, RHODE ISLAND

AMERICA'S LEADING SILVERSMITHS SINCE 1831

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Vestments
AND ACCESSORIES FOR YOUR CHOIR

You receive the benefit of our knowledge of denominational propriety, skilled tailoring and insistence upon perfection. We combine chorister's comfort with liturgical correctness. Choose from our selective styles and quality cloths.

CLERGY VESTMENTS
AND WARDROBE ACCESSORIES
Embroidered Superfrontals • Frontals • Stoles • Markers

Write for our latest catalog. Cloth swatches on request.

J. THEODORE Cuthbertson INC.
2013 SANSOM ST. PHILADELPHIA 3, PENNSYLVANIA

ROBES

Pulpit, Choir and Confirmation Robes; Paraments. Fine materials; beautiful work; fair prices. Catalog, samples on request. Mention items needed.

DeMOULIN BROS. & CO.
1188 S. 4th St., Greenville, Ill.

ALTAR GUILDS

Full range of finest qualities Pure Irish Linen for all church uses. Immediate delivery; prices unchanged.

Samples Free

MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
Box 325 Marblehead, Mass.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

ALTAR LINENS
BY THE YARD

From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States. I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values and qualities imported from Ireland. Also ecclesiastical transfer patterns, beautiful household table damask and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.

MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

Make Christmas Christian

A church woman gave her rector a check as a thank offering for her friends. What her gift accomplished is related by Bishop Hines. Rectors will want to mail this leaflet to parishioners.

$1 for 25; $1.50 for 50; $2 for 100

THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

PEOPLE

CLERGY CHANGES:

ROBERT G. SPELLMAN, formerly ass't at Holy Trinity, Middletown, Conn., is now ass't at St. Shephen's, Pittsfield, Mass.

GEORGE W. SMITH, formerly rector of St. Luke's, St. Alban's, Vt., is now rector of St. Peter's, Springfield, Mass.

CHESTER HARRIS, formerly a Methodist minister, is now ass't at St. Shephen's, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

JOSEPH N. BARNETT, formerly rector of Grace Church, Wabasha, Minn., is now vicar of St. James, Coldwell, Idaho.

RALPH D. BONCHER has resigned as rector of St. Peter's, Lithgow, N. Y.

ROBERT H. BOOKER, formerly associate rector of the Ascension, Pittsburgh, Pa., is now rector of St. Mark's, Johnstown, Pa.

EUGENE M. CHAPMAN, formerly senior associate at Calvary, Pittsburgh, Pa., is now locum tenans of Trinity, Rochester, Pa.

CLIFFORD NOBES, formerly rector of St. Thomas, Bellrose, N. Y., was instituted rector of St. Augustine's, Santa Monica, Cal., on Oct. 21 by Bishop Bloy.

JOHN R. BILL, formerly associate rector of Grace Church, Madison, Wis., was instituted rector of St. Peter's. San Pedro, Cal., on Oct. 21 by Bishop Bloy.

PAUL F. HEBBERGER, formerly rector of Trinity, St. James, Mo., is now vicar of St. James, Dalhart, Texas.

FRANK MAPLES, formerly rector of St. Augustine's, St. Louis, Mo., is now rector of Trinity, St. James, Mo., and in charge of churches at Cuba and Sullivan.

HIRAM R. BENNETT, rector of Grace Church, Everett, Mass., becomes rector of Christ Church, Towanda, Pa., Dec. 1.

EDWIN E. KIRTON, formerly rector of St. Michael and All Angels, Medford, N. Y., is now rector of St. Mark's, Wilmington, N. C.

DEATHS:

FRANK H. BUCK, 60, rector of Emmanuel, Grass Valley, Calif., died suddenly October 6th.

ORDINATIONS:

JAMES MILLAR was ordained priest by Bishop Tucker on Oct. 30 at St. Paul's, Bellevue, O., where he is now rector. He is also rector of Grace Church, Clyde.

ST. JAMES LESSONS

A nine course series of instruction for Episcopal Church Schools including illustrated work books—150-250 pages (60c each) and teachers' manuals I, II, III 40c each, IV through IX 60c each).

No Samples - Payment with orders

St. James Lessons, Inc.
865 Madison Ave., Dpt. 5, N. Y. 21, N. Y.

CLERGY BENEFITS

Insurance at a SUBSTANTIAL DISCOUNT

Professional religious workers — also YMCA, Salvation Army, professors, etc.— can get "preferred risk" life, health and accident policies. No salesmen will call on you. Our 51st year. Write for "Bulletin S".

MINISTERS LIFE & CASUALTY UNION
118 W. FRANKLIN • MINNEAPOLIS 4, MINN.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS
EST 1877

Mitchell FOLD-O-LEG tables

The strongest, handiest folding table made. For banquet, church and school use. Write for descriptive folder.

MITCHELL MFG. COMPANY
2748 S. 34th St., Milwaukee 7, Wis. Dept. W

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS

Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS

Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.

SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

THE BISHOP WHITE
PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833

Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.

PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)

Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

HELEN MEARS
Churchwoman - Author of New York

I am addressing the following open letter to the President:

"Dear Mr. President,

"According to the New York Times you have asked us all, on Thanksgiving Day, to pray for divine help for the cause of peace. Desiring peace, as we all do, we must remember that the Lord helps those who help themselves.

"Do you remember the words in Shakespeare's Hamlet (act III, scene III) when the king, Hamlet's uncle, is trying to pray following his murder of his brother? 'My words fly up, my thoughts remain below; Words, without thoughts, never to heaven go.'

"I wonder if prayers which ascend on the mushrooming explosions of atom-bombs can reach heaven, or whether instead they are smothered in the miasma of radio-active death, and return earthward to poison our collective conscience.

"Wouldn't our Thanksgiving prayers for peace be more likely to accomplish their aim, if they were accompanied by a presidential declaration declaring a cease-fire in Korea, ordering a moratorium on all military preparations, and summoning an international conference dedicated to the task of trying, with sincerity, patience, and a concern for the other fellow's point of view to solve the urgent problems and resolve the dark suspicion which make peace illusory?"

MARTIN S. HILL
Layman of Hartford, Conn.

The appointment of Gen. Mark W. Clark as ambassador to the Vatican is a serious blow to the Protestants of this country. It breaches the time-honored principle of the separation of Church and state upon which our nation was founded. So far as President Truman is concerned, it was of course a political maneuver aimed at solidifying the Catholic vote behind him for next year's election. His first step was to favor a huge loan to the fascist dictator, Franco, who is best known as the persecutor of the Spanish Protestants.

In the time remaining before the next session of Congress in January it is the duty of all Protestant organizations and individuals to write both their Senators protesting against the nomination and urging its rejection. It would apparently be hopeless to seek to influence President Truman as he seems to be firmly in the grip of his Roman Catholic advisers. However, the appointment should not be confirmed by the Senate and it is the duty of all sincere Protestants to see that this takes place.

GEORGE BLAIR
Churchman of Chicago

The piece by E. A. Callanan Jr. on Paganized Holidays (Witness, Oct. 18) was excellent and timely. We should make every effort to keep Church holidays Christian.

ANSWER: With Christmas approaching we suggest again that rectors order copies of "Make Christmas Christian" for distribution. It tells the story of a gift of money sent by a Churchwoman as a thank offering for her many friends. Instead of sending them presents she wrote them notes telling them what she had done. What her gift accomplished is recorded in the leaflet by Bishop Hines of Texas. Copies are available from The Witness, Tunkhannock, Pa., at $1 for 25; $1.50 for 50; $2 for 100.

G. ASHTON OLDHAM
Bishop of Albany, retired

This is to thank and congratulate you on your editorial Crusade for War (Witness, Oct. 25). It is splendid and needed.

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

The Prayer Book
Its History & Purpose
BY
IRVING P. JOHNSON
Late Witness Editor
25c for single copy
$2 for ten copies
The WITNESS
Tunkhannock, Pa.

FORK UNION
MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth New Hampshire

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
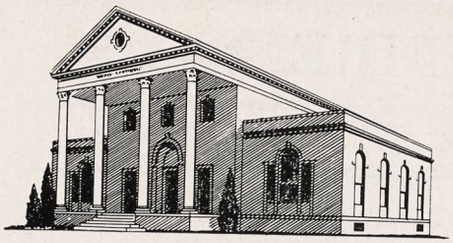
Lenox, Massachusetts



CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE-MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

ANNOUNCING

Seabury Press

OFFICIAL PUBLISHING HOUSE OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH

October marked the inauguration of a new publishing house — SEABURY PRESS.

Created by action of National Council, operating as an agency of the Department of Christian Education, and located in Tucker House in Greenwich, SEABURY PRESS has as its basic function the production, distribution, and sale of books and courses prepared for the educational work of the Church. The Manager of the Press is Leon McCauley.

The three SEABURY PRESS publications described below are the first in a publishing plan geared to the vital and pressing needs of our Church and its teaching program.

Other major projects are nearing completion. Additional courses and books now in the planning stage will soon be forthcoming.

SEABURY PRESS will uphold high standards of publishing and seek the widest possible distribution of the work which bears its imprint.

These three new courses have been specially prepared for use with the first three titles in THE CHURCH'S TEACHING series. All three will be available in late November.

REDEMPTION AND REVELATION. By the Rev. Robert C. Dentan, Ph.D., Berkeley Divinity School. Leader's Guide for use with THE HOLY SCRIPTURES, by same author. 40 lessons, with discussion questions. College level. 192 pages, paper bound. $1.50

CHURCH HISTORY FOR GROUP STUDY. By Theodore M. Switz, Ph.D., University of Chicago. Three booklets for use with CHAPTERS IN CHURCH HISTORY, by Powel Mills Dawley, Ph.D. — with 20-page Leader's Guide, 30¢; 16-page Student's Guide, 20¢, and 56-page set of Confidential, Self-Informing Quizzes, 50¢. College level. $1.00 the set.

OUR FAITH AND THE CHURCH. By the Rev. James A. Pike, J.S.D., Chaplain, Columbia University, and the Rev. W. Norman Pittenger, S.T.D., General Theological Seminary. Leader's Guide for use with THE FAITH OF THE CHURCH, by same authors. College level. 50¢

Also available: HOW TO TEACH ADULTS, an indispensable help for everyone planning to lead one of these courses in his parish, 25¢. The Department of Christian Education strongly urges that no leader attempt to do without this pamphlet.

PARISHIONERS ARE PEOPLE. Produced jointly by the Department of Christian Education and the Department of Christian Social Relations. Family Study Plan course on human relationships in the parish. 5 pamphlets, and HOW TO TEACH ADULTS. $1.00

Seabury Press GREENWICH, CONNECTICUT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The WITNESS

10¢ A COPY

November 22, 1951

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SEABURY PRESS

Story of the Week on Page Three

FINAL ARTICLE BY ALGER ADAMS

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 7:30, 8 (and 9 Holy Days except Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 8:30, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers — 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. — 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital — 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m.
Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a. m. Holy Communion.
9:30 and 11 a. m. Church School.
11 a. m. Morning Service and Sermon.
4 p. m. Evensong. Special Music.
Weekday: Holy Communion Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.; Wednesdays and Saints Days at 8 a. m.; Thursdays at 12:10 p. m. Organ Recitals, Fridays, 12:10.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer — 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon.
Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D.,
Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 — 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m.
Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacColl, 3rd, Rector
Rev. Peter Chase, Curate
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 39 The WITNESS NOVEMBER 22, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Seabury Press Is New Official Publishing House

Episcopal Church Is Now Producing, Selling And Distributing Own Books

★ Seabury Press, an official publishing house of the Episcopal Church, was created recently by action of National Council, and Leon McCauley, manager of the new press, is now in the process of hiring a staff of publishing technicians.

Church people with publishing experience who would like to work for the new press, are urged to write Mr. McCauley.

The press, which has headquarters in Tucker House, 28 Havemeyer Place, Greenwich, Conn., is set up as an agency of the department of Christian education. Basically, its function is to produce, sell, and distribute the books and courses prepared for the Church by the department.

The many forthcoming courses and books, Mr. McCauley pointed out recently, are, in their comprehensive coverage of the Christian education of the whole Church, very extensive and elaborate, and require, if they are to be produced and distributed to the Church's best advantage, a professional publishing-house set-up.

Actually, he went on, the Episcopal Church has been, up to now, the only major Protestant denomination in America without its own publishing-house. Others, many decades ago, took the step we are now taking.

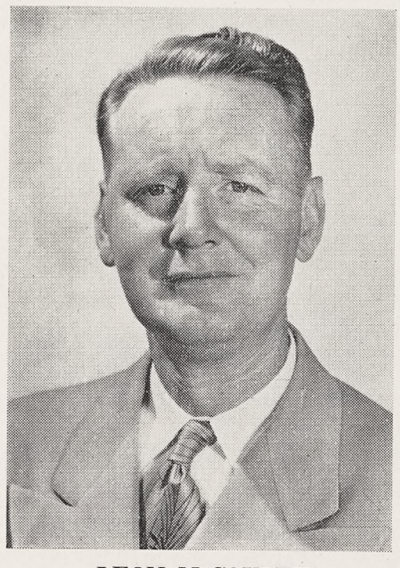
Seabury Press, Mr. McCauley added, has been set up entirely outside the missionary giving of the Church. Though responsible, through the department of Christian education, to the National Council, it cannot expect an annual appropriation from the missionary budget.

The press must finance itself, and so set up its internal machinery that it can pay its own way, and build up its capital. It is expected that, in five years, the press will be operating on a sound financial basis.

One gift has already been made, through the Episcopal Church Foundation, toward the establishment of Seabury Press, and it is believed that others will be forthcoming soon.

The department of Christian education, created in 1946 by General Convention, to "produce its own approved curriculum for the use of the whole Church," began its existence in 1947 with the appointment of the Rev. John Heuss as director.

The editorial board functioned at one time with only a typewriter, desk, paper, and editor, housed in a garage on the Seabury House property; and the department has now grown to a staff of nearly fifty persons, most of whom are concerned with the development of curriculum, or with leadership training.



"We expect Seabury Press to move fast," Heuss said recently. "Although the press opened shop only on September first, it already has three major projects in progress, all scheduled for completion by late November."

The courses now in production, he added, are: Redemption and Revelation, by Robert C. Dentan, a leader's guide and study manual to go with the Holy Scriptures, by the same author, 250 pages, paper-bound, about $1.25.

Church History for Group Study, by Theodore Switz, a set of guides and quizzes to go with Chapters in Church History, by Dr. Powel M. Dawley; 32-page leader's guide, 16-page student's guide, and a 32-page set of quizzes, pamphlet-bound, about $.95 the set.

Our Faith and the Church, by the Revs. James A. Pike and W. Norman Pittenger, a leader's guide and study manual to go with The Faith of the Church, the same authors, 64 pages, pamphlet-bound, about 60 cents.

"In addition," Heuss said,

LEON McCAULEY
Manager of Seabury Press

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

"three books in the Church's teaching series are coming along at a good pace; two additional family study courses are nearly ready for production, and a variety of editorial projects are under consideration."

Seabury Press will grow with the need, Heuss went on. Currently, it is staffed only by Leon McCauley, manager, and two secretaries. Mr. McCauley's next problems are to set up production, sales, and book-promotion facilities. It is imperative not only that we produce handsome and quality material, such as the Church wants and needs, but also that we secure for this material, the widest possible distribution.

Mr. McCauley comes to us from Oxford University Press, where he has been manager of the religious and Bible departments. He has had many years' experience in all phases of publishing.

"Establishing an effective publishing organization is," Dr. Heuss concluded, "an intricate business, requiring gradual growth over many months. The organization should be functioning smoothly, we estimate, in a year, and we believe it will pay its own way within five years. That is our present goal."

COCKPIT SITE FOR CHURCH

★ St. Hilda's mission, Trujillo Alto, Puerto Rico, occupies the site of a former cockpit, given to the church by a conscience-stricken owner who vowed to promote no more cockfights and to dedicate the site to the purposes of the church.

RETREAT HOUSE FOR OLYMPIA

★ St. Andrew's House, Alderbrook, is a new retreat house for the diocese of Olympia. Formerly a large summer home, located on Hood Canal, an arm of Puget Sound, the house has been made available to the Bishop of Olympia for the use of the diocese, by a layman.

The house was inaugurated with a retreat for laymen, led by Bishop Bayne and Lt. Gen. John C. H. Lee. At that retreat it was decided to name the house after St. Andrew in token of the hope that the house would have a strong missionary influence in the northwest.

YOUTH LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE

★ An adult leadership conference was held at Richmond, Va., November 17-18, sponsored jointly by the diocese of Virginia, Maryland, Washington and Southwestern Virginia. The leaders were the Rev. Knud A. Larson, chairman of the division of youth, and Miss Kathryn Snyder, education secretary of the same national department.

EDWARD T. LOOK SPEAKS AT ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S

★ Edward T. Look, retired banker who is now teaching at the General Seminary, was the speaker November 7th at a supper meeting of laymen of St. Bartholomew's, New York. He relinquished his banking position in order to present seminarians the layman's point of view.

GIVE 'EM A CHANCE PLEADS PERKINS

★ "Give 'em a chance" is the plea of the Rev. Louis L. Perkins, rector of St. John's, Auburn, N. Y., who is also chaplain of the prison there. The man who organized the Brotherhood of St. Andrew chapter in the prison three years ago was recently released and represented the "boys in the icebox" at the national convention of the Brotherhood last month.

COUNCIL OF CHALCEDON ANNIVERSARY

★ Dean Francis B. Sayre Jr. of Washington Cathedral told a congregation there that the last time that Christians were really united was at the Council of Chalcedon, which met 1,500 years ago in the little church of St. Euphemia in Chalcedon, near Constantinople. The service, marking the event, combined the Russian Orthodox and Episcopal liturgies, with 9,000 persons present. The Rev. Manuel Essensky and the choir of the Orthodox Church that he serves sang the Russian service of thanksgiving.

PASTORAL STAFF GIVEN BY MRS. ACHESON

★ Mrs. Edward C. Acheson has presented to the diocese of Connecticut the pastoral staff used by the late Bishop Acheson. It was made in England from 13th century wood from St. Nicholas Church, Newbury. The present secretary of state is the son of the late Bishop and Mrs. Acheson.

MISSOURI EXTENDS MISSION WORK

★ The diocese of Missouri is extending mission work in the Ironton - DeSoto - Bonne Terre field which is located south of St. Louis. A resident clergyman is planned for St. Paul's, Ironton, largest of the three churches, who will also have charge of the other two.

WEEKDAY EDUCATION IN BUFFALO

★ St. John's, Buffalo, N. Y., is conducting religious education classes on Monday afternoons for children of the fourth through the eighth grades. Weekday classes are also held at St. James', Batavia, N. Y., for children in the second through eighth grades.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

ANIMALS IN CHURCHYARD HIGHLIGHT SERVICE

★ Christ Church in Greenville, Del., on Nov. 22 will observe its annual tithing service, one of the most unusual Thanksgiving Day ceremonies in the nation.

The service, with a sermon by the Rev. William C. Munds and singing by the choir, is conventional enough. What is unique is the sight and the sounds of the churchyard during the service—particularly the sounds. For on tithing day, the churchyard is filled not only with food, clothing and household supplies but with cattle, sheep, pigs, chickens, ducks and geese.

The cacophony of grunts, squeals, moos, honks and clucks punctuating the traditional Thanksgiving service bring only smiles of satisfaction to the faces of the hundreds who jam the church's pews and every inch of its standing room. For, the contents of the churchyard are brought there early in the day by the people who are worshipping inside.

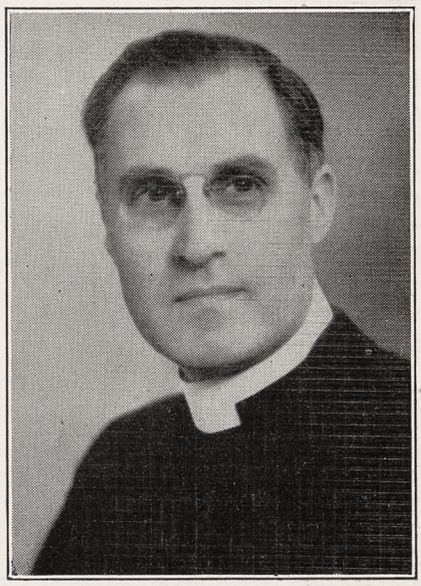
It is expressly stipulated that each object, animate or inanimate, must be the product of the donor's own work or care. Only livestock that farmers themselves have raised is acceptable; only home-canned foods and clothing knit, handmade, or personally repaired (if used) by members are received.

After the church service, the congregation begins storing most of the offerings in a basement room of the church. A special committee supervises the transport of the livestock to slaughter houses and processing plants and, later, to deep-freeze lockers. In the next 12 months, these reserves of provisions and clothing will be withdrawn as required for distribution to needy persons of the parish.

"No one feels sensitive about accepting this kind of help," says Robert N. Downs, farmer, war veteran, and vestryman who conceived the tithing day observance. "The people who need it don't consider it charity but merely a helping hand from the organization of which they are a part. The idea is that the Church should take care of its own. There is too much centralization in higher echelons of aid to the needy. The Red Cross probably would take care of some of the emergencies among our people, but they are our people and we are proud to do the job ourselves."

Mr. Downs calls the project a "reincarnation" of an old Hebrew custom which also is observed in scattered sections of England. The tithing day service is the fulfillment of a vow he made on Dec. 7, 1941, when, as commanding officer of a cavalry troop on maneuvers in Virginia, he heard the news of Pearl Harbor over a portable field radio. Realizing the grim reality of what the world—and he—was in for, Mr. Downs prayed, vowing that if the Lord would see him through he would undertake to do something "that will help other people; something productive, worthwhile." Out of the army five years later, he bought a farm near here and settled down to make it productive. Then, remembering his vow, he worked out the details of the tithing day service and broached it to Dr. Munds.

Although started solely as a venture of Christ Church the Thanksgiving tithing plan is now shared with another congregation — Lower Brandywine Presbyterian Church. For several years now, the Presbyterians have added their donations to those in the churchyard at Church Church and cooperated in the work of distribution through the year.



HARVARD DEDICATES HONOR ROLL

★ A marble memorial bearing the names of 697 Harvard students, alumni and faculty members who died in service during world war two was on view for the first time at Memorial Church in Harvard yard on Nov. 11.

Bishop Henry K. Sherrill, presiding bishop, preached the sermon during a simple commemorative service. Dean Willard L. Sperry, chairman of the board of preachers, led the service, and the University Choir sang. A special section of the church was reserved for families of the men on the roll of honor.

HARVARD SCHOOL RECEIVES GIFT

★ The mothers club of Harvard School, Los Angeles, presented Headmaster William S. Chalmers with $4,000 which they raised at a festival. The money goes into the building fund.

FREDERICK C. GRANT, Witness Book Editor and Professor at Union Seminary, is honored by the new book by Dean Sherman Johnson, The Joy of Study

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

MACHINE SHOP CHURCH SCORED BY FERRIS

★ Churches were warned in Haverill, Mass., against becoming "magnificent machine shops teaching how to be good in 12 easy lessons." The Rev. Theodore Ferris, rector of Trinity, Boston, told delegates to the annual convention of the Massachusetts council of churches that "it is no wonder you have to beg men to come to a men's club in a church when that club has become a poor imitation of Kiwanis or Rotary. The church for some reason or other is able to turn out more organizational machinery than any institution known to man. We can draw up by-laws by the ton and appoint committees, bureaus and departments . . . until it is no wonder that people day after day are spiritually mangled in the wheels. More and more I am convinced that if we spent half the time with people that we spend with bureaus and departments the world would marvel at the results."

The Rev. Frank Jennings, the council's executive secretary, told the convention that "while we seek Christian unity in order to achieve Christian objectives, we are constantly in danger of allowing the machinery . . . to get in the way of what we are really trying to do. These organizational problems are the price we have to pay for more orderly procedure, particularly as we extend the borders of our efforts; but it will be a sorry day if we, amid the sounds of the machinery, fail to hear the voice of him who is the head of the Church."

The session adopted a resolution terming the nomination of an American ambassador to the Vatican "disastrous to national unity." It urged members of all the council's 1,800 congregations to send protests to the President, senators and congressmen.

Another resolution adopted criticized the use of "smear tactics" in political life. Other approved resolutions condemned government waste as "contrary to religious principles," protested the use of public funds in any way not benefiting all the public taxed, asserted Congress had been "shamefully dilatory" in providing for wheat shipments to India and urged emphasis of the fundamental moral principles of Christianity.

Bishop Norman B. Nash was elected president of the council for the coming year.

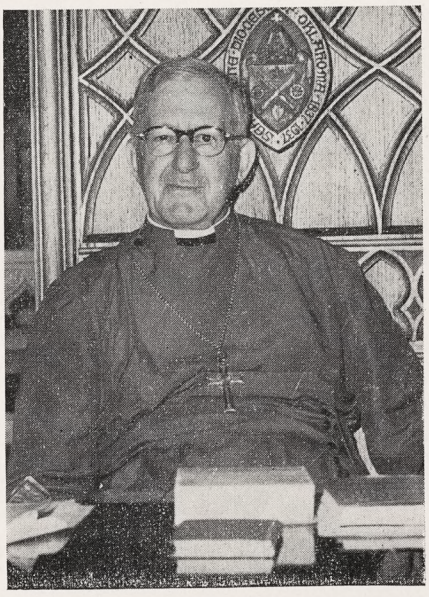
SEABURY-WESTERN SEEK $20,000

★ $20,000 is the goal which has been set by the alumni association of Seabury-Western Seminary to be raised by alumni and friends of the seminary on Theological Education Sunday, January 27, 1952.

Theological Education Sunday is an annual observance in the Church and is set by the Presiding Bishop. Prayers of thanksgiving are offered for the work of preparing men for the ministry done by the 10 seminaries of the Church. There are also petitions for the work of the future.

A money offering from the parishes and missions over the country is sent to the various seminaries. Increased costs of operation and a record student body makes the raising of $20,000 for Seabury-Western a necessity. The seminary operates on a budget of around $100,000, one-third of which is derived from student fees, one-third from endowments, and the remainder from gifts, including the theological education offering.

LOS ANGELES RECTORS CELEBRATE



The Rev. Douglas Stuart was honored by members of Grace Church, Los Angeles on October 28th, the 25th anniversary of his rectorship. The Rev. J. Herbert Smith was similarly honored at All Saints, Beverly Hills, on October 21, the 25th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood.

BALTIMORE PARISH CELEBRATES

★ St. Michael and All Angels, Baltimore, has begun a year long celebration of the 75th anniversary of its founding. It began in a little wooden chapel a block outside the city limits with 25 communicants. It is now in a church seating a thousand people, an undercroft, choir rooms, parish house and rectory. The church is now located in the geographical center of the city. The parish also had a mission, the Guardian Angel, with a church that seats three hundred and a parish house. The membership is now about 2,300 communicants with an additional eight hundred baptized persons. A number of events are planned, including an eight day preaching mission in March that will be conducted by the rector, the Rev. Don Frank Fenn.

LICHTENBERGER LEADS MISSION FOR MEN

★ Bishop Lichtenberger, coadjutor of Missouri, was the leader of a mission for men, an annual event at St. Mark's, St. Louis Hills. It began with a dinner with men of other parishes invited.

BISHOP CASADY of Oklahoma was one of the consecrators of Bishop Powell who will eventually succeed him as diocesan

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

PLAY PRESENTED IN CATHEDRAL

★ The renaissance of the drama in the church, begun with the professional presentation of Christopher Fry's "A Sleep of Prisoners" at St. James', New York, got a start in Los Angeles November 4th when the Altar Theater, organized by a group of clergymen to create spiritually and artistically acceptable Church dramatic works, presented the first performance of "If the Light Be Darkness," in St. Paul's Cathedral.

A second performance in the Cathedral was presented the following Sunday. The play by Phyllis Benbow Beardsley was written especially for presentation in the sanctuary as a form of worship service. It is presented by a professional cast under the direction of the well known producer, Henry Duffy. The music was written by Albert Hay Malotte, one of America's best known composers, famed for his setting of "The Lord's Prayer." Jonathan Seymour, known for his major theatre production of the classics, directed the play, and Minna Pelz Coe brought her wealth of experience to the musical direction.

COUNCIL EXECUTIVE WITH CHRISTIAN ACTION

★ The Rev. M. Moran Weston, an executive of the social relations department of the National Council, has been made chairman of the editorial and publications committee of the newly formed Christian Action. The co-chairmen are Prof. Reinhold Niebuhr of Union Seminary and Dean Liston Poe of the Yale Divinity School.

F. O. R. MEETS IN NEW YORK

★ Members of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, national pacifist organization, attended an Armistice day service at St. George's, New York, the afternoon of November 11th. The rector, the Rev. Edward O. Miller, was assisted in the service by the Rev. John Nevin Sayre, chairman of the international fellowship, the Rev. Shelton Hale Bishop, rector of St. Philip's, New York, and the Rev. Roger Geffen, on the staff at St. George's. The Rev. Eric M. Tasman, rector of the Holy Communion, South Orange, N. J. and president of the fellowship, was the preacher.

WHY THE RECTOR LEAVES HOME

★ When the Rev. and Mrs. Edward T. Adkins returned to their parish, St. Paul's, Overland, Mo., from a youth conference they found that the kitchen stove had been moved and a breakfast nook built in the rectory. Earlier in the year they found a new automatic water heater had been installed while they were away.

WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS CELEBRATES

★ The 50th anniversary of the setting apart of Western Massachusetts as a diocese was celebrated on November 18th with a service of praise and thanksgiving at Christ Church Cathedral, Springfield. Bishop Sherrill was the preacher. The service was directed by Dean Williams, with one of the lessons read by Mr. Henry A. Field, president of the trustees of the diocese, and the other by the Rev. Richard G. Preston of Worcester who is president of the standing committee. Officers of the diocese, the standing committee and the cathedral chapter joined with the clergy in the procession.

BISHOP BUDLONG IS HONORED

★ Bishop Budlong of Connecticut, retired, was awarded honors for a distinguished career at the annual homecoming of Shattuck School, Faribault, Minn. Similarly honored was the Rev. Hughell E. W. Fosbroke, the retired dean of General Seminary.

BISHOP POWELL HONORED

★ Bishop Powell of Maryland was honored by the clergy and their wives on October 19 at St. Thomas', Baltimore, the tenth anniversary of his consecration. The Rev. Philip J. Jensen, rector at Owings Mills, was the preacher at a celebration with the Bishop as celebrant. At the luncheon which followed there were addresses by the Rev. C. E. Berger, rector at Annapolis, the Rev. Don Frank Fenn, rector of St. Michael and All Angels, Baltimore, and the Rev. C. Sturges Ball, retired, who was formerly a professor at Virginia Seminary.

PAINTING DEDICATED AT HOBART

★ A panel of oil paintings portraying the vision of St. John the Divine were dedicated at a service in the chapel of Hobart College on November 11th. The five paintings are the work of Eloise Wood, assistant professor of art at the college. Her work is represented in the permanent collection of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, and she has had work displayed in numerous exhibitions.

LAYMAN SPEAKS ON PROGRAM

★ "The Blackout That's Impossible" was the topic of an address by William H. Siegmund, San Marino, chairman of the committee for laymen's work, from the pulpit of All Saints', Pasadena, on Nov. 4. Mr. Siegmund dealt with the importance of the world-wide missionary efforts of the Church, particularly in Japan and China, and with the effectiveness of the work of the education department. The talk was broadcast.

BISHOP JUHAN HAS ANNIVERSARY

★ Bishop Juhan of Florida will mark the 27th anniversary of his consecration on November 24.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

WORLD COUNCIL PLANS ANNUAL MEETING

★ The annual meeting of the World Council of Churches will be held at St. Bartholomew's, New York, the afternoon of December 11th. Douglas Horton, vice chairman, will preside and there will be addresses by Mrs. Horton on the Arabs, the Rev. John A. Mackay on Protestantism in Franco Spain, Henry S. Leiper on progress that has been made in the Council.

DIOCESE OF GEORGIA PREPARES CANVASS

★ Preparation for the every member canvass in Georgia reached a high degree of thoroughness this year. Early in October fifty-nine laymen gathered at Camp Reese, diocesan conference center on St. Simons Island, for the laymen's training program—the largest group to meet for two days in the whole Church. They returned to home parishes filled with enthusiasm and were put to work by their rectors to promote the Church's program.

On November 7th the fifth of a series of archdeaconry dinner meetings was held. Bishop Barnwell and two archdeacons —Rev. William C. Baxter and Rev. T. Porter Ball—had toured the diocese and had addressed representatives of practically every parish and mission: at least 600 laymen heard them speak on the Program and the "why" of missions and giving for their support.

At the conclusion of the series Bishop Barnwell declared that he is more encouraged over prospects than at any time in his sixteen years as bishop of Georgia.

One of the accomplishments in the past year has been the erection of a parish house and chapel for Grace Church, Cairo, a mission less than two years old. The bishop dedicated the building October 21st.

One of the projects for the coming year is the provision of a building for a potential congregation in Fleming Heights, a brand new suburb of Augusta. Before the H-bomb project began across the Savannah river in South Carolina, Fleming Heights had almost no existence; an informal census late in September revealed a population of more than 6000, and new houses are being built as rapidly as possible. The Rev. Allen Clarkson, rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Augusta, has held some services in the neighborhood, and finds a strong desire for the Church.

UNIQUE FESTIVAL AT FRANKLIN

★ St. John's, Franklin, Pa., had a unique service on November 18th. The usual family service and the church school were omitted. All parents and their children, teachers and officers of the school, met in the parish house and had a procession to the church where they presented offering for St. Barnabas House. Each child brought a bag of sugar and the adults a bag filled with non-perishable goods, food, clothing, bed linens and blankets. The Rev. Carl J. Webb is rector.

GETTING THEM TO CHURCH

★ When buses stopped running last summer as an economy move at Watertown, N. Y., members of St. Paul's were provided with cards for their windshields: "I'm going to St. Paul's. Want a ride?" Rector Robert Sudlow reports that the response and interest was gratifying. John Davis, an advertising man, is credited with the idea. Buses are now moving but the cards are still being used.

ENGINEER ENTERS MINISTRY

★ After 32 years as a civil engineer, Warren F. Merritt of Galveston, Texas, has given up his profession to study for the ministry. He is the father of a grown son and daughter and a grandfather of two children.

SENATOR SMITH CHANGES HIS MIND

★ Senator H. Alexander Smith of New Jersey, an Episcopalian and father-in-law of the Rev. Samuel Shoemaker of New York, has changed his mind about an ambassador to the Vatican. A member of the foreign relations committee, he immediately declared at the time of the announcement by the President, that he approved. He stated however on November 9th, presumably after receiving many protests from clergy and other groups, that he will now oppose the appointment.

URGES SUPPORT FOR UN

★ Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, Episcopalian and active in the United Church Women, department of the National Council of Churches, said at a meeting in Washington that women should know and support the United Nations. She said that UN "prevented full-scale war from exploding out of tense situations" and mentioned specifically Iran, Palestine, Greece and Kashmir. She is a daughter of the late President Woodrow Wilson and the mother of the present dean of Washington Cathedral.

BISHOP WINSLOW R. C. POWELL was consecrated Coadiutor of Oklahoma on November 2nd.

EDITORIALS

Attack On Education

"THE American Way of Life" and "The Free World" are two slogans which resound from a thousand political platforms and that serve as a text for numberless articles and editorials in newspapers and magazines. So it is well to ask ourselves just what constitutes this "American Way of Life." It is not a hard question to answer. The foundation of this way of life is the American Bill of Rights implemented by a militant defense of civil rights, by the maintenance of the separation of Church and state and by a universal system of tax-supported compulsory education beginning in elementary schools and continuing in state universities.

Whenever the Bill of Rights is violated in one sector of our common life, the whole edifice built upon it is in danger of collapse. Denial of free speech, press and assembly, even to the most blatant and exasperating minority, threatens very definitely the entire democratic system.

The latest front to be assailed in this battle against the American way of life is that of our public schools and colleges. During the past year, the most elementary academic freedom has been under attacks of various kinds —repressive state legislation, a flood of vicious, Fascist-like pamphlets and circulars, attempts to censor and condemn standard textbooks for not following an extreme reactionary line, magazine and newspaper articles and local campaigns motivated by political and personal bitterness. No part of the country has been exempt from this concerted attack on our educational institutions. State legislation in California terrorized college and university faculties with "loyalty-oath" requirements. Pasadena schools lost an able and loyal superintendent as a result of local hysteria fomented by a pamphlet and newspaper campaign. New York schools have suffered from the repressive Feinberg law. In Englewood, N. J., the schools were victims of an attack engineered by a former notorious Fascist and his local supporters. Pennsylvania is threatened by a peculiarly outrageous piece of repressive legislation known as the "Pechan-Musmanno bills" which would expose all professors and teachers—and even maintenance employees—to persecution by personal and political enemies who might choose to denounce them on mere suspicion of being "subversive." These bills have been denounced by every college and university president in the state and by such eminently conservative citizens as Churchmen ex-Senator George Wharton Pepper and ex-Justice Owen Roberts. But they are being backed by a high-pressure campaign of the American Legion and with the approval of Churchman Governor Fine. The Episcopal League for Social Action has fought this threat in public hearing and with letters to the clergy of Pennsylvania's five dioceses.

These are a few samples of the determined, well-organized effort to wreck our American educational system in the interest of Fascist reaction. Most of our newspapers and magazines, which ought to be exposing and condemning it, are muzzled by fear of being themselves labelled "radical" or "subversive." A notable exception, however, is McCall's Magazine which has published a long, eloquent and fully-documented expose of the whole evil business, naming names and giving in detail the malodorous record of the leader of the campaign. We commend this article to our readers as "must" reading for everyone who has the well-being of our schools and colleges at heart. It is in the September number of McCall's and reprints in any quantity can be obtained from the publisher in New York City.

We urge you to be on the look-out for signs of this virulent infection in your own communities and to be among those liberty-loving citizens who will spring to the defense of our schools in the name of the American way of life and faithful to the Christian principles of human dignity and

★

"Quotes"

ALMIGHTY GOD, by whom our fathers won their liberties of old; grant that we and all the people of this land may be strong to maintain our freedom against the assaults of those who by aggression seek to enslave us to their will. Guide, we beseech thee, our President and all to whom has been committed the government of this nation, giving them special gifts of wisdom and understanding, that in the defense of our liberties they may be the instruments of a lasting peace for all mankind; through Jesus Christ our Lord.

★

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

obedience to the commandment, "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor." It is later than many of you realize in the over-due effort to stay the process of deterioration in the educational system of free America.

Church Jim Crow

What Can Be Done

BY

ALGER L. ADAMS

WHAT can be done? We need grass-roots preaching missions to stir men to know the awful demand of God that his will should be done in matters of race as in all morality. We need preaching missions in our white churches to bring in Negroes. We need preaching missions in our Negro churches to bring in white members. Those missions should be preceded and followed by two-by-two visitations, not timidly "going slowly"; but boldly proclaiming our at-warness with the Gentile world, witnessing that we are citizens of another higher Kingdom.

We need a new religious order called to preach God's all-inclusive love. And the order should not be lily-white as some of those existent, or jim crow.

We need retreats for our clergy, with race prejudice as the theme, to search out pettifoggying arrogant preconceptions, drawn from secular society.

We need quiet days to tear at the silent silken barriers of race, for men, women, students, young people. We need a lot of praying.

We need devotional material written particularly to search out our racial prejudices. Negroes as well as whites have some bitter streaks to exorcise. Lenten reading should take cognizance of this problem.

Conferences which have been jim crow should broaden their membership (not just make the faculty inter-racial). General matters should be left to non-segregated conferences. If there is need for "getting together on the Negro question," let the conference aim principally at that, not at letting a few folks strut. And the purpose should be to destroy jim crow, not make it work more smoothly.

The work of the bi-racial sub-committee of the department of domestic missions of the National Council should be strengthened and better financed, against the day when its work is over. In order to hurry that day, a new aggressive National Council body should be established to facilitate and speed up the interracial movement in the Church.

We should take to heart the example of the Roman Catholic Church when she wants to meet the Negro problem. In New Orleans, where our man wrote, "State does not permit mixed congregations," the local Roman congregation mixes freely at the altar rail. The story is told that Ebony Magazine was doing a picture story of the Roman Eucharist. Some of the white worshippers, seeing pictures being taken, hung back from receiving the sacrament with Negroes. The priest stopped the administration and called out, "I want a mixed rail up here!" He got a mixed rail.

Cicero Riot

THE Roman Catholic pronouncements on the Negro problem and particularly on the Cicero, Ill., riot should be compared with our statements; and, even worse, with our silences. America, national Catholic weekly review, of August 21st carried a bitterly scathing piece on the anti-Negro rioters, whom they identified in part as Roman Catholics. Calling it, "The Scandal of Cicero," the author, William Gremley, blasted clerical and lay indifference.

We particularly need Episcopal guidance, for the end of the segregated Church will not be one-tenth in sight until some bishop has the courage to assign a Negro priest to a congregation without first being sure the congregation is all-black. We must be bold enough to say that the Holy Ghost cannot be limited by pigmentation, that a blessing is a blessing, and the eucharist is the eucharist, whether the priest's hand be white or black, and that the one true sacrifice cannot be hedged about with prejudice of color.

To say simply that Negroes and whites must worship together without tackling the problem of the clergy would be disastrous. Under present conditions, the practical result would be to bar the priesthood to Negro candidates, an intolerable thought. For today, bishops refuse Negro candidates unless they have Negro congregations to which to send them. All men called to serve Christ must have that opportunity, regardless of their color.

And after we get re-converted to the whole Church of Christ, let's have the moral courage to show it forth in our secular lives. Don't settle for reading a couple of pamphlets or sending a basket down to the "little colored Baptist Church." If you want to feel the sting of being a Christian, know the "world hate you," try to get a Negro to move into the house next door to you. Try to get a Negro at the desk next to you when you know there is going to be a job vacancy. And don't let anyone tell you to leave the issues of Christian conscience to governmental ukase or commission.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Things Not To Do

THERE are some petty things white people can stop doing. They are mostly irritating, needless cause for offense.

Don't write "Negro" with a little "n." "Negro" is, today, generally accepted as a racial designation in the same way as are English, French, Italian, Chinese, or Eskimo. To spell the word with a small letter (as 60% of the clergy answering our letter did) is a gratuitous and silly insult.

Try not to indulge in "minstrel shows" and "darky" stories. The Negro is not so far removed from the slavery of his grandparents that he can enjoy their shameful ignominy, especially when your progenitors did the enslaving.

Don't effect a "funny" Southern accent in speaking to Negroes. Many Negroes have never seen the South, and the dialect will be resented.

Don't assume all Negroes know each other regardless of class or position. The affairs of your domestic are matters of great disinterest to a professional Negro. He assumes you are lumping all Negroes together, and is thereby offended.

Don't try to be "careful." Honest sincerity is easily detected. If you have said something offensive, your Negro friend (in good season) will find a way to let you know, and in generosity. But a phony "love my neighbor" will earn you a stiff cold shoulder.

And Negroes, in the same vein, can stop raising the race question upon every social occasion. And if a question on race relations is asked, the answer should be given honestly, and not in terms of what the speaker thinks the listeners will accept, among other things.

These latter things are small and could be multiplied endlessly. The big part, is the beginning, letting God's grace free us first from the bonds of prejudicial sin.

Bishop Scarlett Quoted

THERE could be no more fitting close to this piece than to quote the Right Rev. William Scarlett, bishop of Missouri. Bishop Scarlett wrote: "On purely religious grounds there is no defense for segregation within the Church. In the presence of God, the divisions of race are transcended: 'There is neither Greek nor Jew, Barbarian, Scythian, bond or free; but Christ is all and in all.' All men are God's children; all are within the circle of his equal concern. 'Have we not all one Father? Hath not one God created us?' This principle segregation denies. For segregation is not only a barrier to the elemental equality of opportunity which we in this democracy so generally profess as our necessary goal. It is more sweeping than that. It is, in itself, an implication of inferiority, an inferiority not only of status but of essence, of being. Therefore, it offends profoundly against the religious principle.

"The tide has set against segregation within the Church . . . This tide will gather momentum. The Protestant Church is not an authoritarian organization. It proceeds by the democratic process, which means that leadership must carry the people with it. The process may be somewhat slow. But there has been ample opportunity for education of our people; the time for action is now at hand.

"There is a tendency to underestimate the number of people willing to follow persuasive Christian leadership, as there is also a tendency to overestimate the repercussions which will follow decisive Christian action. Repercussions there will be. The important thing, however, is not whether our churches are larger or smaller. The essential point is that those within the Church be committed to the Christian cause."

Religion and the Mind

BY

CLINTON J. KEW

SHARING THROUGH WORSHIP

"SOMETIMES when my child is anxious I try to help him, but there always seems to be a gap between us. He doesn't want to discuss religion and doesn't want to attend church school. What is amiss?"

A gulf often exists because the parents are unable to share the experiences of their children. Being able to share our attitudes and responses with others is the most effective way of making our experiences real to them, as well as meaningful in our own lives. Worship does this in that we feel, pray and sing together.

One man of sixty related the following: "This is the first time in my life that I have ever expressed this feeling to anyone. I could not express it to my parents and I have not felt free to share it with my wife." A young woman of thirty who began to improve as a result of our healing services put it this way: "If only I could have talked these things over with my father and mother when I was a child, this terrible thing would never have happened. I was afraid to talk with my parents about religion and sex. I was never myself." Another young woman of about twenty-five, a mother of two children, remarked: "I used to spend a great deal of time in my room alone. I wrote essays to myself. My parents didn't care what I thought or believed." Again, a mother of twenty-four stated: "Only once in my life did my mother ever put her arms around me. She was too busy to bother with me. I would have given anything for her love, but I did not dare ask."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Thoughts, feelings and reactions which are not shared with others often play an important role in behavior pathology. Those who are unable to communicate to others what they think and believe are the ones who first show signs of neurosis and behavior distortions. Certain subjects such as religion, sex, ethics and death are often talked about in vague, hushed tones, and the child learns not to discuss them—especially sex and religion. In certain families these subjects are taboo. Is it strange that they are among the most frequent preoccupations of both neurotic and psychotic personalities?

Last year our clinic interviewed over 2500 people from all over the United States. Most of them wanted to talk about things they didn't understand. More people today are anxious to ask questions about the meaning and value of life than we realize, but they are afraid to ask. Because these people were not free to express their feelings about life in the form of both language and experience, they became withdrawn in these areas and experienced them alone in fantasy. If people cannot acquire the facility of communication they are unable to foresee very much of what lies beyond the present.

A man of about thirty-five fell in love for the first time a few months ago. This is what he said: "I want to do two things, get married and join the church. Heretofore I have just been existing, now I am beginning to live. There are several questions about religion which I have never felt free to ask before. I'd like to know more about the differences of our Churches, more about God, and more about life." This man fell in love as soon as he began to communicate his thoughts and feelings to a young woman who understood him. As he grew he became eager to know more. Before these shared experiences he said, "I have just been existing." He was alone with himself, his thoughts and his fantasy; now he is a part of shared experiences. He was dead; now he is reborn and alive.

The child, long before he knows what they really mean or understand them, wants to share his feelings about the policeman, the Nativity, the teacher and his parents. Play, worship, talk, music and the like, become valuable forms for sharing experiences and are safety valves in the lives of both children and adults. A child who can worship, play and identify himself freely with his parents, becomes a mature adult and, thus, is repaid many fold. Through shared experiences the chasm between himself and his mother and father disappears and he gains mental flexibility in each role he plays. In other words, failure to communicate prevents mature development.

Parents who are able to shift their roles to that of playmate, leader or pal in different situations soon close the gulf that exists between themselves and their children. Together they appreciate play, poetry, drama and religion. The church is one of the most helpful places for families to become oriented to the imponderables. Here the taboos are lifted. Here the mysteries of life will be unfolded in activity and worship; and here the emotional, mental and spiritual side of man will grow through communion with God.

Questions should be addressed to Mr. Kew at St. Luke's Church, S. Fullerton Ave. & Union St., Montclair, N. J.

The Living Liturgy

Means and Ends

BY

MASSEY H. SHEPHERD JR.

WHAT our Lord said about the Sabbath—that it was made for man and not vice versa—needs to be applied to all the institutions and rites of the Church. All too often the clergy tend to forget this principle. They assume that the laity should have as professional an interest in the Church as they have themselves. So they set up an ideal schedule of services and expect their people to adjust their daily lives to them accordingly. The celebrations of the Eucharist become ends for the people to seek, rather than means for reaching out to the people. When the parson gets a poor response to his exhortations to come to this service or that, he should not soothe his wounded feelings by accepting the notion that his flock is indifferent, or heedless of the claims of religion. He should ask himself first whether or not what he has asked them to do is really very practical or even desirable.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

We all know what has happened to the Lord's Day in the modern world. The secularization of Sunday is one of the most obvious and painful aspects of our culture. Ideally, of course, Sunday could be a blessed 'rest to the people of God' if spent in corporate offices of prayer and devotion. Sunday could be for every Christian the happiest day of the week because on this day he remembers with unspeakable joy the promise of his resurrection in Christ. Yet many churchmen find neither rest nor joy in getting out to an early celebration, or in giving up wholesome recreation at home or in the country for a late Sunday morning service. Is this circumstance due only to the fact that the Easter faith does not glow white-hot within their breasts?

We do not for a moment suggest that the Church should give in to the temper of the times in making Sunday holiday instead of holy day. But we do suggest that for many people the weekend holiday with the family or friends is of inestimable benefit to their physical and mental health. The Church has no business brushing aside the very real values of such rest and recreation, if it can only offer as an alternative a routine performance in a tasteless chancel between a high-pressure choir and a low-pressure priest. No amount of high class entertainment from organ bench or pulpit can compete with other Sunday amusements, which are no less convenient though they may be more expensive. Sunday will become a holy day for all our people only when they all have responsibility in worship —when they can all do the Eucharist together, and not just watch it or receive it.

Until this blessed time comes back into the Church's life and experience, we can prepare for the day by more imaginative use of week-day services, and in particular of week-day Eucharists. We are not thinking merely of the early morning celebration, which no housewife with children can attend, or the ten o'clock saint's day service which no working man or woman or school child can attend. We are thinking of afternoon and evening services, of services not only in the church but in neighborhood gatherings in suburban homes and other unconsecrated places. The church edifice, the hospital room, and the battlefield are not the only proper places for doing the Eucharist, nor is an hour before noon the only time that its offering is acceptable to God. Wherever and whenever two or three are gathered in Christ's Name it can be done—with reverence, with joy, consecrating our lives in all places and in all legitimate activities to the redeeming work of Christ. Only if the Eucharist is made at home to the people will they feel at home in it.

The disciplines of the Christian life, of which the doing of the Eucharist is certainly one of the chief, do not have to be easy in order to be practical. They only have to be made relevant to people's daily lives. If a hard-headed business man does not get the connection between what goes on in the chancel and what goes on in his office, it might be a good idea to set the chancel up in the office. It could be an unforgettable consecration.

Religious Oddities

BY

JOSEPH H. TITUS
Rector of Grace Church, Jamaica. N. Y.

WE are privileged to quote the following case histories from the forthcoming book, "Psychosis and Religion" by Dr. Ubet I. Sockem, prominent psychiatrist. We feel sure the book will command wide attention in religious and psychological circles. The customary statement, "Any resemblance to persons living or dead is purely coincidental," prefaces the volume.

Case I. Mr. A, a respected businessman of wide experience on being approached by his minister to take the chairmanship of a committee to visit members of his parish replied immediately, "Certainly; I'll be very glad to." His prompt response is significant. We can see clearly in this reaction incipient paranoia: delusions of grandeur. Mr. A must be carefully watched. Very abnormal type.

Case II. Mrs. B, housewife, on being asked by her clergyman why she could not come to service on Sunday mornings replied, "Well, you see, my family has to have a good substantial meal and it takes all the morning to prepare it. I'd like to whip up a lunch that we could all help in preparing, but I have real obligations. Actually I deplore this. Somehow I do not think one's stomach is more important than God." Comment: the last sentence reveals the serious condition of the patient. Our prognosis would be an alarming persecution complex and a perilous sense of unreality. She lives in a dream world. Psychiatric treatment recommended.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Case III. Mr. C is a member of St. Phrygian's Church. Having been elected to the vestry he spends much of his leisure time in working for the Church (as much as 3 or 4 hours a week). His wife, who accompanied him at the interview, protests that he neglects her. Quite understandably she said, "Whom did he think he married—the Church or me?" This is a case of a split-personality. Depth therapy may be of help to him. If unsuccessful it would be advisable for Mrs. C to seek a divorce.

Case IV. Miss D, spinster, was brought to the clinic by her nephew. He was greatly concerned because she was giving a "large" part of her income (10%) to the Church and its benevolences and was obdurate about it. "My money is not mine," she said, "'All things come of thee, O Lord, and of thine own have I given thee'." Quoting scripture is the characteristic mark of religious fanatics. While not yet dangerous her retarded mental development, as clearly shown in her statement, also reveals a neurotic tendency that requires careful professional supervision.

Case V. Mr. E, came to the clinic to please his family, who are rightly disturbed about his condition. On one occasion he went to the minister, as he frankly admits, and said, "Parson, I can't do much, but if you can use me anywhere in the church I'll be glad to do what I can." This is an obvious case of infantile regression, bordering on a psychosis. He should be immediately committed to a mental institution and shock treatments administered. Prognosis, however, is poor.

Case VI. Mrs. F, comfortably off woman of leisure. Came for an interview because she was troubled by church people calling her and asking her to serve on committees, etc. "It is driving me frantic," she stated. "I've always been a good churchwoman, but I'm really exhausted. It takes all my energy to go to the movies or play bridge or canasta several times a week and for a person of my age that is as much as my nerves can stand. Of course I'm always glad to help but I do wish they'd let me alone." A highly intelligent woman. One interview was enough to reassure her; she is normal in every way.

Case VII. Mr. G, was recommended to us because of marital difficulties. Reports his wife is "always telling him he should go to church—at least to set a good example to the children." He works, however, 40 hours a week and feels that two hours out of the remaining 48 are entirely too much to be wasted on spiritual things. On Sunday there is the newspaper to be read and the TV to watch. Quoting Mr. G: "I lead a good, clean life. Yet Mrs. G feels the kids ought to have some ethical and religious training. I'm all for that—send them to Sunday school: that's what the church is for. She stubbornly insists that if I don't support the church with my contribution and even attendance there, no one else will. I think she's crazy. Besides, I like to sleep sometimes on Sunday morning." Comment: we recommend that if Mrs. G persists in what is evidently an obsession that he urge her to see a psychiatrist. A man has a right to his leisure and his family's welfare should not interfere with that. Possibly Mrs. G has a God complex that she developed at an early age; analysis may restore her to normalcy.

Case VIII. Mrs. H is suffering from a nervous breakdown. People didn't speak to her in church, she had worked hard for the Ladies' League for the Depleted Tasmanians and the minister had never publicly commended her. "After all," she said, "I do not want any credit but I think my devotion should be recognized. The minister seems to commend everyone but me. Not that I want praise—I only do it for the Lord." One interview was enough to put Mrs. H's mind at rest. She has very cogent complaints. Probably her minister needs psychiatric treatment.

Case IX. Mr. I is a very sad case, although he does not seem to recognize his condition. He is suffering from pronounced delusions that may be augmented as time goes on. He frankly stated at the interview that he felt that the church should "face-up" (sic!) to present day problems and deal with personal and social situations in the light of Jesus' life and teachings. This statement is significant proof that Mr. I is not living in the 20th century but in a world of fantasy of his own creation. Frequent psychiatric interviews may be of help but the outcome is dubious. He may develop ulcers or arthritis—well-recognized psychosomatic symptoms.

Case X. Mrs. J was referred to us by her minister. She persists in stating, even publicly, that there should be no race discrimination in church and, furthermore, that the churches should come out "strongly (her actual word) "for peace." Here, your author feels, is a tragically disordered mind that shows evidences of becoming increasingly worse. She should be immediately committed to an institution and the FBI advised of these subversive statements. A clear example of a schizoid personality that may ultimately resort to violence if not subjected to treatment at once.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Christian Service

BY

ANSON PHELPS STOKES JR.
Rector of St. Bartholomew's, New York

THERE is a very simple test of the Christian life. It is that of service to one's fellows, for Christianity, when it is real and vivid, shows concern for every man.

There are dangers in the test of service. There is a type of service which is superficial, and sometimes over-activity and "doing things" are substitutes for "being" something. Real service is always rooted in religion, for only if we worship God and know his will for men are we able to serve them as God would have them served. Humanism alone does not have a sufficiently high ideal of humanity. We rightly place worship as the Church's first purpose.

There is another danger in service. It is the danger of doing things for people instead of helping them to grow through their own efforts. Archbishop Temple once said that democracy was not necessarily the best form of government, for it can be terribly inefficient. The virtue of democracy lies rather in the fact that it makes for better people who, by their very failures, learn and develop. So, too, the Church does not exist to do things for people so much as it exists to work with people and help them, in the common life of the Church, to find their fullest growth. Therefore we stressed the development of community as the second role of the Church.

Despite these cautions, however, service is the great test of the reality of our Christian religion. Jesus said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." The Christian Church through all the ages has sought, and still seeks, to serve human need.

Nowadays the needs of most American people are not primarily material. Perhaps the first way in which the Church serves is by ministering to the anxieties and perplexities of our day in its regular parish life. If one has a broken arm, one can go to a clinic; but the streets are full of people with broken hearts, and surely the Church must minister to them.

But here, again, it is not merely the function of the clergy. Our common worship should be such that by participation in it, men find the true purpose of life and that health of spirit that comes in the service of God. Our parish activities must be such that in and through them men find their rightful status as children of God. Everyone of us can help the Church minister to the anxieties and perplexities of men.

In the second place, the Church serves through the volunteer activities of its members. At St. Bartholomew's we recently set up a volunteer placement service. We trust that over the years many will not only find an outlet for their energies but will find a real chance to help their fellow men in various forms of volunteer activity. Too often people who serve on boards of secular charitable institutions say, "I have no time for Church work"; yet surely, if they are serving out of a God-inspired concern for the welfare of their fellow men, their activities constitute "Church work." We can all serve through those activities in which we participate in our spare moments.

Perhaps the most important way in which the Church serves is through the daily lives of its parishioners. Occasionally we have corporate communion services of the employees of large public service organizations. Such worship is a reminder to the participants that they serve not only in the Church or in philanthropic activities, but in their daily work. Sometimes it is easier to serve in our spare time in charitable activities than to show forth Christianity in our home, our office, or our factory.

How else can the Church influence our world than as men and women regard their jobs as Christian vocations? The problems of industry can only be solved by Christians in the ranks of management and of labor. The perplexing problems of our international situation can only be solved as Christian statesmen, Christian military men, Christian citizens, in their casual comments as well as in their votes, seek God's will and, laying aside all personal animosities, ambitions, and resentments, seek to lead our nation to a knowledge of God's will in these difficult times.

We pray that in these various ways we, as Christians, may not fail the test of service.

"R. S. V. P."

BY

PHILIP F. McNAIRY
Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Buffalo

SUCH a request at the end of a dinner invitation places the responsibility of an answer—yes, or no—upon the person receiving it. There rests an even greater responsibility upon the person who issues the invitation. Now consider a third position. Suppose you were charged by the host with the task of arranging the dinner and securing the guests. What an uncomfortable position!

The forgotten man in St. Luke's allegory of the great supper is the servant who finds himself in this very predicament. We have heard much about the host who is God, about the invited guests with their ridiculous excuses and of the others who accepted, even under persuasion. The key person in the story is the servant. Upon his success or failure the guest list depends. In the time of our Lord, the servant was the apostle. The centuries of Christian progress and growth attest the excellence of his effort.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Today that allegory must be rewritten with new characters. God is still the host. Mankind are the potential guests. But the servant of the feast now becomes you or me. The chief question is, what kind of an invitation do we present? Does the average observer have a picture of the Christian life such as the host has—of a joyous feast and a heartwarming fellowship? Or does the guest see only dull gray, drab, negativistic dry bread? It is true that many of the excuses are as ridiculous as ever. But would they be so, were we to present the radiant good news which once stormed and won so much of the world?

The second request catches many of us with our guards down. "Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city and bring in hither the poor, and the maimed . . ." Is there a place among our proper people for these who need and want the Church, her sacraments and her beauty? Or must they be driven by our segmentarian hostility into the store-front sects, or beyond them into non-Christian fellowships? Too often it is true of our membership lists—"And yet there is room."

"What? Compel them to come in?" This is no call for strong-arm methods. It is simply an exhortation to present the Christian faith and life in such a way that those who see it through our example will want it for their own. Is there any appeal in a membership whose activity depends upon the weather, the season, their mood, their like or dislike of the clergy? Can any seek help from those whose character and life reveal failure and frustration? Thank God for the many good and faithful servants who, having entered into the "joy of their Lord," win others.

This is a parable for Churchmen, in a day when the greatest need of all is the soul-nourishment to be found only in the feast of God. "R. S. V. P." How many will your life bring?

PRIDE

BY

PHILIP H. STEINMETZ
Rector of the Ashfield Parishes

IF any of the seven deadly sins is most dangerous, it is pride. Its victims do not know that they need help nor can they accept it when it is offered.

"I'm as good a Christian as those who go to church."

"Thank God, I'm not like some people I know."

"I'm always in church and always do the best I can."

"What do Congregationalists (or Episcopalians) have that we don't have?"

All these and many more common statements reveal pride lurking, blinding, killing love.

They should remind us of the two men praying in the temple, a Pharisee and a publican. (St. Luke 18:9-14). One was a good man and he knew it and was proud. In another place (St. Matt. 5:20) Jesus says that unless we are really and truly more loving even than those with a good record, we can't get into God's kingdom.

Talking and thinking of our own excellence keeps us from seeing our defects and from knowing our dependence on God and so growing in humility that we ask for and receive his help by which alone we can be lifted out of ourselves into that state of self-giving which is salvation.

When pride lures you, remember how with much less wealth than you have, several illiterate Jews of real humility recognized Jesus as Lord and stuck with him, saying: "To whom else shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

NEWS OF OTHER CHURCHES

PUSH PEACE PROGRAM URGE QUAKERS

Quakers have called upon the U. S. delegates to the UN General Assembly to take "bold imaginative leadership" to achieve cease-fire in Korea; to push for reduction of world armaments as steps toward universal disarmament; to press upon the USSR delegation "with words and action, willingness to discuss publicly and privately the problems of east-west tensions."

VATICAN PROTESTS CONTINUE

Protests from clergy and other groups over the appointment of General Clark as Ambassador to the Vatican continue to pour in from all parts of the country. Too numerous to mention, most of the resolutions urge individuals and groups to write the President and their senators expressing strong opposition to the appointment.

SPIRITUAL SIGNIFICANCE OF CHRISTMAS

The council of churches of Toledo has urged that "the Christian community place even greater emphasis this year upon the spiritual significance of Christmas." It also urges that there be "greater evidence of gifts, tangible, to the Christ through aid to hungry and suffering humanity."

TRAIN PROTESTANTS FOR OVERSEAS

A move is under way to train Protestants for business, educational, missionary and diplomatic posts throughout the world. Plans were made at the meeting of the Methodist interboard committee on missionary education at a meeting last week in Cincinnati. The division of foreign missions of the National Council of Churches, it was learned, is exploring the possibility of securing and providing more adequate training facilities for young Americans, both men and women, who wish to enter these fields abroad.

REFORMATION ADDRESS PROTESTED BY R.C.'s

Because an address delivered in Denver on Reformation Sunday was printed in full by a Pueblo newspaper has brought a vigorous protest from Roman Catholics. One of their newspapers declares that the paper was guilty of a "flagrant disservice to all Catholic people" in reporting a "scurrilous and abusive attack on the Catholic Church." The publisher of the paper, in a front page editorial, said the same full treatment has been given to an R. C. congress that recently met in Pueblo, and that the address by the Protestant minister was "reported as the news it was—regardless of what the minister said."

The newspaper was denounced for "disservice" in virtually every R. C. church in southern Colorado at masses.

CHILDREN'S PARADE STRESSES CHRISTIANITY

A neighborhood children's group in Springfield, O., paraded through the streets with police escort as part of a program to acquaint people with the fundamentals of Christianity. It is the Wonder Club which was started at a Baptist church to provide a constructive Saturday afternoon activity for children. The club got its name from the method by which a Bible object lesson is presented. Before the program starts, an outline of the lesson is put in a box. The children then "wonder" what story will be brought out of the box.

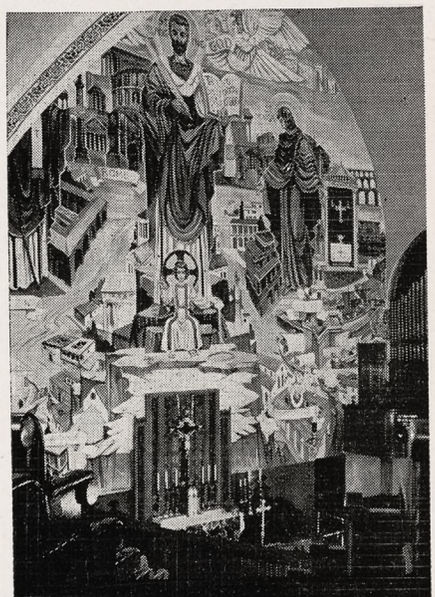
HONOR BLIND PASTOR IN SPRINGFIELD

The Rev. Daniel J. Uhlman, United Lutheran pastor of Springfield, O., was honored with a week-long celebration by his congregation and the community after 30 years in the ministry. He is one of five blind clergymen in his denomination and came to his present church in 1929 which has grown from a small group to 700 members.

OPPOSE PUBLIC GRANTS TO CHURCH HOSPITALS

The executive committee of Protestants and Other Americans for separation of Church and State, at its semi-annual meeting in Washington, opposed grants of public funds to Church hospitals and medical colleges. They also approved plans for a speaking tour to 25 cities by Paul Blanchard, author of books on the influence of the R. C. Church in political life.

PROTESTANT UNITY URGED BY LUTHERAN



The Rev. Oscar A. Benson, new head of the 460,000-member Augustana Lutheran Church, in taking office made a strong plea to Lutherans to cooperate with other Protestants. He also hailed as a "reassuring sign" the "feverish activity toward cementing together the segments of our Lutheran Church in America."

SEGREGATION RULE IS REVERSED

A ruling forcing segregation of Negro students at football games has been reversed by the authorities of the University of North Carolina following protests by student religious groups and other campus organizations. When Negro students were told that "the administration and trustees believed it wise, for the time being at least, to observe the custom of segregation at athletic events," they indicated that they would not follow the suggestion.

CATHOLIC YOUTH FORM COUNCIL

Two hundred delegates representing an estimated six million young people of the R. C. Church met in

DECORATION

By the use of painting in simple ornament or elaborate themes with figures, walls are enriched and become the source of meditation. Rambusch decoration may be seen in these churches:

St. Augustine's Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.
(Designed and painted by Allan Crite)
Grace Church, Honesdale, Pa.
St. James Church, Chicago, Ill.
St. John's Church, Elizabeth, N. J.
St. Paul's Church, Flint, Mich.

RAMBUSCH 40 W. 13th St. New York, N.Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Cincinnati to form the National Council of Catholic Youth. Bishop R. O. Gerow of Natchez, Miss., in an address hailed it as an "historic event" since it would "enable youth to stand shoulder to shoulder in the great work of the lay apostolate which lies before us in the nation."

CASHIER'S CAGE IN NEW CHURCH

There will be a cashier's cage in the vestibule of a new Baptist church in Indianapolis. "If you don't want to give a $20 bill, you can have it broken to a $10 and two $5's," explained the pastor, the Rev. L. A. Manuel. "The idea is to discourage so many pennies coming to church." He believes that most of the pennies are put in the offering by persons who don't have change for the larger amounts they would like to contribute.

DISCUSS DISCRIMINATION AT STATE COLLEGE

A clinic in which Protestant, Catholic and Jewish ministers joined with leaders of labor, industry and education, was held at Penn State College to discuss ways of eliminating racial prejudice. The Rev. John LaFarge, editor of a Jesuit weekly, called segregation in the churches "an abuse that should have been eliminated years ago" and he scored individual clergymen who are against inviting all persons regardless of race or color into their churches.

NEGRO PASTOR HEADS ASSOCIATION

A young Negro pastor has been elected president of the predominantly white ministerial association of Augusta County, Va. He is the Rev. M. H. Tynes, a graduate of Yale Divinity School. The county is in the west central part of the state and is a conservative rural area.

INTERFAITH FEDERATION IN CLEVELAND

A group of young adults (21 to 40) in Cleveland, representing churches and synagogues, have organized to fight prejudice and misunderstanding.

PRESBYTERIANS CONDEMN DENIAL OF RIGHTS

The Presbyterian synod of New Jersey unanimously passed a resolution condemning loyalty oaths and constitutional interpretations which tend to circumscribe freedom of speech, press and religion. It expressed "very serious concern" over the growing tendency to deny basic rights "through repression and terrorism as exemplified in forms of character assassination." Opposition to universal military training was reaffirmed in another resolution.

CHURCH CONSTRUCTION SETS RECORD

Despite government controls, church construction seems destined to set an all-time record this year, a survey of the department of commerce reveals. With church construction valued at $348 million started in the first nine months, it is thought that the $409 million record of 1951 will be passed.

METHODISTS URGE PARISH MARRIAGE CLINICS

The Methodist Church is promoting the establishment of marriage clinics in churches "where problems of husband-wife relationships and parent-child relationships may be considered under the latest insights of psychology and religion."

● ADDRESS CHANGE

IN MAKING AN ADDRESS CHANGE, PLEASE SEND both THE OLD AND THE NEW ADDRESS AND ALLOW THREE WEEKS FOR THE CHANGE.

HERE AT LAST . . .

A Real Episcopal Medal!

FRONT (ACTUAL SIZE) BACK

A beautiful and practical medal, embodying all that the Episcopalian has long wished for. A wonderful gift for men, women and children, for Military personnel, and as Church School, Choir or Acolyte awards — may be worn as a neck piece, a bracelet, or carried as a pocket piece. A fine Christmas gift.

Silver—Sterling Oxidized	$1.50
Bronzene	1.00
Gold and Silver Chains (endless or with clasp)	1.20 up
Key Chains	.10
Bracelets (in Sterling only)	6.00

Medal also available in 10K gold

(Excise tax added where applicable.)

If not on sale at your local Church supply store, order direct. Available to Dealers also.

Episcopal Church Supply

4400 MELROSE LOS ANGELES 29, CALIF.
PHONE OLYMPIA 0150

Make "E. C. S." Your Church Supply

GOOD Housekeeping IN THE CHURCH

By
KATHARINE M. McCLINTON
and
ISABEL WRIGHT SQUIER

How to care for METALWARE, WOOD, MARBLE, STONE, GLASS — CHURCH LINENS — VESTMENTS — WINE, WAFERS, WATER and CANDLES are among the highlights of this new manual.

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING IN THE CHURCH is all that its title indicates and something more besides. It has been written with the work of the altar guild primarily in mind but it is filled with valuable information for the guidance of parish clergy, acolytes and choir guilds as well.

Nineteen illustrations and a Glossary of Church Terms help a great deal to make this new book more useful.

Price, $1.60
Postage Additional

Morehouse-Gorham Co.

14 E. 41st Street
New York 17, N. Y.

29 E. Madison Street
Chicago 2, Ill

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CHURCHES OVERSEAS

MISSION ESTABLISHED IN MALAYA

Three white women of the Church of England have started the first of what they hope will be a series of Christian missions in resettlement areas in Malaya where Chinese refugees are now living under the protection of the government. One of the women said they went to Malaya from Hong Kong after hearing Bishop Ronald O. Hall speak of the vital mission needs there.

NEW ZEALAND HAS FIRST INDUSTRIAL SUNDAY

An industrial Sunday observance, first of its kind in New Zealand, took place at St. Augustine's, an industrial area near Wellington. The service was conducted by the Rev. Harry Squires who brought the idea from England. For many years the Industrial Christian Fellowship has sponsored similar services throughout Great Britain.

CHURCH STATISTICS FROM GERMANY

Protestants in all four zones of Germany number 38,400,000 or close to 60% of the population, according to the latest issue of the German clerical manual. Roman Catholics number 22,500,000 or 35%, with the remaining 3,500,000 belonging to other religious groups or profess no creed.

GERMAN CHURCHMEN MEET WITH BOON LEADERS

A three-hour conference has been held between German Protestant and West German government leaders on the question of reunification of the country. Bishop Otto Dibelius told Chancellor Adenauer that the council of the Evangelical Church believes it is Germany's most urgent problem and advocated the exploration of every possibility of achieving it. He said the council has asked for a similar conference with Otto Grotewohl, head of the East German government.

INTERFERING WITH MAIL BRINGS A FINE

The Rev. J. Alfred Roy, Roman Catholic priest of Ste. Germaine Boule, Canada, has been fined $100 for interfering with mail addressed to Baptists. A 16-year-old boy, a part time worker in the post office, got a suspended sentence for carrying out the orders of the priest to see that the mail was not delivered.

FIRST CHRISTIAN WEDDING OF HEAD-HUNTERS

The Ibans of Borneo, a generation ago head-hunters, have had their first Christian marriage. Reporting on the affair, the Rev. Burr Baugham, an American missionary, said; "The couple had been living together for a month, but nobody except the minister saw anything strange in that. Habits of centuries are not easily changed. It will take some time to get across to them the idea that the wedding ceremony should come first." The missionary also reported a failure. Two Iban young men who lived with their sweethearts were scared off by talk of Christian marriage. They could not stand the prospect of being tied for life to one woman. But they paid $3 each to the mission "for the shame they had brought the Christian group," and then, greatly relieved, hurried back to their girls.

Created with Sensitivity and Skill:

Moral Purpose FILMS

16 mm. SOUND

A series of human relation motion pictures dealing with people and morals. All films are treated in a modern manner and are suited for CHURCH, SCHOOL, CLUB and FAMILY audiences.

A CHRISTMAS STORY WITH A MESSAGE!

"The Guiding Star"

A supremely suitable motion picture for any church, school, club or family audience. Young and old alike will thrill to the example of "Uncle Henry," a true Christian possessed with the spirit of giving who seeks nothing in return. He reunites a divided family at Christmas time and spreads happiness to everyone he meets. Highest professional quality, 30 minutes, 16mm sound, black and white, rental in December $12 per day, balance of year $8.

MAKE YOUR RESERVATION AT ONCE

This film is in such great demand that despite the hundreds of new prints added to available library rental copies, you may have trouble getting a December booking. Consult your dealer library or denominational film center at once. Write for free illustrated catalog of all Family Films now in release.

"Unto Thyself Be True" "Walking With God" "On the Right Side"
"Stranger at Our Door" "Love Thy Neighbor" "Speak No Evil"
"Bible on the Table" "A Boy and His Prayer" "The First Step"
"Rim of the Wheel" "Return to Faith" "The Road Back"
"Honor Thy Family" "The Barrier" "Rolling Stones"
"In His Name" "No Other Gods" "Talents"
"Yesterday, Today and Forever"

For further information and free catalogue

Write: Family Films, INC. 1840 W. Olympic Boulevard Beverly Hills, California

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE RELIGIOUS PRESS

Selected by GEORGE MacMURRAY

CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU?:—Whenever you hear the expression, "You can't take it with you," we think of the cartoon which appeared in The New Yorker a while ago. The cartoon showed a funeral procession entering the gates of a cemetery. Right behind the hearse there was an armored car with a police escort. The caption under the picture read: "Who said old Jones couldn't take it with him."

It was with this impish thought in the back of our minds that we read the full page advertisement on the inside cover of Advance. the publication of the diocese of Chicago. The ad ran—"You Can't take it with you —but you can make sure it will do God's work." The accompanying text suggested three ways: A. Set up a present (or living) trust. This can insure continued support of your Church. It can provide for your family or for your own retirement. It may also have distinct tax advantages.

B. Make a direct bequest to the Church in your will.

C. Provide in your will for a testamentary trust to manage and distribute your estate as best suits the needs of your heirs—with the Church sharing in income and principal.

SECURITY:—Our good friend, Simeon Stylites, the fictitious letter to the editor writer in The Christian Century has handed in another good one. The subject is security. Although Mr. Stylites doesn't want to be called reactionary or a fosil, he wonders where the ultimate effect of the struggle for security may lead. He is, of course, in favor of types of security, but he realizes that the quest to security can be distorted and perverted until it becomes the exclusive aim of life, blotting out nearly everything else. He tells the story of a New Yorker cartoon: A man is proposing to a girl in these terms: "I have a good basic salary with an escalator clause, social security, endowment insurance, old age benefits, unemployment insurance and a pension plan. Will you marry me?" Ten to one she cried, "Will I!"

Mr. Stylites concludes that: the effect of the frenzied attempt to eliminate all risk from life is like taking out the nerves in one's bones. Canon Raven has a great word on that: "Our modern civilization offers us shelter behind artificial security for the pain and splendor of living. But that is a way of death." Life ought not to be entombed in a safe deposit box. There is only one place of complete security—a graveyard.

Even a church may catch the disease and read its orders, "Seek ye first an endowment, for what else matters?"

WHAT ABOUT YOU?—Wilbur La Roe Jr., writing for Presbyterian Life, says that the average Protestant doesn't know what it is all about, and would find it impossible to explain his faith. It is so disgracefully easy for people to join the average church that the majority join without having a real appreciation of the seriousness of the step or of the obligations that go with it. How in the name of goodness can we expect people to give sacrifically to a cause which they cannot even define?

The Thousand Young Men in the Church's Seminaries

They are college graduates, now undertaking a three-year course of theological study and professional training for the Ministry.

About half of them are veterans of World War II. And all have decided upon their vocation in full view of the world's general rejection of God and His Church.

They are Postulants or Candidates for the Ministry, having satisfied their Bishops, Examining Chaplains and Diocesan Standing Committees of their fitness to seek Holy Orders.

The Church cannot afford to withhold means for the best possible program of theological education.

* * * *

Berkeley Divinity School, New Haven, Conn.; Bexley Hall, Gambier, Ohio; Church Divinity School of the Pacific, Berkeley, Calif.; Divinity School of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia; Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass.; The General Theological Seminary, New York City; Nashotah House, Nashotah, Wis.; School of Theology of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.; Seabury-Western Theological Seminary, Evanston, Ill.; Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT, Book Editor

The Book of Thirty Centuries: An Introduction to Modern Study of the Bible. By Stanley Rypins. Macmillan, $7.00.

Popular interest in the text of the Bible has been stimulated by the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls as well as by the production of the Revised Standard Version. The Professor of English at Brooklyn College, C. C. N. Y., has been interested in ancient manuscripts since the time of the First World War, when he was a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford. Now he presents us with a good introduction to the study of the evolution of the Biblical text into its present English forms in a book which is designed to be of interest to scholars as well as to those who know neither Greek nor Hebrew.

This difficult task he has accomplished perhaps as well as could be expected. The intelligent student will find here in the most convenient and up-to-date form the information he needs concerning the more important manuscripts and printed editions of the Bible, the causes of textual corruption and the methods of emendation, the problems of translators ancient and modern, and the chief results of the higher criticism of the Law and the Gospels. Biblical students may use the tables and indices for quick reference.

However the book is marred by some errors, as must be expected when one who is not a specialist writes on such a technical subject. For instance, kappa and chi are repeatedly confused in the capitals on p. 131, which makes even more doubtful the highly speculative suggestion that Enoch has been dropped from the text of I Peter iii.19 by haplography. As anyone who has mastered his Hebrew knows, ". . . A young woman is pregnant and about to bear a child . . ." is a correct translation of Isaiah vii.14, despite all that is said to the contrary on pp. 245-248. Modern critics do not agree "unanimously" that Josiah's reformation was Deuteronomic (pp.278f). The Revelation is not "to this day . . . rejected by the Greek-speaking church" (pp. 312f), as is admitted at once on p. 314. Another curious lapse occurs on pp. 155f: ". . . the first pre-Christian century . . . by which time the Septuagint, universally accepted by Christians as the sacred Scriptures of Israel, and freely quoted as such by the writers of the New Testament . . ."!

Despite such glaring mistakes, which make the book unreliable as a serious reference work, it is well written and is probably the best available for general purposes.

—Frank North

Unless Some Man Show Me. By Alexander Jones. Sheed & Ward. $2.50.

This Roman Catholic book on the Bible fares better at the bar of critical scholarship than most similar current works, but its origins and thought forms are obvious. Beginning from what appears to be a sound orientation, Fr. Jones is immediately hedged in by Papal Encyclicals and the Biblical Commission. The chief difficulties for us in this book stem from the author's treatment of Holy Scripture as a set of propositions and a rigid and outmoded (outside Rome!) view of Inspiration and Revelation.—Jules L. Moreau

One and Holy. By Karl Adam. Sheed and Ward. $2.00.

This is the book that has been discussed so widely—on church unity, by a Roman Catholic! It urges Roman Catholics to re-consider the Reformation and Luther's career and the prospect of reunion. Dr. Adam is convinced that Luther's motives were good and that the real barrier to the union of German Christianity at the present time is the papal claims (p. 69).

RELIGIOUS CHRISTMAS CARDS

Christmas Card Boxes, $1.00 each

I The Story of Christmas in Text and Picture 16 cards

II 20 Hummel Christmas Cards

Christmas Card Packets, $1.00 each

4X Four 25c Cards

10X Ten 10c Cards

20Xa Twenty 5c Cards

20Xb Twenty 5c Single Mowbray Cards

Anglo-Franciscan Pocket Kalendar

Feasts and Fasts for 1952

15c each – 8 for $1.00

THE GRACE DIEU PRESS

Maryhill Mount Sinai, L. I., N. Y.

Thirteen distinguished New Testament scholars pay tribute to Dr. Grant of Union Theological Seminary on his 60th birthday. The contributions by men like Arthur Jeffrey, Arthur Darby Nock and John Knox cover various aspects of New Testament theology, ranging from "Overconversion in Paul's Churches" to "Soter and Euergetes." They provide pertinent information for the scholar and are eloquent testimony of the true "joy of study."

edited by Sherman E. Johnson in honor of Frederick C. Grant

THE JOY OF STUDY

$2.75 at your bookstore

MACMILLAN

60 Fifth Ave., N. Y. 11

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CHURCH FURNISHINGS

Distinctive, hand-carved pulpits, altars, lecterns, baptismal fonts, tables, seats — in authentic period designs.
Beautiful altar sets and communion services.
Stained glass memorial windows made to order.
Handsomely engrossed Books of Remembrance with repositories, resolutions, rolls of honor.
Send for our free catalog.

WHITTEMORE ASSOCIATES, INC.
16 ASHBURTON PLACE, BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS

New "HARTAL" Auto Clothes-Rack

Saves a lot of packing, carries garments on hangers or in garment bags. Keeps clothes wrinkle-free, saves pressing bills. No installation expense, springs into position or out just as easy. Will not mar upholstery. No screws or bolts, FITS ANY CAR, hugs ceiling, does not interfere with headroom. Beautifully finished. New low price, $6.95 F.O.B. Port Washington, Wis.
When Writing: PLEASE Mention This Magazine.
THE SPECIALIZED PRODUCTS CO.
P. O. BOX-59, PORT WASHINGTON, WISCONSIN.

ALTAR GUILDS
Full range of finest qualities Pure Irish Linen for all church uses. Immediate delivery; prices unchanged.
Samples Free
MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
Box 325 Marblehead, Mass.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

ALTAR LINENS
BY THE YARD
From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States. I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values and qualities imported from Ireland. Also ecclesiastical transfer patterns, beautiful household table damask and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.
MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

Make Christmas Christian
A church woman gave her rector a check as a thank offering for her friends. What her gift accomplished is related by Bishop Hines. Rectors will want to mail this leaflet to parishioners.
$1 for 25; $1.50 for 50; $2 for 100
THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

PEOPLE

CLERGY CHANGES:

EDWARD J. DAY, formerly a master at Lenox School, is now rector of St. George's, Lee, Mass., and vicar of the Good Shepherd, South Lee.

RICHARD H. GURLEY, formerly rector of St. Martin's, Radnor, Pa., is now vicar of All Saints, Whalom, Mass.

CARTER S. GILLISS, formerly ass't at St. Andrew's Chapel, College Park, Md., is now rector of St. Peter's, Poolesville, Md.

BENJAMIN NEVITT, formerly rector of St. Peter's, Poolesville, Md., is now chaplain in the air force.

JAMES RICHARDS, rector of St. Paul's, Washington, has been involuntarily recalled to be a chaplain in the air force, and has been granted an indefinite leave. J. Howard W. Rhys, ass't at Trinity Cathedral, Trenton, N. J., is locum tenens.

GEORGE J. HALL, rector of All Saints, Santa Barbara, Cal., has been appointed dean of the Santa Barbara convocation. He will direct diocesan activities in the area comprising nine parishes and missions.

RICHARD V. JACOBS was instituted rector of St. Thomas', Bellrose, N. Y. on Nov. 20 by Bishop DeWolfe.

CHARLES M. WOOD was instituted rector of St. John's, Huntingdon, N. Y. on Nov. 6 by Bishop Powell of Maryland.

LEIGHTON BURGESS, formerly rector of the Good Shepherd, Pawtucket, R. I., is now in charge of St. Andrew's, Providence, R. I.

GEORGE F. O'PRAY, formerly rector of St. Clement's, Buffalo, N. Y., is now rector of St. Luke's, Jamestown, N. Y.

DOUGLAS M. STOLL, rector of the Advent, Kenmore, N. Y., has been appointed dean of the northern Erie deanery.

LAY WORKERS:

BARBARA ARNOLD, formerly director of college at youth work at Christ Church, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., is now director of the work with Episcopal students at Mt. Holyoke College.

DORIS V. WILSON, Windham House graduate and formerly on the staff of the Girls' Friendly Society, is now national student secretary of the YWCA, in charge of the southern work.

Free Yourself FROM Tobacco Habit
If you want to stop smoking and just can't, try world-famous NO-TO-BAC Lozenges. See how quickly NO-TO-BAC may help stop your craving for tobacco. Rush $1 to NO-TO-BAC, for 7 days supply. (For heavy smokers—16 days' supply—$2.) Satisfaction guaranteed or money back. Write:
NO-TO-BAC CO.
DEPT. LG HEWLETT, NEW YORK

CASSOCKS
Surplices — Choir Vestments
Eucharistic Vestments
Altar Hangings and Linens
Prices Sent on Request
J. M. HALL, INC.
14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.
Tel. CH 4-3306

VESTMENTS
Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves
Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries
Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars
Custom Tailoring for Clergymen
1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951
COX SONS & VINING, Inc.
131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE·BRASS·SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS
EST. 1871

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS
Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS
Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.
SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

THE BISHOP WHITE PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833
Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.
PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)
Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

CHAD WALSH
Prof. at Beloit College

I should like to express my hearty agreement with part of Mr. A. F. Gilman's letter in the Witness of November 1. It is quite true that the Episcopal Church does not deserve the apostolic succession. We are merely lucky. To put it theologically, whatever treasures any church may have are due not to the merits of its members but to the free grace of God.

It logically follows that we have no cause for pride whatever in the apostolic succession. But we do have cause for gratitude and a sense of responsibility. In all humility and love we should be ready to offer what we have to other denominations. And I hope they in turn will offer us the peculiar treasures that God has entrusted to them. We could certainly profit from the Quakers' sense of the inner light and their social concern, from the Methodists' knowledge of how to worship through congregational singing and from their passion for concrete action. Every Church you can think of has its particular strong points—not through the virtues of its members, but through the grace of God. Christian unity will not come about through destroying the special gifts of each denomination, but through pooling them.

JAMES D. SMALL
Layman of Boston

In regard to the series of articles by Mr. Adams on "Church Jim Crow," may I point out that the Church lags far behind professional baseball in its treatment of Negroes. I listened to all of the games of the world series, as well as the National League play-off, and not once did I hear the word Negro used to describe any of the players. Nor do daily newspapers call attention to the color of skins in reporting baseball games.

THOMAS B. SMYTHE
Rector at Birdsboro, Pa.

In a resolution regretting the appointment of an ambassador to the Vatican, adopted by the ministerium of Birdsboro we stated: "If this appointment is meant as a recognition of the Roman Catholic Church as a Church, we protest the action as being unfair to other Churches. If this nomination is meant as a recognition of the Roman Catholic Church as a political organization and a sovereign power, we protest the action as being unfair to our Roman Catholic neighbors."

This phrasing seems felicitous to me, especially as I wrote it myself. It expresses concern for the welfare of our R. C. friends, which some resolutions conspisuously omit. It does not add to the bitterness of the controversy. It ducks the debatable issue of interpreting the constitution, also the worthwhileness of the "listening post" at the Vatican, on both of which few clergy are competent to speak.

A. J. WHITEHOUSE, M.D.
Layman of Lexington, Ky.

I want to commend you on the recent editorial on Cardinal Spellman (Witness, Sept. 20). I wish other Protestant papers were equally outspoken in regard to this cheap publicity which seems to be the present weapon of the Romanists.

Shattuck School

FOUNDED 1858

Shattuck integrates all parts of its program: religious, academic, military and social to give high school age boys an environment in which to grow "in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man." Summer School-Camp. Catalogue

REV. SIDNEY W. GOLDSMITH, JR.
RECTOR AND HEADMASTER
Box W, Shumway Hall
SHATTUCK SCHOOL FARIBAULT, MINN.

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA

Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

CENTRAL SCHOOL OF RELIGION
(A Correspondence Institution)
6030 Lowell Ave., Indianapolis 19, Ind.
College level courses since 1896. Bible, Theology of O. & N. T., Pastoral Psychology, Church Publicity, Religious Education, etc. Complete interrupted studies at home. Excellent faculty. Reasonable. Write to Secretary for further information NOW.

FORK UNION
MILITARY ACADEMY

Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

HOLDERNESS

The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth New Hampshire

LENOX SCHOOL

A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901

A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE-MOUNTAINS

An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin

Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Fund-raising for churches is given FIRST PLACE in Wells Organizations

-- that is why --

Wells Organizations hold FIRST PLACE in fund-raising for churches.

Recent Successful Church Building Fund Programs Directed for Episcopal Churches

by

WELLS ORGANIZATIONS

Objective	Raised	Church	City	State
$250,000	$320,000	St. Mark's Church	Shreveport	La.
150,000	150,000	St. James' Church	Alexandria	La.
150,000	190,000	Christ Church	St. Joseph	Mo.
150,000	200,000	Heavenly Rest Church	Abilene	Tex.
150,000	*	St. John's Cathedral	Albuquerque	N.M.
125,000	126,000	St. John's Church	Montgomery	Ala.
125,000	*	St. Andrew's Church	Tampa	Fla.
100,000	100,000	Church of the Ascension	Montgomery	Ala.
100,000	120,000	Trinity Cathedral	Little Rock	Ark.
75,000	86,000	St. John's Church	Mobile	Ala.
75,000	87,000	St. Patrick's Church	Washington	D. C.

 In process*

For additional Information write or phone the nearest Wells Office

W/O Wells Organizations

FUND-RAISING ENGINEERS

Washington Building, Washington, D. C., STerling 7333

WELLS ORGANIZATIONS OF TEXAS, Inc.	WELLS ORGANIZATIONS OF OHIO	WELLS ORGANIZATIONS OF GEORGIA	WELLS ORGANIZATIONS, Ltd.
Electric Building	Terminal Tower	Mortgage Guarantee Building	330 Bay Street
Ft. Worth, Texas FAnnin 9374	Cleveland, Ohio MAin 1-0490	Atlanta, Georgia ALpine 2728	Toronto, Ontario PLaza 5878

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The WITNESS

10¢ A COPY

November 29, 1951

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL, OKLAHOMA CITY
The Margaret Lee Culbertson Memorial Altar

ARTICLE BY RANDOLPH CRUMP MILLER

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 7:30, 8 (and 9 Holy Days except Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 8:30, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers — 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. — 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital — 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m. Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a. m. Holy Communion.
9:30 and 11 a. m. Church School.
11 a. m. Morning Service and Sermon.
4 p. m. Evensong. Special Music.
Weekday: Holy Communion Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.; Wednesdays and Saints Days at 8 a. m.; Thursdays at 12:10 p. m. Organ Recitals, Fridays, 12:10.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer — 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon. Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D.,
Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 — 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m.
Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacColl, 3rd, Rector
Rev. Peter Chase, Curate
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 40 The WITNESS NOVEMBER 29, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Cathedral in Oklahoma City Serves All the People

St. Paul's Continues to Do a Remarkable Job in Extending Influence

★ Sixty years ago, Oklahoma City was a town of shacks and tents. It had sprung up overnight in the wake of the historic run of 1889, when Oklahoma Territory—the land of the red man—was opened for white settlement. Two years after the opening of the territory, Oklahoma City boasted a population of 5,000 people. When the first Episcopal service was read in the city in January, 1891, ten persons registered as communicants.

This little congregation, which adopted the name of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, made their home in the old federal court room. In 1893 the congregation felt the need of a church building and erected the first church. In the same year Oklahoma Territory was officially recognized as a missionary district and General Convention elected the Rev. Francis Key Brooke as missionary bishop. His consecration was held in Grace Cathedral, Topeka, Kansas, on the feast of Epiphany, 1893. Bishop Brooke chose Guthrie, the Territorial capital, as his see city and place of residence.

The little congregation of ten soon outgrew their first church building. The congregation had increased ten-fold in the period of ten years. On Advent Sunday, December 1, 1901, a new building was consecrated. Within six months after the consecration, this rapidly growing mission became the second parish of the missionary district and is today the oldest continuous parish in the diocese.

A new church building was soon needed. The corner stone of a permanent brick and stone church was laid at the corner of Seventh Street and Robinson Avenue during the summer of 1903. The new church, which is now on the fringe of the downtown business area, was then located in the heart of the residential district of the young city.

In 1907, the Territory of Oklahoma petitioned Congress for statehood. Oklahoma then became the forty-sixth state of the union, and the capital was moved from Guthrie to Oklahoma City. It was the opinion of many churchmen that Oklahoma City should also be the see city of the missionary district, and St. Paul's Church was offered as the cathedral in the fall of 1908. Bishop Brooke accepted this offer and St. Paul's was constituted the pro-Cathedral that year. The Rev. J. M. D. Davidson was elected the first dean of St. Paul's Cathedral on January 1, 1909.

In order to take care of the expanding life of the parish, which by now had grown to 450 communicants, the first parish house was erected in the fall of 1909. It was remodeled in 1949 and stands today as the parish house of the Cathedral.

On October 22, 1918, all Oklahoma mourned the death of Bishop Brooke, who for twenty-five years had been missionary bishop of Oklahoma. The Rt. Rev. Theodore Payne Thurston, bishop of the missionary district of Eastern Oklahoma, was made bishop-in-charge. On October 10, 1919, when the two districts were consolidated by General Convention, Bishop Thurston became missionary bishop of all Oklahoma. In October, 1926, Bishop Thurston resigned because of ill health. The Rt. Rev. E. Cecil Seaman was placed in charge of Oklahoma. He officiated at the consecration of St. Paul's Church, the pro-Cathedral of Oklahoma, on August 28, 1927. The Very Rev. John Warren Day was dean at the time of the consecration.

The Rt. Rev. Thomas Casady was consecrated missionary bishop of Oklahoma on October 2, 1927. In November of the same year, the Rev. James Mills was called to be dean of the

DEAN JOHN S. WILLEY

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Cathedral. His ministry was to extend over a period of eighteen years—the longest in the ministry of the Cathedral. He cultivated the love and respect of thousands of people—Episcopalians and non-Episcopalians alike. He enjoyed a truly great pastoral relationship with his congregation.

Under the energetic leadership of Bishop Casady, the clergy and laity of Oklahoma petitioned General Convention to permit the formation of a new diocese from the area known as the missionary district of Oklahoma and consisting of the state of Oklahoma. The primary convention of the diocese, meeting at St. Paul's Cathedral on January 16 and 17, 1938, adopted a constitution and canons and became officially the diocese of Oklahoma. Just three months following the tenth anniversary of his consecration, Bishop Casady became first diocesan bishop of Oklahoma.

In 1944, St. Paul's had once again outgrown the facilities of its building. The Church School met in one small auditorium with only temporary partitions between classes, which did more to hinder than to help the functions of religious education. No recreational or social facilities were available for the congregation of more than 650 communicants. The parish house facilities consisted entirely of offices, a make-shift chapel, a parlor, and an auditorium. To provide room for the much-needed expansion in buildings, lots adjoining the Cathedral property were purchased.

Before an adequate program of development was launched for the restoration of the Cathedral and parish house and the erection of a new educational and recreational building, the Rev. John S. Willey was called by the vestry as dean of the Cathedral on November 15, 1945. He had previously served in the naval chaplaincy during world war two. The immediate problems of policy and reorganization faced him. He soon organized a committee of ten laymen to study the problems of a downtown parish and to consider the future of St. Paul's Cathedral.

The dean's committee felt very strongly that the church should strive for an atmosphere where people from every walk of life could gather for worship, study, fellowship and service to their fellow men. If the urban church is fast becoming the missionary problem of the Episcopal Church, the committee was determined that St. Paul's Cathedral should do its share in the solution of that problem.

Mindful of our Lord's teaching that the fellowship of faith and service are above the restrictions of class, as represented in modern building developments which tend to separate us by classes rather than to unite us as Christians; and mindful that the world controversy is whether any one shall be allowed to divide by class and then to conquer, the committee believed that here on the fringe of the downtown area, without these divisive restrictions, was an excellent opportunity for the cause of Christ. It was determined that the Church, if nowhere else in the world, shall be a place where every man might find his place in the worship of God and in service to his fellow men. In short, the committee meant that St. Paul's should follow in the great tradition of Cathedrals, locally and nationally, as expressed by the Rt. Rev. Angus Dun, and be the universal Church — every man's church where all might worship, work, and serve together.

The dean's committee discovered that visitors and transients attended the services of St. Paul's and entered the Cathedral to pray from every part of the city, diocese and nation. Many people outside the parish rolls called upon the staff for personal counselling and spiritual direction. Oklahoma City was

It was with the young people in mind that the recreation room of the Cathedral Center was equipped. However adults and children as well enjoy the recreational benefits provided rapidly becoming a medical center for this area of the nation and they knew that St. Paul's, as a downtown parish, would be of great service to the sick and shut-ins. They discovered that a large percentage of the people confirmed at the Cathedral were soon transferred to other Churches throughout the nation, and they were reluctant to discontinue this service to the whole Church, which would be the case if the Cathedral were moved to a suburban area. These objectives, the committee believed, would outweigh the advantage of proximity in the minds of many.

The dean's committee realized that in launching such a program of extra-parochial service and urban missionary activity they were assuming a financial responsibility far beyond that of the average parish. Yet they had no desire to burden the rapidly expanding missionary work of the diocese and National Council, even with causes tantamount in importance. They, therefore, recommended an appeal to the members and friends of their own congregation so that St. Paul's Cathedral might obtain the objective of the Church universal in worship, service, and faith.

In the fall of 1947, a $300,000 program was launched to restore the Cathedral and parish house and to build a three story educational and recreational building to be called the Cathedral center. On September 18, 1949, the new Cathedral center was opened. It is sufficient to house a church school of 500 pupils, with a children's chapel complete in every detail; a banquet hall and auditorium with a seating capacity of 700 persons; the library, a memorial to Bishop Brooke; a recreation room complete with bowling alleys, billiard and ping pong tables, and the latest recreational equipment.

As St. Paul's Cathedral looks back over the sixty years of Christian service in Oklahoma City, the congregation realizes that now, with adequate physical equipment for the first time in its history, the Church in Oklahoma City stands at the threshold of a great opportunity for the cause of Christ. They feel that St. Paul's is now entering the climax of its destiny as a downtown Cathedral. Its program for the education and development of young people includes more of our youth than ever before, and it is influencing many of them toward the Episcopal Church. The Cathedral staff is kept busy with pastoral counselling, visitations to the sick and shut-ins, and in directing a parish program which serves the congregation from the cradle to the grave. Many phases of its program reach out into the community, providing Christian service and fellowship to many un-churched people and drawing them closer to Christ's Church.

Other Episcopal churches in the city have followed the example of the Cathedral in restoring and expanding their building facilities, so that now all may go forward together in becoming a real factor in the Christian development of the community. Situated in the heart of the Christian community in Oklahoma City, St. Paul's Cathedral is even now moving forward—nearly 1,000 strong—in what it conceives to be its mission as a downtown parish; to unite under one roof, as under one heaven, God's concern for all sorts and conditions of men in the fellowship of Christ.

Doorway-vestibule of St. Paul's Cathedral was added to the building in the $300,000 restoration program of 1947-49

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EDITORIALS

The Christian Year

WE are about to begin again the round of the Christian year, with the first Sunday in Advent. It is well for us to ask and answer some questions about the significance and value of this custom, common to all the Churches of Christendom that retain this feature of their ancient Catholic heritage.

Is this year-by-year following of the events of our Lord's earthly life a mere commemorating or reminding ourselves of these mighty acts that redeem the world and made possible our own salvation? Is it, psychologically at least, just the same as the political commemorations which we observe as patriotic Americans — the Fourth of July, Washington's Birthday, Armistice Day, Thanksgiving Day? If that is all it is, we are frank to say that it is not of any great consequence, not enough certainty to justify the Churchman's old slogan: "O, live ye by the Calendar!"

To understand, in some measure at least, the profound significance and spiritual reality of the Christian year, we must look steadily at the very foundation of our Christian faith—the fact that the Lord Jesus is truly very God of very God, the Word made flesh. We are not celebrating a man's birth, life, death and resurrection in our Christian year. We are, rather, seeking to make ourselves consciously a part of that matchless, transforming life of the Almighty, who is love, a life without beginning or ending, a life that is perpetually, continuously being born, working, dying, arising here in humanity's career on this little planet. To Almighty God, who is timeless, there is no succession of events; birth, life, death, resurrection are simultaneous, are continuous facts in an eternal present. This is the supreme mystery of the Christian religious life. We cannot comprehend it, for we are limited and conditioned by time and space. What we can do is to believe simply and firmly in the actual presence, here and now, of the Incarnate God in human life, a presence that is dynamic, transforming for his disciples' characters.

We are greatly mistaken if we interpret the doctrine of the "Real Presence" as limiting the Lord Christ's effective, objective presence to the blessed sacrament of his Body and Blood. His Real Presence is his Incarnate life in its every aspect, impinging mightily on our personal and corporate lives. The observance of the Christian year is like the prism which breaks up the white light of the sun into the color spectrum which we can regard steadily and study fruitfully. We feeble mortals have no power to conceive the eternal present, which is God's sphere alone. Even trying to imagine it is like attempting to look steadily at the blazing, unclouded sun. So the Church showed her practical wisdom in setting forth the Christian year as a spiritual spectrum, the different stages of the divine life which we can look at reverently, study faithfully; each act of that redeeming life in turn—from Advent to Pentecost.

May we not begin, this Advent, to cherish a joyous confidence in the real and continuous presence of our blessed Lord in this, his little world and find a new awareness that his birth is now, in the year of our Lord, 1951? It is, we believe, this realization that Phillips Brooks gave expression to in the words of his familiar hymn:

O holy Child of Bethlehem!
Descend to us, we pray,
Cast out our sin and enter in,
Be born in us today.

"Quotes"

EVERY time we stifle an impulse toward generosity, toward self-sacrifice, toward loving our enemies by positive acts, we contribute to the earth's desolation, to the strife of peoples, to large-scale maneuvering for power and privilege. The sins of a nation are not alone the sins of leaders; they only reflect the greed and arrogance in the hearts of its people, with some magnifying. We must cease our personal rebellion against God, if we would have nations do so.

—FORWARD, Advent, 1951

Degrees & Conversion

THAT much loved and unique clergyman, Daddy Hall, who died recently, has a bit to say in the last issue he edited of his Church Militant. In going over the Church, he wrote, I am struck with the number of those with honorary degrees I see on all sides. Solomon, in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these. I do not say it is wrong. I simply say that too much attention is paid to it. Clergymen tell us they cannot get a parish unless they have a degree from some college or seminary. That is nonsense.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

One of these fellows came to Galilee Mission. He then had three degrees and was working for a fourth. He had not the slightest idea of the way to lead a soul to Christ. I urged him to go into the inquiry room and do some personal work with those who went in there. Finally he went in, but did not know what in the world to do. He asked a poor, weary sin-ladened man to kneel down, recited the absolution over him and told him to go.

A plain convert was in the room at the time and he knew that was not right; so he stopped the poor man, led him to confess his sin to Christ, ask forgiveness, and the man went out overjoyed at the peace he felt. The clergyman stood by and was at a loss to know what to do. His three degrees did not help him one bit in that situation. The young convert told me all this, but he never suspected that the minister was a preacher and I did not enlighten him.

The moral of the story is—don't be a D.D. or an S.T.D. or a Ph.D. unless you are a B.A. (Born Again).

Protestant Episcopal Church Is Catholic

BY

RANDOLPH CRUMP MILLER
Professor at the Church Divinity School of the Pacific

MEMBERS of the Protestant Episcopal Church are members of the Catholic Church. They admit it every time they say the creed: "I believe in the holy, Catholic Church." They are not Roman Catholics, or Old Catholics, or Greek or Russian Orthodox Catholics. They are members of one of the few Churches with "Protestant" as part of the legal title. They find their ancestry in the Church of England, which is legally Protestant. Yet they are Catholic.

In 1930, the Lambeth renewed a statement of 1920: "We believe that it is God's purpose to manifest this fellowship, so far as this world is concerned, in an outward, visible, and united society, holding one faith, having its own recognized officers using God-given means of grace, and inspiring all its members to the world-wide service of the kingdom of God. This is what we mean by the Catholic Church." The same thing is said in different words in the offices of instruction: "We mean that the Church is Catholic; because it is universal, holding earnestly the faith for all time, in all countries, and for all people; and is sent to preach the gospel to the whole world."

Let us, then, look at the Protestant Episcopal Church and see why it is Catholic.

One, it is universal. This Church counts its history as going back to the time of the primitive Church, and there is no real break in its development until the time of the Reformation. Even then it was a reformed Catholicism that emerged in England, purified and purged of non-Biblical and non-Catholic accretions. It is a Church that is in many countries and seeks to be in all of them, and it is open to all people.

But we mean that the Catholic Church is bigger than the Episcopal Church. It is more than the Anglican Communion. It is the "Body of which Jesus Christ is the head, and all baptized people are members." As St. Paul says, "For we have all—Jews or Greeks, slaves or free men—been baptized in one spirit to form one body, and we have all been saturated with one Spirit." (I Cor. 12:13).

There is, then, "the mystical body of Christ, which is the blessed company of all faithful people." The Holy Catholic Church is "the communion of saints." Surely this is a universal hope and faith.

Organic Wholeness

TWO, the Catholic Church is characterized by its wholeness. The analogy of the "body" indicates that the Church is an organism. It has an organic wholeness about it, which is based on the mutual interrelatedness of its members. The various members have their particular functions or vocations. The eye and the ear and the foot have different functions; and yet the body depends on each of them and they on each other.

This organic interrelatedness is illustrated in Christian living. Members of the congregations are engrafted into the body of Christ by baptism. They are born into a family of God. They are not baptized as Episcopalians, but as members of the holy Catholic Church.

A Church which does not recognize the universal validity of baptism is non-Cathloic. For it is by the grace of God given in baptism that one becomes a member of the Church. He does not become an Episcopalian, Baptist or Romanist through baptism; he becomes a member of the whole Church, which is the Catholic Church.

The life of the local congregation illustrates this wholeness in assuring every member of his rights and privileges in the fellowship. The baptized baby one day old is as much a member of the Catholic Church as is the Lord Bishop of London. But this is true in terms of grace only if the baby knows it through the actions of the congregation!

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Historic Ministry

THREE, the Catholic Church has an historic ministry. It is here that "Catholic" takes on different meanings. The Churches calling themselves Catholic in this sense are those with a ministry that can be traced back in unbroken line to before the Reformation, and then continued it with the three-fold order of bishops, priests, and deacons. When the Protestant Episcopal Church talks of unity with other Churches, it makes one of its points the acceptance of the historic ministry. "Wherever the bishop shall appear, there let the people also be; even as, wherever Jesus Christ is, there is the Catholic Church," said Ignatius.

The ministry becomes the source of the means of grace as found in the sacraments. Only a priest can officiate at the Lord's supper. There is a narrow catholicity that makes this the sole test. One Anglican writer concludes as follows: "We conclude, then, that six communions are to be reckoned as sharing the inheritance of the ancient Catholic Church: in the East, the Orthodox, Armenian (Coptic, etc.), and Assyrian; in the West, the Roman, Anglican (with the Old Catholic), and Swedish. They are not all equally orthodox; for if they were, they would be agreed, and if they were agreed they would probably be united . . . In all of them we find the same creed, the same sacramental life centred in the altar, the same government by the successors of the apostles." This attitude of exclusiveness leads to a looking down our noses at our more Protestant brethren.

It is a fact that the outline for the basis of union, which began in a General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church and was later approved by all bishops in the Lambeth Quadrilateral, had as one point the acceptance of the historic episcopate (carefully left undefined). The other three points are acceptable to almost all Christians: belief in the Holy Scriptures as containing all things necessary to salvation; acceptance of the two creeds; and use of the two sacraments instituted by Christ. It is only on the ministry that there are real differences of opinion. At this point, the Episcopal Church has remained strongly in the Catholic tradition, although there are wide differences of opinion among Episcopalians as to what the historic episcopate means.

Fellowship in Love

FOUR, the Catholic Church practices fellowship-in-love. The Russians have a word for it: sobornost. As against the Reformation emphasis on the individual in relation to God, the Catholic emphasis is on the organic body of the Church, within which there is real fellowship. The sign of Church membership is life-in-love. When such love is evident in the congregation of the faithful, the true nature of the Church becomes more clear to the world. Or, as "The Faith of the Church" puts it, "Every member of the body is bound up, in one bundle of life, with every other member. We belong to Christ, and we belong to each other." "And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it" (I Cor. 12:26).

There is a dynamic fellowship in the Church. It is a congregation of sinners seeking redemption. This fellowship is a redeeming process by which the members are brought out of their loneliness into the full fellowship with God and their neighbors. In the assurance that God loves them and forgives them, they find their rightful place as persons within the fellowship of faithful people.

Ecumenical Reformation

FIVE, we believe in visible Catholicity. We who count ourselves members of the holy, Catholic Church must often feel like the man who said, "I believe in the holy, Catholic Church, and regret that it does not exist." Georgia Harkness replied by saying she knows it exists because she has experienced it in action. She goes on to describe the great soul-stirring experiences of the conferences between Christians of all denominations who met at Oxford, Madras, Geneva, and Amsterdam. These men and women came together from diverse forms of Christendom, and all of them believed in the holy, Catholic Church. As they worked and studied and worshipped together, Miss Harkness saw a universal Catholic Church in action.

There is a new Reformation in these days. It is called the Ecumenical Reformation, and it brings all Churches into unity. Here is a new form of the universal and world-wide Church, expressing the wholeness of its faith and of its many members through the World Council of Churches.

It operates on a world-wide level, but it also operates on the local level. There is a new concept of non-Roman Catholicism which has caught the imagination of all except the most rebellious Protestant groups. Today, when we say we believe in the holy, Catholic Church, we see it partially at work in the local congregation, in the local councils of Churches, in the statewide councils, and in the National Council of Churches.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Our Protestant brethren cooperate in these movements toward unity, and in so far they are Catholic. They also say the creed: "I believe in the holy Catholic Church," or "the holy Church universal," or (among some Lutherans), "the holy Christian Church."

This word, Catholic, is of great historic meaning. It has always been part of the creeds of Christendom. Yet we have allowed it to have the common usage of referring only to Rome, or at best to the Roman and Eastern Orthodox Churches. Some Episcopalians use it, but often as a cloak for hiding our Protestant heritage. True Catholicism today is not found in Rome, but in the Ecumenical Movement, in which all Churches except Rome and a few others are drawing together in fellowship and love and mutual trust, in the sense of wholeness and visible Catholicity.

Of all Churches in Christendom, the Anglican communion, of which the Protestant Episcopal Church is a part, balances the Catholic and Protestant heritage. At the Reformation, it kept what was best in Western Catholicism and adopted what was best in the Continental Reformation. And today, it has provided real leadership to the Ecumenical Movement.

Let us, then, lift up our heads when we say, "I believe in the holy, Catholic Church." We need to know what it means as we renew our faith in the universal mission of the Church, in the wholeness of Christendom, in the historic ministry, in the fellowship-in-love which is at the heart of our redeeming and redemptive fellowship, and in the visible unity of all the Churches in the great movement that has led to the World Council of Churches.

We are Catholic in all these meanings of the word. We may find that we cannot use the word in many areas where we will be misunderstood, but we should know its traditional power as we include it in the summary of our pledge of allegiance to the God of Jesus Christ in the creeds.

So it is that we "pray for the holy Church universal; that it may be so guided and governed by thy good spirit, that all who profess and call themselves Christians may be led into the way of truth, and hold the faith in unity of spirit, in the bond of peace, and in righteousness of life."

Another article by the same author will follow on Why the Holy Catholic Church is Protestant.

The Godless University

BY

HUGH McCANDLESS

Rector of the Epiphany, New York

A BRILLIANT book by a recent Yale graduate has just appeared and has caused a stir in educational circles far beyond what its real importance merits. The thesis of the author is that if you send your son to Yale or any other university he will probably become a Keynesian collectivist (some kind of a socialist, or non-believer in free enterprise) and an atheist. All this is sketchily but impressively documented, and I have heard of one reader of the book who is considering cutting Yale out of her will. Indeed Mr. Buckley suggests very frankly that only such action or threats will move the Yale corporation, which includes Bishop Sherrill, to repentance and reform.

I cannot agree with some critics who call the book deliberately dishonest on the ground that the author has cited only the instances that suit him. Being young, he has cited only those that impress him. Another criticism is that he fails to mention the fact that he is a Roman Catholic, and that as a Roman Catholic he has no right to define the aims of a Protestant university. But of course he does not mention his Romanism because he does not want to weaken his argument; and as long as Yale welcomes such students, they have a right to feel they are a part of its tradition, too, even as a loyal opposition. A third critical comment is that he equates Christianity with capitalism. Actually he does not do this, but he lumps them together so frequently as to give an impression that they hardly exist apart from each other.

There are, however, four assumptions that underlie the book, and they are false. In their falsity lies the weakness—and the danger—of the book.

First, Mr. Buckley assumes that the opinions of a college senior are fixed for life. This is rarely the case, but it is of course natural for him to think so. I have a fifteen year old parishioner who is sure she is going on the stage. When I reminded her that last year she intended to be a nurse, she replied, "But, I mean, that was when I was pretty young. But, I mean, when you're fifteen you know what you really want to do."

God and Man at Yale; The Superstitions of Academic Freedon (240 pp.) —William F. Buckley, Jr.—Henry Regnery Company, Chicago ($3.50).

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

There was much atheism of a languid sort at Yale twenty-five years ago. It was especially marked among men who had come from Church schools or from church-going families. In their case, it was the perfectly natural reaction against the mores and ideas of their parents that most young people experience. But of the Yale men I see now, all but two claim some church membership, and I have noted with interest that those two have had their children baptized.

National politics was not a subject of much discussion at Yale before the depression. A great many of us, especially those of us who had a religious background, would have described ourselves as "sort of Socialists." I rather think it makes us better conservatives, and more intelligent ones, today.

There is an old saying that if a man of twenty is not a socialist, he has no heart; if at forty he is not a conservative, he has no head. This is grossly inaccurate, especially today, but it does express the truth that men do change their opinions between graduation and their twentieth reunion—you may describe it as digesting their college education, or learning from life in the world, or maturing, or conforming, or just degenerating—but their opinions do change.

False Assumption

MR. BUCKLEY'S second assumption is that any professional remark that is not immediately and flatly contradicted by a student is accepted as true by that student. Of course that is nonsense. The student finds it wiser to parrot back anything he is taught—if it interests him, he will figure out later whether it is true or not. We had a professor of anthropology or sociology whose name I forgot who encouraged questions. After a tirade of his against practically everything, one student asked him if he believed there was any real happiness. His reply was that perhaps drunkenness was a real, though temporary, happiness. No one groaned or whistled, but the consensus of the private discussions that followed was that it would be better to be Billy Phelps with a toothache than that man in a harem. If Mr. Buckley's assumption were correct, however, we all would of course have become alcoholics.

An occasional neurotic misfit does seek the petty smugness available on the teacher's platform; he has a captive audience, and any old cheap, ill-mannered joke against religion or morality is much preferred by the audience to something they must remember for an examination; but laughter is no sign of a permanent conviction. Occasionally neurotic men make wonderful teachers.

Mr. Buckley's third false assumption is that there is no significant religious influence at Yale to counterbalance the anti-religious teachers he mentions. But it is obvious that he cannot evaluate—no one student could—a faculty of over a thousand. He singles out for close examination the newer academic disciplines, and makes good points in the case of the psychology and sociology departments. These sciences are just out of the quackery stage, and are notoriously anti-religious. He does not give any survey of the numerous other departments that have always been overwhelmingly in favor of religion: the classical and modern language departments, and biology. When he discusses the amount of influence exercised by religious groups on the campus, he is trying to be eminently fair, but as an outsider to most of these mostly Protestant activities, he is in a poor position to judge.

Basic False Assumption

MR. BUCKLEY'S final, basic—and most dangerous—false assumption is this: that ultimate truth cannot propagate itself or stand in its own right. It must be "taught," it must be "defended"; it must not be discussed critically.

Here we have something important, because it shows a trend. Too many groups in this country do subscribe with Mr. Buckley to this false assumption of the frailty and sterility of truth. Thank goodness our universities do not agree with him, for when you believe that truth must be hollered and questions must be gagged, you have the philosophy which gave rise to the secret police of the dictatorships, and which stems straight from the Inquisition. The author expresses himself in favor of the McCarran Act and the Committee on un-American Activities, in both of which exotic pieces of legislative work his fellow-churchmen have been prominent, "teaching" their kind of true patriotism by threats of jail or unemployment.

Mr. Buckley is in favor of much that is good. But he wants a return to the Yale that fired its president for becoming Episcopalian—and which would not have admitted him, since he is certainly no Congregationalist! He wants a university that will take the malleable minds of the young, and compress them into molds, not stretch them. He expects the graduates to be good Bourbons in the next twenty years; that is, to forget nothing and to learn nothing. Stranger still, considering his conservatism he proposes that all this be effected by a strike on the part of the alumni!

Mr. Buckley feels he is an orthodox Christian, but his doctrine of the Holy Spirit seems to be that the Spirit, having led us into all the truth there is, has gone into retirement.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

WORLD FELLOWSHIP AT WASHINGTON

★ A service launching a week of prayer for world brotherhood was held November 14 in Washington Cathedral, sponsored by the YWCA. The preacher was the Rev. Robert J. McCracken of New York who said that "there is a spirit abroad among us at the present time which is bigotry and intolerance."

At the conclusion of the service $186,123 was presented at the altar for the world fellowship fund of the organization.

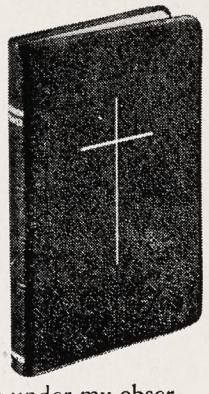
McCracken said the spirit of intolerance "has arisen in an America which is strangely afraid of itself. It is a spirit that is born of a half hysterical fear that tends to confuse loyalty and orthodoxy; that is impatient of any kind of deviation or diversity, and insists on the affirmation and reaffirmation of allegiance as though allegiance were something that could be impelled."

He said that he found in the new trend a danger to the principles of the founding fathers, and concluded; "Tolerance of diversity, in religious faith, in racial background, in economic interest, was what made the new world possible. No one can injure America as mortally as Americans, and they can do it by bigotry and intolerance."

ARMISTICE DAY IN PARIS

★ A special service for the United Nations and world peace was held in the American Pro-Cathedral Church of the Holy Trinity, Paris, on Armistice Day, Sunday, November 11th. Ambassador Warren R. Austin, permanent American delegate to the U N read the lesson and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt presented a memorial U N flag to the cathedral. Dean Sturgis Lee Riddle preached the sermon. Among the high ranking representatives who attended the service were French foreign minister Robert Schuman, representatives of the president and premier of France, secretary of the army and Mrs. Frank Pace, Mrs. Dean Acheson, Ambassador and Mrs. David Bruce, Paul Porter, head of the Marshall Plan in Europe, Paul Hoffman, and many of the international delegates to the U N.

Dean Riddle has been appointed by the Episcopal Church official observer to the U N session in Paris.



LAYREADERS CONFER IN SAN JOAQUIN

★ The first conference for layreaders was held recently in the district of San Joaquin, with nine attending, with a number of the clergy and leading laymen of the district assisting Bishop Walters in meetings and services. It was recommended that layreaders be more generally used in the district and that a similar conference be held next year.

SUCCESSFUL MISSION IN YOUNGSTOWN

★ Christianity became overnight the major street-corner topic in Youngstown, Ohio, as a result of a two week preaching mission which drew an estimated 93,000 people. Principal speaker was Charles Templeton, evangelist of the National Council of Churches. The Rev. John H. Burt, rector of St. John's, was one of the two chairmen of the undertaking which had the cooperation of 120 churches representing 30 denominations. Other Episcopalians active in organizing the mission were

When buying a Prayer Book ask for Harper Editions and enjoy—at no extra cost— all these exclusive features

MICROPAKE INDIA PAPER the finest India paper ever made in America. Harold P. Landers, Business Manager, Massachusetts Bible Society, says of Micropake: "Of all India papers from any part of the world that have come under my observation, this is definitely the best." (Micropake is now in use on all small and medium-sized Harper India paper editions.)

FLEXTEX EDGELINING the new, improved method of applying strong, flexible paper linings to give the finished appearance of a full leather lining. (Now used on many paper-lined editions of the Prayer Book.)

GIFT-PAK the 3-piece box that keeps your Prayer Book fresh and clean and gives you a handsome gift wrapping in blue and gold, free of retail store price marks. (Now used on a large majority of Harper Prayer Books.)

Ask to see Harper Prayer Books

On sale at leading booksellers everywhere

HARPER & BROTHERS, New York 16, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Clarence Robinson, warden of St. Augustine's, the Rev. W. Payne Stanley, rector of the same parish who developed the festival of faith service, the Rev. Brewster Beach, assistant at St. John's, who headed the delegations committee, William F. Maag Jr., editor of a local newspaper who gave the mission a tremendous amount of space, and Judge John W. Ford and John H. Hall who were on the finance committee.

SELL TOBACCO FOR CHURCH

★ A campaign for funds to restore All Saints, Sunderland, Md., got a $1,486 boost recently through the sale of 2,760 pounds of tobacco that was donated by farmers of the area. The restoration work on the church, once the only house of worship of any denomination in northern Calvert County, has been under way for more than a year.

WHOLE COMMUNITY CANVASSED

★ St. Andrew's, Ft. Thomas, Ky., has cooperated in a community-wide church loyalty drive. Teams called on people in the entire community, urging them to sign a pledge to attend a church of their choice for five consecutive Sundays. Idea behind it is that church-going is a habit and if a person goes for five weeks he is apt to continue to do so.

MARY SIMKHOVITCH DIES AT 84

★ Mrs. Mary Kingsbury Simkhovitch, 84, died on November 16th. She had devoted half a century to settlement work in New York and was internationally known for her pioneering work in slum clearance and housing. As head of Greenwich House for forty-four years she moulded the program according to her basic ideas—that social workers must live in the community and help the people develop their capacities and help themselves. She believed in keeping the program flexible to meet changing needs. She was a devout churchwoman, never failing to attend St. Luke's Chapel each Sunday and often on weekdays. She was a member of the executive committee of the Church League for Industrial Democracy, now the Episcopal League for Social Action, from its founding in 1919 and served also on the social service committee of the National Council.

CONNECTICUT BISHOPS ENTERTAIN

★ An unusual diocesan gathering was held in Hartford recently when the Bishop of Connecticut and Mrs. Gray, and the Suffragan Bishop of Connecticut and Mrs. Hatch entertained the clergy of the diocese and clergy wives. Approximately 300 were present for dinner and informal entertainment.

RECTOR AND MEMBERS BUILD PARISH HOUSE

★ Grace Church, Concord Pike, Del., needed an addition to the parish house because of the increase in membership and church school enrollment. They got a loan from the advanced fund of the diocese, plus contributions from members of the congregation, bought the materials, rolled up their sleeves and put up the building themselves.

RURAL AUXILIARY IN MONTANA

★ Montana now has a rural Woman's Auxiliary which is designed to keep women in outlying districts informed by mail of the work of the diocese, nation and overseas. It also seeks to build through letters and other printed materials a sense of fellowship.

TULSA CHURCH IS RENOVATED

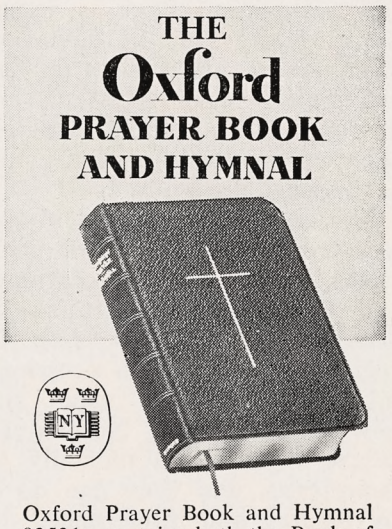
★ Trinity Church, Tulsa, Okla., has completed the renovation of the sanctuary and chancel. Both sections have now been completely paneled in oak and the walls and ceilings have been redecorated. Work is soon to begin on the decoration of the crossing, transcepts and nave.

ADDRESS CHANGE

IN MAKING AN ADDRESS CHANGE, PLEASE SEND both THE OLD AND THE NEW ADDRESS AND ALLOW THREE WEEKS FOR THE CHANGE.

RELIGIOUS CHRISTMAS CARDS

Christmas Card Boxes, $1.00 each
I The Story of Christmas in Text and Picture 16 cards
II 20 Hummel Christmas Cards



Christmas Card Packets, $1.00 each
4X Four 25c Cards
10X Ten 10c Cards
20Xa Twenty 5c Cards
20Xb Twenty 5c Single Mowbray Cards

Anglo-Franciscan Pocket Kalendar
Feasts and Fasts for 1952
15c each – 8 for $1.00

THE GRACE DIEU PRESS
Maryhill Mount Sinai, L. I., N. Y.

The Prayer Book and Hymnal in one convenient volume

THE Oxford PRAYER BOOK AND HYMNAL

Oxford Prayer Book and Hymnal 03531x contains both the Book of Common Prayer and the authorized Hymnal of the Episcopal Church bound together into a convenient volume. It is identical in size with the medium-size Prayer Book used in churches, and is printed on ultrathin India Paper in clear, readable type. In French Morocco, $9.00

At your bookstore

Free—write to Suite W3, Oxford University Press, for your copy of Our Father — a 48-page commentary on the Lord's Prayer by 16 bishops with a foreword by the Presiding Bishop.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
114 Fifth Ave., New York 11

Publishers of Fine Books for over Four Centuries

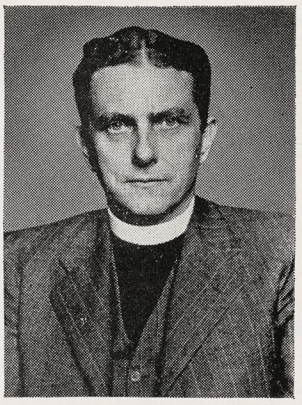
Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT
Book Editor

The United States and Spain. By Carlton J. H. Hayes. Sheed and Ward, $2.75.

Professor Carlton Hayes is one of our leading American historians and from 1942 until 1945 he was the American ambassador to Spain. He is, therefore, in a position to review the background of Spanish-American relations and also to discuss their foreground. He writes from the Roman Catholic point of view but he writes with entire loyalty to this country. He believes that Franco's government should be recognized and included in the Western European defense plans. He does not exactly white-wash Franco, but he does point out everything that can be said in his favor. For example, Franco set his price too high for Hitler, and so kept out of the Axis, and he not only threatened military action if the Allies entered Spanish territory but also if the Axis powers did so. The author is sure that the cultural differences between Spain and the other Western nations are not an insuperable barrier to mutual understanding and cooperation. What one does not find in the book is any adequate portrayal of Franco's brutal suppression of all opposing groups. After all, there is no getting around the fact that General Franco is a totalitarian dictator.



Our Bounden Duty. A Manual of Devotion for Communicants. By Miles Lowell Yates. Oxford Univ. Press, $1.50.

The devotions in this little manual are modelled, quite effectively, after the prayers in broken lines used in A. K. Bostock's Reasoned Prayers for the Lord's Own Service. Neither are quite as effective as Father Roche's original use of this form in The Mysteries of the Mass in Reasoned Prayers. However, they are well done, and can be used to advantage by anyone looking for something to stimulate his meditations at the Eucharist. On the other hand, the instructions which take up the first sixteen pages of the book seem to lack in simplicity and directness, and one misses the clear and unambiguous directions of the Prayer Book on self-examination and repentance. The service itself is printed in the Prayer Book order, and the contents are such as could be commended to the use of anyone of moderate churchmanship.

—Alex. S. Dewdney

"Go Ye Forth and Teach"

A prescription for a troubled world

The Practice of Evangelism

by Bryan Green

Rarely has a book been more timely than this handbook of practical evangelism by a man who packed the Cathedral of St. John the Divine with crowds of 5,000 to 10,000 nightly. From his thirty years of successful experience, Bryan Green presents the task of evangelism persuasively: conversion, reaching the young, the many details which contribute to the success of an evangelistic mission. This dynamic preacher's message will be of enormous interest to anyone who wants to know more about one of the primary functions of the Church. "He has taken us right into his confidence and shared with us his convictions, methods and discoveries. A wise and fearless book."—James S. Stewart $3.00

The Doctrine of the Atonement

by Leonard Hodgson

The author of The Doctrine of the Trinity makes another important contribution to contemporary religious thought. Creation, redemption, punishment and forgiveness are lucidly explained by this profound and creative theologian. $2.50

Christian Faith and Practice

Also by Dr. Hodgson

A book of tremendous interest to minister and layman alike—presenting Christianity as a creed to be believed and a life to be lived. $2.25

at your bookseller

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

ST. JAMES LESSONS

A nine course series of instruction for Episcopal Church Schools including illustrated work books—150-250 pages (60c each) and teachers' manuals I, II, III 40c each, IV through IX 60c each).

No Samples - Payment with orders

St. James Lessons, Inc.

865 Madison Ave., Dpt. 5, N. Y. 21, N. Y.

Sudbury CHURCH WORSHIP AIDS

Have your dealer show you the wide variety of well made church appointments we produce

FOR COMPLETE CATALOG SEND TO

SUDBURY BRASS GOODS CO.

55 SUDBURY STREET, BOSTON 14, MASS.

ALTAR GUILDS

Full range of finest qualities Pure Irish Linen for all church uses. Immediate delivery; prices unchanged.

Samples Free

MARY FAWCETT COMPANY

Box 325 Marblehead, Mass.

(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

★ ADDRESS CHANGE

IN MAKING AN ADDRESS CHANGE, PLEASE SEND BOTH THE OLD AND THE NEW ADDRESS AND ALLOW THREE WEEKS FOR THE CHANGE.

ALTAR LINENS

BY THE YARD

From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States. I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values and qualities imported from Ireland. Also ecclesiastical transfer patterns, beautiful household table damask and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.

MARY MOORE

Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

Make Christmas Christian

A church woman gave her rector a check as a thank offering for her friends. What her gift accomplished is related by Bishop Hines. Rectors will want to mail this leaflet to parishioners.

$1 for 25; $1.50 for 50; $2 for 100

THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

PEOPLE

CLERGY CHANGES:

VERN SWARTSFAGER, formerly rector of St. Andrew's, Bryan, Texas, is now rector of St. John the Evangelist, San Francisco.

CARL TAMBLYN, formerly rector of St. John's, Marysville, Cal., is now rector of St. Luke's, San Francisco.

BENJAMIN DeCAMP, formerly curate of St. Paul's, Oakland, Cal., is now vicar of St. Michael and All Angels, Concord, Cal.

JAMES B. VAUGHT, formerly of St. Mary's, Ardmore, Pa., is now associate rector of Trinity, Columbus, Ga.

HARRY W. BALDWIN Jr., formerly rector of St. Stephen's and Wicomico parishes, Wicomico Church, Va., becomes rector of St. Andrew's, Richmond, Va., Jan. 1st.

DAVID W. C. GRAHAM, formerly rector of St. Paul's, Walnut Creek, Cal., is now vicar of St. Barnabas, Arroyo Grande, Cal.

GEORGE R. MILLARD, formerly rector of St. James, Danbury, Conn., is now rector of Christ Church, Alameda, Cal.

BERNARD N. LOVEGREN, formerly dean of Grace Cathedral, San Francisco, is now rector of St. John's, Del Monte, Cal.

HAROLD D. CHASE JR., formerly assistant at Christ Church, Cincinnati, is now rector of the Transfiguration, Buffalo, N. Y.

ARTHUR B. WARD, formerly rector of St. James, Dillon, Mont., is now rector of All Saints, Appleton, Wis.

CECIL DICKIN, formerly rector of St. James, Lewistown, Mont., is now on the staff of All Saints, Detroit, Mich.

LAY WORKERS:

RICHARD M. HAWKINS, formerly organist in the Evangelical & Reformed Church, Websters Groves, Mo., is now organist at Grace Church, Kirkwood, Mo.

JOHANNA MOTT, formerly assistant for young people's work at St. Clement's, El Paso, Texas, is now director of the diocesan mission for college work at the University of Oklahoma and is on the staff of St. John's, Norman.

GARL DONAHUE is acting director of religious education at St. James Cathedral, Fresno, Cal.

ROBES

Pulpit, Choir and Confirmation Robes; Paraments. Fine materials; beautiful work; fair prices. Catalog, samples on request. Mention items needed.

DeMOULIN BROS. & CO.

1188 S. 4th St., Greenville, Ill.

ASSISTANT WANTED

Large New York City parish, enthusiast in religious education; Liberal Evangelical; $3,600 and apartment. Give training, experience, age, family and references. Box L, The Witness, Tunkhannock, Pa.

CASSOCKS

Surplices — Choir Vestments

Eucharistic Vestments

Altar Hangings and Linens

Prices Sent on Request

J. M. HALL, INC.

14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.

Tel. CH 4-3306

VESTMENTS

Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves

Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries

Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars

Custom Tailoring for Clergymen

1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951

COX SONS & VINING, Inc.

131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

R. GEISSLER, INC.

28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.

Church Furnishings

IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS

EST. 1877

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS

Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY

Over 1,500,000

SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS

Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.

SANGAMON MILLS

Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

THE BISHOP WHITE PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY

Founded by Bishop White 1833

Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.

PEW SIZE

The Book of Common Prayer

The Church Hymnal (words only)

Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.

319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.

Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

WINIFRED HAMLIN
Churchwoman of Summit, N. J.

In the November 1 issue there is a very lively report of the furor re 'What we are to call our envoy at the Vatican.' It was well done as a report, but I've a sneaking suspicion there was a good deal of silliness. Such matters are too far above my head.

But that editorial in the same issue: Keep the Good Word. That was a terrible little piece. A blockbuster if there ever was one. Sort of a messy bomb, what? But not such a one as to end a war.

A crushing mass of inaccuracy and I blush for the layman who perpetrated same.

The "Protestant" in our official name is the big, bad ball and chain and it obscures one hundred and one issues, but I've always taken for granted we are stuck with it. "Evangelical" would seem so right.

But for the record I must say "Ouch" when the Witness prints such a shallow, misleading distortion.

The negations in Protestantism are as the sands of the shores of time, an ever shifting emphasis. Yet your writer takes the great marks of the Church such as Bible, salvation, faith in the faith as though they can be ascribed to the sectarian shakedown instead of historic Church and Apostolic succession. Give us pride and thankfulness in our origins.

H. NEWTON GRIFFITH
Rector, Grace Church,
Lake Providence, La.

Will The Future of Free Catholicism by Chad Walsh be published in pamphlet form? It is stupendous. I would like to have several copies of the two parts reprinted under one cover if the cost is not prohibitive. Mr. Walsh is fast becoming a champion in our Church.

ANSWER: If a sufficient number indicate that they want copies we will reprint as a pamphlet. Write the Witness, Tunkhannock, Pa.

BURDETTE LANDSDOWNE
Clergyman of Massachusetts

In the short and sweet "Talking It Over" (Nov. 8) you make a significant statement which seems to have been overlooked in protests by others against appointment of an ambassador to the Vatican. After calling attention to the fact that Madrid was added to the new Axis without protest on the part of any official Church group, you ask, "Why the objection to adding the Vatican? It is in the forefront in the effort of reactionary forces to crush peoples movements all over the world and ought to make an effective ally of Washington, today's headquarters of the heirs of Hitler."

Surely this fact as well as the violation of American principle of separation of Church and state should be mentioned in any thoughtful protest against President Truman's ill-timed but clever political move for strategic position in presidential campaign.

Congratulations to W. B. S. Sr. for bringing this aspect of the question to the attention of readers of the Witness.

FRANK R. WILSON
Ass't at St. John's, Washington

The lead news story on your November 1 issue is a knockout. More power to you.

NURSES WANTED

General staff nurses and one nurse anesthetist eligible for registration in Colorado, a 144 bed Church Hospital located in Southern Colorado, near mountain resorts. Forty-four hour work week, liberal personnel policies, including Social Security. For information—write Director

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Give Some of These Books For Christmas

Each of these volumes is attractively printed, cloth-bound and of permanent value—a most welcome addition to the Library of any clergyman or layman interested in the history of the Church. Order from your Book Store or address the Society as above.

No. 33. THE GENERAL CONVENTION: OFFICES AND OFFICERS, 1785-1950, by C. Rankin Barnes.

"This volume is . . . a great improvement over the usual type of biographical dictionary in that instead of providing only the 'bare bones' of facts . . . the author often has included comments on the personality of his subjects which show them as men of flesh and blood and frequently of charm and humor. This volume will be of interest and assistance not only to scholars but also to all who are interested in Church history."—Dr. Walter H. Gray, Bishop of Connecticut, in "Forth" Magazine.

Illustrated. $3.00

●

No. 32. BRITISH HUMANITARIANISM: ESSAYS HONORING FRANK J. KLINGBERG, edited by Samuel C. McCulloch.

"These ten essays by ten professional historians, former doctoral students of Professor Klingberg, illuminate the work of the Anglican Church, through the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts (commonly called the S.P.G.), as the motivating power in the growth of British humanitarianism. This volume is a striking corrective of that school of historians which ignores religion and the Church in their historiography."—Dr. Walter H. Stowe. $4.00

●

No. 29. A BISHOP OF THE GREAT PLAINS, by George Allen Beecher.

"Bishop George Allen Beecher of Western Nebraska was one of the episcopal giants of the generation just behind us (he retired in 1943; was consecrated in 1910) . . . Here is a man who is pleasingly unconscious of his greatness. Not all great bishops and other ecclesiastics are so, judging from their autobiographies. Bishop Beecher was a missionary of apostolic stature, and was a delightful person as well. There is a frank, wide-open humor in him that well befits a bishop of the wide-open spaces."—Dr. Carroll Simcox in "The Living Church."

Illustrated. $3.00

●

No. 28. THE PROVINCE OF THE PACIFIC, by Louis Childs Sanford.

"This is an accurate account of the development of the Episcopal Church in the West by the one best qualified to write in terms of the province, of which he was president for many years. Following a brilliant essay ["Provinces: Ancient and Modern"] by Bishop Parsons, there is the story of the way in which the Church in the West was organized . . . Because of the large geographical area and the circumstances of Church life in the West, the Province of the Pacific has had a significant influence . . ." —Dr. Randolph Crump Miller in "The Churchman." $3.00

No. 23. THE ANGLICAN CHURCH IN DELAWARE, by Nelson W. Rightmyer.

"The volume on the early history of the Church in Delaware is excellent. I read every word of it at once upon its arrival. Congratulations for another worthy publication."—Dr. Massey H. Shepherd, Jr., Professor of Church History, Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass. $3.00

●

No. 22. QUARTER OF A MILLENNIUM, TRINITY CHURCH IN THE CITY OF NEW YORK: 1697-1947, edited by E. Clowes Chorley.

"This is the history, covering a period of two hundred and fifty years, of a parish which the Bishop of London described in the anniversary sermon as being 'unique throughout the whole of Christendom.' In a very real sense this statement would seem to be borne out by the account given of its life and accomplishments during its quarter millennium."—Dr. G. MacLaren Brydon, "William & Mary Quarterly." $3.

●

No. 16. A HISTORY OF THE DIOCESE OF ALBANY, by George E. DeMille.

"This excellent and well-documented monograph covers the work of the Church of England and the Episcopal Church in the area surrounding Albany. . . . When they are as well done as this one, they merit the attention of the general student. . . ." —Dr. William W. Manross, in "Church History." $2.50

●

No. 13. ANGLICAN EVANGELICALISM, edited by A. C. Zabriskie.

"The Church Historical Society has once again given us a really valuable volume. Let it be said right off that it is such. Conducted throughout on a high plane, with adequate scholarship, sweet reasonableness, and here and there rising to genuine heights of fervor in presenting evangelical truths, this book should be widely read and pondered."—Review in the "Holy Cross Magazine." $3.00

●

No. 12. THE CATHOLIC MOVEMENT IN THE AMERICAN EPISCOPAL CHURCH, by George E. DeMille.

A new revised, and enlarged edition of the standard work on the subject.

"A more fair-minded and judicious history of this very controversial question could not be written . . . Taking the whole record into account . . . it does not appear to the author, or to this reviewer, that the 'Catholic movement' is a Romeward movement or likely to become one."—"The Christian Century," the leading Protestant journal. $3.00

The WITNESS

10¢ A COPY

December 6, 1951

NEW MEMORIAL CHAPEL
At Culver Military Academy

MR. ENTWHISTLE MEETS THE MINISTERS

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 7:30, 8 (and 9 Holy Days except Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 8:30, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers — 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. — 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital — 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m. Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a. m. Holy Communion.
9:30 and 11 a. m. Church School.
11 a. m. Morning Service and Sermon.
4 p. m. Evensong. Special Music.
Weekday: Holy Communion Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.; Wednesdays and Saints Days at 8 a. m.; Thursdays at 12:10 p. m. Organ Recitals, Fridays, 12:10.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer — 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon.
Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D.,
Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 — 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m.
Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacColl, 3rd, Rector
Rev. Peter Chase, Curate
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 41 The WITNESS DECEMBER 6, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Memorial Chapel Is Dedicated At Culver Academy

Million Dollar Chapel Honors Students Who Served In World War Two

★ More than 2000 cadets, alumni, parents, and faculty members at Culver Military Academy recently heard Bishop Herman R. Page of Northern Michigan challenge his listeners to be reminded of "the great vision of God which alone can make men free and the sacrifice that brings that vision into the realm of reality" as symbolized in the new Memorial Chapel at Culver for which Bishop Page was preaching the sermon of consecration.

The million dollar memorial chapel was built during the past eighteen months in honor of the academy's 6,500 former students who served in world war two, names of 288 of whom are engraved on the gold star columns in the narthex. Funds for building and furnishing the Tudor Gothic construction were raised by members of the Culver alumni associations and the fathers association, who for the first time in the 57-year history of the famous Indiana boys' school received permission from the board of directors to raise funds for the erection of the building on the academy's 1400-acre campus.

The chapel includes in its facilities an Indiana limestone interior; laminated red Appalachian oak pews and wood trim throughout; a 70-stop, 3000-pipe Moller organ; a 51-bell carillon cast in Croydon, England; stained glass windows in the chancel and over the balcony, designed and executed in Exeter, England; translucent nave and clerestory windows that were hand blown in the Western Zone of Germany; a unique 168-panel hand painted ceiling done in the studios of George L. Payne in New Jersey; and a meditation chapel to the right of the chancel ideal for small religious activities meetings or for intimate and secluded personal worship.

The great chancel stained glass window focuses attention on the personality of Christ. The theme portrayed is one that was typical of the final days of Jesus before his crucifixion. The scene is set within the precincts of a temple whose architecture suggests in its classical dignity, the universality of religion, transcending all boundaries of time and place. Under a portico surmounted by a golden dome, whereon is poised a winged angel holding the treasured crown of life, stands the Christ. On either side of the portico are gathered the disciples, and on the stairway leading up from the ambulatory are fore-gathered people from all walks of life to hear the great teacher. At the center of the bottom tier stands a fountain symbolizing the life-giving virtues of the prophet's word. In the tracery is depicted the theme of it all, "I am the way, the truth, and the life—If ye keep my commandments ye shall abide in my love."

Whereas the theme of the great chancel window centers about the personality of Jesus, the theme of the Rose Window at the rear of the nave focuses attention on the Biblical story of the creation. In the center or hub is depicted the hand of God, the maker and creative impulse of all things. The main lancets of the window portray the subjects of creation: light, the earth and the seas, the sun and the moon, the beasts of the field, man, fish and the birds, the fruit and the herbs, and heaven. Around the outer rim of the window are shown in symbolic form the clouds and heavenly bodies.

The symbolic ceiling in the nave is probably one of the most elaborate and certainly one of the most meaningful church decorations created in this country. It consists of 168 panels each with its own religious symbol. The panels are arranged chronologically with those representing God the Father, the creator, placed nearest the altar. Then in order follow the representations of Mary and Joseph, the parents of Christ; the symbols of Christ such as the cross, orb, crown of thorns, fish and anchor, robe and dice; Christ's evangelists who were first to go into the world and preach his gospel; the twelve Apostles; and finally the doctors of the early Eastern and Western Churches.

Off the balcony at the rear of the nave is the tower room where the names of the 6500 former Culver students who served in world war two are inscribed along with the names of the more than 4000 donors whose gifts made the chapel possible. These donors came from every state in the Union and a dozen foreign countries.

Leading from the tower room is a winding staircase that goes up to the clavier room from where the carillon is played and visitors may also climb on up into the bell chambers and the observation and lantern room where they can look out over the campus and across Lake Maxinkuckee on the shores of which the academy is located.

Included in the dedication services held recently were addresses by Lieut. General H. R. Bull, commandant, national war college representing the army and army air force; Admiral Jonas H. Ingram, representing the naval forces; and the Hon. Henry F. Schricker, governor of Indiana, representing the state.

Dr. Kamiel Lefevere, carillonneur, at the Riverside Church, New York, presented dedicatory carillon recitals on both Saturday and Sunday afternoons of the dedication weekend and the organ dedicatory recital was presented by Prof. Van Denman Thompson, director of the school of music at DePauw University.

Bishop Page, who delivered the consecration sermons in the two services of dedication, was selected because of his long and successful association with the academy at which he has been a guest minister at various times during the past ten years. Ever since the academy was founded in 1894 as a non-sectarian school for boys, chapel services and various religious activities have always been a vital part of the educational program. The Rev. Hardigg Sexton, a graduate of Miami University and Princeton Theological Seminary and former minister at Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Cincinnati, has been the full-time chaplain and director of religious activities at the academy since 1940. He is assisted in his work by social and religious counselors who are attached to each of the nine ROTC companies on campus. All of the religious activities of the corps are planned under Mr. Sexton's direction with the assistance of these nine faculty religious counselors and representatives of the study body.

Preaching at the Sunday morning chapel services, however, are representatives of the Jewish faith, the Roman Catholic Church, and the various major Protestant denominations. For all of these activities the new Memorial Chapel will now be the center for both the 700 cadets in the Culver winter school and the 1350 boys from all over the world who attend the Culver naval school, the school of horsemanship, and the woodcraft camp during the eight weeks summer session. Last summer these boys from 9-18 years old represented forty states, the District of Columbia, Brazil, Canada, Cuba, Germany, Guatemala, Mexico, Panama, Philippine Islands, Persian Gulf, Puerto Rico, Spain, and Venezuela. The 700 cadets in the current winter session are from thirty-six states, the District of Columbia, Argentina, Canada, Colombia, Cuba, Formosa, Germany, Guatemala, Mexico, Panama, Persian Gulf, Philippine Islands, Puerto Rico, Spain, Lebanon (S.W. Syria), and Venezuela.

Already the chapel has started to become what Bishop Page emphasized in his sermon of consecration when he said, "This chapel symbolizes two things: first, the great and glorious majesty of God, his beauty, his justice, his righteousness and yet with all his love for each individual. It also symbolizes sacrificial living. Those are the two things that the world today needs more than ever. Those are the two foundations without which the world cannot endure."

Culver's new Chapel has one of the most beautiful interior of any house of worship in the country

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS ANNIVERSARY

★ There were several highlights in connection with the fiftieth anniversary of the diocese of Western Massachusetts, reported in our issue of November 22. In the procession for choral evensong held at the cathedral on the 18th were representative clergymen of other Churches; the Rev. Sergey A. Kargay, rector of the Russian Orthodox - Greek Church in Springfield; the Rev. James R. McArthur of the Union Church of Ludlow; the Rev. Kenneth D. Beckwith, associate minister of the Massachusetts Congregational Conference, Amherst; the Rev. Leslie J. Johnson, and the Rev. G. Albert Higgins, Methodists, and Patriarch Joseph Klimowitz.

Mr. Spaulding Bartlett of the Reconciliation, Webster, was an honored guest as the only living layman who attended the first convention in 1901. Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins of Worcester were also present. Mrs. Hawkins sat in on the first convention and is the daughter of the late Rev. John Cotton Brooks, one time rector of Christ Church, Springfield, now the cathedral.

Following the service an informal reception in honor of Bishop and Mrs. Sherrill was held at the Museum of Fine Arts, with Bishop and Mrs. Lawrence in the receiving line with them.

Another highlight was the presentation of the first History Book to the Rev. Donald N. Alexander, the author. The book was written in commemoration of the anniversary and is being distributed throughout the diocese.

NATIONAL COUNCIL GETS BEQUEST

★ The National Council and the board of missions of the Methodist Church are to receive bequests from the late Harrison Parkman, formerly of Emporia, Kansas. The will provides for final disposition of approximately $100,000, with two permanent funds to be established, the income to be used by the two Churches for medical missionary personnel in the foreign field.

Mr. Parkman was once postmaster in Emporia and later purchasing agent for the post-office department in Washington. He was always an Episcopalian, at Emporia serving both as a layreader and superintendent of the church school. His parish in Washington was the Epiphany and he often conducted the brief noonday services.

RUSSIAN CHOIR AT CATHEDRAL

★ The choir of St. Vladimir's Russian Orthodox Seminary sang vespers according to their rite last Sunday afternoon at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York. Dean George Florovsky of the seminary preached and was welcomed to the Cathedral by Bishop Donegan who presided at the service. The service was in commemoration of the 1500th anniversary of the Council of Chalcedon, the fourth ecumenical council of the whole Church.

PATRIOTIC SOCIETIES AT CATHEDRAL

★ Patriotic Societies of New York held their annual service at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine the afternoon of November 18th. The Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, rector of St. Thomas, New York, preached. More than eighty organizations participated.

Color Guard of Culver Military Academy enters the new Chapel for the service of dedication

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

PEACE CONFERENCE IS URGED

★ Calling upon Americans to recognize the necessity of convening a peace conference of the major world powers, including China and India, to work out a stable peace settlement was urged by a large group of national leaders, headed by Anton J. Carlson, the distinguished service professor emeritus of psysiology at the University of Chicago. Among those signing the statement, which was submitted to the state department, were the following Episcopalians; Prof. Vida D. Scudder of Wellesley, Bishop Moulton, retired of Utah, the Rev. Fleming James of North Haven, Conn., the Rev. Kenneth R. Forbes of Philadelphia.

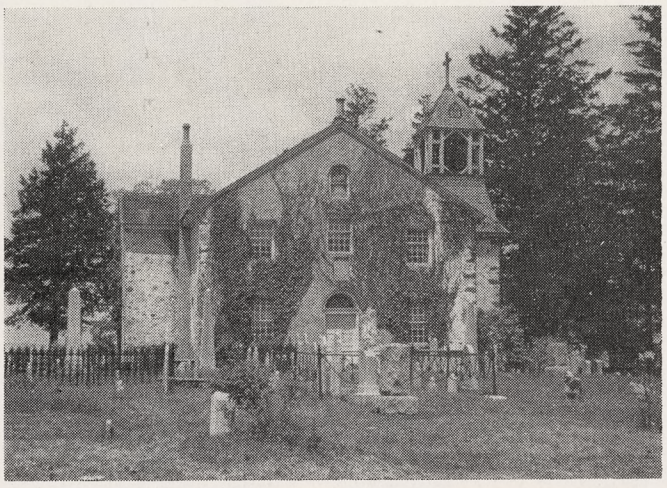
The statement calls for a peaceful settlement in Asia that will guarantee independence and self-government for the peoples of the Pacific; banning of atomic and biological weapons and provision for progressive disarmament; economic agreements sponsored by the UN; abandoning of war as a means of attempting to settle international differences.

ELECTION DEADLOCKED IN ERIE

★ The Rev. Thomas L. Small, rector of Christ Church, Oil City, and Bishop Hubbard, suffragan of Michigan, were deadlocked on the 8th ballot in the election held November 20 for a successor to Bishop Sawyer who recently resigned. On the seventh ballot Small had 14 clergy and 43 lay votes and Hubbard had 13 clergy and 54 lay votes. On the final ballot Small received 15 clergy and 44 lay votes and Hubbard 12 clergy and 53 lay votes. The convention then adjourned to be reconvened on order of the standing committee.

Others nominated were Dean William R. Webb, Bethlehem, Pa.; Archdeacon C. W. MacLean of Long Island; the Rev. Maxwell Dowell of Cleveland Heights, Ohio; Dean Maynard of Milwaukee; Bishop Lewis of Nevada; the Rev. Paul Schwartz of Meadville, Pa. Dowell was strong in the lay order through five ballots but no candidates received any votes after the fifth ballot except Small and Hubbard.

CALIFORNIA HOLDS CONFERENCES



★ Vestrymen and members of bishops committees in parishes and missions of the diocese of California gathered at regional meetings in November to hear of the work, needs and opportunities in the diocese. The speakers were Canon Charles M. Guilbert, director of promotion, with Bishop Shires speaking at the Oakland meeting and Bishop Block at meetings at San Francisco, Menlo Park and Salinas.

SAN ANTONIO HAS SCHOOL

★ A school of Christian service sponsored by the San Antonio Council of Churches is being held weekly for six consecutive sessions. This venture in interchurch religious education has been carried on annually, with some few exceptions, since about 1924. This year's dean is the Rev. H. Paul Osborne, rector of St. Paul's Church. More than 400 students are registered and there are eleven members of the faculty. The Rev. Charles Douglass, rector of Trinity, is conducting a course on Christian marriage. Other courses, in addition to those for specialized teaching groups, include, home and church working together; the church and older people; personalities of the Old Testament and administering the church school.

JAPANESE DIOCESE HAS CONVENTION

★ The convention of the diocese of Kobe opened in Akashi on October 25th with about 45 clerical and lay delegates from the various churches present. Highlights of the discussion which took place centered about the problems of peace in the present troubled world, of particular interest to Japanese just now because of the recent peace treaty negotiations. The Rev. Robert H. Coleman made a fine contribution to this discussion in a speech which, although he has been resident in Japan but six months, he gave in Japanese —to the delight and appreciation of his Japanese co-workers. The other important subject under study and discussion was evangelism — of outstanding interest in this highly evangelistic-minded diocese. To this discussion valuable contributions were made by Miss Kathleen Shepherd, for many years one of the most effective evangelistic missionaries in Japan, and

St. James, near Stanton, Delaware, was founded in 1698 and stands as a symbol of stability and endurance

Miss Leonora E. Lea, who besides a heavy schedule as dean of Shoin Junior College, and teacher in St. Michael's International School, manages to find time to train many catechumen. The convention closed Saturday morning after an early celebration followed by breakfast, and the workers returned to their churches with new vision and renewed energy.

UNIQUE CONGREGATION IN MINNEAPOLIS

★ Bishop Keeler visited the Japanese American community center in Minneapolis on November 18 to launch a union church under the auspices of the diocese of Minnesota. Attending also was the Rev. Daisuke Kitagawa, who has ministered to this congregation since 1944, Margaret Tappan, director of education of the council of churches of St. Paul, and Earl Baumhoffer, associate secretary of the council of churches of Minneapolis. The church, called the Good Samaritan, is unique in that its constitution provides that "any person who is a Christian in any recognized denomination may, without changing his denominational affiliation, become a member of this church by presenting a letter of transfer or its equivalent from the church of which he is currently a member."

TEACHERS INSTITUTES IN CALIFORNIA

★ Dean Katharine Grammer of St. Margaret's House, Berkeley, was the leader of a teachers institute held recently at All Souls, Berkeley, under the auspices of the department of education of the diocese, directed by Canon Charles M. Guilbert. The first part of the program dealt with church school objectives and introduced a twelve-point standard developed by the department of the diocese. The second section was devoted to sectional meetings for teachers in the several departments of a church school. There was an evening session on handwork, story telling, visual and audio-visual aids. A similar institute was held November 18 at the Good Shepherd, Belmont, Cal.

BILL OF RIGHTS ANNIVERSARY

★ The Rev. Kenneth R. Forbes, executive chairman of the Episcopal League for Social Action, is one of the sponsors of a two-day conference, December 15-16 in Philadelphia, to commemorate the 160th anniversary of the Bill of Rights. Subjects to be dealt with in panel discussions are the rights of Negroes, labor, teachers and dissenters.

BISHOP STARK SPEAKS AT UNION SERVICE

★ Bishop Stark of Rochester was the headliner at a united Thanksgiving service held in a theatre of that city. He urged social action by declaring that "the Church has a stake in all conditions that deform the bodies and minds of men. Its concern includes employment, housing and world peace. We ourselves are not saved unless we are trying to save others, and we are not trying enough by a long, long way unless we are trying to improve anything and everything that will improve the whole life of mankind."

Cornelis de Kiewiet, new president of the University of Rochester, read the President's proclamation. He was also the speaker at the recent dinner of the bishop's men of the diocese when he told the 1,000 attending that the Church's task is "to create a new sense of the future, full of confidence in man's destiny as an individual." Bishop Stark presented him with the bishop's key for "outstanding service to the Church and community."

CHURCH-STATE SEPARATE HAILED BY STOKES

★ The religious freedom and type of Church-state separation developed in America through the centuries have worked to the mutual benefit of all religious groups and to the nation as a whole, an Episcopal clergyman declared in a lecture at a Roman Catholic college. The Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, author of a three-volume work on the history of Church-state relations in this country, gave the fourth lecture in the series at St. Thomas College, St. Paul, Minn, honoring the late Archbishop John Ireland, its founder. He lauded Archbishop Ireland, Roman Catholic prelate of St. Paul from 1884 to 1917, as "a great Catholic patriot and statesman, probably second only to Cardinal Gibbons."

The fact that the English Puritans fled to this country to escape the persecution of state Churches made some form of Church-state separation here imperative, Stokes explained. He said that Lord Calvert of Maryland, a Roman Catholic, made a contribution to religious freedom paralleling that of Roger Williams and William Penn. Canon Stokes said the more he has studied the founding fathers of this country the more he has been convinced that they wanted to avoid the bitter controversies which have come where Church and state are united or closely related.

Bonnie Lee is presented with high school diploma by Dean Malloch of Fresno. She completed her course confined to bed through arthritis

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

GOVERNMENT GETS FIRST CONSTRUCTION APPEAL

★ In the first appeal of its kind filed by a religious organization under the new construction controls program, the Appeals Board of the National Production Authority has been asked to authorize the construction of a new church in Athens, Ohio. Bishop Henry W. Hobson of Southern Ohio asked the appeals board at a hearing to permit the construction of a new $300,000 campus church to serve the students of Ohio University. The proposed church of the Good Shepherd was denied a construction permit.

If Bishop Hobson is successful in his appeal, other church groups are expected to press their cases before the appeals board. The NPA recently announced that in allocations of scarce building materials for the fourth quarter of 1951 it had turned down two out of every three applications from church groups for authority to start new buildings.

MAT WARREN GOES TO ST. PAUL'S

★ The Rev. Matthew M. Warren, rector of All Saints, Atlanta, Ga., has been named rector of St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., effective in June, 1954. He will succeed Henry C. Kittredge who retires at that time. Warren will become a master at the school in the fall of 1952.

BISHOP SCARLETT GETS GUILD AWARD

★ Bishop William Scarlett of Missouri, was named as the winner of the 1951 civic award of the St. Louis newspaper guild. The award, a chromium-plated "stick" of type, is presented each year to a citizen who "has served the community well and who has not been recognized publicly or, if recognized, not adequately for his work."

The citation accompanying the award stated that it was given to Bishop Scarlett: "For his long years of patient, courageous service to his Church and to his city; for his efforts in behalf of fellowship and goodwill between Christian and Jew; for his 16 years as president of the Urban League of St. Louis and for his success in arousing the community to an awareness of the race relations problem; for his tolerance of ideas, his willingness to take an unpopular stand if he thought it was the right one, his work on such bodies as the national child labor committee."

Bishop Scarlett, who retires next November, was selected by the guild's executive committee from ten candidates proposed for the award.

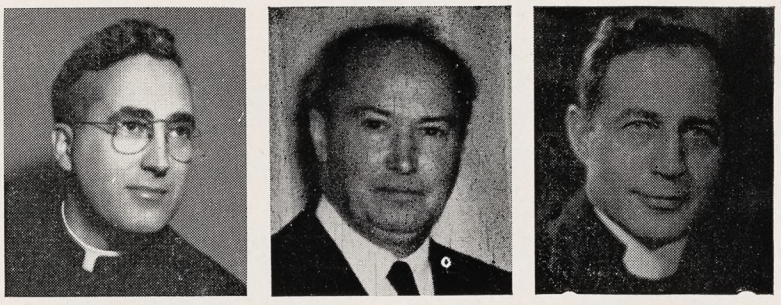
EXTEND WORK IN CHICAGO

★ Bishop Conkling reports that more than $250,000 from the new work fund has been allocated in the diocese of Chicago. Of this just under $75,000 has been used for land and buildings for the following new missions: St. Andrew's Chicago; St. Giles, Northbrook; St. Martin's, Des Plaines; Holy Cross, Morgan Park; Holy Family, Park Forest; St. Thomas', Morris; St. Raphael's, Oak Lawn, and St. Ann's, Woodstock.

The following social service agencies have received $81,500: The Church Home for the Aged; McLaren Foundation, Lawrence Hall, Randall House, and Chase House.

In the field of education $95,000 has been allocated as follows: DeKalb Student House, Canterbury House, Evanston, Seabury-Western Theological Seminary, and St. Saviour's Chapel, Illinois Institute of Technology.

In making the report the bishop explained that the net amount for allocation at the close of the year should total $300,000, if all pledges are paid. Whatever comes in must first meet present commitments which somewhat exceed the cash received to date.



Beyond these commitments, other funds received on pledges payable will make possible further gifts to new missions to equalize the grants made to beneficiaries of the other two categories.

COLUMNIST LECTURES AT COLUMBIA

★ The Rev. Clinton J. Kew, a Witness editor who conducts the Religion and the Mind column, has been named a lecturer in religion at Columbia University. He is also on the staffs at the Heavenly Rest, New York, and St. Luke's, Montclair, N. J.

LARGE ENROLLMENT AT SEWANEE

★ Of the 432 men in the college of arts and sciences at the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., 29 states and four foreign countries are represented. Veterans number 21 compared to 1947 when they composed about half the student body. There are 81 in the theological seminary, all time high, with about half vets.

CHURCHMEN IN THE NEWS: Clinton J. Kew, Witness columnist, appointed lecturer at Columbia; Bishop Scarlett of Missouri received Newspaper Guild award; Bishop Stark of Rochester preaches social gospel at union Thanksgiving service

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EDITORIALS

The Great Words

BIBLE SUNDAY calls to mind a story Halford Luccock tells somewhere. In the days of his youth he and some companions, happening to be in a defiant and rebellious mood, decided to burn a Bible. This was judged the most wicked thing they could think to do, and so a bonfire was lighted and the huge book heaved and hauled from the library and consigned to the flames. In the middle of the blasphemous ceremony who should appear upon the scene but the ominous figure of the senior Luccock. Not only did his presence cast an apprehensive pall over the occasion, but even worse he spoiled their fun by pointing out that the book whose bulk had so far resisted the fire was not the Bible at all but the dictionary!

It was a boyish mistake to take Noah Webster for the Scriptures. But, as Halford Luccock himself points out, he has long since come to recognize that there is a closer relationship between the Bible and the dictionary than he and his friends ever suspected that afternoon long ago. It is to the Bible rather than the dictionary that we must turn for the meaning of the greatest words in our language. And incidentally the great words are not necessarily the long ones or the tongue-twisters. The great words are actually the familiar ones, those of one syllable, words like truth, love, man, life, death. Where but in the Bible are the complete definitions of such words to be found? In no other book, not even a many-volumed dictionary, shall we find the full meaning of the most significant terms of human experience. The Bible is our greatest book, a book to read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest because it is the very word of God.

Fun To Be Good

SOMEONE has asked, "Is it fun to be good?" There is a false kind of piety which believes that if you are having fun you must be doing something bad. The dictionary says that when you are enjoying pleasure or "good" you are happy. It follows then that if the fun you are enjoying really makes you happy it must be good.

There is an old saying which is popular but which expresses a false idea, "Be good and God will love you, but you will miss a lot of fun." No one ever got more fun out of life in the best sense of that word than Jesus. We know because the children were so attracted to him and his personality that at least on one occasion the disciples tried to get him to send them away. And on that occasion Jesus pointed out that childlikeness is one of the basic traits of the good life. Who is there of you who thinks that children do not have fun? Go by the schoolyard at recess and listen to the happy noises or watch them when they play together about the farm. When they are having the most fun they are completely forgetting about themselves. Jesus knew that when we forget ourselves most completely, we will get the most satisfaction from life.

Think of the time when you had the most fun. It was an occasion of sharing happiness with someone else. It was a time when you were least aware of yourself. "He that shall lose his life shall find it."

Many people who have once lived a worldly life and then found God have told us that before they found him they thought they were having fun, but the pleasure of serving God through service to men brings much deeper joy. We know a young person who used to go to dances three nights a week. He was having great fun. Later he decided to go into the ministry but he wondered how he could ever give up dancing. He knew there was nothing wrong in dancing, but it was using up a great deal of his time. Later he learned that the joy and pleasure of serving God through people left so little time for dancing that he had not given it up but he had substituted a much more wonderful kind of fun.

★

"Quotes"

ALL of us should earnestly, persistently and prayerfully seek to know God's will on the question of war and ask his help to decide the course of action we should follow. As loyal disciples of Jesus Christ each of us wants to be true and faithful witnesses of him whom we call Lord and Saviour, and in this, our day and generation, we want to do our share in furthering God's kingdom of righteousness and peace on this earth. In the light of the character of God and the character, life and teaching of our Lord, all we can say is that war is wrong and contrary to the will of God.

—ERIC M. TASMAN
Rector of Holy Communion
South Orange, N. J.

★

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The fun you enjoy now, is it of God or of men? Lose your life in the pleasure of Christian service and you will agree "it is fun to be good."

Holy Catholic Church Is Protestant

BY
RANDOLPH CRUMP MILLER
Professor at the Church Divinity School of the Pacific

IN a previous article, we discussed the question of why the Protestant Episcopal Church is Catholic. We said it was universal, it had wholeness, it had an historic ministry, it practiced fellowship-in-love, and it had visible Catholicity in the World Council of Churches. But if Catholicity is found in the ecumenical movement, then it follows that the Holy Catholic Church is Protestant!

The word, Protestant, has both a negative and a positive meaning. Negatively "protest" means to deny or object. Protestants are often found denying false doctrines, or objecting to immoral actions. Positively, it means to declare solemnly, to assert, to affirm. Protestants are often found making solemn declarations of truth, asserting what is right, and affirming their faith.

As a matter of convenience, the word is used to describe all groups separated from the Roman and Orthodox Churches. Yet Episcopalians are members of the holy, Catholic Church. They believe in it. But at the same time they are Protestants in every sense of the word.

Historically, Protestantism has been anti-Roman Catholic. It has taken its stand on the Bible, with the right of private judgment. It has given some autonomy to the local congregation. It has believed in the priesthood of all believers. It has affirmed justification by faith and grace, and not by law and merit. In all of these ways, it is different from Rome, and in these ways it affirms a Christian way of life that is positive and saving.

First, Protestantism means anti-Roman. The Reformation was an attempt to reform the Church. Martin Luther never thought of his movement as the establishment of a new Church, and he disliked the name, "Lutheran." From within the Roman Church, he objected to the institutionalism, the legalism, the moralism, and the superstition of a corrupt Church. From his Biblical studies, he discovered how far the Roman Church had strayed from the revelation as found in Jesus Christ. His attempts at reformation led to his exclusion from the Church and the founding of Lutheranism.

Such reform movements soon were going on under the leadership of such men as Zwingli and Calvin on the continent and Cranmer in England. They found no evidence in the Bible for many of the teachings of the Roman Church. They rejected the Papacy. They denied the sacramental system of Rome without denying the validity of the two sacraments. But they did all of these things for a reason. They did not want the Church to take the place of God. They knew that God would work through the Church, but that it depended on the believer and his relationship to God whether he would be saved.

So the authority of the Pope and the institution of the Church were overthrown. Protestantism sought to get to the roots of Christian faith and action. And through the years, Protestants have protested against the claims of Rome where they seemed false, as today they protest against the sending of an ambassador to the Pope.

Accept the Bible

SECOND, Protestantism means accepting the Bible as the rule of faith. Much in the teaching of the Roman Church was Biblical, and thus the true teachings held in common by Rome and the reformed Churches were not overthrown. There is much held in common by all Christians. But when men turned to the Bible, they came to the conclusion, "as the Church of Jerusalem, Alexandria, and Antioch, have errer; so also the Church of Rome hath erred . . . The Romish doctrines concerning purgatory, pardons, worshipping and adoration as well of images as of relics, and also the invocation of saints, is a fond thing, vainly invented, and grounded upon no warranty of Scripture, but rather repugnant to the word of God." (Articles of Religion, XIX and XXII).

So the Bible came to be authoritative, and in some cases was made an infallible guide just as the Roman Church had been. But the true reformers never believed in an infallible Bible. Luther, for example, wanted to throw out the letter of James as a "right strawy epistle" and to put Revelation with the Apocrypha.

The priest in the Church of England was required to promise that he was "persuaded that the Holy Scriptures contain all doctrine required as necessary to salvation through faith in Jesus Christ," but he was given the right to interpret the Bible in the light of his own conscience. This right of private judgment remains basic to Protestantism. But the Bible remained the primary authority as against either the Church or private judgment. Thus the Churches of the Reformation stood between the unchanging authority of Rome and the complete freedom of the Renaissance.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Local Autonomy

THIRD, Protestantism means the autonomy of the local congregations. Radical Protestantism is congregational, giving complete freedom to the local Church, but this is a late development found among Congregationalists, Baptists, and Disciples. But all Protestants deny the authority of any hierarchy. We who have bishops provide for them a constitutional authority which is limited. The local congregation has certain rights that must not be infringed. The individual believer is not subject to infallible statements from anyone. Bishops, priests, and lay people are alike under the authority of Scripture, but still retain the right of private judgment.

In the Protestant Episcopal Church, no decisions are made without the full representation of lay people. Every important bit of legislation must be approved by the House of Bishops and by the lay and clerical members of the House of Deputies voting by order. The Prayer Book or Hymnal cannot be revised, for example, until representatives of every congregation, duly elected in diocesan convention, approve the changes.

The local congregation also has rights as to its forms of worship which vary with the customs and traditions and theology of the group. All Protestantism takes seriously the place of the word of God in its worship, sometimes at the expense of its Catholic heritage. It is no accident that the Prayer Book is about ninety percent based on the Bible, or that preaching is important as a means of mediating the word of God. The Lord's Supper is equally treated from the Biblical point of view.

Priesthood of Believers

FOURTH, Protestantism means the priesthood of all believers. This does not mean that every man is his own priest. It does mean that every man in his own freedom may approach God directly. Wilhelm Pauck defines it: "Everyone who has come under the lordship of God through faith in the Gospel of Jesus Christ and thereby become a free man, subject to God alone, can be a priest who through his words and deeds brings the liberating Gospel to his fellowmen." (Heritage of the Reformation, p. 115).

This is a call to every Protestant to take upon himself the social responsibility of his neighbor. The reason Protestants have developed such magnificent lay leadership, especially in America, is because the Protestant Churches are not controlled by a hierarchy. Even when Protestants stress the role of the clergy in Christian life, there is no feeling that lay people and clergy are different in kind or responsibility. Bishops in both the Episcopal and Methodist Churches are thought of as servants and not as clerical authorities. They are elected by the people, and they serve in their assigned jurisdictions.

In the doctrine of the priesthood of all believers is the affirmation of one's duty to serve others in love. This is the source of an activism which has altered the function of the Church throughout the world. It has flowered in American Protestantism, but has its roots in the early Lutheran and Calvinist ideas of vocation, and is expressed in modern times in the social gospel.

Justification By Faith

FIFTH, Protestantism means justification by faith and grace. Here is the denial that anyone can earn, buy or merit salvation. No man, however good, can obey all of the laws of God. Indeed, the law is to be overthrown, as St. Paul says to the Galatians, because we are saved by God's unmerited grace.

This is the distinctive note of Protestantism. Luther here builds on St. Paul's teaching, which in turn is rooted in Habakkuk. It is when we are confronted by the fatherly mercy of God as revealed in Christ, that we repent because we are unworthy. We place our absolute trust in God, and then he treats us as righteous and makes us righteous. We cannot do it by ourselves. God's grace works upon us directly as well as through the sacraments and the word in Church. Always the gift of God's grace depends on our faith. Without faith, we cannot be saved, for only then does God's grace come to us. We are justified by faith.

When we have faith, works will follow. But we cannot be good enough to earn salvation. Here was another break with the sacramental system of Rome. As our XIth Article of Religion puts it: "We are accounted righteous before God, only for the merit of our Lord Jesus Christ by faith, and not for our own works or deservings. Wherefore, that we are justified by faith only, is a most wholesome doctrine, and very full of comfort."

It is here again, that Protestantism is opposed to Rome. Rome promises salvation by merit, by keeping the precepts of the Church, rather than by faith. The Reformation turned back to the Bible with the insistance that faith comes first, and works are the fruit of faith. "Whereas Christ saith plainly, 'When ye have done all that are commanded of you, say, we are unprofitable servants'." (Article XIV).

Protestantism is really a reformed Catholicism. It is not something new, but grows out of the awareness of the evils in the old. The Protestant principle is the self-criticizing and self-correcting principle of Christendom. Without the Protestant witness, any Church would become corrupt, because there would be no return to the Bible, to the autonomy of the local congregation, to the priesthood of all believers, to the right of private judgment, to real faith in a God of grace.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

So Protestantism continues to object to what is wrong, to affirm what is right, and to declare the truth of God to all people. It is only in this way that the Church can correct itself, change its ways in the modern world, and continue to grow as it gives meaning to life. Because Protestantism puts its faith in God alone, it needs no Pope; because it trusts the people and their right of private judgment, it can practice tolerance; because it is based on Biblical religion, it is always relevant to the world of real people with real problems and can be open-minded to new interpretations of truth.

We are members of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America. We are members of the holy, Catholic Church. We are both Protestant and Catholic, holding to what we believe to be the best in both traditions.

Let us remember that "no one is accepted as upright by God for obeying the law is evident, because the upright will have life because of his faith." It is "through faith we might receive the Holy Spirit." (Gal. 3:11-14, Goodspeed).

Adventures of Mr. Entwhistle

BY

THOMAS V. BARRETT

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

"IF the brethren will please come to order," called the Rev. Mr. Mixer of the Third Church of the United Congregation, "we'll begin our meeting."

The Rev. Samuel Entwhistle sat down next to Silas Berlorn, minister of the Church of the Old Covenant. Silas looked at Samuel with pinched nostrils as if sniffing for the smell of tobacco.

"Good morning," said Samueel with a brotherly smile.

"Good morning," said Silas looking as if he expected rain at any minute.

"Brethren," said Mr. Mixer cheerily, "our morning devotions will be led by Rev. Bert Joss of the Church of the Flooding Light. We are also fortunate to have Joe Twing here to help us with our singing. Joe is minister of music at the Gospel Pioneers Tabernacle."

Bert Joss stood up, breathed heroically of the smoke-free air of the upper room and raising both hands and both eyebrows, said pleadingly, "Shall we bow our heads in prayer?" Samuel bowed his head and began to meditate on the reunion of Christendom. Although he did not believe he was allergic to prayer, he found it difficult to realize the presence of God at the ministers' meetings, in spite of the fact that Brother Joss said he knew the Heavenly Father was in their midst. It even occurred to Samuel that the Lord of Hosts might even be allergic to clergymen, and therefore absent himself from the meeting. There was, too, the further possibility that the Almighty, having been informed by Brother Joss of the many evils that existed in the city, might decide his presence was needed elsewhere, allowing the company of the saved their freedom. Samuel wrenched his mind away from the temptations of smugness, to listen to the closing supplications of Brother Joss. He frowned slightly as he wondered what cluster of events in the history of the Church was responsible for the introduction of the solemn vibrato into the clerical voice. After Brother Joss' devotions, and a brief period of "musical meditation" under the minister of music, the secretary read the minutes of the preceding meeting, which failed to produce either protest, praise or unfinished business. Brother Mixer then declared that new business was in order. After a brief silence six hands went up into the air.

"I guess Brother Tickis has the floor," conceded Mixer.

"I don't know how you men feel about it," Brother Tickis began, "but I think we should consider the problem of the high school band." Mr. Entwhistle reached for a cigarette, remembered the association frowned on tobacco and twiddled his thumbs, as he turned over in his mind the question of whether or not the ministerial association should set itself up as an authoritative critic of band music. To be sure the high school band left something to be desired aesthetically but . . .

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

"They've gone on trips three Sundays this fall," charged the Rev. Tickis, "and I don't think it's fair to the churches. It's because the superintendent wants to publicize the school, but I don't think it's right to take these youngsters away on Sunday nights."

The Rev. Samuel Entwhistle admitted that Brother Tickis probably had a point. Sunday night was a bad night for traffic. However, it seemed to him a question more properly settled by the safety council of the state and the children's parents and . . .

"Half of my young people's guild are in the band. We only had twelve at church last Sunday."

Samuel felt a little embarrassed that there were so few band musicians at the Church of the Tribulation. The fellowship had a pretty good group out in spite of the band.

"I agree with Brother Tickis," said Rev. Silas Berlorn. "These band trips interfere with my Sunday evening program too. Besides, I don't think it's right for these youngsters to be running around like that. They pick up bad habits. I'm told that lots of them were smoking cigarettes and . . . well . . . 'carrying on' in the bus. I think we ought to act."

Samuel pushed his cigarettes farther down in his pocket and tried to look guiltless. Brother Ernest Twirpple of the Second Church of the Free Reformers got to his feet energetically.

"It seems to me," said Brother Twirpple energetically, "that we ought to send a petition."

"Who to?" asked Rev. Swade of the Katey Twombly Memorial Chapel.

"Well," said Brother Twirpple energetically, "perhaps to the newspaper, with a copy to the parents."

"You know what the newspapers do to our stories," warned Rev. Joss. "The paper is in favor of the band. They sponsored a bingo game to buy the uniforms."

"Let's send the petition to the superintendent of schools," suggested Brother Krinkle of the Evangelical Protestant.

"How about sending it to the mayor?" asked Rev. Berlorn, "with a strong protest against selling tobacco to minors."

"Come to think of it," Brother Twirpple spoke with energy, "it might be a wise idea to send the master copy to the governor, Schisel. He ought to be informed of this. I consider it a threat to the historic separation of Church and state."

"The school board is the place to send it," Rev. Joss informed them.

Best Preacher in Town

THE Rev. Sturtevant Guy Zibst of the Downtown Congregationist Church rose impressively to his feet. The Rev. Sturtevant Guy Zibst was considered the most eloquent preacher in town.

"Brethren," he began eloquently and paused for dramatic effect. "I have followed this discussion with the keenest interest. No one is more interested than I in the youth of our ago. For twenty years I have been, as those of you who know me are aware, a strong advocate of youth work in this community of ours." Rev. Zibst paused and looked at every member of the association with a benign eye. "Nevertheless, it seems to me that in this grievous and tumultuous age in which we live, there are other matters more urgent, and more relevant for our discussion here this morning. My youth group too has been depleted by, shall I say, musical absenteeism; I believe, however, that we should table this discussion for the present and move on to matters of greater urgency in this distraught and anxious world of our time. I so move."

"Second the motion," said Brother Tookey, who was Rev. Zibst's associate pastor.

"Any discussion?" asked Brother Mixer, beaming with good will.

"I move we send a petition to the school board and the governor of the state," urged Brother Twirpple with great energy.

"The motion is out of order, I believe," said Brother Mixer gently. "We already have a motion."

"Would it be in order to move an amendment to the motion?" inquired Rev. Swade.

"I believe so," nodded Brother Mixed happily.

"I move the motion be amended to read that in these crucial days of urgency and grievous tumult we hereby protest against the gambling devices in places frequented by teen-age youth which I believe are even more injurious to our social life than the business about the high school band."

"They get alcoholic beverages in some of these places, too," confided Brother Berlorn to the Rev. Samuel Entwhistle. Samuel wilted under the fiery glance of Brother Berlorn's glassy eyes and wondered what Berlorn would say if he knew that he, Samuel Entwhistle of the Church of the Tribulation, had a half dozen bottles of beer in his refrigerator. Right in his house. He decided upon reflection that it would be rather fun to tell Berlorn all about it. Imagine the shock it might cause. Samuel heard an indifferent chorus of ayes, and asked Brother Tickis what had been voted. Brother Tickis looked rather dismayed at Samuel's question and said reprovingly, "We voted to take up some important matters."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

"It appears to me," said the Rev. Sturtevant Guy Zibst, "that the most pressing problem of our time is the disunity of the Churches;" he gazed with a look of sheer reproof at every member of the assembly. "Here in the fellowship—indeed the holy fellowship—of this association we might have a truly thrilling experience of ecumenicity, which might result in a challenge to the whole community as we face our common problems together, and work vigorously for a Christian solution. Let us not dwell upon our differences but accentuate the positive, if I may use the term, and discover our meaningful unanimity of conviction in the areas of community life in which we can jointly act with a valid and ecumenical spirit of brotherhood in the name of the Master who I am sure did not greatly respect the arbitrary boundaries of ecclesiastical arrangements."

Hunting A Spiritual Value

REV. TOOKEY nodded approvingly. Mr. Entwhistle felt that he would like to say something at this point, and he was fairly sure that it would be somewhat in disagreement with his friend Brother Zibst. But by the time he had deciphered the real meaning of Zibst's remarks he decided whatever he had to say would be irrelevant. The association had somehow strayed from ecumenicity to bingo games.

"They don't make any bones about it," Brother Tickis was saying. "Down at St. Veronica in the Vale they have bingo games every Thursday. And they pack 'em in too. Something ought to be done about it."

"I believe we should send a petition," urged Brother Twirpple energetically.

"Who to?" asked Brother Swade in an interested tone.

"I suppose this may not be quite in order, Brother Mixer," said Rev. Joss softly, "but it seems to me this association ought to sponsor more inspirational meetings and cell groups. You men may be different, brothers, but I find I get pretty dry, spiritually I mean, ha, ha; and I think if we concentrated on spiritual values at these meetings . . ." The Rev. Mr. Entwhistle meandered out the window in his imagination and began to look for a spiritual value. He tried to picture what Brother Joss had in mind when he spoke of a spiritual value. Samuel decided it had to be oblong, or oval, probably composed of a gelatinous substance, and was independent of the limitations of time and space. He tried to imagine a spiritual value with eyes peering this way and that, but it was impossible for him to do so, primarily because, he concluded, a spiritual value had no head; and without a head certainly one was bound to question the relevance and validity of a spiritual value, ecumenical or otherwise. His reverie was broken by the harsh voice of Brother Stagg who was announcing a revival meeting, and urging upon all members of the association the importance of promoting the revival.

"It'll be just the old time Bible preaching," said Brother Stagg, "just the good old word that the good Lord gave us for our salvation. Nothin' denominational. Nothin' to do with all this ceremony that holds us back from hearin' the word of God. Just the truth of the gospel."

The Rev. Mr. Entwhistle sank lower in his seat at the word ceremony, as Brother Stagg looked militantly at Samuel's clerical collar.

"There's another important question we ought to consider," smiled Brother Mixer. "The union service on Good Friday. I know it's a long way off, but we ought to get going on the publicity by the week after Christmas."

Union Service

SAMUEL shuddered slightly in reminiscence. He recalled the last Good Friday service in the Church of the Free Reformers. Practically all the ministers in town had been there except Brother Stagg who wouldn't co-operate in anything except a revival meeting. The choir of the Free Reformers had been augmented by the choir from the Church of the Flooding Light, plus Joe Twing, plus four trumpets from the high school band. The piece de resistance musically was an anthem which called for a soprano aria, full choir, organ, trumpters, and harp. Since no harpist had been uncovered, Joe Twing played the harp part on some kind of bells. The name of the anthem, Mr. Entwhistle remembered, was "I Heard a Voice in the Garden Calling Me Glory-ward O God." It was a curious title, but Samuel couldn't forget it because the basses had sung it over and over on a rising scale that ended on Ward. Isabel had said no anthem could possibly have such a peculiar title and that there must be a period after Glory-ward. She herself had been of the opinion that the whole anthem had been sung in Wagnerian German. "It was exactly like the last act of Gotterdammerung," she had maintained. Mr. Entwhistle shuddered again in anticipation of the next Good Friday, and pulled himself back to the meeting. Evidently the preliminary problems of the Good Friday service had been dispensed with, because the brethren were considering the problem of punch boards in the drug store two blocks from the grade school.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

"It's against the law," said Brother Silas, "but there they are right out in the open, and I'm told the children all stop there on the way home from school and we all know what gambling leads to."

Mr. Entwhistle wondered what it did lead to, besides poverty. He looked at his watch and meditated on the moral laxity of his own Church which never seemed to get around to punch boards and high school bands.

Entwhistle Speaks

AFTER quite a bit of discussion about punch boards and slot machines, Samuel decided he ought to say something. He always tried to contribute at least one opinion at every meeting of the ministers' association. He said it seemed to him that punch boards were simply a manifestation of a more serious condition in the spiritual life of the people, and that removing punch boards from the coke joints wouldn't really prevent people from gambling. Why not go after the slot machines at the country club, or better yet convert their people to the Christian religion and remove the boredom and lack of trust, and desire to get something for nothing which led to the desire to gamble. Brother Sturtevant Guy Zibst agreed in principle, and felt nothing could be done about slot machines at the country club, because the country club was a private organization and besides the members could well afford to gamble. He knew because some of the members were in his church and were very fine men.

The discussion ended with a motion to petition the mayor to do something about the punch boards around town. Then Rev. Twirpple brought up the Peruvian problem.

"I think," he said energetically, "that this association should have an international affairs implementation committee so that we can take an active part in working for world order. Now this Peruvian problem all of us are concerned about . . ." Mr. Entwhistle looked inside himself and decided that he was selfishly unconcerned. He had no idea what the Peruvian problem was, and that made him feel criminally negligent. He'd been spending too much time in mere parochial matters. The Peruvian problem was really quite a problem, as Brother Twirpple explained it. Some town in Peruvia specialized in canned llama, which was really a great delicacy and very popular with the English and with many people in the United States, but the men that made American brands of canned smoked turkey, smoked shad, and salted venison had a lobby that was so strong the Peruvians couldn't afford to ship their canned llama, and the result was that many good citizens of the canned llama town were really hard up, and had hardly anything to eat—except their own canned llama. After quite a discussion the association sent a strong letter of protest to President Truman and the state department.

It was almost lunch-time, so Brother Mixer said adjournment was in order, but first he would ask Brother Entwhistle to give the benediction. Samuel got up with a sigh; he was of the opinion that Episcopalians were of use in ministerial associations only to pronounce the benediction. The brethren didn't approve of his smoking, or his clerical collar, or the ceremonial in his church or the lack of enthusiasm about punch boards, but they loved to have him give the benediction. It amounted almost to idolatry, Samuel thought.

Isabel was sitting in the library nibbling on a piece of candy when Mr. Entwhistle arrived home.

How was the meeting?" she inquired absently.

"Very energetic," Samuel replied, feeling rather guilty about his lack of energy. "We sent off four petitions. Strong ones. Where did you get the nice box of candy?"

He picked up a caramel from the fancy box.

"Samuel, you'll never believe me. You know how unlucky I always am. Well, I bought some things at that drug store on Third Street this morning and I had three pennies left over. I won that box of candy on that little punch board thing they have there. It was so exciting."

Religion and the Mind

BY
CLINTON J. KEW

THE USE OF TIME

"I SEEM too restless. I am unable to do all the things I want to do. I am always on the go. Do you have any suggestions as to how I can best use my time? I don't have enough time to do the things I should."

Someone has said that whenever you are doing something other than what you should be you are wasting time. God has given us time to use in whatever way we desire. But God has not intended that we use this time in an empty, restless way. Between birth and death we have only this short space in which to fulfill our destiny.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

It has been discovered that those who do not use their time well, who spend it in the pursuit of empty reverie and preoccupation, never really live, and seldom enjoy the full life which God is ever ready to bestow upon them. Life in fantasy, day dreaming, or restlessness is not living adequately. God expects us to use our time well.

We must not escape the practical issues of life by either doing many things which could otherwise wait, or by retreating into fantasy. Life is real; let us keep it so. Real things never get us down. Unreal fears and anxieties put us in the shackles of helplessness and frustration. We must face the realities of life. In so doing life becomes free of unreal fears.

We must learn to give our time to the things of the moment, if they are important. Jiggs could always find something "important" to do whenever Maggie was around. Let us not use time as an aspirin, but do the job which needs to be done.

Before we arise in the morning, let us go over in our minds the things which we want to accomplish during the day. Do it right after waking. Don't jump out of bed and rush about to get to work before you have time to think. Orient yourself early in the day and you will be able to accomplish much more than you had ever dreamed you could, and with much less anxiety and trouble.

Many people use prayer as a means of starting the morning, and when they do so they organize themselves in relation to God, to their day's work and to the people around them. Martin Luther once remarked that unless he could spend some time in prayer each day he would not have enough time to do all the things he planned. Prayer saves time. Prayer keeps our mental machinery clear.

Be especially on guard whenever you have leisure for social contacts and diversion; this time is most dangerous in that it provides so many opportunities for getting into trouble. Our free time is usually the pleasantest and the most useful for creative pursuits. Don't use it for the sole purpose of gaining pleasure. Get yourself off your hands by enjoying the time with other people. Lose yourself in something beyond yourself.

Man is a social being, bound with others in the bundle of life. Let us take time for renewal of strength, physically, mentally and spiritually in secret communion with God. If we cannot take time for this we leave ourselves open to countless forms of anxiety. People who must always be on the go suffer from anxiety.

A thirty year old school teacher of my acquaintance was very restless. She had taught only two years and already wanted to do something else. She had been a secretary, a painter, a model and a waitress. She was always going places and doing things. She tried several different religions much as a man might change his brand of cigarettes. Yet she confessed: "I never have time to do all the things I want to do. I don't even have time to sleep. I seem to be always busy, yet I have nothing to show for it. I have no money, no husband, no car, and only a few friends and clothes. What can I do?" She took an inventory of her time. She put into practice some of the rules which are suggested herein, and it was not long before she quieted down, became calm, and lost herself in something worthwhile. Recently she remarked: "Life is real now. How fascinating it is. Time is grand. Every minute is wonderful." A new frame of reference had become established. In this case it was God, not her jobs or her material possessions. In the familiar words of St. Augustine: "Thou has made us for thyself, O God, and our hearts are restless until they rest in thee."

THE CHRISTIAN AND HIS MONEY
By Bishop Washburn
Ideal for Every Member Canvass
$4 for 100 $2.50 for 50
The Witness Tunkhannock, Pa.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Other Churches

PRESBYTERIANS ADOPT LARGE BUDGET

A budget of $5,649,467 to cover its 1952 activities was adopted by the board of foreign missions of the Presbyterian Church. This sum will support nearly 1,000 missionaries in 33 countries throughout the world. It was reported that, because of the hostility of Communists to foreign missionaries, sixty-three of the Church's missionaries in China had been transferred to other foreign fields, especially India, the Philippines, Thailand, and Korea. A number have returned to take up work in the United States, and others are retiring. Plans were announced to hold fifty missionaries in reserve to return to China in case conditions changed.

The board adopted a resolution opposing the nomination of an ambassador to the Vatican. The resolution said: "In its work the board has experienced the restrictions of civil and religious liberties in countries where the Roman Catholic Church exerts great political power and has met with the frank declaration by the Roman Catholic Church of its intention to restrict such liberties after it has used them to gain power. Because it is not only an opening for the use of political power in our own country on the part of a religious organization but also an encouragement toward the extension of such power in other lands, the board, therefore, records its strong protest against this nomination and urges its immediate withdrawal by the President or its defeat by Congress."

BAPTISTS PLAN BOOKLET ON VATICAN APPOINTMENT

Plans for publication of a 16-page booklet outlining the Baptist position with respect to appointment of an ambassador to the Vatican were announced by the Baptist joint committee on public affairs. The initial printing order calls for 100,000 copies, with the committee's goal set at 1,000,000 copies. Written by Dr. Joseph M. Dawson, executive secretary of the committee, the booklet will be distributed among members of all four major Baptist conventions.

METHODISTS ASK WORLD DISARMAMENT PROGRAM

The commission on world peace of the Methodist Church issued a plea for world-wide disarmament in a statement adopted at its annual meeting. "Present gigantic expenditures for military weapons in many countries fill us with great distress and alarm," the statement said. Such programs of research and manufacture waste the natural resources of the earth. They waste the time of scientists and workers. They turn industries away from the production of consumers' goods—this at a time when two-thirds of the world is hungry and in need. They increase taxes and national indebtedness so much that the way is prepared for inflation or social revolution or bankruptcy."

Arms buildups so condition the public mind that use of weapons of mass destruction seems normal, the commission warned. It "rejoiced" over current disarmament proposals placed before the United Nations and called on Christians to work for universal and simultaneous disarmament during 1952. The commission announced as "our Christian goal" a world community in which each nation would have only enough military power to maintain order within its boundaries.

At The

Culver Memorial Chapel

CULVER, INDIANA

The Studios of

GEORGE L. PAYNE

were responsible for

The

53 Bell Carillon
Great Chancel Window
Rose Window
All other Leaded Glass
Symbolic Ceiling
Silver-Plated Lighting Fixtures
Meditation Chapel
Eagle Brass Lectern
Book of Memories with 11,000 names

•

For similar quality work,
please address

STUDIOS of GEO. L. PAYNE
15 Prince Street Paterson 21, N. J.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CHURCHES OVERSEAS

SAYS JAPANESE MAY REACT AGAINST CHRISTIANITY

A reaction against the western world and Christianity may result from the departure from Japan of occupation forces, according to Bishop Gerald Kennedy of the Portland area of the Methodist Church. Bishop and Mrs. Kennedy arrived in Honolulu after spending a month in Japan where he surveyed the work of the Church.

"My guess," he said, based on talks with Methodist missionaries and other Americans there, "is that this reaction will come with the reappearance of nationalism. But most people feel that perhaps this antagonism will be only a passing thing."

Bishop Kennedy said there is a great movement toward the rehabilitation of Shintoism, with a more regular observance of Shinto holidays and a greater number of activities sponsored by the shrines. He said that Christianity became "a very popular thing" in Japan after the war, but some feel that with the bowing out of the occupation, this popularity may also bow out somewhat.

CANADIANS DEMAND AMBASSADOR

Renewed demands to the Canadian government for the appointment of an ambassador to the Vatican have come as a result of President Truman's appointment of General Clark. R. C. organizations and members of parliament have been urging such an appointment for ten years.

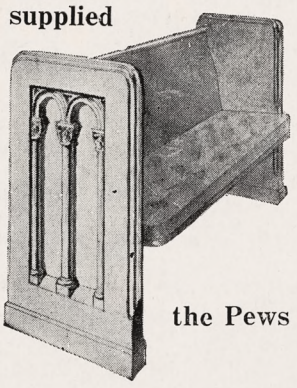
GERMAN PREMIER MEETS BISHOP DIBELIUS

Bishop Otto Dibelius of Berlin had a lengthy interview with East German Premier Otto Grotewohl during which he expressed the "urgent desire" of the Evangelical Church in Germany for an early agreement between the East and West German governments for the reunification of Germany. Bishop Dibelius, who is chairman of the council of the Church, was accompanied by Superintendent General Friedrich W. Krummacher, of East Berlin. The bishop had previously met with West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer on the German unification issue.

An Evangelical Church spokesman here said that Bishop Dibelius told Premier Grotewohl that the Church would continue to further "by every means at its disposal all measures leading to unity in the near future." The spokesman quoted Premier Grotewohl as welcoming the Church's endeavors to prepare the ground for reunification, and as promising that the East German government would not lag in bringing about all-German talks on the question.

BRITISH CHURCHMEN CONDEMN DISCRIMINATION

Racial discrimination in Africa was condemned in a statement adopted in London by the conference of missionary societies in Great Britain and Ireland. The statement was issued in view of the meeting next month of the ad hoc committee on South West Africa appointed by the U. N. "The conference, while recognizing that it is no part of its function to take part in political agitation, is deeply concerned about the relationships between the races in all parts of Africa," the statement said. "Any discrimination against Africans on purely racial grounds, or any denial of their human rights, in one part of Africa inevitably creates distrust between Africans and Europeans elsewhere. It prevents the growth of the friendship and cooperation which in the British African dependencies are generally recognized as essential for the happiness and prosperity of both."



CANADIAN PRIMATE LISTS BELIEFS FOR UNITY

Psychological, social and temperamental factors, not theological differences, are the chief reasons for Protestant disunity, says Archbishop Walter F. Barfoot of Edmonton, Anglican primate of Canada. In an address he listed four beliefs required to bring about unity: belief in the Holy Scripture of the Old and New Testaments, the Nicene and Apostles Creed, the sacraments of communion and baptism, and the ministry of order.

He said that only on the last—the ministry—was there any sizable fundamental difference to overcome. The Christian Church is fighting for its life in a pagan world and the most vital need in this fight is the achievement of unity, Barfoot said.

The Anglican and United Churches of Canada have been engaged for some time in conversations looking toward union.

We supplied

the Pews

for the

Culver Military Academy

CULVER, INDIANA

Our lines include

Chancel Furniture

and

School Furniture

Huntington Seating Co.

480 Lexington Avenue
NEW YORK 17, N. Y.
PLaza 9-2430

GENUINE CLAY TILE, STRUCTURAL GLASS
& MARBLE WAINSCOTS

* * *

MARBLE or SLATE WINDOW STOOLS and FIREPLACE TRIMS

* * *

MARBLE or GRANITE STORE FRONTS

* * *

SLATE BLACKBOARDS

* * *

TILE, MARBLE and SLATE FLOORS

Wege Marble & Tile Co.

of Indiana

333 N. Pennsylvania St.
INDIANAPOLIS — PLaza 7531

Complete Mill Facilities for Marble

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

HEGEMAN-HARRIS COMPANY

INC.

Builders and Engineers

331 Madison Avenue

New York, N. Y.

Builders of

CULVER MILITARY ACADEMY CHAPEL

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT, Book Editor

The High Church Schism. By J. W. C. Wand. Morehouse-Gorham. $1.35.

Despite the heavy burden of diocesan administration, the Bishop of London continues to write with regularily his brief, popular essays on aspects of Church history. The four chapters of this admirable little volume on the schism of the Non-jurors in the 17th century represent Dr. Wand's Lent lectures for 1951. Here the origin and later history of this remarkable group of men is summarized in two chapters, including an interesting discussion of the problem presented to the consciences of those who refused the oath to the successors of James II, as well as a very just estimate of their significance in the history of Anglicanism. Separate lectures are devoted to the character and influence of the two greatest Non-jurors, Thomas Ken and William Law.—Powell Mills Dawley

The Religions of Mankind. By Edmund Davison Soper. 3rd ed., revised. Abingdon-Cokesbury. $3.50.

Few histories of religion pack so much reliable information into so small a compass, and very few are equally readable. Dr. Soper's book forms a good introduction to a field difficult to master. He is at his best in dealing with the religions that are still living today, particularly those of the Far East. The treatment of Egyptian and Babylonian religion is all too brief and the author misses the chance to draw a contrast between the world-views of the two. His volume is greatly enriched by new sections on the Jain and Sikh religions.—S. E. Johnson

Good Housekeeping in the Church. By Katharine Morrison McClinton and Isabel Wright Squier. Morehouse-Gorham, $1.60.

This is a very useful book. All about the care of the sacristy and the provision of proper furniture, linens, and ornaments for the altar, and their care afterwards. It is a book that should be in every sacristy in the United States!

History of Syria including Lebanon and Palestine. By Philip K. Hitti. Macmillan. $10.00.

Dr. Hitti is a native of the land whose history he describes, and Professor of Semitic literature in Princeton University. His special field of interest is Islam, and his History of the Arabs is standard. But he handles the whole complicated story of Syria from prehistoric times to the present with great skill, writing in fluent and charming style. To see the history of Syria—and especially of Palestine—not as an outpost of the Roman empire but as a culture-area in its own right, is enlightening. Most of us who read Hitti will see this perspective for the first time and have our eyes opened. The treatment of Christian history in Syria is particularly interesting.—S. E. Johnson

The Revolt Against Reason. By Arnold Lunn, $3.25.

This book represents a new version of an earlier book of the same author: The Flight From Reason, published in 1929. It heightens and augments the arguments of the earlier version. The title, however, is not quite correct, since it opposes not the revolt against reason in general, but the modern revolt against that kind of reason which is embodied in the Roman Catholic Church and in the culture promoted by that church. The author was converted to it. The book suffers from the ambiguity that it confounds the criticism of many modern movements and trends of thought with the criticism of the Protestant faith. There are many penetrating arguments in the book against Darwinism (understood as a kind of philosophy) and against scientism in general, but the conviction underlying the whole discussion that the Roman "reason" is the only legitimate one to be accepted by a Christian, is by no means demonstrated. Lunn accuses Luther as the initiator of all modern foolishness, as the arch-enemy of reason as such. However, he refrains from blaming Kant. And yet, Kant is the philosophical form of the reformer's "anti-rationalism." And the best arguments against modern naturalism, materialism, and historicism are to be taken from Kant!

—Richard Kromer

A Foreword to the Old Testament. By H. St. J. Hart. Oxford. $2.75.

Some of the reasons for the uncommon excellence of this beginner's book on the Old Testament are (1) that it is written so largely in the language and pictorial style of the Bible itself, (2) its thorough scholarship is matched by a good sense of proportion and sound judgment, (3) it has sufficient meat to interest those who have read the Old Testament for a long time, (4) and it draws from a wealth of knowledge of literature both ancient and modern. Suggested reading, in at least our seminary, for theological students and those whom they will teach. —C. L. Taylor

Compliments of

HARRY H. VERKLER

General Contractor

645 N. Wilber Street

SOUTH BEND, INDIANA

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE RELIGIOUS PRESS

Selected by GEORGE MacMURRAY

HIGH TIME:—William Oliver Stevens, formerly on the faculty of the U. S. Naval Academy, and an Episcopal Layman, believes that the Holy Bible has become for many, something just holy like a splinter from the true cross in the Middle Ages. Mr. Stevens argues for a Bible anthology for the purposes of inspiration and devotion. He presents his case in The Presbyterian Tribune. Recognizing that some years ago there was published an anthology of Bible selections "to be read as living literature," he argues that it is high time that the Protestant Churches have an anthology of scripture to be read as living inspiration— a purely devotional and Christian Bible that omits all the false authorships, the spurious passages, the begats, the burnt offerings, the butcheries, all the meaningless parts, all the fulminations and prophecies of doom obsolete for over two thousand years, and all the hymns of hate and vengeance? Let it reveal only the supreme concept of God that is found in the words of Jesus and the interpretation of Saint Paul, one that is foreshadowed also in the noblest passages of the prophets and the Psalms. This would be the book to translate into heathen tongues, to give to college students, leave in hotel rooms by the Gideon Society, and to have at one's bedside.

HOW ROME FELL:—Letters to the editor are always interesting. Inevitably among the trivia, there are words of wisdom. The following is a quote from a letter to the Canadian Churchman:

In 1787, Gibbon completed his masterful book "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." Here are listed his five reasons for the fall of that Empire:

First, the rapid increase of divorce; the undermining of the dignity and sanctity of the home, which is the basis of human society.

Second, higher and higher taxes and the spending of public monies for free bread and circuses for the populace.

Third, the mad craze for pleasure; sports becoming every year more exciting and more brutal.

Fourth, the building of gigantic armaments, when the real enemy was within, the decadence of the people.

Fifth, the decay of religion—faith fading into mere form losing touch with life and becoming impotent to guide the people!

Wake up, America!

ADVICE FROM LEBANON:—These words of Charles Malik, the Lebanon delegate to the UN, originally appeared in Commonweal, an independent Roman Catholic weekly: The advice has received wide circulation. There are two ultimate dangers besetting present-day preoccupation with the problem of human rights. The first is . . . the danger of materialism. Who is not clamoring today for his economic rights, for what is called a decent standard of living? . . . There is a deadly danger that in our enthusiasm for economic and social justice we forget that man cannot live by bread alone . . .

The second danger is . . . the danger of humanism. We have been endlessly speaking of human rights, as though there was nothing except man in the universe, as though he was the center of existence . . . It is very well to speak of human rights, but may it not be that these rights have of late been disturbed or disregarded precisely because men—modern man, clever man, proud man, sensuous man, self-sufficient man—has ceased to stand in fear and awe before that which is above him?

If we have our rights, God also has His rights over us; and in vain shall we seek our rights until, confessing our sins, we recognize in all brokenness and humility the dominion of God over the course of history and of human life.

PLAYING WITH FIRE:—We read a book once with some such title. It seemed to suggest that our genius was in sitting on the fence, but we think our genius is our supernatural ability to play with fire and not get burned—we have been reciting the Magnificat for hundreds of years and many billions of billions of times and still manage to avoid taking it seriously.—Anglican Outlook

● ADDRESS CHANGE

IN MAKING AN ADDRESS CHANGE, PLEASE SEND both THE OLD AND THE NEW ADDRESS AND ALLOW THREE WEEKS FOR THE CHANGE.

RELIGIOUS CHRISTMAS CARDS

Christmas Card Boxes, $1.00 each

I The Story of Christmas in Text and Picture 16 cards

II 20 Hummel Christmas Cards

Christmas Card Packets, $1.00 each

4X Four 25c Cards

10X Ten 10c Cards

20Xa Twenty 5c Cards

20Xb Twenty 5c Single Mowbray Cards

Anglo-Franciscan Pocket Kalendar

Feasts and Fasts for 1952

15c each — 8 for $1.00

THE GRACE DIEU PRESS

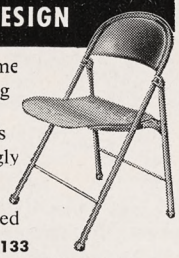
Maryhill Mount Sinai, L. I., N. Y.

Brick and Stone Work

ON

Culver Memorial Chapel

BY



F. A. WILHELM

INDIANAPOLIS

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

American Folding Chairs

NEW IMPROVED DESIGN

DURABLE—strong steel frame
SAFE—can't tip, pinch, snag
COMFORTABLE—extra-wide and extra-deep seats, backs
FOLD QUICKLY, quietly, snugly
SEAT STYLES—formed plywood, durably lacquered; or vinyl-plastic upholstered

Write Dept. 133
AMERICAN SEATING COMPANY
World's Leader in Public Seating
901 Broadway N. W., Grand Rapids 2, Mich.

CASSOCKS
Surplices — Choir Vestments
Eucharistic Vestments
Altar Hangings and Linens
Prices Sent on Request
J. M. HALL, INC.
14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.
Tel. CH 4-3306

ALTAR GUILDS
Full range of finest qualities Pure Irish Linen for all church uses. Immediate delivery; prices unchanged.
Samples Free
MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
Box 325 Marblehead, Mass.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

★ ADDRESS CHANGE
IN MAKING AN ADDRESS CHANGE, PLEASE SEND BOTH THE OLD AND THE NEW ADDRESS AND ALLOW THREE WEEKS FOR THE CHANGE.

ALTAR LINENS
BY THE YARD
From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States. I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values and qualities imported from Ireland. Also ecclesiastical transfer patterns, beautiful household table damask and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.
MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

Make Christmas Christian
A church woman gave her rector a check as a thank offering for her friends. What her gift accomplished is related by Bishop Hines. Rectors will want to mail this leaflet to parishioners.
$1 for 25; $1.50 for 50; $2 for 100
THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

PEOPLE

CLERGY CHANGES:

F. MARSHALL WICKHAM, formerly vicar of St. Michael and All Angels, is now vicar of St. Francis', San Jose, Cal.

BERTRAM F. BLEIL, formerly rector of St. Francis, San Jose, Cal., is now vicar of St. Andrew's, Ben Lomond, Cal.

CHARLES J. F. HARTH, formerly assistant at St. John's Cathedral, Hongkong, is now assistant at St. Bartholomew's, Baltimore, Md.

DAVID R. COVELL Jr., formerly assistant at St. Paul's, Cleveland Heights, O., is now rector of St. Jude's, Fenton, Mich.

WALTER J. MOREAU, formerly in charge of St. Barnabas, Tarentum, Pa., is now rector of the Advent, Jeanette, Pa.

REGINALD G. ROSSON, formerly rector of Christ Church, Las Vegas, Nev., is now rector of All Saints, Watsonville, Cal.

THEODORE BELL, formerly rector of St. John's, Del Monte, Cal., has retired and is now living at La Jolla, Cal.

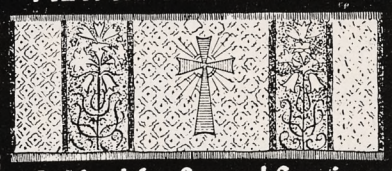
LOUIS L. PERKINS, formerly rector of St. John's, Auburn, N. Y., is now rector of St. Mary's, Ardmore, Pa.

GEORGE F. NOSTRAND, formerly chaplain at Western Reserve, is now rector of Calvary, Utica, N. Y.

BRADFORD TITE, formerly rector of St. Andrew's, New Berlin, N. Y., is now rector of St. Stephen's, Cohasset, Mass.

FRED CROFT, formerly rector of St. Alban's, Harlingen, Texas, is now rector of Grace Church, Hutchinson, Kansas.

J. PRESLEY POUND, formerly rector of St. Peter's, Kerrville, Texas, is now rector of St. Paul's, Gainesville, Texas.



WILSON ROWLAND has resigned as rector of St. Stephen's, Goliad, Texas, to enter training as a navy chaplain.

DEATHS:

FRANK F. KRAFT, 77, rector of St. Thomas, Rawlins, Wyo., died suddenly of a heart attack Nov. 12. He was rural dean of the district for many years, served on the executive council and was Episcopal chaplain at the state penitentiary.

SUMNER GUERRY, 59, rector of Calvary, Cleveland, Miss., and for many years a missionary in China, died suddenly Nov. 17.

ALTAR HANGINGS
• FRONTALS • STOLES • PULPIT ATTEPENDIA • DOSSALS • BIBLE MARKERS • SUPERFRONTALS

Crafted for Sacred Service
ENRICHING embroideries in full, faithful colors. Give church symbolism on your altar hangings new meaning and beauty. We invite your inquiry on our special embroidery services for all types of paraments. Please supply sizes with your inquiries.
VESTMENTS FOR CHOIR AND CLERGY
J. THEODORE Cuthbertson INC.
2013 SANSOM ST. PHILADELPHIA 3, PENNSYLVANIA

VESTMENTS
Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves
Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries
Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars
Custom Tailoring for Clergymen
1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951
COX SONS & VINING, Inc.
131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS
Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS
Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.
SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

THE BISHOP WHITE PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833
Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.
PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)
Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

HAROLD H. KELLEY
Clergyman of Berkeley, Cal.

The articles by the Rev. Alger L. Adams are remarkably fine and greatly needed. He and you, however, will surely welcome a correction of his statement in the November 8th issue, that on the west coast "Negro Episcopalians are non-existent." Born and reared here in California, it is hard to recall an Episcopal congregation of which I was an active member which lacked Negro Christians among its membership. They fit in like any other neighbors, whether white, red-headed, Indian or Asiatic. We are proud also in several dioceses, to have fine Negro clergy who are completely a part of the diocesan families, and who head strong parishes predominantly Negro for the reason that they happen to be neighbors and want to worship together.

ALBERT E. PONS
Chaplain S. W. Louisiana Inst.

The first sentence of your November 8th editorial is decidedly an exaggeration, to-wit: "Protestant America reacted immediately and unanimously to the appointment of an ambassador to the Vatican."

The following is clipped from my bulletin of October 28th, which followed the announcement; and I presume you would call me a "protestant."

Much fuss about the President's appointment of Episcopalian Mark Clark to be ambassador to the Vatican. Let the chaplain go on record as being not opposed to this action and as thinking it has nothing to do with the separation of Church and state. In the first place, waving the red banner of "Church and state separation" is on a par with certain public figures screaming "Communist" every time someone is caught giving alms to the poor. It is so frequently, and so indiscreetly used that almost no one knows what it means today or what the founding fathers we mouth about so much had in mind when they employed the phrase.

Secondly, denying the existence of the Roman Catholic Church as a political state is like denying Communist leanings in the Kremlin. Why not face facts? From the earliest centuries of the medieval period of history, the Roman Church has built up a vastly powerful little domain within the walls of the Vatican, and to recognize it as such is to recognize it for what it is—a political state. In sending diplomatic representation to the court of the Pope, the United States is not entering into relations with a Church; we are simply extending to a foreign state the same recognition we extend toward England.

Church and state are not separate in England, and no one would suggest that our ambassador to the Court of St. James is representing the United States to a particular body of churchmen as such. If Church and state happen to be united in the Vatican state also, why make that claim with regard to our embassy to the Court of the Pope? Any institution, policy or action which serves to drive home that fact that the activity of the Roman Church is primarily political should be met with gratitude and acclaim by those who believe in an essentially free catholicism.

MARTIN S. HILL
Layman of Hartford, Conn.

It seems to me that an atmosphere of dignity and reverence should pervade a church at all times. And it also seems as though the service should be chiefly for those who make the effort to attend in person. Unfortunately some services appear to be conducted chiefly for the absentees, including those who listen in over the radio or view them via television. In some instances the furors caused by the actions of the technicians who broadcast or televise practically destroys the dignity of the service. I have in mind a church in a nearby city which it is unpleasant to attend due to the distractions caused by the technicians in the front of the church.

On the other hand I know of a large church which has never permitted the broadcasting or televising of a service. The attendance is large and there are no distractions to interfere with the impressive atmosphere of the service. The rector preaches on everyday themes and I have never attended without getting inspiration for the days ahead. It is such services that make our Sundays worthwhile.

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin

Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth New Hampshire

FORK UNION
MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE-MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Published Quarterly

"The Church HISTORICAL MAGAZINE (is) one of the foremost journals of scholarship in Christendom."—Editorial in THE WITNESS.

Twentieth Year! Twentieth Volume!

$1.25 The Copy

HISTORICAL MAGAZINE

$4.00 The Year

December, 1951

"THE JOURNAL OF THE REVEREND GEORGE KEITH, 1702-1704"
Edited by EDGAR LEGARE PENNINGTON, S.T.D.
Associate Editor and Historiographer of the Church

PART I

INTRODUCTION: "Keith the Quaker and Keith the Anglican"
By Edgar Legare Pennington

"AN ACCOUNT OF THE STATE OF THE CHURCH IN NORTH AMERICA"
[November, 1702]. By George Keith, Evan Evans, Alexander Innes, Edmond Mott, John Talbot, William Vesey, and John Bartow

PART II

"A JOURNALS OF TRAVELS FROM NEW HAMPSHIRE TO CARATUCK [NORTH CAROLINA] ON THE CONTINENT OF NORTH AMERICA"
By George Keith, A.M.
[With Notes by EDGAR LEGARE PENNINGTON]

PART III

APPENDICES AND INDICES
By EDGAR LEGARE PENNINGTON

IN MEMORIAM: ARTHUR BARKSDALE KINSOLVING (1861-1951) PRIEST AND DOCTOR

INDEX TO VOLUME XX (1951)

"During that time [1932-1951] it [Historical Magazine] has provided a wealth of historical permanent value and has merited the quality of its contents rather than the quantity that deserves special commendation. It is not too much to say that the Historical Magazine is a rich treasury of the memories of the Church's past, and a keen stimulus to even greater achievements in its future."—Editorial in The Living Church.

A Christmas Suggestion

THE
THE
EPISCOPAL CHURCH at $4 is also a gift that will be deeply appreciated throughout the year. Address:
5 Paterson St., New Brunswick, N. J.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The WITNESS

10¢ A COPY

December 13, 1951

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CONFERENCE ON WORLD ORDER

Held in Rochester, N. Y. under sponsorship of The Church Peace Union with Community Leaders of the United States and Canada participating

ARTICLES BY RALPH BARTON PERRY

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 7:30, 8 (and 9 Holy Days except Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 8:30, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers — 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. — 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital — 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m. Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a. m. Holy Communion.
9:30 and 11 a. m. Church School.
11 a. m. Morning Service and Sermon.
4 p. m. Evensong. Special Music.
Weekday: Holy Communion Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.; Wednesdays and Saints Days at 8 a. m.; Thursdays at 12:10 p. m. Organ Recitals, Fridays, 12:10.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer — 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO-CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon.
Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D., Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 — 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m.
Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacColl, 3rd, Rector
Rev. Peter Chase, Curate
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 42 The WITNESS DECEMBER 13, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Church Peace Union Sponsors World Order Conference

Noted Leaders of United States and Canada Meet to Consider a Free World

★ A Canadian - USA conference on world order for community leaders was held at the Seneca Hotel ballroom, Rochester, New York, in November. The conference was sponsored by the Church Peace Union and World Alliance for International Friendship through Religion.

Some 250 clergymen, organizational and student leaders and educators were delegates. Although most of the delegates came from the Rochester vicinity, a substantial delegation from other parts of the United States and from Canada was present.

The theme of the conference was "Toward A Free World." The aim of the four sessions was to explore ways in which the religious forces could contribute to the development of a genuinely free world. The conference was so organized as to stimulate a maximum amount of participation on the part of all delegates.

Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, president of the Church Peace Union, opened the conference with a brief explication of the theme. He then introduced Dr. Ralph Barton Perry, professor emeritus in philosophy at Harvard University, who gave an address on the subject, "Toward A Free World Community." After the address the following panel members discussed the subject matter of the address among themselves and with Dr. Perry: Dr. Leland S. Albright, director of the Canadian School of Missions in Toronto; Dr. Herbert C. F. Bell, former mayor of Middletown, Conn.; Rev. Charles E. Boddie, pastor of the Mt. Olivet Baptist Church, Rochester; Professor Ernest A. Dale of the University of Toronto; Dr. Joseph L. Fink, Rabbi of Temple Beth Zion, Buffalo; Dr. Edgar J. Fisher, professor of government at Sweet Briar College, Virginia; Father Charles J. Lavery, Basilian Order, registrar and lecturer in international relations at St. Michael's College, University of Toronto; Col. Charles L. Marburg, president of the English Speaking Union, Baltimore; Mrs. Bertie Wilkinson, president of the University Women's Club in Toronto. The panel discussion was followed by lively audience participation.

"Toward A Stable, Free World Economy" was the general subject of the second session. The main address was given by Dr. B. K. Sandwell, editor of Saturday Night, former professor of political economy at McGill University and a fellow of the Royal Society of Canada. Panel discussants were: Mr. Marvin Gelber, chairman, the national executive committee of the United Nations Association in Canada; Dr. Albert Rasmussen, professor of social ethics at Colgate-Rochester Divinity School; Dr. W. A. Riddell, professor of international relations at the University of Toronto; Dr. C. E. Silcox, executive secretary of the Canadian Council of the World Alliance.

The third conference session was devoted to a study of the subject, "Long Range Planning under Democratic Control." The discussion was directed by Dr. Philip S. Bernstein, Rabbi of Temple B'rith Kodesh, Rochester, and vice-president of the American Council of the World Alliance. The opening address was given by Lewis Mumford, noted lecturer and author of "The Conduct of Life" and many other books.

Panel discussants were: Father George B. Ford, rector of Corpus Christi Church, New York City; Mr. Marvin Gelber; Canon W. W. Judd, general secretary of the council for social service of the Church of England in Canada; Dr. Miles H. Krumbine, pastor of the Shaker Heights Congregational Church in Cleveland; Dr. John McNab, editor of Presbyterian Record, Canada; Dr. Justin Wroe Nixon, professor of homiletics at Colgate-Rochester Divinity School; Dr. Leslie T. Pennington, pastor of the First Unitarian Church, Chicago; Dr. Bertie Wilkinson, professor of medieval history at the University of Toronto; Mr. Richard R. Wood, editor of The Friend and specialist in international relations. In this session as in the two preceding ones, the final third of the available time was devoted to questions and comments from the assembled delegates.

The final session of the conference was a luncheon at which Dr. Walter D. Head, president of the American Council of the World Alliance presided. After Dr. Head gave his report on the work of the World Alliance a Canadian and a USA delegate gave brief addresses on the general subject, "Constructive Change and World Order." Dr. C. E. Silcox spoke about "Pattern for Peace — A Canadian Viewpoint." "The World in Revolt: A Challenge to Religion" was the closing summary address by Dr. Samuel Guy Inman, specialist in Latin-American affairs and lecturer at the American-Mexican Cultural Institute, Mexico City.

Three Rochester leaders gave valuable assistance in making arrangements for the conference: Dr. Hugh Chamberlin Burr, executive secretary of the Federation of Churches of Rochester and vicinity; Mrs. Irving L. Walker, executive secretary of the Council of Church Women; and Mr. David Allyn, president of the Rochester Association for the United Nations.

The constructive tone of the entire conference can best be suggested by the prayer on world order given at one session by Father George B. Ford, rector of Corpus Christi Church, New York.

Eternal Father, we bring thee grateful hearts for all thy blessings. In the global anxieties and large difficulties of these times, help us to maintain our confidence in the continued rightness and abiding qualities of these truths:

That the esteem of other peoples, as of our own, will arise, not from material abundance or physical prowess, but in honoring our basic laws that fulfill the divine concern for the individual as a chip of God in time. May our historic and honored devices to guard human rights and assure individual justice even for the lowliest and most despised, never be permitted invasion by specious argument or arbitrary suspension of our constitutional safeguards.

Deepen in us the conviction that it is not alone on the field of battle but also on the field of daily living, that we make practical our essential liberties and apply those blessings to our fellow man. Not in some dramatic setting but where I am, in my own community, will the freedoms find the soil for their first blooming; and there my deepest satisfactions will originate in extending to all the liberties which I ask for myself.

Persuade us that political freedom alone will have small appeal to peoples whose bodily survival is a daily struggle, and that for the worth of human dignity as well as for a peaceful world we must share with others our abilities and our abundance.

Show us the way to make our democratic way of life so complete and appealing that no alien system can compete in offering equal satisfaction to the longings of the human spirit. May it become clear to us that the battle today and tomorrow will be in the realm of ideas greater than with the implements of war.

Since the world is a neighborhood, make it, Eternal Father, by our efforts a brotherhood—that less and less will there be a north and south and east and west and bond and free, but together under a common Father may we make our community, our nation, and across the world, a place where human decency, mutual helpfulness, justice and peace may prevail for all. Amen.

MISSIONARY TO DEAF

★ The Rev. William M. Lang Jr. is the missionary to the deaf in upstate New York, from Albany to Buffalo. In Central New York last year he conducted 96 services in eight cities besides traveling to 267 homes.

LEWIS MUMFORD addressing Conference on World Order. L to R: Dr. Justin Wroe Nixon, Canon W. W. Judd, Dr. Miles H. Krumbine, Dr. Bertie Wilkinson, Rabbi Philip S. Bernstein, Mr. Mumford, Father George B. Ford, Mr. Marvin Gelber, Dr. John McNab, Mr. Richard R. Wood, Dr. Samuel Guy Inman, Dr. Leslie T. Pennington

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

GIFT SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR CHRISTMAS

★ Readers will find on page nineteen an appeal and order form for Christmas gift subscriptions. A year ago we sent a similar appeal to our subscription list with excellent results. However this year, in order to keep expenses down in these days of high costs, we are making the appeal through these pages. Last year also we offered three gift subscriptions at $3 each instead of our usual price of $4 for an annual subscription. Here again we are obliged to ask for the full price. The Witness alone of the Church weeklies has not raised its subscription price although all of the other journals have been forced to do so. We hope and expect to maintain our present price, and will certainly if we may have the cooperation of readers. One method for you to do this is to enter several of these gifts. It is an acceptable, every week, gift to your friends; it is convenient for you; it is a tremendous help to The Witness.

GAS STATION IS NOW A CHURCH

★ When Bishop Malcolm E. Peabody dedicated the new building of St. John's mission in the little village of Black River in northern New York state, several persons who attended declared that during the service one of the officiants pinched himself.

Pincher — and pinched — was the ruddy-faced, tow-haired young man in charge of the new mission, the Rev. Edmund S. Mathews, newest addition to the church's north country mission team; a young man who has put energy, imagination, faith and the sweat of his brow into the new establishment in about equal parts.

He was pinching himself to make sure he was not dreaming . . . that the mission is now a fact.

In the congregation, too, were the 40-odd families who shared in the work, the zeal and the vision that transformed an abandoned gasoline station into a place of worship.

The village of Black River lies in one of the many bends in the plunging stream for which it was named, less than seven miles northeast of the city of Watertown. A suburban community, of 1100 population is on the increase largely because Pine Camp, now a permanent military installation on the vast stretches of sand and scrub at the edge of the village, houses both military personnel and civilian employees in growing numbers.

Add to this the modern trend away from city living and you have the reason for the growing conviction in diocesan minds that Black River needed and wanted its Episcopal Church services elsewhere than in the Rebekah hall.

MAN SUFFERS FALL IN FALLS CHURCH CHURCH

★ It had to happen sometime. A man suffered a bad fall in the Falls Church church (Va.). It fell to the new Falls Church ambulance on its maiden run to take the fallen church worker to the hospital where William Mock, 52, was found to be suffering from a broken leg.

Mr. Mock was climbing a ladder to make some repairs when he fell eight feet to the roof of the vestry room.

The town of Falls Church (population 5,000) takes its name from the 145-year-old Falls church (Episcopal). The rector said it was the first bad fall ever suffered in the church to his knowledge.

MEMORIAL LIBRARY AT ST. PAUL'S

★ The James S. Russell memorial library was dedicated at St. Paul's Polytechnic Institute, Lawrenceville, Va., on November 30th, with President Colgate W. Darden Jr. of the University of Virginia the main speaker. He was introduced by Bishop Gunn of Southern Virginia who is also president of the board of trustees. Also dedicated was a classroom building, named the William Ambrose Brown Hall in honor of the retired bishop of Southern Virginia. President Darden paid tribute to the founder of St. Paul's, after whom the library is named, and spoke of the school as "a great institution doing a great work."

Luncheon meeting, Conference on World Order, Rochester, sponsored by the Church Peace Union. L to Right: Dr. Justin Wroe Nixon, Mr. David Allyn, Mrs. Charles L. Marburg, Rabbi Philip S. Bernstein, Mr. Vaughn (vice-president of Eastman Kodak Co.), Dr. C. E. Silcox, Dr. Walter D. Head (at reading desk), Dr. Samuel Guy Inman, Canon W. W. Judd, Col. Charles L. Marburg, Mrs. C. E. Silcox, Dr. Hugh Chamberlin Burr

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

MISSIONARY REPORTS ON ALASKA

★ Our Church is a gem," writes the Rev. Gordon T. Charlton, recently arrived rector of St. Matthew's Church, Fairbanks, Alaska. "My predecessor was responsible for its planning and building. Everyone agrees that it is the most attractive building in Fairbanks. It is a log structure with light wood panelling. The altar is old, having been carved by hand out of packing crates by one of the nurses of the former St. Matthew's Hospital which once stood next door. We have a very adequate parish hall and rectory.

"As you may have guessed, we hardly feel like missionaries. St. Matthew's is a parish. Except for the expense of procuring and transporting its clergy, it is self-supporting—barely so, and nothing more, but that is a step in the right direction from complete dependency. The congregation is predominantly white but we have quite a number of Indian families and a few Eskimos and Negroes. Little race prejudice exists but the native people are shy. Fairbanks is now a town of about 10,000 people, with the University of Alaska and two army bases near by. Seasonal work makes the population extremely transient. Record-keeping is hopeless. The place is in the throes of rapid expansion and its growing pains are evident. Streets are poorly marked if at all; phones are few; no mail delivery. Pastoral calling involves a good deal more hunting than calling.

"Fairbanks has forty-two bars, all heavily patronized. The Indian and Eskimo people are particularly victimized by alcohol. I don't know why they take to it so readily or why it takes such a hold on them but the results are tragic. Native labor is somewhat exploited, their sanitation conditions are very poor, tuberculosis is rampant. In short, the plight of the native is desperate.

"One handicap to the work in Alaska is the fact that our limited funds will not accomplish what they would in the states. If you think you have inflation, you could be consoled by our situation. Haircuts, $2; shine, 50c; eggs, $1.25 a dozen. Suit cleaned and pressed, $2.50. Construction costs prohibitive—unskilled labor is drawing $300 a week. Plumbers, carpenters and electricians are simply not available; they are drawing up to $2,000 a month on government contracts.

"This is the pattern into which Church expenditures must fit. With coal at $50 a load, it costs about $2,000 a year to heat St. Matthew's Church, parish hall and rectory. You can imagine the tearing of hair that accompanies the bishop's attempts to stretch his appropriation over this whole district.

"I've been doing a little flying, to help the bishop in some of his non-episcopal duties. So far, it's been wheels and floats because the weather has been mild. Snow is falling today and I hear now and then a flock of geese heading south so the freeze-up cannot be far away. I guess we'll convert to skis. As I have never seen the mercury below zero I may be too numb to write again until spring. They tell me I shall soon see it resting at 60 below. B-r-r-r."

Participants in Leaders' Seminars on the United Nations, held in seven Wisconsin communities. L to R Rev. Merrill R. Abbey, minister of the First University Methodist Church, Madison, Wis.; Rev. Ralph T. Alton, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Appleton, Wis.; Mr. Ellis H. Dana, executive vice president of the Wisconsin Council of Churches; Miss Mabel Head, state department consultant, lecturer and author; Mr. John Mitchell, member of the social action committee of the First Methodist Church, Appleton; Mr. John R. Inman, assistant secretary, The Church Peace Union; Dr. A. William Loos, education secretary, The Church Peace Union

DENVER CATHEDRAL PRESENTS ARTISTS

★ Fernando Germani, distinguished organist at the Vatican, Rome, gave a concert at St. John's Cathedral, Denver, Colorado, November 28th. Another concert will be given on March 2nd by Frederick Marriott, organist and carilloneur at the University of Chicago. Both concerts are sponsored by the Rocky Mountain chapter of the American Guild of Organists.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

JAPANESE PRIEST PROVES A THEORY

★ The end of the war found the Nikko church virtually without a congregation and in a sad state of disrepair. The former members of the congregation were scattered far and wide, and many had died. The elderly retired priest who lived in Nikko was not able to do much. Then came one energetic Christian family, the wife a former nurse of St. Luke's Hospital. This family were most distressed over the state of the Nikko church, and when Miss Ernestine Gardiner, whose family had long been summer residents of Nikko, and Miss Nellie McKim, returned to Japan, and began to visit Nikko again, this little family appealed to them for help in rehabilitating the church. Both responded splendidly, and the Bishop of North Kwanto, in whose diocese Nikko is located, was asked to provide a priest. This he could not do for there is a critical shortage of clergy, but he turned, as so many do, to St. Michael's monastery, the Japan branch of the Society of St. John the Evangelist. The superior, Father Kimura, asked Father Sakurai to do what he could to meet the need.

Father Sakurai could not live in Nikko, but he developed the theory that even from the monastery, and in the midst of the many other tasks that are his, the church life in Nikko could be nurtured and developed. He seems to have proven his point well for in 1950 he had 56 baptisms, and besides more baptisms this year, has presented two classes for confirmation, the latest on August 12 when Bishop Okubo confirmed 15. Twenty-one had been prepared for this class, but 3 were unable to be present, and 3 others had to move to another location before the service could be held.

Father Sakurai goes to Nikko on alternate weekends, has Evening Prayer Saturday evening in English, two services Sunday morning, and visits members of the congregation. On those Sundays that he cannot be there, a lay reader conducts the services, and reads to the congregation the letter of instruction that Father Sakurai has sent. When present, Father Sakurai's method of preaching is more that of teaching, and is quite informal. He often asks questions, and never lacks answers from the interested congregation. With former members who have been drawn back into the life of the Church, and new ones, the congregation has now grown to nearly 200. The church building has also been repaired, to every one's joy.

YOUNG PEOPLE HEAR CITY OFFICIALS

★ At Trinity Church in Watertown, city and community officials have been drafted by the rector, the Rev. Richard P. McClintock, to give first-hand "know your community" reports to the young people of the parish. Speakers in the series include the mayor, the fire chief, police chief, chamber of commerce secretary, high school principal, YMCA executive and representatives of the Red Cross and the local hospital.

In other Sunday night sessions, the high schoolers receive vocational guidance in a "know your church." The fourth Sunday session is devoted to service projects and business meetings.

DISCUSSION GROUP IN CHICAGO

★ An adult discussion group has been started at St. Paul's, Kenwood, Chicago, on the subject of "man's disorder and the Christian hope." The leaders are Prof. Kermit Eby of the social science department of the University of Chicago; Dr. Bryant Wedge, psychiatrist; Prof. Earl Johnson, sociologist; Prof. Wilber Katz, law; Profs. Gerald Grauer, J. C. Rylaarsdam and W. M. Hawley, all of the University of Chicago. The group meets Sunday morning following the early service and breakfast.

COMMUNITY SCHOOL IN DENVER

★ Dean Paul Roberts of St. John's Cathedral was the speaker at the opening session of the city's community leadership training school, which is meeting on six consecutive Tuesday evenings at the First Baptist Church. He was also the leader on November 27 and December 4. The school is given to sensitize the individual to the needs of the modern world as well as to deepen Christian faith. It is interdenominational.

GETTING VARIETY FOR DINNER

★ St. Mark's, Denver, Colorado, tried a new plan in order to get variety at a covered-dish, pot-luck supper. Those whose names began with A through E brought salads; casseroles were supplied by the F-M group; desserts by the N-V. It was left to the W-X-Y-Z people to bring olives, pickles, jellies and relishes. The vestry chipped in with the coffee. The variety equaled that of the best smorgasbord.

DR. C. E. SILCOX, executive secretary, Canadian Council of the World Alliance, addressed luncheon meeting of Rochester Conference on World Order. "Pattern for Peace — A Canadian Viewpoint" will be found on page fifteen in this issue

NEW CLERGY MEET THEIR BISHOP

★ Clergymen who have recently come to the diocese of Central New York, thirty-two in all, met with Bishop Peabody at diocesan headquarters in Syracuse on December 4. Speakers, in addition to the diocesan, were Bishop Higley, suffragan; the Rev. Walter Welsh, rector of Grace Church, Syracuse, and head of the social service department; the Rev. Stanley Plattenburg, rector of Zion Church, Rome, and head of the religious education department; the Rev. Clayton Melling, rector of All Saints, Johnson City, head of promotion, and Deborah Vaill, diocesan consultant in education.

ON LIQUIDATING A MORTGAGE

★ Instead of being asked to give money, some 300 members of Christ Church, Riverdale, New York City, recently were surprised when each received in the mail a crisp, new one-dollar bill. With each green-back, was a letter reading: . . . "Like the Biblical parable of the talents . . . this is God's dollar. It is being loaned to you. Invest it to the best of your ability so it will grow and multiply many times over."

Last Sunday, the rector, the Rev. Gerald V. Barry, announced to his parishioners that $1638 "talent dollars" had been returned to assist in liquidating a mortgage. Calling the response "The miracle of the bills," the rector related some of the interesting ways to which his flock turned their talents. An author-member gave a lecture. An artist bought materials and sketched portraits of neighbors' children. Some buried their talents in gardens; one grew African violets, another raised vegetables. Others made candy, jellies, watermelon pickle; crocheted baby booties; made dolls and animals from yarn. A bedridden woman embroidered dish towels, while another made earrings from old buttons.

Perhaps the most unique experience was that of a silver-haired, 82 year old lady. She invested her dollar in a newspaper ad in her local paper. The ad ran: "Advice sought about the best way of turning one dollar into five dollars without fear of being arrested." Swamped with replies, the genial, little octogenarian received such a wealth of suggestions that she wrote an article describing her well-meant advice. She then sold the article to the same newspaper that ran her ad. The editor still is somewhat shaken by the business sagacity of his newest and oldest contributor.

CHURCH SILVER RETURNED

★ Last summer $700 worth of silverware vanished from the rectory of Christ Church, Germantown, Pa. No one saw it again until it popped up mysteriously in the living room November 29th. The rector told reporters that he assumed that the thief yielded to his conscience.

PROTEST VATICAN APPOINTMENT

★ The convocation of Lynchburg of the diocese of Southwestern Virginia has protested the appointment of an ambassador to the Vatican, terming it "contrary to the concept of American democracy." Copies were sent to President Truman and to the Virginia Senators and Congressmen.

HONOLULU TO CELEBRATE JUBILEE

★ Church leaders are expected in Honolulu the week of February 3-10 when Episcopalians in the Islands will be observing the 90th anniversary of the arrival of the Anglican mission and the 50th anniversary of its transfer to the Episcopal Church. Michael Hinsuke Yashiro, the presiding bishop of the Church in Japan, and Bishop John Boyd Bentley, director of the overseas division of the National Council have signified their intention to attend. Invitations have been sent to the Archbishops of New Zealand and Australia and the presiding bishop of the Philippine Independent Church. Bishop Karl Morgan Block of California will be the preacher at the official district service which will open the events on Sunday, February 3, 1952, at McKinley Auditorium.

Beginning on Wednesday, February 6th, special arrangements are being made to take mainland visitors on pilgrimages to the outer islands where they will have a chance to widen their understanding of the way the Church is working among the many different races who have come to this distant part of the world.

CUTTINGTON STUDENTS GIVE SPECIMENS

★ The Missouri botanical garden has received from Cuttington College, biology department, Suakoko, Liberia, West Africa, a collection of botanical specimens collected by students under the direction of Mr. Paul M. Daniel and sent to the botanical garden here for naming and distribution. In acknowledging the specimens, Robert E. Woodson Jr., curator of the Herbarium said, "These specimens are of unusually good quality, even from professional standards, and they are being deposited in the leading botanical centers of America and western Europe."

KIWANIS ENTERTAINS CHILDREN

★ E. K. Morris of St. Alban's Church, Washington, is one of the leading spirits in the annual Christmas party given for crippled children in the auditorium of a high school. Each Kiwanian goes out personally to collect a car full of youngsters from all parts of the District. They are given a dinner, vaudeville show and a present.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EDITORIALS

Vida Dutton Scudder

THE WITNESS this week salutes a great woman, a devout Christian, a pioneer democrat, an inspired teacher—Vida Dutton Scudder, 90 years young on December 15, 1951.

Vida Scudder has been teaching religion, economic history and human fellowship to three generations of young Americans during all of her adult life. Distinguished professors of economics, political theory and Christian theology all over America and beyond, look to her as the fount of their inspiration and the guide of much of their life's thinking. Parish clergy with the cure of souls as their special vocation see in her a steadfast counselor and friend. She has become, for the Church in this country, what the late Evelyn Underhill was for so long in the Church of England—the outstanding teacher—profound, devoutly simple, level-headed—of the mystical element in the Christian religion.

She stands today also, as she has always stood, for world peace as the supreme need in a distracted and fearful world—a peace to be patiently won, not by the security of armaments nor by the threatening of potential enemies, but by the persistent seeking of fellowship—personal and economic—with nations and races differing greatly in their history and traditions from us. She is above the hysteria and fear that has come to obsess our present policy-makers, because she knows the facts of spiritual and economic life and accepts them serenely. She has no dread of social change because the Holy Spirit is to her an ever-present personal reality, working mightily in the historical process to bring men everywhere that more abundant life which the Incarnate God promised to a world that would obey his will. May the benign influence of Vida Scudder, become more and more effective in the thoughts and consciences of our religious leaders. And to her we give our hearty wish in the name of the Lord: "Happy Birthday To You!"

★

"Quotes"

TO many people it has become obvious that unless, as a nation, we can develop the power of moral authority, all our overweighted emphasis on physical force cannot help us to move toward our goal of a world order in which justice and freedom are secure. Moral authority cannot be built by guns or by Senate loyalty investigations. Moral authority can be developed only as we meet three requirements: Demonstrate in the most concrete terms that our faith in authentic democracy is greater than our hate and fear of Soviet communism. Demonstrate that we are primarily concerned with helping the world's people to attain a more equitable social, economic and political status, so that the false but alluring blandishments of communism no longer hold any appeal for them. Demonstrate that we are building up a military machine only to repel possible aggression, and that our cardinal weapon in the cold war should always be realistic negotiation.

—WORLD ALLIANCE NEWS LETTER

★

Ministry Sunday

THE third Sunday in Advent is popularly known as Ministry Sunday. The reason for it is obvious. The Epistle points up the humility and the authority of the Christian ministry. The Gospel shows John the Baptist as a type of true minister, even though in the weariness of prison his faith may falter.

As we observe this Ministry Sunday and hear the familiar collect, epistle and gospel we address a word to those who are in the ministry and to the laity who look at this ministry. To those in the ministry it is a good time to check on themselves, to weigh their motives and to consider the effectiveness of their ministry. The advice of a great bishop is a good norm for examination. "In the long run, your ministry will rise no higher than your concept of it. It will take the color, breathe the spirit, wear the garments of you who exercise it. Though it be of God and for God, it becomes in your keeping what you are yourselves." Ministry Sunday gives a special occasion for each clergyman to re-think his concept of the ministry. It is vital that every clergyman keep clearly in mind the true nature of the high and holy office to which he has been called.

To those of the laity Ministry Sunday offers a special opportunity to consider their attitude toward their parson, for the attitude of the laity toward the minister to a great extent conditions the effectiveness of his ministry. A theologian once defined a pastor as, "a trusted, trained, inspired friend-at-large." To what extent does the laity help the minister to be these things. The element of trust is easy. Most laymen trust their minister implicitly. But to what extent do the laity help their minister to be the trained, inspired, friend-at-large, he ought to be? A clergyman needs time to continue his training, he needs time to study, and to read. A clergyman needs time to be quiet and to pray. His supply of grace is expendable.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

He needs time to practice the presence of God. He needs time to be a friend-at-large, and to give of his ability in serving on committees in his diocese and community.

Ministry Sunday gives the laity a special opportunity to ask themselves the question, am I giving this minister of mine the time and the opportunity to be the trained, inspired, friend-at-large, he ought to be or do I expect him to do things which I could do for him? The laity can do much to help their minister be what he ought to be.

The times call for the best that Christians can give. A little rethinking on the part if both the clergy and the laity can not but increase the effectiveness of our Christian witness.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Toward A Free World Community

BY RALPH BARTON PERRY

THERE would be little difference of opinion among us here today concerning the goal of American policy in the field of world affairs. We wish to achieve a "just and durable peace": a peace which would be "just" in the sense of providing the greatest freedom to each nation and individual consistent with the like freedom of all nations and individuals; and which would be durable because of its justice. Such a peace would require a sanction of force, but it would not rest on force. As the nation-state exerts force to deter individuals from lawlessness, so an effective world-organization would require a force drawn from all its members to deter aggression, lest its peaceful members be exposed to attack or exploitation by the greed and selfish ambition of the non-peaceful. But the instrument of force cannot do more in either case than deal with exceptional cases. The stability of a world order, like that of a nation-state, would depend in the long run on the conscience of its members; that is, on their voluntary adherence to a system which they saw to be good—good for themselves, and good for everybody.

In other words, the ideal world community would be an organization of all mankind, designed to promote and guarantee freedom, and freely adapted for that purpose. It is because the goal of foreign policy is a moral ideal, sanctioned by conscience, that the Churches have a peculiar responsibility in the matter. For while the Churches are not the only keepers of conscience they are, or should be, one of its chief keepers. They have a special obligation, while recognizing the necessary realism of practice, to sensitize conscience and to carry aloft the moral banner.

The definition of the moral ideal is imperative, but it is a comparatively easy task, in a country like ours imbued with a strong democratic and Christian Hebraic tradition. It is our area of agreement: we are divided among ourselves as to the steps to be taken to promote this ideal. What do we do now, and what do we do next? Since all idealists are also citizens we are compelled to translate our ideal into policy, that is, into a line of united action, beginning today. Here the decisions are immensely difficult, because they must take account of complex and ever-changing conditions. But it may be doubted whether we really know what our ideal means unless we see how it applies.

The application of ideals to practice and policy creates what is perhaps the profoundest paradox of the moral life: the fact, namely, that in pursuit of the ideal we are obliged to do what we would not do if the ideal were attained. We take the life of the murderer in order to preserve life, we make war in order to secure peace, we abandon our liberties in order to save them. This is our most acute problem at the present time, perhaps at all times: how to meet situations imposed on us by forces beyond our control, without being unfaithful to our final purpose; or how to be steadfast in our loyalty to the moral purpose without becoming ineffective or utopian.

Divided World

THE present situation, as we all know, is that of a divided world, threatened by a devastating war in which we may all go down together. Both sides of this divided world—our side and their side—are combinations of strange bed-fellows; but our side is at least symbolized, if not represented by the beliefs and institutions of the United States and Western Europe, and their side by those of Soviet Russia and her satellites and allies.

---

Dr. Perry is Professor Emeritus of Philosophy at Harvard University. He is the author of many books, including the Pulitzer Prize biography, The Life and Thought of William James. His latest book, The Citizen Decides, has been published this fall.

This address was delivered November 12, 1951 at a Conference on World Order at Rochester, New York. The conference was sponsored by The Church Peace Union and the World Alliance for International Friendship Through Religion.

We of our side stand for what we call "freedom," which has its central political meaning, and its social and cultural implications. Politically the freedom which we advocate means that government shall express the will of the people at large, freely arrived at by discussion, freely expressed in public, and freely affirmed by the ballot. Taken together these freedoms imply that the government shall not use its power, through control of education and communication, or through army, police, or espionage, to perpetuate its power.

In its social applications freedom, as we conceive it, means freedom of occupation, freedom of business enterprise, and that general freedom of opportunity which springs from enlightenment and from the possession of material resources over and above bare subsistence. In its culture application our freedom means that science, philosophy, art, music, literature and religion shall be free to follow their own dictates, free from centralized and uniformitarian control.

In so far as we stand for this freedom in all its meanings, we work for it; and by implication, stand and work against its opposite. Soviet Russia appears to be a dictatorship imposed, when necessary, by force: peaceful opposition to the government in power, whether by individuals or by organized parties, is suppressed by purges or prevented by threats; use is made on a considerable scale of forced labor; the government indoctrinates its own people, so that the popular will is the product and not the source of government; science, philosophy, art, literature, music and religion are considered as instruments of propaganda, rather than as independent searchings for truth and beauty.

But over and above this difference of beliefs and institutions, there appears to be on the other side a sort of creeping imperialism, most painfully exhibited in the fate of Czechoslovakia. It is by no means certain that there is any fixed pattern. But in certain cases, at least, the procedure is that of the Putsch or coup d'etat. Where it constitutes a strong minority, the Communist party, with the connivance and moral support of Moscow, foments violence, obtains key positions in the government, organizes local action - committees, brings charges of treason against non-Communist leaders, and then, when the hour is ripe, seizes control and liquidates opponents. From this point on the regime, with certain adaptations to local conditions, follows the model of the Soviet Russian state.

This is the threat which clouds the horizon of the future: the threat that a system which denies freedom, and to which we are therefore in principle opposed, shall be spread by force from Eastern to Western Europe, from Europe to the Near East and the Far East, and then to the American continent, and eventually even to ourselves. If we are true to our principles and to our safety we cannot view this prospect with indifference. Our foreign policy must be devoted to preventing its coming to pass.

If this policy is to be adapted to present conditions we must be prepared to "coexist" for many years on the same planet with the opponent, hoping that, given sufficient time, war can not only be temporarily averted but permanently eradicated. If that is possible we may then leave disputes between social ideologies to be settled on their merits. The ultimate victory will then be left to the suffrage of mankind at large and the two systems will bid against one another in terms of benefits conferred.

Our task is four-fold: 1) to be ready for a resort to arms if war should be necessary; 2) to do everything possible to keep what peace we have, and to convert it into a political settlement; 3) to achieve an effective world-organization, beginning with the United Nations; 4) by our leadership and example to spread the gospel of democracy to the ends of the earth.

At the same time that we conduct a campaign on these four points, we must not allow any one so to absorb our energies as to weaken the rest. Too great emphasis on our military power can undermine our diplomacy, weaken the United Nations, and destroy our moral leadership. Too great emphasis on bilateral and ad hoc political negotiation can invite aggression, excite distrust among our allies, and deflect attention from our long-range goal. To reply on the United Nations at this time for our national defense, or for political settlement, is premature; and nor can we, in virtue of its present composition, entrust to the United Nations the declaration of our own ideals. To rest too heavily on our ideals is to neglect the duty of national defense, ignore the necessity of moving forward step by step on the rough terrain of fact and circumstance, and offend our fellow-nations through being too admiring of ourselves. We must, in short, coordinate these four lines of effort in a total strategy.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Military Preparedness

SO long as war is possible, a responsible government and a responsible citizenry must be prepared to wage it successfully. It is as foolish to assume that war is impossible as to assume that it is inevitable.

If war is brought to our doors by an invader, the decision of war or peace is taken out of our hands. Short of such a total commitment it is our duty to count the costs of war against its possible gains.

There are those who believe, for what seem to be good reasons, that a war in which both belligerents employ atomic and bacterial weapons could not benefit either the victor or the vanquished. One thing, at any rate, seems clear—namely, that our allies in such a war, the already stricken countries of Western Europe, for which we profess such brotherly concern, would be so ravaged as to make their recovery unlikely within the predictable future. Such a war not only would be catastrophic in the extent of its physical destructiveness, but would require the suspension of those very freedoms which constitute the goal of American policy.

While the power of a defeated belligerent is temporarily broken, it harbors resentments against a favorable hour of revenge. What happened in Germany after the First World War is too painfully well-known to require argument. Suppose that Soviet Russia were defeated, what would be the aftermath of such a war—in Soviet Russia, in China, and in Eastern Europe? It is likely that this vast area and multitude of people would remain defeated and passively submissive? Are we prepared to occupy half of the earth's surface for an indefinite period of time? Would a war against Communism destroy Communism, or merely deepen its roots, toughen its fibre, and unify its adherents? Does not each war breed future wars—as the causes of the Second World War were in large part the effects of the First World War?

No one, so far as I know, has thought through the answers to these questions; still less has any one thought through the consequences of a Soviet victory, or of a stalemate, in which we would suffer over and above the evils of a war itself the humiliation and corrupting effects of military failure.

Since war requires a complicated and perpetually improvable apparatus, it is the duty of a government to invent, and be ready to produce, weapons of the latest design. It may well be wise to give young men the elements of military training and to formulate plans of mobilization. Whatever takes time has to be ready ahead of time.

But it does not follow that such preparations should be flaunted in the face of the potential enemy. The fact that a country is known to be strong by the military experts of other countries may properly operate as a deterrent. But in order to be known to be strong it is only necessary to be strong; it is not necessary to talk about it. When strength is ostentatiously paraded it has another effect, the effect, namely, of leading opponents to do likewise. Or it may be taken as a symptom of weakness. It may incite fear in some quarters, but in the case of a proud and powerful nation such as Soviet Russia, it is much more likely to arouse a counter-militancy than a timid submission.

Preparation for war should not be allowed to develop a war psychosis—that war in the heart, that will to war, that hair-trigger condition of mind, that posture of defiance, that exceptional touchiness, that exaggerated pride, by which a minor difference or a trivial affront may become a point of honor and a casus belli—if by a "cold war" is meant this state of emotional hostility, this arousal of the combative instincts, towards Soviet Russia, it is anything but cold. It commits us recklessly to advanced positions, which may prove untenable, but from which it is difficult to withdraw. It develops a reverse form of wishful thinking; for when fear, hate, and suspicion reach a certain point they resist the removal of their own grounds. Thus if Soviet Russia should suddenly behave as we have complained of her for not behaving, the Russo-phobes would not want to be persuaded. Many of them would rather be proved right than that Russia should do the right. When and if the great tide of Soviet-American hostility recedes it will leave a great many of our leaders of opinion stranded like a fish or insect indecently exposed to air or light.

Political Settlement

TO reach a political settlement or modus vivendi with Soviet Russia requires good manners, a willingness to make compromises, and an understanding of the other point of view.

Among European observers who view our foreign policy with mingled hope and apprehension, it has been remarked that, contrary to the familiar aphorism, we expect to build Rome in a day. It is pointed out that putting up with things you don't like, residing in the same world with people of whose conduct you don't approve and meanwhile going about your business, is the normal state of human affairs. If every profound disagreement or conflict of interest were to be allowed to break out into open hostility, there would never have been even intervals of peace. The relations between France and England, between France and Germany, between Western Europe and Turkey, between the Christian and Moslem worlds, between ourselves and South American dictatorships, between ourselves and Czarist Russia, for many years between ourselves and Japan, have been relations of tension and of opposition in which, nevertheless, war was averted —in order to hold what peace there was; in order to achieve a greater peace.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

If we soberly survey the present state of the world, we cannot fail to conclude that the kind of victory which we seek, and rightly seek, the creation of an effective world organization and the triumph of our principles in the world at large, will require decades and may require an epoch. Meanwhile the task is not to destroy Communism, or Communist-dominated countries or peoples, or to extinguish Communist belief wherever it has taken root, but to live with Communism.

We have been pursuing the method of negotiation, with indifferent success. No doubt our failures are in large part due to the stubbornness of our opponent. But candor would, I think, force us to admit that our diplomacy has not always been diplomatic, and that our negotiation has often been based on the assumption that we can win concessions without making them. A neutral observer would also find, I believe, that our policy has not been consistent or our long-range objectives clear.

The question of understanding the opponent is deserving of special attention since it touches the matter of public opinion and has given rise to serious misunderstanding.

To understand Soviet Russia means, in the first place, to grasp the motives which induce the Russian people and their rulers to believe and speak and behave as they do. Clearly they are moved by fear and suspicion of Western Europe and the United States, and by a desire to be allowed to pursue their socialist program without interference. They are moved by a fanatical zeal for their Marxian gospel, by an impulse to propagate it throughout the world, and by confidence that it will ultimately triumph. Having achieved a social and political revolution, they fear a counter-revolution such as has undone the great revolutions of the past. Behind these motives lies a complex of historical and economic causes.

When these motives and causes are understood, the opponent's offense is mitigated. We no longer think of Soviet Russia in terms of sheer malice or wickedness. We are disposed to make allowances. We humanize and broaden the picture, and spread our blame more thinly over a larger area. We are confronted by history, human nature, and a set of physical forces, rather than by a group of personal devils, such as Stalin, Molotov, Vishinsky and Gromyko, who excite our hate and wrath.

A similar effect is created by the method of reciprocity. When we put ourselves in the place of the Russians, and ask ourselves how we would then feel and act, the edge of our asperity is dulled. We tend to sympathize with their motives, and to imagine ourselves moulded by the same external conditions. When we see ourselves as the Russians see us we lose our self-righteousness; and this makes us less censorious. We see our relations to South and Central America and to the Caribbean as resembling the relations of Soviet Russia toward those near neighbors of which they require "friendly governments." We see our demand for military bases, our interest in oil, and our taking over of British strategic posts, as bearing at least some faint resemblance to that imperialistic expansion which we charge against Soviet Russia. We see our policy in Greece and Turkey as intervention in the internal affairs of other nations, as at least roughly analogous to Russian interventions in China and Eastern Europe. We recognize that if we have exercised the veto in the Security Council less frequently than Soviet Russia this may be because we have had our way without it. We see ourselves as complaining of Russia as a menace to the peace of the world while at the same time we accumulate atomic bombs.

All of these ways of understanding Soviet Russia tend to soften our adverse judgments and cool our warlike passions. There is, however, a danger in this promotion of understanding. There are minority groups in the United States who speak up for the Russian or Communist, not because they are pro-Russian or pro-Communist in their fundamental convictions, but because they wish to give the Russian-Communist point of view a hearing.

But then something happens to their minds. Their ideas and feelings tend to become indistinguishable from those of the adherents of Russian Communism. It is as though a Harvard man sitting in the Harvard stands when the game was held in Cambridge should cheer regularly for Yale so as to give the visitors a break. His behavior would so closely resemble that of a Yale man that his neighbors would not unnaturally feel that he belonged on the other side of the field, and might even suggest that he change his seat. Or he might be suspected of being a Yale man at heart, a disguised Yale man, a secret agent from New Haven, or at least a Blue fellow-traveller, a member of the Eli front. Furthermore, he woulld tend to become a Yale man through acquiring the habit of acting like one.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

So a person who for reasons of disinterestedness and better understanding defends the un-American cause of Soviet Russia not only appears to have gone over to the other side, but may to all intents and purposes have really gone over to the other side. From having leaned over backwards he has fallen over backwards. Having from motives of high-mindedness been continuously occupied with giving the devil his due he has forsaken God. From being the devil's advocate he has become the devil's adherent.

World Organization

DIPLOMACY and negotiation must take place both inside and outside the United Nations. The success of that organization depends at the present time not on its constitutional form but on a political settlement between that group of nations which is led by the United States and the group of nations which is led by Soviet Russia. There can be no United Nations until these groups of nations are united. The evil lies not in the right of veto, but in the desire to exercise it. Both groups of nations are at present members of the world organization. If they fall apart there is no United Nations, but two groups of disunited nations, two great leagues, dividing the world between them and headed for a Third and worst World War.

The United Nations has a mixed record of successes and failures, and because of the high hopes with which it was inaugurated, we emphasize the failures. We forget that here, at least, there are no iron curtains, but an open forum where all nations can speak their minds. We forget that if the United Nations is abandoned through lack of patience and faith we shall have to begin over again—if, indeed, there is likely to be another opportunity.

Resolute adherence to the United Nations does not imply that there shall be no limited associations of nations, such as those of the Americas or of the North Atlantic, but only that these shall be so organized and constructed as to serve the United Nations—whether as nuclei to be expanded, or as subordinate units to be embraced.

The United Nations is more than a mechanism, it is an embodiment of principles. Its Charter is a charter of freedom, providing that the nations of the earth shall be relieved of the fear of war, and enabled to pursue their fortunes and their several cultural ideals. It provides that the background shall be brought forward and that the dependent shall be made independent. It proposes that mankind instead of being weakened by division and rivalry shall be strengthened by cooperation.

But these are precisely the ideals which we as a democratic people seek to realize at home and desire to spread abroad. Disloyalty to the United Nations is disloyalty to ourselves.

Spreading the Gospel

AT the same time that we make ourselves ready for war as a possibility, or a last desperate resort, we seek to avert it by political settlement with the opponent; at the same time that we negotiate with the opponent, we seek to strengthen the United Nations, as an organization in which there are no deep antagonisms, but only differences of opinion to be resolved by discussion and agreement; and at the same time that we do these things we spread the gospel of freedom.

This we can and must do by the spoken word, that is, by what is called "propaganda." But verbal persuasion is likely to be less effective than the example of success. If we are to win dissenters and doubters to our way we must live out our way and show its fruits. We must find the answers, and prove that we have them to the countless millions in the world who are now tempted to look elsewhere for leadership. We must acquire prestige in the world—of the kind that will lead others to imitate rather than to fear us.

And we must demonstrate our institutions and ideals not only by their success at home but by their success abroad; by our own success abroad, and by the success of those abroad who share similar institutions and ideals of their own. The European Recovery Program affords us a supreme opportunity of doing precisely this. There is happily a method by which we can help our friends without offense, that is, without legitimate offense, to our opponents; the method, namely, of economic aid—whether through our own efforts, or through the agency of the United Nations. The European Recovery Program, now unhappily renamed the Mutual Security Agency, together with "Point Four," and other plans for "world development," should be pacific and not military in their intent; designed to create independence rather than dependence on the part of the peoples that benefit by them; based on long-range mutual interest rather than on a temporary charitable sentiment; and used not merely to stimulate production but to improve the condition of the relatively unprivileged classes. Their hoped-for political effects will then be indirect rather than direct; and will be based on the principle—our own principle—that people should choose their institutions in an atmosphere of freedom and hopefulness rather than of fear and desperation.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

A distinguished political scientist of my acquaintance has said that the United States is not fit to have any foreign policy. He had in mind the tensions, rivalries, and conflicts of governmental power that have grown out of our famous system of checks and balances; the party passions that are excited by our frequent national elections; the selfish pressure groups that influence policy in Washington; the debauching of the public mind by demagoguery and reckless mass-communication.

But this despair of our political system affords no escape from our present difficulties. We are obliged to have a foreign policy, good or bad, and to implement it with what political institutions we have. In any case the fundamental force in our political life is public opinion—that is, your opinion and mine. The long-range wisdom, steadiness of will, large-mindedness, and patient pursuit of our goal, in which we and the world at large so often find us lacking, can be communicated to our people at large, and to our officials of government, if we cultivate them in ourselves, if there are enough of us, and if, having it in ourselves, we express it vigorously to those about us. The power is ours, if we believe that we have it, and are worthy and resolved to exercise it. If not we have ourselves to blame. Either we abandon our goal of a better world, and our American democratic way of attaining that goal, or we enlist, all of us, for active service, with no holidays or leaves of absence.

A Canadian Looks at War and Peace

BY
CLARIS EDWIN SILCOX

FOR better for worse, the United States and Canada are today in the same boat, but there are some important differences in our respective approaches to the international problem. As my former professor of history, the father of the present Ambassador of Canada in Washington, once wrote, Canada was founded on tradition (British or French) while the United States was cradled in idealism. Perhaps, it is the special function of a country founded on tradition to keep a country cradled in idealism on the rails, internationally speaking.

On the whole and in the political field, we Canadians are rather starkly realistic though we are by no means devoid of ideals. We are of course a monarchy but with the forms and with what we honestly consider to be the advantages of a constitutional monarchy, we yield to none in our democratic convictions and practices. We believe that our system of responsible government is most truly democratic and we feel no need of the elaborate system of checks and balances which seem to us to make government in the United States at times so difficult and uncertain. And in our democratic emphasis, we are more devoted to the spirit which creates and sustains democracy than to the particular techniques which it employs. The techniques are sometimes deplorable but the spirit behind the techniques are as important to Canadian as to American thinking.

Nor are we so frightened by the words "colonialism" and "imperialism" as some Americans. We were a colony for years, and that period of tutelage and protection enabled us to preserve our distinctive character and prevented us from being absorbed by the United States. Eventually we were able to achieve full autonomy without any break with our real traditions.

All this took time, and sometimes we are troubled by the American desire to remake and redeem the world on a time table. That cannot be done, because human nature is so refractory. Imagine God trying to redeem the world according to a time-table! That is beyond even his omnipotence. He creates man with certain potentialities, and in the redemptive process he takes the divine initiative and then must await the human response. The divine initiative toward man requires the human initiative toward God. Men and nations being what they are, it is impossible to impose the disciplines of true freedom on either. They must achieve that for themselves.

From an address delivered at the Conference on World Order, Rochester, N. Y., November 13, 1951, by the Secretary in Canada for the World Alliance for International Friendship through Religion.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The Economic Field

IN the economic field, we are more suspicious of doctrinaire ideas of equality which we may preach but do not expect to practice. We know that human needs vary in accordance with many factors and that people who live in tropical and semi-tropical countries, for example, have quite different needs from those of us who must wrestle with a more frigid climate. Nor are we quite so terrified by socialism as some in the United States. We may not be particularly sanguine about its thorough-going application, but one of our provinces is experimenting with a socialist government. That particular government may be learning some needed lessons, and the experiment may be of value to all of Canada. We Canadians know, too, how much we owe to a beneficent capitalism. We would never have been able to develop our far-flung country as we have, had we not been helped with large capital investments, in the first instance from the United Kingdom and then later from the United States. Such capital investments are twice-blessed. They both help to develop a country, provide employment and create wealth for the people who reside there, and they also prove profitable to those who put their capital into such a country. But here is a lesson for those countries which wish today to invite capital from without. We would never have attracted such huge amounts of foreign capital, had we not sought to play the game fairly with those who advanced it. We did not break contracts. We kept our word even when it hurt, and keeping our word, we proved ourselves worthy of the confidence which the investors had placed in us.

Now, of course, like the United States, we know that we must make ourselves strong to challenge aggression and thus to pursue a policy of peace through strength. In our world, force is necessary to ensure conformity to law on the international plane and to replace anarchy with order and justice. We cannot do without it. But force alone can achieve little that is positive. With force, one can often stop evil in its tracks, but he cannot instil good. Force may knock hell out of a scoundrel but it cannot knock heaven into a potential saint. Making people good is a spiritual task and requires the infusion of the spirit of God.

That is why it is impossible to buy off communism with money—even with dollars! One has to change men's minds. It is a long process. The Christian Church has been trying to do it for two thousand years and it sometimes seems as if it had only scratched the surface of the subconscious. But we must keep on trying, endeavoring to convince men by appealing to their reason, creating convictions in the reality of the moral and natural law and perhaps, even more, strengthening their faith in the eternal Law-Giver.

Backward Areas

BOTH our nations were helped in their youth by assistance from without. Now it is our turn to offer help. We are making a start along these lines within the British Commonwealth of Nations and through the implementation of our Colombo Plan. We must do all that and more, helping the backward areas to secure better health, better education, better economies, better administrative practices. Already, the work of Christian missions has pointed the way toward the effective prosecution of the suggestions made by Mr. Truman in his point four. One may well ask what has communism ever done to improve the health, education, industrial and agricultural techniques of these primitive and backward peoples comparable to that done by Christian missions. They and practically they alone have sent out doctors, nurses, dentists, teachers; built hospitals, schools and colleges. What is now needed is a much more expanded program backed by larger funds.

But even here we must not be too Utopian. We cannot impose our methods, even our good intentions, overnight on people any more than we can make them democratic by fiat. To provide as many doctors for China per thousand of the population as we have in Canada or the United States would mean the recruiting of no less than 500,000 trained physicians, and that is a job which we might initiate but which China itself would have to carry through, and in her own way. And the work we envisage may spell many disappointments and discouragements.

Sometimes the task seems beyond hope of fulfillment. But despite a possible scepticism as to the speedy success of the projects, we may carry on, not because through such ministries we hope to beat communism, but because we are actuated by love of God and love of man. Our faith is not in the common man but in the common man who is touched by fire from the lips of the divine man. If we can successfully challenge humanity on the deepest level, we may all rise together. But we can not give nations freedom, for it is the solemn truth which was inscribed on the walls of the palace of the former Viceroy of India: "Liberty does not descend to a people; a people must raise itself to liberty." However divine the initiative of love and service, success depends upon the human response! So let us proceed in faith. Let us trust God and keep our powder dry!

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Religion and the Mind

BY
CLINTON J. KEW

A CHRISTIAN PSYCHIATRIST

DURING the past two years many people have asked, "Will you send me the name of a Christian psychiatrist?"

I have asked the Rev. Benjamin F. Axleroad who conducts healing services at Trinity Cathedral, Newark, N. J., to give us his answer: "What is wanted here, probably, is a man who is guided by Christian principles. But Christianity is a personal religion. Christian principles cannot be separated from the personality of Jesus Christ. A Christian psychiatrist, like a practicing Christian, would be a disciple of Christ and a witness to him.

"A good many people might find it difficult to believe that a psychiatrist could be such a witness. Must he not be first of all objective, in no way attempting to influence his patient in the direction of any specific system of help? Is this possible for a man who attaches a very important part to the fatherhood of God and the redemptive power of Christ?

"There are a number of possible answers, but one is given us in the Sermon on the Mount: 'Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them.' A person can reflect Christ without mentioning him. In the average mission field the living witness to the gospel usually precedes and must always accompany its preaching. In a very real sense, the psychiatrist works in a mission field. His witness of love must come first in order that the patient may relate satisfactorily to him.

"A definite sacramental character would also be apparent in psychology conditioned by a Christian. Counseling techniques, in themselves neutral, would by their motivation and use convey underlying Christian truths. They would thus be far more effective than any attempt to ram authoritarian religion down a man's throat.

"The imparting of divine forgiveness and God's revelation of love in Christ are perhaps the most salient portions of the gospel which should underly the work of the Christian psychiatrist.

"But there's something more. By an empathetic process, the certainty of God's guidance is transferred from psychiatrist to patient. For insecurity is substituted, often very gradually, the "armory of God." Sure of the love of his heavenly Father, a token of which was expressed to him through the psychiatrist, the patient finds himself able to give love first to his fellowmen, then back to God, its source."

I asked the Rev. Alvin V. Hart on the staff of the American Foundation of Religion and Psychiatry to give his answer: "I would say, first, that a psychiatrist who is a Christian, and hence, by definition, would be a religious person, believes that there is such a thing as healthy religion, and that this religion has ultimate value for living. This statement does not mean, however, that both as a religious person and a scientist he will not seek in working with his patients to modify and change their distorted and unhealthy religious ideas, which are as much symptoms of their neuroses and psychoses as are any other symptoms.

"Second, I would say that the Christian psychiatrist would hold to the objective reality of the moral standards for human behavior. Thus he would disavow the concepts of ethical relativism as, in fact, do many of his non-Christian colleagues, Erich Fromm being a prime example. Again this does not mean that he will not seek to change neurotically distorted ethical ideas that are in operation in the lives of his patients as another expression of their basic emotional illness.

"In brief, therefore, a Christian psychiatrist will not fall into the fallacy of 'psychologism' which holds that everything in human life can be explained away by psychology and psychiatry, that he will realize there are more things in this world than his psychology dreams of (that is, there are more ways of apprehending reality than a psychological, scientific way). He will know that the scientific discipline in which he is a specialist has the same limitations as has any other scientific discipline, and he will be humble before these facts."

The clergyman has always been known as the physician of the soul, and it is not strange to find the psychotherapist by his side when he enters the field of healing. Their job is to clear the way for the development of a life that is truly spiritual. This has been demonstrated in its completeness in the life of one Man.

ATTENTION PLEASE

The editorial office of The Witness is now located at

12 West 11th Street
New York 11, N. Y.

However all correspondence, news, magazine exchanges, etc., are to be sent to our office of publication:

The WITNESS
Tunkhannock, Pa.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

NEWS OF OTHER CHURCHES

DULLES TO GET CATHOLIC PEACE AWARD

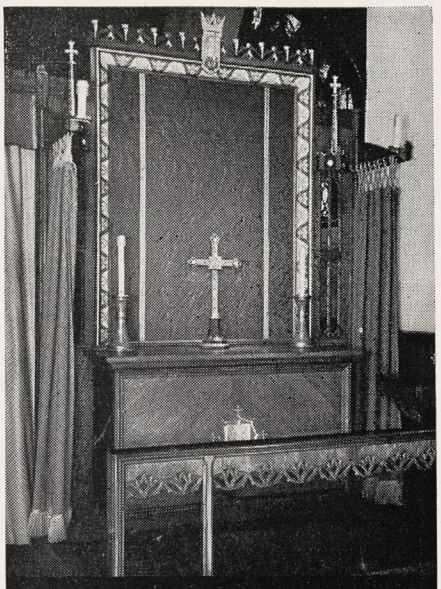
The Roman Catholic Third Order of St. Francis will present its 1951 peace award to John Foster Dulles, U. S. delegate to the U N. The presentation will be made in Washington during January. The award was to have been given to Mr. Dulles at the Third Order's annual meeting but the internationally-known Protestant layman was unable to come here for the presentation. The Third Order, which last year honored Myron C. Taylor, former personal representative of Presidents Truman and Roosevelt to the Vatican, gives the medal annually to a layman "for truly Christ-like efforts in behalf of peace among all men."

DISCIPLES OPPOSE VATICAN ENVOY

Trustees of the united Christian missionary society of the Disciples of Christ expressed "vigorous opposition to the proposal to establish diplomatic representation to the state of Vatican City or to the Pope as head of the Roman Catholic Church" at their bi-monthly meeting. In a resolution, the trustees said that "such action would be a violation of the traditional American policy of separation of Church and state and would give preferential treatment by our government to a religious communion." The resolution directed the society's department of social welfare to inform Disciples of the action "and to solicit their cooperation in similar expressions of disapproval."

YOUTH REFUSES TO TAKE MILITARY COURSE

A 17-year-old high school senior, brought up in a Quaker Sunday school, has informed Ann Arbor school officials that he will go to prison rather than take a required military orientation course. Robert O. Winder said he did not consider himself a conscientious objector in the usual sense of the term, but "I don't like to have it dinned into us week after week that war is inevitable and that we'll all be in uniform within a year." The youth is one of the most brilliant students in the school, Principal Nicholas Schreiber said. However, he will not receive his diploma in June unless the board of education reverses the school administration's action.



In a letter to Mr. Schreiber, Robert said, in part: "I am definitely not planning to enter the armed forces. I say this because I refuse to be held liable for the mistakes society as a whole or our 'leaders' in particular have made, are making, and will probably continue to make. Because of this stand, I see no valid reason for being required to suffer through a course in military indoctrination."

ANGLO-CATHOLICS CAMPAIGN IN ENGLAND

Five thousand Anglo-Catholic clergymen and laymen attended a rally in London which climaxed a campaign conducted in 60 centers to win people to their position. Bishop Mortimer of Exeter, in addressing the rally, said that "it is time to unite in expressing our common conviction that the Church of England is the Catholic Church in England. The Church may be a partner, or assistant, of the secular power in promoting the people's welfare, but it is not the state's handmaid. It may be protected and helped by the state, but it is not a state department." He deplored the tendency "to look on the Church of England as only one among many Christian denominations."

CATHOLIC ACTION AMONG WORKERS

Two hundred laymen from fifty R. C. dioceses in France gathered in Paris for the first national meeting of the Catholic Action Among Workers. It was founded 18 months ago to help bring the working people of the country back to a Christian way of life. Speakers said the organization's aim is to combat materialistic philosophies and get workers to realize that "making money and protecting personal interests" is not man's chief aim.

WOODWORK

Altars, screens, paneling and other furnishings, fashioned by Rambusch craftsmen, add to the beauty and dignity of these churches:

St. Bartholomew's Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.
St. James' Church, Hyde Park, N. Y.
St. John's Church, Sharon, Pa.
Trinity Church, Hewlett, N. Y.
Trinity Church, Paterson, N. J.

RAMBUSCH 40 W. 13th St. New York, N.Y.

ST. JAMES LESSONS

A nine course series of instruction for Episcopal Church Schools including illustrated work books — 150-250 pages (60c each) and teachers' manuals I, II, III 40c each, IV through IX 60c each).

No Samples - Payment with orders

St. James Lessons, Inc.
865 Madison Ave., Dpt. 5, N. Y. 21, N. Y.

The Prayer Book
Its History & Purpose
BY
IRVING P. JOHNSON
Late Witness Editor

25c for single copy
$2 for ten copies

The WITNESS
Tunkhannock, Pa.

RELIGIOUS CHRISTMAS CARDS

Christmas Card Boxes, $1.00 each
I The Story of Christmas in Text and Picture 16 cards
II 20 Hummel Christmas Cards

Christmas Card Packets, $1.00 each
4X Four 25c Cards
10X Ten 10c Cards
20Xa Twenty 5c Cards
20Xb Twenty 5c Single Mowbray Cards

Anglo-Franciscan Pocket Kalendar
Feasts and Fasts for 1952
15c each — 8 for $1.00

THE GRACE DIEU PRESS
Maryhill Mount Sinai, L. I., N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Christmas Gifts

Witness subscribers can make gifts that last throughout the year and at the same time extend the influence of the magazine by using the form below. We will greatly appreciate your cooperation. A gift to a friend is a gift to The Witness.—The Editors.

I am sending you The Witness for a year, which I hope you will enjoy as much as I do.

(Your name will go here on the Christmas card)

SEND YOUR LIST

We will enter their subscriptions to start with the Christmas number, sending the card pictured above announcing the gift as coming from you. Merely send names and addresses with check and we will do the rest.

THE SUBSCRIPTION PRICE IS $4

Please send The Witness for one year to the following, together with the Christmas card:

Name .....
Street .....
City .....
Zone ..... State .....

Name .....
Street .....
City .....
Zone ..... State .....

Name .....
Street .....
City .....
Zone ..... State .....

Name .....
Street .....
City .....
Zone ..... State .....

TYPE OR PRINT ADDITIONAL NAMES ON A SEPARATE SHEET

The WITNESS

TUNKHANNOCK PENNSYLVANIA

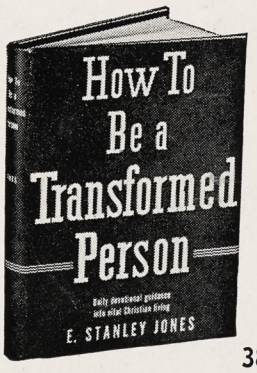
Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE PRESS

Edited by
GEORGE MacMURRAY



WONDER OF THE WORLD:—It was refreshing to read in the Presbyterian Tribune the words of John Burroughs: I am in love with this world; it has been home. It has been my point of outlook upon the universe. I have not bruised myself against it nor tried to use it ignobly. I have tilled its soil. I have gathered its harvests. I have waited upon its seasons, and always have I reaped what I have sown.

While I delved I did not lose sight of the sky. While I gathered its bread and meat for my body I did not neglect to gather its bread and meat for my soul. I have climbed its mountains, roamed its forests, sailed its waters, crossed its deserts, felt the sting of its frosts, the oppression of its heats, the drench of its rains, the fury of its winds, and always have beauty and joy waited upon my goings and comings.

MEET THE CHALLENGE: — Richard Shaull, missionary to Africa, repeats in the Christian Century what so many are saying these days, that the voice of the Church will gain a hearing only if Christians are working as strenuously for the transformation of society as Communists are. Laymen particularly, he maintains, must commit themselves unreservedly to the struggle for social justice.

To Guide You into a NEW Kind of Life . . .

How to Be a Transformed Person

The NEW Book of Daily Devotional Readings
by E. STANLEY JONES

52 weeks of purposeful daily meditations—to help you

- Release yourself from the tensions of worry and dissatisfaction into peace and happiness
- Achieve radiant health in body, mind, will, emotions
- Live purposefully and victoriously
- Grow into greater spiritual maturity—a deeper understanding of the meaning of transformation for you, your associates, and all men

384 Pages Pocket Size $1.50

AT YOUR BOOKSTORE Abingdon-Cokesbury

The Church Pension Fund

and its subsidiaries
administered for the benefit of the Church

The Church Hymnal Corporation

Publishers of The Hymnal; Hymnal 1940 Companion; Book of Common Prayer; A Prayer Book for Soldiers and Sailors; Book of Offices; Stowe's Clerical Director.

The Church Life Insurance Corporation

Offers low cost insurance and annuity contracts to clergy, lay officials and active lay workers of the Church, either voluntary or paid, and their immediate families. Services include individual insurance programming and assistance to parish officials in preparing and establishing plans for retirement of lay employees.

The Church Fire Insurance Corporation

Low cost fire, windstorm and extended coverage insurance on property owned by or closely affiliated with the Church, and on the residences and personal property of the clergy.

Further information available by addressing any of the above at

20 Exchange Place New York 5, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT, Book Editor

The Joy of Study. Papers on New Testament and Related Subjects Presented to Honor Frederick Clifton Grant. Edited by Sherman E. Johnson. New York: Macmillan, 1951. $2.75.

The whole Church will be grateful to Sherman Johnson for gathering and editing this testimonial volume of studies in honor of the sixtieth birthday of our distinguished and beloved friend and teacher and Witness book editor. The gracious biographical foreword and the fifteen pages of bibliography of Dr. Grant's writings will convince anyone, who might not already know it, of the tremendous debt we all owe to the stimilus and instruction of this great teacher and scholar.

The thirteen essays in this book are all a joy to read, and there is something here to help and inform all kinds of readers, whether specialists or not, whether clergy or laity. Every contribution inspires the reader with a desire for further knowledge and investigation and reflection. This is the kind of tribute that is peculiarly worthy of Dr. Grant, and one which we believe will give him the keenest satisfaction.

F. W. Beare presents a critical and historical exegesis of the Parable of the Guests at the Banquet—a lesson which we read twice in the year at the Eucharist, the Lukan form on the Second Sunday after Trinity, and the Matthean form on the Twentieth Sunday. It is a model of the way one should proceed to analyse the primary and the secondary meanings of parables; and it makes very clear the way in which Scriptural teaching is intimately bound up with the history of Christian thought. B. H. Throckmorton, Jr. contributes a thoughtful presentation of "The Teachings of Jesus and Pacifism," showing the difficulties of an absolutist position taken by both sides to this important question of our times. Professor John Knox's brief note on Mark 14:51-52 helps to clarify the significance of the young man who escaped at Jesus' arrest, leaving behind his linen garment, in the whole context of the Passion and Resurrection narrative. One of the most illuimnating essays is that of Holt Graham, who treats of the form and character of the covenant-community that Jesus and his disciples derived from Hebrew culture. Its implications for the doctrine of the Church and the Eucharist are significant.

St. Paul is studied in two contributions. Professor Cadbury points out the problems created for Paul by his converts' taking the apostle's teachings to extreme—what he calls "overconversion." Dr. Grant's son, Robert, relates the notion of "wisdom" held by the Corinthians to contemporary philosophical ideas. A defense of the authenticity of I Peter, along lines laid down in Selwyn's commentary, is made by the Archbishop of Quebec, Dr. Carrington. And Sydney Temple presents a fresh approach to the geographical and climatic elements in the Fourth Gospel, from his own recent travels in Palestine. Dean Clarence Craig summarizes for us the latest investigations of the "Body of Christ" concept, and points out the values as well as the difficulties of this famous and well-worn phrase.

Every preacher and teacher should read Professor Enslin's paper on "Preaching from the New Testament." It will make him uncomfortable, but it is wholesome advice. Dr. Forster's essay on St. Columba and his miracles throws light indirectly on the problem of miracles in the New Testament. A study on "The Descent of Jesus in Muhammadan Eschatology" by Professor Arthur Jeffrey of Columbia University will open a little-known area to many readers: namely, the relation of Christian and Islamic beliefs about the second coming of our Lord. Finally, Professor Arthur Darby Nock of Harvard contributes a learned but clear study of the use of the titles "Saviour" and "Benefactor" in antiquity. The bearing of this on New Testament usage will be obvious to the reader.

This is merely an outline of the rich feast in store for those who obtain this book. It will extend to many that "infectious joy of study" that Fred Grant communicated to Sherman Johnson when he was his student in seminary, and that both of these scholars continue to create through their gift of the Spirit in teaching the word of wisdom and of knowledge.—Massey H. Shepherd Jr.

CASSOCKS
Surplices — Choir Vestments
Eucharistic Vestments
Altar Hangings and Linens
Prices Sent on Request
J. M. HALL, INC.
14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.
Tel. CH 4-3306

THE UNITED STATES AND SPAIN
An Interpretation
by Carlton Hayes

Written to provide "background and foreground for understanding Spanish-American relations, both actual and desirable." A calm and cool book on a usually heated subject. $2.75

ONE AND HOLY
by Karl Adam

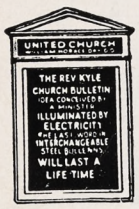
A frank examination of the causes of the Reformation, the major Reformation doctrines as they began and as they have since developed, and an evaluation of the chances of reunion. $2.00

STIMULI
by Msgr. Ronald Knox

2½ minute sermons which originally appeared in the London Sunday Times. Msgr. Knox at his wittiest: stimulating even on Christmas afternoon. $2.25

THE MONKS WHO WORRIED
Pictures and Text
by Russell Collinge

All the monks in a monastery and why they worry about us. We recommend this gay little book as about the most cheerful Christmas present you can give for the price. $1.00



See them at your Bookstore

The Christmas number of Sheed & Ward's OWN TRUMPET contains much more about the above books and many others. If you would like to receive it, free and postpaid, just ask Testina MacGill to send it.

SHEED & WARD
New York 3

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Scriptural—Artistically designed
WORSHIP FOLDERS
Large assortment—Self Selection
Lithographed—Special Days—General use
Ecclesiastical Art Press
Dept. W Louisville 12, Ky.
FREE CATALOG

CHURCH BULLETINS
Every progressive church should use Winters' De Luxe Bulletin Board. Dignified, effective, and economical. Over 7,000 IN USE. Increase attendance, interest and collections. Write today for Illus. Catalog H. E. Winters Specialty Company, Davenport, Iowa.

Mitchell FOLD-O-LEG tables
The strongest, handiest folding table made. For banquet, church and school use. Write for descriptive folder.
MITCHELL MFG. COMPANY
2748 S. 34th St., Milwaukee 7, Wis. Dept.W

ALTAR GUILDS
Full range of finest qualities Pure Irish Linen for all church uses. Immediate delivery; prices unchanged.
Samples Free
MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
Box 325 Marblehead, Mass.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

★ ADDRESS CHANGE

IN MAKING AN ADDRESS CHANGE, PLEASE SEND BOTH THE OLD AND THE NEW ADDRESS AND ALLOW THREE WEEKS FOR THE CHANGE.

ALTAR LINENS
BY THE YARD
From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States. I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values and qualities imported from Ireland. Also ecclesiastical transfer patterns, beautiful household table damask and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.
MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

Make Christmas Christian
A church woman gave her rector a check as a thank offering for her friends. What her gift accomplished is related by Bishop Hines. Rectors will want to mail this leaflet to parishioners.
$1 for 25; $1.50 for 50; $2 for 100
THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

PEOPLE

CLERGY CHANGES:

JAMES RICHARDS, rector of St. Paul's, Washington, D. C., has been involuntarily recalled as a chaplain in the air force, effective January 1.

WARREN H. McKENNA, formerly rector of St. John's, Roxbury Crossing, Boston, is now conducting a social service project on a farm at Epping, N. H.

OTHO S. HOOFNAGLE, formerly rector of St. John's, Montclair, N. J., has returned to be a master at St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H.

ROBERT L. ZELL, graduate of Oxford University, England, and Union Seminary, New York, is now a master at St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H.

ROBERT MARLOW was instituted rector of St. Andrew's, Birmingham, Ala., November 14th.

CHARLES C. WILSON has retired as rector of St. Stephen's, Cohasset, Mass.

GEORGE H. ARGYLE, formerly rector of St. George's, Chadwick, N. Y., is now rector of St. Andrew's, Methuen, Mass.

HARLAN COYKENDALL, former assistant, is now the rector of Gethsemane, Minneapolis, the parish where he was confirmed, taught in the church school and served as an acolyte.

DAVID T. DAVIES, formerly rector of Trinity, Bay City, Mich., is now rector of St. John's, Plymouth, Mich.

RAY HOLDER, formerly rector of Christ Church, Raleigh, N. C., is now rector of St. John's, Los Angeles.

WALTER W. GADE was instituted rector of Holy Cross, Brooklyn, N. Y. by Bishop DeWolfe on Nov. 27.

G. E. GRAHAM, formerly rector of St. John's, Keokuk, Iowa, is now rector of St. Thomas, Denver, Colo.

LAY WORKERS:

WILLIAM WYCKOFF, physician and communicant of Christ Church, Little Rock, Ark., has joined the staff of Dr. Albert Schweitzer at Lambarene, French Equatorial Africa.

SAM OWENS, on the faculty of the Birmingham Conservatory of Music, is now organist and choir director at St. Mary's, Birmingham, Ala.

DEATHS:

DONALD McFAYDEN, 75, priest of the diocese of Missouri and prof. emeritus at Washington University, died Nov. 15 after a long illness.

Free Yourself FROM Tobacco Habit
If you want to stop smoking and just can't, try world-famous NO-TO-BAC Lozenges. See how quickly NO-TO-BAC may help stop your craving for tobacco. Rush $1 to NO-TO-BAC, for 7 days supply. (For heavy smokers—16 days' supply—$2.) Satisfaction guaranteed or money back. Write:
NO-TO-BAC CO.
DEPT. LG HEWLETT, NEW YORK

ROBES
Pulpit, Choir and Confirmation Robes; Paraments. Fine materials; beautiful work; fair prices. Catalog, samples on request. Mention items needed.
DeMOULIN BROS. & CO.
1188 S. 4th St., Greenville, Ill.

I Want to Contact New WRITERS
who are interested in cashing checks of $1 to $100, offered every day. The easiest way to write for pay. No previous experience necessary. Send for FREE DETAILS. No obligation.
SAUNDERS M. CUMMINGS
468 Indep. Bldg., Colorado Springs, Colo.

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS
Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS
Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.
SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

THE BISHOP WHITE
PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833
Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.
PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)
Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

BENJAMIN AXLEROAD Jr.
Hospital Chaplain, Newark, N. J.

As I attended the 1951 interdenominational institute on racial and cultural relations at Lincoln University, Pa., I should like to correct a couple of facts and an impression given by the Rev. Alger Adams in his article in your November 15th issue.

This institute was sponsored by the National Council of the Churches for the purpose of showing representatives of many Churches how important it is to break down segregation barriers. Valuable encouragements and techniques for this purpose were presented which were, I feel, of major help to all present who were open-minded.

Mr. Adams evidently came across a report of the 1950 institute and drew on the information therein contained as though it had occurred this year. The pastor whom he mentions as a "horrible example of moving slowly" actually had seven times as many Negro members in his church this year as Mr. Adams reported, and an enrollment of 30 in the Sunday school about which nothing was said in your report. The pastor of another interracial church, in the Bronx, was also present at the institute this year, along with his Negro assistant. The spirit of the institute was anything but that of "moving slowly," and, while I sympathize heartily with Mr. Adams' goals, I think he should give credit where it is due. I am rather disappointed too, as I think we all are in the diocese of Newark, that nothing was said, to my knowledge, by Mr. Adams of the work of Grace Church, Jersey City, in the interracial field.

A. F. GILMAN
Layman of Chicago

The article, A Social Gospel, by the late Irving P. Johnson, founder and first editor of The Witness, is one of the prized things I've read in a long time. In fact all of his articles hit the nail on the head. I am certainly glad you have continued them. I only wish more people would ponder them and do something about them.

GEORGE S. WILSON
Layman of Boston

The Witness is making a great contribution to the thinking of Church people by publishing the excellent articles by the Rev. Clinton J. Kew. In these days where there are so many "peace of mind" books on the market it is a great relief to read articles that are both scientific and genuinely religious. Is there any possibility that they will later appear in pamphlet or book form?

ANSWER: If a sufficient number of people indicate by postal card that they would like to have the articles so published we will be glad to see that they are.

HELEN L. GRAHAM
Churchwoman of New York

The first of the articles by Prof. Miller on the Episcopal Church being Catholic was excellent. It pointed out many things that all of us should know. I am looking forward to the second article by this author on the Holy Catholic Church being also Protestant.

MARY GILES
Churchwoman of Philadelphia

Thank you for the editorial on Attack on Education (Witness, Nov. 22). As a teacher I am fully aware of this attack as are all teachers who have a regard for the Bill of Rights. Our freedoms are being slowly taken from us, with many voluntarily giving them up through fear. We did however give a demonstration of what organized opposition can do when the Pechan-Musmanno gag proposal came up for a hearing in Pennsylvania. Whether this particular piece of gag legislation has been finally killed through the efforts of a comparatively few courageous people remains to be seen. If not, then I am sure there will be even more people who will appear to testify against its passage at a future hearing.

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin

Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth New Hampshire

FORK UNION
MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE-MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Books and Pamphlets That Interpret Ways of Achieving a Just World Order in the Light of the Basic Principles of Religion . . .

WORLD ALLIANCE NEWS LETTER
Published every month except July and August
8 pages
Membership subscription: $2.00

"In its own sphere of service, I venture to say that the World Alliance News Letter stands alone. Its virile, forthright and fearless appeals for world peace make stimulating reading. Amidst disturbing war propaganda the News Letter serves as a spiritual and moral tonic to those who are fortunate enough to peruse and study its specialized articles and editorial comments."

W. GORDON SPRIGG
Melbourne, Australia

RELIGIOUS ETHICS AND THE POLITICS OF POWER by Vernon Holloway
1951 72 pages 50 cents

"I took up this document wondering whether I would find here another rather bland statement of the contrast between religious ideals and the actual conditions of international affairs. Instead I found such a realistic down-to-earth, honest and forthright picture of the present-day world that I continued to read in a rather excited mood."

JUSTIN WROE NIXON
Colgate-Rochester Divinity School

WHAT CAN UNITE THE WORLD? by Kathleen W. MacArthur
1950 53 pages 35 cents

"I have read this book with the greatest interest and profit. The format is very attractive and the contents very well organized so that the reader is carried along from chapter to chapter by force of the argument. The quotations are highly appropriate and very helpful . . . I think that the whole pamphlet is a fine job."

EDWIN E. AUBREY
Professor of Religious Thought
University of Pennsylvania

RELIGIOUS FAITH AND WORLD CULTURE edited by A. William Loos
Published by Prentice-Hall, Inc., December 1951
294 pages $5.00

Gordon W. Allport, Martin Buber, Philip E. Mosely, Harry Emerson Fosdick, Martha B. Lucas and Alan Paton are a few of the prominent figures contributing to this volume. It is a comprehensive and penetrating analysis of religious faith and contemporary man, freedom and order, and the problem of creating a world-embracing culture . . . a book destined to receive the close attention of serious minded men and women everywhere. Order from your local or denominational bookstore, or from Prentice-Hall, 70 Fifth Avenue, New York 11.

With the exception of RELIGIOUS FAITH AND WORLD CULTURE, all these publication may be ordered from the Church Peace Union

The Church Peace Union

and

World Alliance For International Friendship Through Religion

170 East 64th Street NEW YORK 21, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The WITNESS

10¢ A COPY

December 20, 1951

"O COME ALL YE FAITHFUL . . ."

PEACE IS STILL GOD'S PROMISE

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 7:30, 8 (and 9 Holy Days except Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 8:30, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers — 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. — 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital — 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m.
Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a. m. Holy Communion.
9:30 and 11 a. m. Church School.
11 a. m. Morning Service and Sermon.
4 p. m. Evensong. Special Music.
Weekday: Holy Communion Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.; Wednesdays and Saints Days at 8 a. m.; Thursdays at 12:10 p. m. Organ Recitals, Fridays, 12:10.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer — 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; W. Robert Hampshire, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, Joseph M. Titus, Andrew M. Van Dyke.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon.
Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D.,
Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 — 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m.
Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H.C. 8, 10:00; 11, 1st S. Family, 10 M.P. and Ser. 11
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacColl, 3rd, Rector
Rev. Peter Chase, Curate
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 43 The WITNESS DECEMBER 20, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Christmas Observances Stress Religion in Many Cities

Pageants, Processions and Pronouncements Bring Christ Into Holy Season

★ Christmas is being observed in various ways in communities across the nation, with noteworthy trends away from commercialism in many places. One of the newsworthy events was the statement issued by the ministers of Durham, N. C., calling for the restoration of a religious emphasis. They asked that Christmas cards have a definite Christian meaning; less Santa Claus and more about the Nativity; more pageants in churches; carols in homes for the aged, hospitals, jails, stores and factories; stop using "Xmas."

Philadelphia and Detroit ministers made the front pages with appeals that less liquor be consumed at office parties, the latter group stating that "this is a frank appeal to the conscience of all, but especially to that of the business community. Let there be 'office parties' without the alcoholic factor which too often results in a man attempting to drive home when he is in no condition to do so safely. And if he does arrive home, he is so intoxicated that Christmas is largely spoiled for his family. Let management assume its share of responsibility for preventing many of these unfortunate situations."

Detroit also had a carol festival with more than 1,000 singers from 70 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox churches, together with the 75 piece orchestra of a local high school.

Los Angeles, characteristically, put on a big show when more than 4,000 choristers from 439 churches took part in 32 simultaneous performances of Handel's Messiah, with an estimated 40,000 attending. One of the most unusual of the presentations was at Grace Methodist church where the oratorio was sung by interracial choirs composed of Negro, Mexican, Japanese, Chinese and Russian singers.

At Opelousas, La., Protestant and Roman Catholic clergymen participated in a program when a Nativity scene was unveiled on the courthouse square. Bands and glee clubs from schools in the area then presented carols for the two weeks before Christmas.

The first Christmas parade in the history of Yankton, S. D., was held with 30 religious, social and civic organizations participating in a mile-long procession.

Nearly 600 ministers and their wives were guests of the planetarium of the University of North Carolina at a special showing of the "Star of Bethlehem," with several stating that it demonstrated the harmony of science and religion.

At Van Nuys, Calif., the churches fostered a return to the real meaning of Christmas with a parade in which 25 floats depicted scenes from the life of Christ, designed for the most part by top designers of the movie industry in Hollywood.

Unique in the way of decorations were those in the streets of Escondido, Calif., where local artists did paintings that told the Christmas story. Painted on plywood with oils and weatherproofed, the pictures are grouped around the civic center. Ministers served as consultants in the project.

One of the most beautifully decorated towns is Milford, Pa., where many people build elaborate scenes of the Nativity on their spacious lawns, and on a precipice high about the community a large electric star sends out its message.

In Toledo many methods are used to "keep Christ in Christmas." Automobile stickers are distributed bearing the Christmas message; a Christmas poster contest for children and a city-wide songfest are a few of the plans inaugurated this year.

Completely devoid of commercialism, Enid, Okla., staged a parade with 16 floats and four community bands. It was the second year that church and school-built floats had replaced grotesque rubber balloon figures of former years. They were built around the Christmas story from the Bible and judges awarded merchant-supplied prizes to those reflecting originality and most nearly depicting their characterization. Playing of Christmas carols from atop the city's tallest building was also a part of the observance this year.

In Washington, D. C., the churches cooperated in providing religious music for shoppers in the department stores by sending their choirs to give concerts of sacred music.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

Protestant and Roman Catholic organizations in Cincinnati cooperated in calling on business men and the public to help "put Christ back into Christmas" by using religious greeting cards, window displays with a spiritual emphasis and temperate office parties.

The longest Christmas tree lane in the world was the boast of Fresno, Calif., and it attracted visitors from many states. Two miles of Van Ness Boulevard, flanked by towering cedrus deodara trees were illuminated each night from December 21 to 30, with some 73 elaborate scenes from the Bible shining from front lawns. Twenty church choirs did nightly caroling, sponsored by the local council of churches.

PARISH PAPER PRINTS LAMONT ARTICLE

★ The bulletin of the Church of the Holy Apostles, St. Louis, recently published in full the article that appeared in a pamphlet, "Soviet Aggression: Myth or Reality?" by Corliss Lamont. In a foreword the rector, the Rev. George Easter, explains that "it is printed in a religious journal, not because it reflects partly the political thoughts of the editors, but because it represents a critical viewpoint on peace and on the possible establishment of an atmosphere of international mutual trust upon which peace might be built. It is not published with any intention to suggest that this is the 'correct' Christian attitude in the East-West controversy, but to stimulate your thought and discussion on the issues facing our nation today, issues to which religious values are very relevant."

The Lamont pamphlet was commended by the Episcopal League for Social Action, which sent it to all members. Copies can be obtained at 5c a copy by writing that organization at 2006 Walnut Street, Philadelphia 3.

CHURCH PENSION PAYMENTS

★ The Methodist Church paid the largest amount in pensions last year: $8,469,104 to 13,747 recipients. The Pension Fund of the Episcopal Church was second with $2,543,444 and the Presbyterians third with $2,238,630. Pension boards of 22 denominations and two church related agencies paid $23,444,541 in pensions and relief benefits in 1951.

KINGSBURY LECTURE AT BERKELEY

★ The Berkeley Divinity School chapel was filled on November 26th for the Frederick J. Kingsbury lecture, delivered by Bishop William Havard of St. David's, Wales. Bishop Havard's subject was "Church and society in the Anglican tradition; the problem of the welfare state." After tracing historical antecedents, he spoke with feeling of the effects on character of the long unemployment crisis in Great Britain, which he himself had seen at its worst as vicar of a large Welsh parish—yet warning also that the state's necessary care for basic necessities is in danger of weakening the valuable self-reliance of the individual.

ARKANSAS YOUTH HAVE MEETING

★ The Rev. Rayford McLean, rector of St. Mary's, El Dorado, Arkansas, was the speaker at the banquet held in connection with convention of young churchmen of Arkansas which met at St. John, Fort Smith, December 7-9. Each group in the diocese sent a delegation of young people and adult counsellors.

ROBERT D. JORDAN ON LEAVE

★ Robert D. Jordan, director of promotion of the National Council, has been on leave of absence for some time, and has been given sick leave until at least January.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The National Council Holds December Meeting

★ The National Council, holding its December meeting at Seabury House, adopted a resolution opposing "vigorously" the "confirmation of President Truman's nomination of an ambassador to the Vatican which means inevitably the presence of a papal nuncio in Washington."

Four reasons were given: violation of separation of Church and state; gives the Roman Church overwhelming precedence over others; enables that Church to exert special influence upon our government; it increases religious controversy and intolerance in a time when the need for national unity and for cooperation between Churches is imperative.

The Council urged dioceses, parishes and individuals to make their objections known to the President and to their Senators and Congressmen.

Spencer Ervin Answered

The Council answered President Spencer Ervin of the American Church Union, who had objected to the use of the word "Protestant" in the pronouncements of the National Council of Churches, by saying in effect that there was not much they could do about it. "We realize that the 'Protestant - Catholic' position of our Church raises some difficult questions regarding our participation in the National Council of Churches," the statement declared. "Our Church is under a continuous handicap in maintaining its dual nature. The question of terminology is so difficult. There are no adequate terms to describe the situation. The World Council has used 'ecumenical' which is not wholly understood by the people. Even the word Anglican has this difficulty. It is all the more confusing since we are the only member Church in the Council which has the word Protestant in its title. Furthermore, this question is not resolved in our own Church. There is the utmost desire on the part of the National Council of Churches to understand the point of view of our Church in this perplexing matter. It is conceivable that instead of any reference by the National Council of Churches, in their official statements, to 'The Protestant and Eastern Orthodox Churches' it might avoid some difficulties and on the whole be better to refer in official statements to the constituent members as 'The Cooperating Churches.' Indeed there is a growing tendency on the part of the general assembly, as has been voted, to use such phrases as the 'Cooperating Churches' or the 'Constituent Churches' in their official statements.

"You request that we protest programs in which we can not or do not take part. We must remember that the program of the National Council of Churches is an overall program on a very widely flung field comprising eight organizations. No constituent Church can always be protesting any particular part of the program in which its membership would not care to participate. There is no compulsion upon any constituent Church to accept the whole program and it is only accurate and fair to state that no one of the cooperating Churches does accept the whole program. 'Praising and commemorating the Continental Reformation' in an observance of Reformation Sunday may appeal to some of the cooperating Churches. While the extremes of the Continental Reformation would make no appeal to our own people, nevertheless most of them would have great sympathy in stressing the importance of the Reformation in England which gave the Anglican Communion the English Bible, The Book of Common Prayer and made clear its position as sharing in the doctrine, the sacraments and the orders of the Apostolic Church.

"We frankly admit our concern over such doctrinal statements as 'Our Protestant Heritage' and 'What Protestants Believe.' If such publications were to continue we might well, as a Church, voice a vigorous protest, because we believe that the National Council of Churches is going outside of its province in attempting to make doctrinal statements which could be approved by all constituent members. We cannot believe that Eastern Orthodox members are any happier than are Episcopalians over such inadequate doctrinal statements as cited above.

"However, we feel that these are far from adequate reasons to justify disassociating ourselves from the overall program of the National Council of Churches. We feel that the general board of the National Council of Churches should be advised of our concern, as a constituent member, a concern which we believe is shared by others. We further believe that the general board of the National Council of Churches would appreciate and take cognizance of such a statement setting forth such concern. But for the Episcopal Church to be constantly disassociating itself, or voicing a protest when we cannot follow in any particular part of the program of the National Council of Churches, is unnecessary. No one really misunderstands the situation. We do well to remember that the Orthodox Churches are among the Cooperating Churches and that the Greek Orthodox Church has applied for membership. Certainly these Churches, quite as Catholic as our own, have no intention of subscribing to every item in the program of the National Council of Churches.

"We are living in a very cha-

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

otic world and we must believe in cooperation wherever possible. We are making no sacrifice of principles, and that being so we believe it would be a tragic mistake not to cooperate and especially so when through our cooperation we are making a real contribution and likewise receiving a great deal in every area of Christian activity — education, missions and Christian social relations. In the administrative field of the National Council of Churches the leadership of the Episcopal Church is very evident. All this we are doing, and still hold firmly to the doctrinal worship and discipline of our own Church. The National Council of Churches is not yet a year old. Patience and time and understanding are required. We would reemphasize the statement of our elected representatives to the general board of the National Council of Churches published on April 27—'We have great faith in this new venture and we are persuaded that the Holy Spirit himself is guiding the member Churches by this means into a fuller and deeper appreciation of one another.' In that spirit we confidently ask the continued prayers and patient understanding of our Church people, both clerical and lay."

On motion of the Rt. Rev. Dr. Hobson, seconded by Dr. Kuebler, this letter was unanimously adopted as expressing the mind of the National Council.

Other Action

The sum of $167,497, received from the U. S. war damage commission, was released for the restoration of Brent Hospital in the Philippines.

The new treasurer, Harry M. Addinsell, reported that there is still due $915,936 on expectations for this year. No alarm was expressed however since it represents about 20% and last year a similar sum was paid in December.

James Garfield of Boston, appointed chairman of a committee to study the set-up for Seabury Press, reported that it would be incorporated not for profit with nine directors, five to be elected by the Council and four ex-officio; the Presiding Bishop, director of education, chairman of the same department and the Council's treasurer. Meanwhile the following were appointed a committee on management: the Rev. John Heuss, H. M. Addinsell, Franklin E. Parker Jr., Leon McCauley.

Authorization was given to the social relations department to gather factual material on social education and community action in the Church and to set this forth with interpretation and goals for the guidance of Church members. Cooperation from everyone was urged in the undertaking "to the end that the Church and its people may more fully understand and influence the society in which we live."

The department of promotion was authorized to close a contract with some manufacturer for films for television.

Bishop Scaife of Western New York, new member of the Council for the second province, was unable to be present because of illness. William G. Brady Jr., chairman of the board of a New York bank, was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Addinsell, now treasurer.

The final afternoon of the meeting was given largely to a refresher course on overseas missions, with Mr. James Garfield, Mrs. Harper Sibley, Lewis B. Franklin, Bishop Bentley, Bishop Bland Mitchell, Bishop Block and Clark Kuebler the leaders.

SEMINARIES CONTINUE ENROLLMENT GAINS

★ For the second straight year the nation's theological seminaries have shown the only increase in enrollment among institutions of higher education. The annual report by the U. S. office of education on college and university enrollment discloses that independent theological seminaries had a 3.8 per cent increase in enrollment despite a 34 per cent drop in the number of veterans enrolled.

Enrollment in colleges and universities generally throughout the nation is 7.8 per cent lower this scholastic year than in 1950-51, the report reveals.

Independent seminaries enrolled 28,466 students this fall, a gain of more than 1,000 students over the 27,434 enrolled last year. Enrollment of first-time students, however, dropped 12 per cent, in the seminaries. The freshman class was 3,760 this past September compared with 4,275 in September, 1950. The number of veterans enrolled in the seminaries declined from 6,835 last year to 4,487 this year.

Statistics for theological seminaries operated as departments of universities are incorporated in the university statistics and are not reported separately.

BISHOP SHERRILL WRITES FLORIDA GOVERNOR

★ Bishop Sherrill, as president of the National Council of Churches, has written the U. S. Attorney General and the Governor of Florida asking for full federal and state investigations of the shooting of Samuel Shepherd, who was killed, and Walter Irwin, who was critically wounded. The two Negroes were shot by a sheriff while being taken, handcuffed together, from one jail to another. A jury refused to indict the sheriff.

WASHINGTON CLERGY WRITE PRESIDENT

★ Dean Francis Sayre of Washington Cathedral was one of nine prominent clergymen of the nation's capital to address an open letter to the President lamenting the dissension they said had been caused by the nomination of an ambassador to the Vatican. They urged Mr. Truman not to renew the nomination when Congress meets next month.

Cicero Riot Still Hurts Community Fund

By
FREDERICK H. SONTAG

★ The Cicero riot of this summer is still causing serious troubles in the Chicago area an exclusive Witness survey of the city reveals. The Chicago Community Fund is far behind its quota of this year, and the cause is the admitted prejudice of people against certain organizations which benefit from the fund. A high official of the Bell Telephone Company admitted to this reporter that his employees had listed "pro-Negro organizations" as a cause for not giving this year. Specifically, the Urban League of Chicago was charged by many as having "instigated" the riot.

The reports of Western Electric, which has a plant in Cicero, and other phone company properties in Chicago, have been fully checked and found true. The mid-Atlantic States news editor of one of America's most trusted newspapers said "I know this story has come up several times in places which know what is cooking."

The spokesman for a well known Jewish organization in Chicago told this reporter that "certain reactionary forces in the Community Fund would like to cut off the Urban League and other organizations. But there has been no showdown yet."

The chairman of the Community Fund, Mr. Gardner Stern, said in an interview that "Western Electric employees probably felt hostile to the fund because it supports some Negro work, but to date, I have not yet seen any effort to cut off Negro organizations in the fund."

A spot check with Chicago news men reveals that another riot could start any day, and the city still has an "uneasy truce."

A series of visits to news sources that were contacted for previous Witness articles brings these interesting facts to light.

One, most organization officers do not want to be quoted by name, although they freely open up their confidential files. They are afraid of being labeled, and do not want their organizations tagged as "pro-Negro" in a city of serious racial tensions.

Two, the laity of the Roman Catholic Church has done an outstanding job of making it clear to the public in the area, and Cicero in particular, that the Church, its clergy, and lay people, oppose this kind of action (rioting) and that it is considered most "un-Christian."

Three, the ineffectiveness of Anglican, Protestant and Orthodox forces in this situation is brought out in most interviews. The new National Council of Churches, which was reportedly formed for fact finding, joint action, and counsel in these matters, still has not had anyone interview most of the principal sources of information. Chicago news men do not regard the NCC as an effective force or spokesman for what NCC likes to say of itself "a voice in certain matters for over 32 million Christians."

Four, the federal grand jury is probing the whole riot and the unjust indictments handed down by a state jury, which found those hurt by the riot as guilty of having started it. The courageous leadership of Senator Douglas of Illinois has encouraged enlightened Chicago leaders, who are most disillusioned about help for their cause from National Church headquarters in New York.

Five, clippings of the Witness reports on Cicero were shown to this reporter by several persons as being "the honest, hard hitting type of Christian journalism we ought to have more of."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EDITORIALS

Kneeling To An Infant

THE first time man saw God was at Bethlehem. Lock carefully at the scene which has become smoothed over by the sweetness of the years. Look carefully, for with great care did God design the way we first should see him.

The stable is an ugly building, designed merely to shelter cattle from the weather. No ornament adorns, no pretense obscures it from appearing to be an ordinary stable. Yet God chose to be born here and, in choosing, changed the place to which he came; so that now, as we build the stable once again this year, we will not rest until it stands in beauty as a shrine. In the transformation of the stable, the Christ Child shadowed forth the power of change he was to bring into the world. As the rough timber glows with golden light, so, in baptism, plain water bathes the darkness of the soul. As rude angles shape with grace the manger bed, so plain bread and wine convey the happiness of heaven. At Bethlehem, our Lord unloosed the sacramental powers of redemption, the use of ordinary things to bring a grace beyond our wildest dreams of Paradise.

The ox, the sheep, the ass stand round him, for all creation groaneth and travaileth awaiting the coming of the Lord. The mystery of God's non-human creatures is hinted at by their presence at his birth. We cannot know their role in the great economy of the Creator, but surely their patience and their pain is not ignored. Perhaps, as has been said, the innocence of their suffering is used by the Saviour to ease the burden of the Cross. They stand around the manger; the Christ Child reaches out to them and in his new found flesh communicates his fellowship with all that lives.

Joseph is there, watching over the child before him, protecting the new life in the manger. We think too seldom of Joseph, the hard working protector of our Lord, first laborer to be a saint, doing more by his honest daily work than all philosophy to shelter the growing of the Incarnate Word. Stand with Joseph, Christian. Protect your holy Child with courage and forthrightness.

And then see Mary, holy Mary, pure and humble, fashioned into a tabernacle for the highest. "For he has exalted the lowliness of his handmaiden." The explosion of the Incarnation on the unsuspecting world had no greater reverberations than those set under weigh by the choice of Mary to be Christ's mother. Revolution started when God laid hold of a poor woman to be the mother of his child. When God chose Mary, he spoke his word in stark opposition to the world. Values were turned upside down in the victory of Mary whose humble life might have spelled defeat before. Values were turned upside down in the defeat of her wonder child which overwhelmed the world with victory. Revolution, surprise, the new glory which hereafter would clothe the small and weak: all this quietly shines in the worshipping eyes of Mary, all radiates from the peaceful beauty of her face.

Finally, behold the Infant Jesus, the center of the scene, starting the great drama of redemption in the body of a baby. You and I fall down before him, we are willing to kneel, willing to pray to him, willing to ask his mercy. And yet he is but a few hours old. Here is the heart of the Christian religion: grown men kneeling to an infant because he is the living proof of the love of God. All of Christ's teaching, all the wisdom of the Bible, all the theology of the Church, all the lives of the saints are nothing to this—"The Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth."

"Grant that we being regenerate, and made thy children by adoption and grace, may daily be renewed by thy Holy Spirit; through the same our Lord Jesus Christ." In this spirit we wish you all a joyous Christmas.

★

"Quotes"

FOR a time, at least, there will be men of good will on this earth. Sons of the Church that have tried to lose themselves from Christian remembrance will return for a time to their heritage, and the world will have a momentary wave of unselfish sentiment. Too often it is mere sentimentality. But if only it should prove to be genuine sentiment! If only it would last! If only the spirit of God's own self-giving could become the vital motive in the lives of men, not for a day but for all days!

—FORWARD
Advent, 1951

★

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Peace Is Still God's Promise

BY
ROSCOE THORNTON FOUST

PICTURE yourself a dispirited member of a beaten and war-weary nation. Let your ears be heavy with the words of the prophets saying that it is God's judgment upon you for your sins that you are so afflicted; you are receiving but the due reward of your deeds. And then, unexpectedly, but all the more welcome for that reason, these reassuring, blessed words of Isaiah, speaking for God, and foretelling the shape of things to come: "They shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

Would not your heart leap for joy as at the sight of a rainbow in the midst of stormy darkness? Fightings and fears were not then to be man's portion forever. There was a great day coming, a day of everlasting peace; and no war ever any more. Yes, the ears accustomed to clamor must have received this word of hope and promise with great expectation. But today, 5,000 years later, we dolefully sing,

"When comes the promised time,
When wars shall be no more,
Oppression, lust and crime
Shall flee thy face before."

Something went wrong—was it with the promise, or did God change his mind? For man's history from that day until now has not been his emergence into everlasting peace but his all but final submersion into the merciless hell of total war. Nations lift up bigger and more cruel swords against nations, and military science becomes the one subject which is not optional in the school of our way of life. We talk of the arts of war as if killing were the more manly if artfully done. We dull our minds and our souls and laugh at the prophet of old who so completely misread the signs of his times—and ours.

But did he? What exactly is he asking? Surely not that all man had to do was to lie down to sleep and wake up to the songs of the millennium. Not that God will uphold the arms of his favorites until their common enemy is put off the face of the earth and a sort of divine Carthaginian peace established. Not even that slow, but steady and unmistakable progress would cause men to be better and better until all at last would be too proud or too good to fight, and war would wither like a parched weed.

The prophet was not a vague idealist but a severely practical politician who is saying to his own nation, and to ours, that God's good will and purpose for men is their peace, and that that peace is obtainable on certain conditions—and these are the conditions: "Men shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks, and then there will be war no more."

What the prophet is saying applies directly to man's war situation, of course, but it has far wider implications. Let them both be plain to us.

Stop Squandering

WHEN it comes to peace, there will be a shortage of material to fashion it, for it's the same material men use for war. More guns and more bombs—less bread and butter. When it comes to dreaming up a new world, it will remain a dream unless you see it must be made out of the old stuff. It would be wonderful if God would provide some new material to work with, but he won't. It's been given.

If you want a new world of peace, you have to stop squandering the given material for bayonets and bullets. A higher standard of living can come only from a lower rate of killing.

If you want a saint, you have to use the same material that makes a sinner. There are the same elements of human nature in capitalist and communist. Try to make out a case for the "economic man" and his needs, and your best plans will collapse; think of him only as a religious being and you dream up a monster. The same man has body hungers and soul hungers. If we would find and know love, we must harness and convert our hates.

If we would have peace without and within, the materials are at hand, where they have always been since the dawn of creation. No use wishing or praying for something we haven't got . . . the magic ingredient, the missing link. We've got it already. God never said, behold I make all things, but "behold I make all things new." The same element from beginning to end, you and I, ordinary men and women, and our familiar old world. That's where peace is to be found when we are willing to see the old be made new, swords into ploughs! We can't have it both ways, then or now.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Fire of Love

THERE'S a job of conversion, then, to be done. But who's to do it? "You," says the prophet —and it must be done with fire. The element is the same, and it will be of the same shape still so long as it remains cold. The swords will still be swords until they are returned to the fires in which they were forged. There they will grow hot until man is able to bend and beat them into shape. Beat them, says Isaiah, sweat at this substance, go on and never stop. And if you have fire, you can make of it what you will.

But it isn't the fire of hate, envy, lust and greed that he speaks of—nor the flames of false pride revealed as a fierce determination to force a peace by bending others to our will. This is what we attempt to do when we talk about amassing physical power so that we may talk and negotiate with those with whom we disagree from a "basis of strength and not of weakness." It is we who must go through the fire; it is we who must be beaten, remade into the proper instruments of peace. The fire is God's fire—the fire is spiritual agony which is prayer persisted in until God gives his blessing—the fire of spiritual travail in submitting to the devastating agony of God's searching gaze which scorches and shrivels all that is evil; the fire of God's love which condemns us for our own unworthiness but redeems us by his infinite mercy and grace.

There is nothing to fear from God's fire, but there's a beating to be done before peace can come, and no man may avoid the flames who truly seeks for peace. There is a fiery furnace ahead. Shall we accept it, and emerge unharmed, men at last, though not without pain, or revel and resist and die before we wake?

In Christopher Fry's play "A Sleep of Prisoners" there is a moving scene at the end when the characters like Mishak, Shadrach and Abednego, find themselves in the flames of the fiery furnace. They are tortured in body and soul, agonizingly seeking the meaning of it all. The Fourth Man interprets their plight for them. Peter in awe and agony cries:

"The blaze of this fire
Is wider than any man's imagination.
It goes beyond the stretch of the heart."

And Meadows, God's spokesman replies:

"The human heart can go to the length of God.
Dark and cold we may be, but this
Is no winter now. The frozen misery
Of centuries breaks, cracks, begins to move.
"Thank God our time is now when wrong
Comes up to face us everywhere,
Never to leave us till we take
The longest stride of soul men ever took.
Affairs are now soul size
The enterprise
Is exploration into God . . . It takes
So many thousand years to wake,
But will you wake for pity's sake?"

So many thousand years to wake, so many thousand years before men beat their swords into plowshares, their spears into pruning hooks, that they may learn war no more. So many thousand years because men have sought to heap fire on the heads of their enemies instead of welcoming it within their own breasts.

The Great Awakening

HOW shall we know the great awakening—if it comes? Here too the prophet's message is clear and to the point. Men who no longer sleep —men whose hearts and minds have been tried and purged by fire will live and work to the glory of God. It is God's thoughts they will be thinking after him. It is God's work which will be done through them. Their swords will be beaten into ploughs to turn the good earth, that God may give the increase. Their spears will be fashioned into pruning hooks that the dead wood and sappers may be cut from the vines and trees that men may harvest more of God's bounty. The growing power, the life-giving power, the source of peace in this world is God and man's proper work is to clear the channels that this power may have right of way. Channels must be ploughed clear and clean, and dead wood must be cut away. Wells must be dug in the desert, and fever-ridden swamps and jungles drained and exposed to the sun. But the wind, and the rain, and the sun are of God, else the ploughed furrow would be a weedy ditch, the well a dry hole, and the swamp a breeder of pestilence still.

So it is with nations, and the heart of man. The best we can do, and the most, is to prepare God's way before him. By patient counsel, persistent and sympathetic negatiation, and a constant refusal to abdicate from the brotherhood of nations by our appeal to war we shall serve God's purpose. By a generous willingness in action to help secure for the hungry people of the world their daily bread, we shall be working with God to bring the peace of God to men's tortured lives. And we shall not allow the pleas of military necessity to frighten us into our unquestioning acceptance of the burden of an armaments program so vast that the life we are called upon to defend may well seem scarcely worth the struggle.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

I know as well as any the nature of the situation which stirs this fear in our hearts. But I know too that God's will is our peace and that we may have that peace only when we choose to walk along the road that leads to peace and learn to fashion the instruments that will help to make the world a fit place for him, and his children, to live in. It takes so many thousand years to wake, "but will you wake for pity's sake?"

The material for our brave new world is at hand, where it has always been. It's the familiar cowardly old world. But the crucible in which it may be fired and reshaped is also here. God's judgment and God's love. And we know the shape of the tools we must fashion if we would work together with God to bring peace, plows, pruning hooks, better health facilities for more people, better education, jobs for all who will work, regardless of creed and class, and fair and equal pay in that work; we know what we ought to do, but the fire to make us do it has not yet entered our souls. We still do not dare to believe as well of ourselves and our capacities as God does. We are afraid, and we fight back fear with fear. We see the world aflame and say with Peter "the blaze of this fire is wider than any man's imagination. It goes beyond any stretch of the heart."

The Christian reply is simply an affirmation of the truth, "The human heart can go to the length of God."

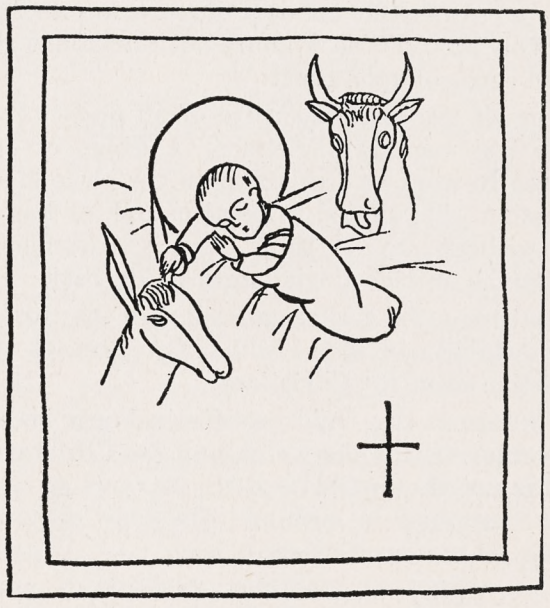
The time will come when men shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks, and they shall learn war no more.

That is what the angels meant when they heralded Jesus' birth with the renewed promise of "Peace on earth to men of goodwill.

And to confirm this promise, Jesus himself said, "Blessed are the peacemakers for theirs is the Kingdom of God."

A Children's Festival

BY



RANDOLPH CRUMP MILLER

Professor at Church Divinity School of the Pacific

I THINK it is very important for us to remember that when God wanted to do something special for men, he sent a baby. Of course, he had to send a baby in order to send a man, for all men are born babies first.

And every time a baby is born, it is important. When you were born, your parents thought you the most beautiful baby in the world, and they put their whole devotion into your care. You were nursed and helped and educated to become the kind of person you now are.

But no one wrote any stories about you, unless your father was an author or you were a Siamese twin. We do not know much about the birth of George Washington, or Abraham Lincoln, or even St. Paul. Yet we have many stories about the birth of Jesus.

Probably the stories were not told until long after Jesus was dead and resurrected. When the earliest Christians believed that Jesus was the Son of God, they began to tell these stories and finally they were written down. They are the most beautiful of all childhood stories. From these wonderful stories of the birth of Christ have come our carols, many of which we sing every Christmas:

"For Christ is born of Mary,
And gathered all above,
While mortals sleep, the angels keep
Their watch of wond'ring love."

Christmas is truly a children's festival. The center of it all is a new born Jewish boy. And all heaven rejoiced when he was born.

Through the years, it has become more and more a children's festival. In most homes, the rituals of tree, stockings, shoes, feasts, and presents have been aimed at the children. Children have learned to love Christmas as they love no other day in the Christian year. It is the time when they are the center of interest. It is when they receive wonderful presents and are made happy. And all this is good, for it expresses the spirit of Jesus, who said,

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

"Let the little children come to me, and do not keep them away, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

But when Christmas becomes exclusively a home festival for joy and coddling of children, it loses something. Today even non-Christians celebrate Christmas, because Christmas has become an American holiday rather than a Christian holy day. Those who are not Christians send pagan cards of good cheer.

One of the most beautiful of all presents was given last year at Christmas. A group of Jews offered to work on Christmas in the place of any Christian who wanted to be at church or home—and without pay. I think this is a symbol of Christmas outside Christianity at its best.

But too often Christmas is lost in the tinsel or in the children or in the home, and it ceases to be Christian even for Christians.

Christmas is a children's festival only because the center of it is the worship of the Christ-child. If it is not the birthday of the Saviour of us all, then Christmas is nothing. The only child who makes Christmas Christian is "little Lord Jesus, asleep on the hay."

Christmas is a children's festival when children learn that it is more blessed to give than to receive. An old story tells how little Sarah could not have her Daddy home from the Army for Christmas during the Civil War, so she wrapped a present and sent it to an Army hospital nearby. When she visited the hospital later on, one of the men said he had a little girl about her age, and Sarah's presence was like a visit from home. After Christmas, she received a letter from her father, saying he had received a gift from a little girl, too, and this little girl's father was in the hospital Sarah had visited. So Sarah made one soldier happy, and that soldier's daughter made Sarah's father happy, and it was a regular trade-about Christmas.

So it is that we sing:

"See him in a manger laid,
Whom the angels praise above;
Mary, Joseph, lend your aid,
While we raise our hearts in love."

When Jesus was grown up, he said that "inasmuch as we show our love and give gifts to the least of my children, we do it unto him." So we observe Christmas, and worship the Christ-child, and give in Christ's name to others. And

"Christmas comes once more."

The Family Service

By Rev. Alfred Warren Burns
Rector, Pinkney Memorial Church, Hyattsville

NOW that the Season of the Holy Family draws nigh, it is fitting that we should think about the Christian Family in the Church. The Christmas Season reminds us that Christianity can hardly be Christianity apart from the Christian Family. Our Lord Jesus Christ, the only-begotten of the Father, Whose Incarnation was a necessary part and forerunner of His Atonement, could not in so many words have died for us had He not first taken upon Himself our flesh by means of the human family. And the sequel to the Holy Birth—His growth in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man—takes place entirely within the fabric of family relationships.

It is not therefore by mere coincidence that our Christian Faith is frequently referred to in terms reminiscent of the family. We are, as St. Paul tells us, members one of another—members of a body. In Holy Baptism we are born anew in Christ to become members of His Family the Church, and our God-parents, representing this Family, undertake to nourish us in the Faith by which this Family is knit together and made one. How tragic it is, then, and often fruitless for the child, when there is little or no reflection of his membership in the Christian Family to be found in the home. Indeed, unless a child learn through his earliest experiences the meaning of Christian relationships in the home, it is doubtful whether he will ever know the real meaning of such relationships in the larger Christian Family.

It is unfortunate that the Church School has done little so far to relate the responsibilities of the child as a member of the Christian Family to his every-day experiences in and about the home. Our Church Program has become over-compartmentalized. We proudly advertize our many active organizations for boys, for girls, for men, and for women—seldom or never for the family. Even on Sunday morning the average Church family goes its separate ways—the children to Church School with a reluctant father, who waits outside in the car reading the paper or converses on the curb with other reluctant fathers; the mother to a later service, often by herself, if indeed the parents go near the church at all. Surely it is obvious that these children, deprived both of their parents' company and of their example, and finding no bond of relationship between the family of the home and the Family of the Body of Christ, will scarcely benefit from anything the Church School may have to offer.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Christmas Services

OUT of compulsion and necessity then we begin to think in terms of a Family Service in which parents are urged to come to church with their children. I have found that in a small church a good start toward such a goal may be made by announcing such a service for one of the great Festal Days of the Church year. Our first Family Service in Calvary Church, Bridgeport, took place at 11 a.m. on Whitsunday, when members of the Junior Choir, garbed in bright blue cassocks and spotless white cottas, led the more staid and somberly-clad members of the adult choir into the chancel. Naturally the parents made a point of being present, and many an unfamiliar face was to be seen in the congregation.

Perhaps the most effective Family Service was held at 11 o'clock in the morning of Christmas Eve, which happened to be on Sunday. It was a special Carol Service with an attendance exactly equal to that of the midnight Choral Communion twelve hours later. Then on Easter, in place of the children's afternoon service, we instituted Family Communion at 9:30 a.m. Again there were many unfamiliar faces of Church School parents in the congregation. A number of these came the following Sunday for the regular Church School Service, and the Family Service was on its way. The next step, of course, was to incorporate the parents in an adult class. Christian Education doesn't end with graduation from High School (or earlier!). It should only then be just beginning.

The Christian Family

SO in the small church one has the alternatives of urging children to accompany their parents at 11 o'clock on the great Festal Days, or even one Sunday a month, or of urging parents to attend with their children at 9:30 each Sunday. For the large church, or the rapidly-growing church, the institution of a regular Family Service at Church School time is highly desirable.

This year in Hyattsville we publicized such a service from the start, with rather satisfactory results. Not only are many of the parents of last year's Church School children coming to church and to the class following, but a number of new families have found this to be the answer to their Sunday morning problems of transportation, baby-sitting, and so forth. Now all the family can go together. On the first, second, and fourth Sundays of the month, the service consists of abbreviated Morning Prayer, with a brief talk on some aspect of Christian Family relationships, beginning with Baptism. On the third Sunday Holy Communion is celebrated. Thirty-three received the first time—a month later sixty came to the Altar Rail. We're not quite sure where this is going to end. But the 9:30 service is coming to be our big service, even though the attendance at 11 o'clock remains constant.

On Morning Prayer Sundays the service is over by 10 o'clock sharp. Church School ends at 10:30. On the 3rd Sunday it usually extends to 10:10, and classes are out at 10:40. The younger children, Nursery through Third Grade, have separate services of their own, with their own choirs supplying the music. Their parents have the choice of staying with them, or of attending the larger service. The point is: they're all in church together on Sunday Morning.

A similar practice is being followed by several churches in this diocese. If the new curriculum is to be adequately prepared for, and if full use is to be made of it when it is completed, then certainly the Family Service must become more widely prevalent. For the new curriculum is based on the fact of family relationships. So likewise is the entire Christian Church. To live together means to worship together. To worship together means to live together in the fullest sense. We have a long way to go before we shall fully recapture the real meaning of the Christian Family in the Church. But I am convinced the institution of Family Service is a start in the right direction.

THE CHRISTIAN AND HIS MONEY
By Bishop Washburn
Ideal for Every Member Canvass
$4 for 100 $2.50 for 50
The Witness Tunkhannock, Pa.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The Joy of Christmas

BY
IRVING P. JOHNSON
Founder and First Editor of The Witness

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

AFTER three hundred years of persecution the Christian Church persuaded Constantine to give a weary world one day in the week for rest and worship. The motive behind this gift was to give glory to God and the result was to give peace on earth, good will to men.

After three hundred years of Puritan opposition the Church has given us the feast of Christmas, the most joyous season of the year. The motive behind this gift was that of "joy to the world the Lord is born, let earth receive her King." It is curious that the institution which gave us Christmas should be looked upon as a joy killer. In spite of skeptics and critics the Church has given us also Easter because "Christ was risen from the dead."

The world has accepted these gifts but has ignored the reasons for them. It has used Sunday for amusements, Christmas to promote trade and Easter to display milllinery.

Time was when our national festivals of Washington's Birthday, Fourth of July and Thanksgiving Day evoked a response which was known as patriotism, but unfortunately patriotism seems to need a war to revive it. So far as general observance of these gala days is concerned they have little relation to the motives which produced them. In other words the strength of the motive determines the observance of the day, and when the motive cools the observance changes its character. If the spirit of Sunday, Christmas and Easter are to be maintained it must be done by Christians. "Ye are the salt of the earth," said Christ, speaking in the Sermon on the Mount, not to the multitudes but to his disciples. This means that a Christian is one whose duty it is to preserve society from decay, by inserting therein the enthusiasm which is essential to joy.

Salt of the Earth

WHEN I was young a small number of Christians observed Christmas by attending church at eleven o'clock. Thirty years ago larger numbers arose early and attended the eucharist. Today the emphasis is, to a still greater degree, upon the midnight service. No doubt this is due to the fact that modern Christians had rather sit up late than get up early. Unquestionably there is something about the midnight service which is more dramatic. There is a peculiar thrill when one comes in from the bright lights of Christmas Eve to the softer lights inside. Undoubtedly too there are greater numbers who attend, but possibly the quality is not so good. There are features of midnight services, especially in downtown churches, which are not conducive to reverence. It reminds one of St. Paul's caution about those who have eaten and drunken beyond the limits of good taste. Yet it does carry out the spirit of Christmas and we, who are too old to learn new ways, have to bow to modern edicts even though we are convinced that modernism, like jazz music and cubist art, is making an unintelligent mess of things.

However the vital thing is that, if Christians are to be the salt of the earth, they must not lose their savor because if they do the beautiful things in life which Christ has sanctified will be trodden under the feet of men. Society as a whole is like a cow in a haymow. The cow will soon starve to death because it hasn't the intelligence to preserve the hay upon which her nourishment depends. It will trample down and mess up the source of its living.

So Sunday and Christmas and Easter will soon be trodden under the feet of men unless Christians have sufficient enthusiasm left in them to be the salt which preserves the life of these institutions.

In Remembrance of Him

DICKENS' "Christmas Story" well illustrates what little children and unimportant people can do to prevent the spirit of Scroogs from usurping the spirit of Christmas. It seems to me that a Christian who wanted to enjoy Christmas would have a poor sense of gratitude if he did not feel constrained to do that which Christ asked him to do in remembrance of him. So strongly has the Church felt about this that it has made it a rule that a Christian who failed to make his communions at Christmastide and Eastertide was not in good standing. Certainly if he was standing at all it would be with his back to his Master.

It would seem therefore that each individual Christian has an obligation on Christmas to bear witness to his love for Christ, unless he too has rejected him and gone over to the crowd.

At Christmas one must feel a deep sympathy for the man without a home, without a country or without a Church. Such men may be individually of good character, but, having refused to be incorporated into these households of faith and love, while they escape the obligations attending such covenant relationships, they also forfeit the privileges incident to them.

If you find at this Christmastide that you are without enthusiasm, be honest with yourself and confess that it is rather because you have failed in your obligations than it is because someone else has deprived you of a privilege. It is the way God has made human society, whether for better or for worse, that the dividends which you receive are the result of the talents that you invest. If you have buried your talent in the ground you will naturally be surly about it, and are scarcely capable even of appreciating or comprehending the joys of Christmas. The man who keeps his financial savings in a stocking instead of in a bank is the same kind of a man who believes that God is a hard master and therefore wraps his talent in a napkin, instead of identifying himself with the solvent institution which represents the spiritual capital of the world.

Religion And The Mind

BY
CLINTON J. KEW

Outer Conformity Plus Inner Vitality

"AT the present time my faith in the Church is tried, not my faith in God or his Son, but in those who profess to serve him. Many of the people in my church wear masks, they don't ring true. Why?"

This teacher's observation is true of some clergymen, church workers and church members. Christians often give outward conformity to religion, just as children sometimes behave as their parents want them to, and wives may outwardly yield to their husband's wishes.

A day may come when all this apparent obedience is thrown overboard. The parent cannot understand why his boy refuses to attend church after confirmation, and the husband doesn't know why his wife refuses to remain tied to the same household duties. In other words, people may conform outwardly for years. In time rebellion occurs, for underneath a war has been going on.

Our Lord condemned surface obedience. His metaphor of white-washed sepulchres full of dead men's bones describes the life that is superficially good but fundamentally rotten, good without but loathsome within. He condemned those who prayed on the street corner but never gave a corner of their heart to prayer, and those who gave lavishly in public, but had no love of giving. In such people there is a struggle going on: a war between God and themselves. Jesus tells us that we cannot serve two masters.

We are asked to conform to a mature, healthy religion, outwardly as well as inwardly. As soon as we submit to the religion of the gospels, the conflict ceases.

Worship enables us to become whole, mature men and women. We talk a great deal about peace, about being mature Christians. If we are sincere in our desire, we must pray and worship, receiving the strength and energy which is available to those who earnestly seek after God's will. Worship orients us to God. Our real selves and impulses, which some forms of religion try to kill, are in harmony with God. The conflict vanishes because our unconscious mind is in step with our conscious mind. The energy which has been wasted throughout the years on frustration is now used creatively.

When Saul was to be made king, there was some doubt as to what kind of king he would make. But in the First Book of Samuel we read: "And the spirit of the Lord will come upon thee . . . and thou shalt be turned into another man." These words are true today. God will make us new people, if we will but cooperate with his spiritual laws.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Many people spend their lives fighting the truth, fighting reality. Much of the suffering and ill will in the world is caused by those who give outward conformity to God. This teacher we quote has posed a question asked by hundreds. People can put on masks, but they cannot deceive others for long. Their muscular tensions soon reveal the frustration and conflict within. Emerson recognized this when he wrote, "What you are speaks so loudly that I cannot hear what you say." Those who conform outwardly, who only make partial identification with Christ, are often unaware of what they are doing.

A school teacher, with degrees from two colleges, said, "I go to church twice each Sunday and once in the week. I am punctual in my devotions. I give ten percent of my salary to the church, but I am still unhappy. Religion isn't doing much for me. I feel insecure. I can't fall in love. I do more than many others for my church." As she talked I was reminded of the two men who went up into the temple to pray. One said, "I thank God that I am not as other men are . . . I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess." In fact he was not like the poor publican, also worshipping there. The teacher stated that she was better than those sinful people who didn't go to church. She had not achieved peace of mind because she had never allowed religion to penetrate to her unconscious, into her heart and soul. Outwardly she was doing well, but inwardly she was rigid and hard.

Another woman, aged thirty-one, came to the church complaining that her father had left orthodox religion and had established a form of religion which he said was even more Christian than his Greek Orthodox Church. He did not want his daughter to move fifteen miles away to do the work she liked best. I found him to be very intolerant, hostile and unyielding. He was unable to understand another point of view. He followed rigidly many strict rules, but there was no kindliness or love within.

God can never remake us until we cooperate with him. That has been true even of the saints. Moses, Jeremiah, St. Paul and St. Augustine, to mention only a few, were not initially receptive to yielding completely to God. Conflict followed and, like Jonah, they found that peace of mind came finally at a price, complete surrender.

We are not asked to submit to a God who carries a big stick, but to a loving heavenly Father. To accept him completely means healthy minds and happy lives. The outer and the inner meet and blend in Christian experience, bringing not ethical slavery, but the freedom of a spiritually creative life.

Christmas for Adults

BY

WILLIAM PAUL BARNDS

"CHRISTMAS doesn't mean a thing unless there are children around," some people assert as the festival draws near. They remember the years gone by when their children were small and eagerly awaited the excitement of gifts, radiant Christmas trees, and holiday brightness. There is, to be sure, a special charm about the delight of children in Christmas, but adults who cannot appreciate or enjoy Christmas because their children have left home or because they have no children, have simply missed the real meaning of the season.

The good news of Christ's nativity was given first to adults—shepherds who watched their flocks under the open sky. They were adults—those Magi, who brought their precious and symbolic gifts to the infant King, and who found in him the answers to their learning's quest. Christmas has its vital message for children and they love and are entranced by the Babe of Bethlehem, but his great significance is important for persons of all ages, even the very old.

We keep Christmas because the Saviour was born, and we all need the Saviour. The busy housewife needs the calming touch of Christ in her life to save her from losing her sense of values, in the midst of many duties. The business and professional man, under the heavy pressure of modern life, needs Christ to save him from becoming a slave to his work, and missing the larger issues of life. The bereaved need the Lord Christ to comfort them and to keep them from giving way to self-pity. Old people need the Saviour to help them to meet with Christian grace the limitations of their twilight years. All of us, sinners that we are, need the forgiveness and strength for amendment of life which our Lord affords.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

WINONA RECTOR JOINS VITAL COMMITTEE

★ The Rev. George Goodreid, rector of St. Paul's, Winona, Minnesota, has been named a member of the labor-management-citizens committee for a two-year term. The committee has had good success in maintaining harmonious relations between labor and management.

RECTOR NAMED HEAD OF NAACP

★ The Rev. Walter P. H. Parker, rector of St. Philip's, Syracuse, N. Y., was elected last week as president of the local National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

KLOMAN TO BE DEAN OF VIRGINIA

★ The Rev. E. Felix Kloman, rector of St. Alban's, Washington, D. C., has accepted the deanship of the Virginia Seminary. Following ordination in 1925 he served for two years as a missionary in Liberia. He was assistant at Grace Church, New York, for ten years, and rector of Christ Church, Philadelphia, from 1938 to 1949 when he went to St. Alban's. He becomes dean July 1, 1952.

FELIX KLOMAN

BISHOP BUDLONG IS HONORED

★ A tablet marking the episcopate of Bishop Budlong, retired, of Connecticut, has been placed in the sanctuary of Christ Church Cathedral, Hartford, a gift of the Auxiliary of the diocese.

OREGON CHURCH BURNS A MORTGAGE

★ Less than three years after the completion of the building of a new church, Christ Church, Oswego, Oregon, burnt the mortgage at a special service of thanksgiving. The Rev. F. Philip Dignam is vicar.

BRYAN GREEN VISITS PHILADELPHIA

★ A congregation of 16,000 persons crowded into Convention Hall, Philadelphia, for the opening of a ten-day preaching mission conducted by Canon Bryan Green, Anglican evangelist. It was one of the largest religious services ever held in the city under Episcopal auspices.

Canon Green told his audience that "there is cause for alarm in the sultry moral atmosphere about us; the greed for money, the self- or over-indulgence of our appetites, whether in sex, food or drink. The sins of modern life make people morally soft. Christians lull themselves back to sleep spiritually by being frivolous or flippant, their minds crammed with material things . . ."

He deplored the increasing dependence on psychiatry and psychology of "those who are really suffering a sin guilt and who need most to go to church and hear about forgiveness of sin."

Bishop Hart and Suffragan Bishop Armstrong, chairman of the Bryan Green mission, shared the platform with the evangelist.

Canon Green had a full daytime schedule as well as his nightly meeting. At the University of Pennsylvania, he was heard by 2,000 students who cut short their lunch period to attend a near-record chapel meeting.

HEUSS NEW RECTOR OF TRINITY

★ The Rev. John Heuss, director of education of the National Council, was elected rector of Trinity Church, New York, by the vestry on December 10th. Because of his responsibilities with the Council, no date has been announced for his institution. Meanwhile the Rev. Joseph S. Minnis, vicar of the Intercession, in addition to his duties there, will continue to serve as assistant to the rector at Trinity.

JOHN HEUSS

Clergy of the diocese of New York have been holding meetings in recent weeks seeking to agree on a likely candidate for the additional suffragan bishop. Reports are widespread that all parties had agreed on Heuss and that he would probably be unanimously elected. His acceptance of the rectorship of Trinity means that he prefers that position rather than that of suffragan.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CHURCH UNITY CONFERENCE

★ The Methodist commission on Church union met with the Episcopal commission on approaches to unity in two days of talks in Chicago, December 3-4. A joint statement was issued by Methodist Bishop Ivan Lee Holt of the St. Louis, Md. area, and Bishop Keeler of Minnesota, chairman of the respective commissions.

The statement declared that the commission members, numbering approximately a dozen from each denomination, "discussed the 'sacraments' and 'ministry,' seeking to know each others' minds on matters that separate them."

"There is in prospect," their statement added, "no immediate plan of organic union. But the two commissions are anxious to take some immediate step looking in that direction. A step under consideration is a proposal which might lead to inter-communion through some extension of the orders of the clergy in each of the two Churches."

The next meeting of the two groups will be held in Cincinnati, Ohio, on Jan. 13, 1952.

ORDINATIONS HELD AT CATHEDRAL

★ Bishop Donegan of New York ordained one to the diaconate and twelve to the priesthood at a service December 9th at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. Dean Rose of General Seminary preached. Ordained priests were Langford Baldwin, vicar of St. Barnabas, Ardsley; William L. Bates Jr., vicar of St. Paul's and Trinity, Tivoli; Charles H. Brieant, in charge of churches at High Falls, Stone Ridge and Rosendale; William H. Crawford, chaplain of Pomfret School; Hugh E. Cuthbertson, assistant at St. John's, Manhattan; Kenneth G. Drescher, assigned to churches at Pine Plains, Amenia Union, Dover Plains; Murray D. Glasspool, vicar at Concord and Mariner's Harbor, Staten Island; Daniel G. O. Gauclair, assistant at Christ Church, Rye; Raymond D. Mallary Jr., assistant at St. Paul's, Burlington, Vt.; John A. Phillips, vicar at Marlborough and Balmville; Charles Pickett, assistant at Christ Church, Poughkeepsie; Johann Schenk, ass't at St. Thomas, Manhattan.

Samuel J. Wylie, formerly a Presbyterian minister, was ordained deacon and is to work with students at Virginia U.

BISHOP DAGWELL VISITS MILWAUKIE

★ Bishop Dagwell of Oregon visited Milwaukie, Oregon, December 9th for the special centennial service of St. John's Church. One of the interesting parts of the observance of the anniversary was a dinner given to the Episcopalians by St. John's, the Roman Catholic parish of the city.

Bargain Package For a Dollar

THE PRAYER BOOK: ITS HISTORY AND PURPOSE by Bishop Johnson
MAKE CHRISTMAS CHRISTIAN. What One Woman's Gift Accomplished
WHY WORSHIP? by Charles Herbert Young
THE WORK OF A BISHOP by Bishop Lawrence
THE CHRISTIAN AND HIS MONEY by Bishop Washburn
THE MARRIAGE SERVICE by Hugh McCandless
PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS ON RUNNING A PARISH by Bishop Lawrence
MEANING OF THE REAL PRESENCE by G. A. Studdert-Kennedy
WHY BELIEVE IN JESUS? by Albert H. Lucas
MISSIONS DEMAND UNITY by Bishop Azariah of Dornakal

All for One Dollar. Cash with Order Please

THE WITNESS Tunkhannock, Pa.

CHURCHES OVERSEAS

JENA MANUSCRIPT GOES TO PRAGUE

Recent news from Prague, Czechoslovakia, tells of the presentation by President Wilhelm Pieck of East Germany of the famous "Jena Manuscript" to the Czschoslovak government. This old manuscript contains much of the early records of the Hussite movement. It is said to contain several satirical pieces and four of Jan Huss's own letters. One part of the "Jena Manuscript," which is apparently a collection of different documents, is an illustrated text which contrasts the life of Christ and of the early Christians with high ecclesiastical dignitaries in the fifteenth century.

If this manuscript to which the news report refers is actually the original "Jena Manuscript," it should be of great interest to American Protestants for the light it throws upon the nature and significance of the Hussite movement. In common with the equally famous "Gottingen Manuscript," it is said to have much material relating to the famous Bethlehem Chapel where Huss preached. Further news of this remarkable gift and of how it came to be in the possession of President Pieck will be eagerly awaited by scholars and students of the Hussite movement.

URGE WORK ON SUNDAYS

Radio stations in eastern European countries are making appeals to workers to give up their Sunday holiday in order to work voluntarily for the "welfare of your country and peace."

GERMAN LUTHERANS RESTORE CONFESSION

Reintroduction of the confession was voted by the synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Hanover, largest Lutheran Church in Germany. Explaining the action, the synod said that "Martin Luther did not abolish the confession as such but turned only against an abuse of its practice and the confession as a compulsory act."

HUNGARY DRAFTS PRIESTS

The Vatican radio has charged the government of Hungary with calling up priests and seminarians for military service. The station said that they will serve as ordinary soldiers rather than as chaplains or ambulance personnel.

COURT ACTION IMPROVES RACE RELATIONS

President Benjamin Mays of Morehouse College told delegates to an inter-church conference in Atlanta that pressure upon federal courts rather than any religious belief in the brotherhood of man is responsible for the improvement of race relationships in the South. He expressed the opinion however that if leaders of social, economic and religious life "set a Christian example" the masses will follow.

CHRISTIAN COLLEGE IN HONG KONG

A new college has been established in Hong Kong, known as Worship Christ College. It is the joint effort of Chinese Christians and religious groups in the U. S. and England, among them Bishop Hall, bishop of the Church of England in the city; the Rev. E. E. Walline of the American Presbyterian mission; David W. K. Au, business man who was formerly chairman of the board of directors of St. John's University, Shanghai. The college opened in October with 46 students and now has 70. The American board of Christian colleges in China has underwritten about 50% of the college's budget for this academic year.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

THE NEW BOOKS

FREDERICK C. GRANT, Book Editor

The Primitive Christian Calendar. Vol. I. By Philip Carrington. Cambridge University Press.

This is a study of the making of the Marcan Gospel, and also of the use of liturgical lections in the early church. Starting with an analysis of the chapter numbers in the margin of Codex Vaticanus, the Archbishop of Quebec works back to the early Christian-Jewish Church Year, and finds that the Gospel was indeed (as Papias said) not written "in order" (i.e. in historical sequence), but was a collection of the lections for use in the liturgy. It may amaze old-fashioned students of the gospels, still pursuing the "quest of the historical Jesus," to find that present-day scholarship has moved so far in another direction, but it is the fact that the latest scholarship assumes that Matthew, John, and now even Mark were not only not biographies or histories, but were liturgical books from the very start. They were "the church's books," in a far deeper sense than has usually been realized.

The Gospel according to Luke: Exposition and Application. By Ernest Freemont Tittle. Harper. $3.75.

Whether or not Dr. Tittle, who died in 1949 while at work on this book, would have greatly altered its final form had he lived to continue the task, the exposition of the Gospel which he did complete is clearly of a piece with the course of his ministry. The application is in the best sense practical and contemporary, combining personal religion with a prophetic concern for social justice. The author's own mature reflections are frequently enriched by the inclusion of significant passages selected from wide reading.—O. J. F. Seitz Theology of the New Testament, Vol. I. Rudolf Bultmann. Tr. by Kendrick Grobel. Scribners. $3.50.

Rudolf Bultmann is one of the most influential New Testament scholars in the world. He represents a combination of strict and thorough philological and historical scholarship with thorough-going orthodoxy—his orthodoxy is even more or less of the "Neo" variety. His recent commentary on the Gospel of St. John is one of the greatest exegetical works produced in modern times and his various works on form criticism are familiar to students and teachers of New Testament throughout the world. His New Testament theology will be a standard work for many decades to come. It is fortunate that we have this excellent translation by Professor Kendrick Grobel of Vanderbilt.

The Making of the Restoration Settlement: the Influence of the Laudians, 1649-1662. By Robert S. Bosher. Oxford Press. $5.00.

Few events in all English history are more dramatic than the Restoration. When Charles II came home from his 'travels,' the Anglicanism which seemed to have perished with Archbishop Laud on the scaffold returned with power in his train. This was by no means a foregone conclusion, since the Presbyterians had played a large part in the restoration of the monarchy and naturally expected some considerable concessions in return. That this expectation was not realized was due in part to the activity of the Anglican underground in Cromwellian England, in part to the determination of the Laudian exiles about the exiled king, in part to the astute diplomacy of Edward Hyde (Clarendon), who contrived to delay the religious settlement until a change of sentiment in the nation had returned to Cavalier Parliament. In this volume, as fine a piece of historiography as the Episcopal Church has produced in many a moon, Dr. Bosher has given us a thoroughly documented account of the circumstances attending the ecclesiastical restoration—with the imprimatur of Prof. Norman Sykes of Cambridge.

—P. V. Norwood

The Rosary. By Elizabeth Wansbrough. Sheed and Ward. $2.25.

An illustrated book for children explaining the use of the rosary and the art of meditation on the five joyful mysteries.

Reviews by Dr. Grant unless otherwise signed

RELIGIOUS CHRISTMAS CARDS

Christmas Card Boxes, $1.00 each

I The Story of Christmas in Text and Picture 16 cards

II 20 Hummel Christmas Cards

Christmas Card Packets, $1.00 each

4X Four 25c Cards

10X Ten 10c Cards

20Xa Twenty 5c Cards

20Xb Twenty 5c Single Mowbray Cards

Anglo-Franciscan Pocket Kalendar

Feasts and Fasts for 1952

15c each – 8 for $1.00

THE GRACE DIEU PRESS

Maryhill Mount Sinai, L. I., N. Y.

The Prayer Book

Its History and Purpose

BY

IRVING PEAKE JOHNSON

The Late Bishop of Colorado and Editor of The Witness

"Bishop Johnson's booklet, printed in 1934, is better than anything I have yet found to use in this 400th Anniversary Year. I wish it might be reprinted."

—George I. Hiller,
Rector of Trinity, Miami

25c for single copies
Ten copies for $2.
Cash with order please

THE WITNESS

TUNKHANNOCK PENNSYLVANIA

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

NEWS OF OTHER CHURCHES

DISCRIMINATION HIT BY LAYMAN

William Leimdorfer, layman of Delaware, publically challenged the churches of the state, in a newspaper ad, to test public opinion on the issue of racial discrimination. He proposed a house to house canvass, expressing the belief that the state's Negroes might become completely free "if in some way the will of the large white majority could be expressed positively." The Wilmington council of churches and ministerial association reserved comment pending a closer study of the canvass proposal.

DRIVE IS LAUNCHED ON VATICAN MOVE

A nationwide educational campaign to "mobilize public opinion in opposition to the President's proposal to send an ambassador to the Vatican" was launched by the general board of the National Council of Churches, meeting in Atlanta. Bishop Sherrill, as president, appointed a six-man committee to coordinate the Protestant opposition.

CONGRESSMAN NAMED LAYMAN OF YEAR

Brooks Hays, Congressman from Arkansas, was named layman of the year by the Washington federation of churches. It is the first time in the 14 years that the award has been made that it has gone to a member of Congress. He is a member of the foreign affairs committee and is a strong advocate of international cooperation. He is a Baptist and active in church affairs.

CHICAGO MEETING PROTESTS VATICAN APPOINTMENT

More than 3,000 persons gathered in Chicago to protest President Truman's nomination of an ambassador to the Vatican. Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of New York, speaking on the program sponsored by the newly-formed Chicago chapter of Protestants and other Americans united for separation of Church and state, said that "the President has driven a wedge into our American life."

A resolution embodying the organization's protest was adopted and sent to the President and to Senators Douglas and Dirksen of Ill. It declared that the organization would oppose confirmation of the appointment in "every legitimate way" because it "would violate the constitutional separation of Church and state."

SOUTHERN PRESBYTERIANS OPPOSE VATICAN ENVOY

The general council of the Southern Presbyterian Church, at its semi-annual meeting in Atlanta, registered "unalterable opposition" to the establishment of any form of political relationship with the Vatican. The 300-word statement was sent to the President and to the Senators of sixteen southern states. Laymen, in groups and as individuals, were also urged to write the President and Senators before January 1.

POLISH PRIESTS HIT GERMAN REARMAMENT

Pro-government priests in Poland are organizing protest meetings against support for German rearmament by Roman Catholic clergy of Western Germany. The meetings are being widely publicized by the press and radio.

THE CHURCH PENSION FUND

and its subsidiaries

administered for the benefit of the Church

THE CHURCH HYMNAL CORPORATION

Publishers of The Hymnal; Hymnal 1940 Companion; Book of Common Prayer; A Prayer Book for Soldiers and Sailors; Prayer Book Studies; Book of Offices; Stowe's Clerical Directory.

CHURCH LIFE INSURANCE CORPORATION

Offers low cost insurance and annuity contracts to clergy, lay officials and active lay workers of the Church, either voluntary or paid, and their immediate families. Services include individual insurance programming and assistance to parish officials in preparing and establishing plans for retirement of lay employees.

THE CHURCH FIRE INSURANCE CORPORATION

Low cost fire, windstorm and extended coverage insurance on property owned by or closely affiliated with the Church, and on the residences and personal property of the clergy.

Further information available by addressing any of the above at

20 EXCHANGE PLACE NEW YORK 5, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

ENGROSSING
BOOKS of REMEMBRANCE
Keep a record of church history and beneficiaries in a beautifully hand-tooled Book of Remembrance, engrossed in gold and color. Shown in a velour-lined, fluorescent-lighted repository, such a book adds beauty and dignity to your church.
Engrossed designs are available, too, for honor rolls and resolutions.
We can also serve you with fine church furnishings and stained glass windows. Send for our free catalog.
WHITTEMORE ASSOCIATES, INC.
16 ASHBURTON PLACE, BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS

VESTMENTS
Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves
Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries
Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars
Custom Tailoring for Clergymen
1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951

COX SONS & VINING, Inc.
131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

ALTAR GUILDS
Full range of finest qualities Pure Irish Linen for all church uses. Immediate delivery; prices unchanged.
Samples Free
MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
Box 325 Marblehead, Mass.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

★ ADDRESS CHANGE
IN MAKING AN ADDRESS CHANGE, PLEASE SEND BOTH THE OLD AND THE NEW ADDRESS AND ALLOW THREE WEEKS FOR THE CHANGE.

ALTAR LINENS
BY THE YARD
From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States. I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values and qualities imported from Ireland. Also ecclesiastical transfer patterns, beautiful household table damask and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.
MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

Make Christmas Christian
A church woman gave her rector a check as a thank offering for her friends. What her gift accomplished is related by Bishop Hines. Rectors will want to mail this leaflet to parishioners.
$1 for 25; $1.50 for 50; $2 for 100
THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

PEOPLE

CLERGY CHANGES:

E. LAURENCE BAXTER, formerly on the staff of Calvary, Pittsburgh, Pa., becomes ass't at St. Mark's, Louisville, Ky., Jan. 15.

ALLAN WHATLEY, rector of St. Thomas Church, Newark, N. J., becomes rector of the Great Choptank parish, Cambridge, Md., Jan. 15.

J. WILLARD YODER, formerly director of religious education and youth work of the diocese of New York, is now on the staff of Trinity, New York.

WILFRED H. HODGKIN, formerly vicar of St. Peter's, Morro Bay, Cal., is now rector of St. Paul's, Walnut Creek, Cal.

EDWARD A. SICKLER, ass't at Christ Church, Shaker Heights, O., becomes rector of All Saints, Parma, O., Jan. 1.

G. PHILIP JUNG, formerly of Crystal Falls, Mich., is now vicar of St. John's, Sparta, Wis., and the mission at Black River Falls.

LOUIS L. PERKINS is ass't at St. Mary's, Ardmore, Pa., and not rector as previously reported. The Rev. Hadley B. Williams is rector.

PERCY R. STOCKMAN has retired as chaplain of the Seamen's Church Institute, Philadelphia.

DEATHS:

RICHARD C. JONES, 80, died in San Antonio on Nov. 28. The father of Bishop Jones, he directed the first community chest in the city; was president of Rotary for a term, and was a Presbyterian until 1938 when he was confirmed at St. Mark's where his son was then rector.

MRS. STEPHEN W. GREEN, formerly Ellen Miller, was killed in a car collision in Salina, Kan., Dec. 4. She and her husband, now chaplain at St. John's Military Academy, were missionaries in China for many years.

LAY WORKERS:

HARVEY E. BUCK, formerly lay ass't at St. John's Cathedral, Albuquerque, N. M., is now lay vicar of St. Andrew's, N. Grafton, Mass.

ORDINATIONS:

DALE L. VAN METER was ordained deacon December 1 by Bishop Lawrence at Christ Church, N. Brookfield, Mass., where he is vicar. He is also in charge of Christ Church, S. Barre.

Sudbury CHURCH WORSHIP AIDS
Have your dealer show you the wide variety of well made church appointments we produce
FOR COMPLETE CATALOG SEND TO
SUDBURY BRASS GOODS CO.
55 SUDBURY STREET, BOSTON 14, MASS.

ST. JAMES LESSONS
A nine course series of instruction for Episcopal Church Schools including illustrated work books—150-250 pages (60c each) and teachers' manuals I, II, III 40c each, IV through IX 60c each).
No Samples - Payment with orders
St. James Lessons, Inc.
865 Madison Ave., Dpt. 5, N. Y. 21, N. Y.

ASSISTANT WANTED
Large New York City parish, enthusiast in religious education; Liberal Evangelical; $3,600 and apartment. Give training, experience, age, family and references. Box L, The Witness, Tunkhannock, Pa.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
28 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE·BRASS·SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS
EST. 1877

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS
Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS
Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.
SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

THE BISHOP WHITE PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833
Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.
PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)
Apply The Rev. Allen Evans, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

JOHN M. KRUMM
Dean of St. Paul's, Los Angeles

In your article concerning the recent production in St. Paul's Cathedral of "If The Light Be Darkness" by the Altar Theatre, appearing in your issue of November 22nd, there is a mistake which, although slight, seems to make the formation of the Altar Theatre less significant than I think it really is. You say that the Altar Theatre was "organized by a group of clergymen." The fact is that the initiative came from a group of professional actors and other theater people who were anxious to put their gifts and talents to work in some significant way to help answer the problems of our times. Several local ministers have been consulted from time to time, but the significant thing to me is that the actors themselves have carried this project forward and are now ready to make a real contribution to the Church's ministry. Their hope is that the churches will recognize the ministry of speech art as being of equal importance with the ministry of music. I think you will hear more from this interesting group in the next few months.

LILLIAN ENGEL
Churchwoman of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Much has been said in favor of fund raising for churches and charitable purposes by the selling of "shares." The House of Bishops of the Episcopal Church has passed a resolution against the selling of shares and called it by the proper name—"A gambling project." The selling of shares or chances to raise money for charitable purposes has behind it a good motive. Yet if we wish to be fair minded can we question the "motive" of others who engage in gambling to get quick results. Jesus said "It is more blessed to give than to receive." We must give to help others without any pressure. The fun of giving is the spirit with which we give, no matter how small the gift. Let us give generously and wholeheartedly this Christmas season.

LOUIS M. COOLEY
Layman of Hartford, Conn.

The coming Christmas season recalls the words, "Peace on earth, goodwill to men." It seems as though there is a greater need than ever before to put this slogan into effect. With the Korean War in its second year and with increasing ill feeling between nations, one can almost confess that peace and goodwill are far from realization. Should not the Church of Christ take its stand against war and international hatred? If Jesus Christ were on earth today I believe he would lead in a powerful peace crusade.

How to achieve peace presents a difficult problem. President Truman himself appears unwilling to take the first step. Munition makers dread the cancellation of juicy war contracts. The Roman Catholic Church sees before it the possibility of taking over the religious life of Russia from the Orthodox Church. Military men always oppose peace as it removes many of their prerogatives and opportunities for advancement. Against all these vested interests is the voice of humanity and international brotherhood. Would that this voice would motivate and inspire our Churches so that they would take the lead in seeking world peace.

JAMES S. GOOD
Layman of Philadelphia

I think the Adventures of Mr. Entwhistle (Dec. 6) about the cleverest thing I have read in many a year. Tom Barrett certainly has a great knack for showing up our human weaknesses and failings and doing it without hurting feelings. It is fine satire and I wish that these pieces might go into a book.
ANSWER: We will be glad to hear from others about this—a card to The Witness, Tunkhannock, Pa.

JOHN M. BOWLES
Layman of New York

In these days of hysteria it was great to be able to read such a calm and well reasoned article as the one by Dr. Foust in your November 15th number. He wrote with rare insight of events and movements which he had obviously studied at first hand. I hope that we may have still other articles by him.

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin
Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth New Hampshire

FORK UNION
MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE-MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Christmas Gifts

Witness subscribers can make gifts that last throughout the year and at the same time extend the influence of the magazine by using the form below. We will greatly appreciate your cooperation. A gift to a friend is a gift to The Witness.—The Editors.

I am sending you The Witness for a year, which I hope you will enjoy as much as I do.

(Your name will go here on the Christmas card)

SEND YOUR LIST

We will enter their subscriptions to start with the Christmas number, sending the card pictured above announcing the gift as coming from you. Merely send names and addresses with check and we will do the rest.

THE SUBSCRIPTION PRICE IS $4

Please send The Witness for one year to the following, together with the Christmas card:

Name .....
Street .....
City .....
Zone ..... State .....

Name .....
Street .....
City .....
Zone ..... State .....

Name .....
Street .....
City .....
Zone ..... State .....

Name .....
Street .....
City .....
Zone ..... State .....

TYPE OR PRINT ADDITIONAL NAMES ON A SEPARATE SHEET

The WITNESS

TUNKHANNOCK PENNSYLVANIA

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

The WITNESS

10¢ A COPY

December 27, 1951

ST. STEPHEN'S, MINNEAPOLIS

The Miracle Church of the Northwest

Christmas Meditation by Modern Man

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK CITY
Sundays: 8, 9, 11, Holy Communion; 10, Morning Prayer; 4, Evening Prayer; Sermons, 11 and 4
Weekdays: 7:30, 8 (and 9 Holy Days except Wed. and 10 Wed.) Holy Communion; 8:30, Morning Prayer; 5, Evening Prayer.
Open daily 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

GRACE CHURCH, NEW YORK
Broadway at 10th St.
Rev. Louis W. Pitt, D.D., Rector
Sundays: 9 H. Comm.; 11 Sermon.
Weekdays: Tues - Thurs., Prayers — 12:30. Thurs., and Holy Days, H.C. — 11:45 Fri., Organ Recital — 12:30.

THE REAVENLY REST, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 90th Street
Rev. John Ellis Large, D.D.
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8 and 10:10 a.m.; Morning Service and Sermon, 11 a.m. Thursdays and Holy Days: Holy Communion, 12 noon.
Wednesdays: Healing Service, 12 noon.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH
NEW YORK
Park Avenue and 51st Street
Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Rector
8 and 9:30 a. m. Holy Communion.
9:30 and 11 a. m. Church School.
11 a. m. Morning Service and Sermon.
4 p. m. Evensong. Special Music.
Weekday: Holy Communion Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.; Wednesdays and Saints Days at 8 a. m.; Thursdays at 12:10 p. m. Organ Recitals, Fridays, 12:10.
The Church is open daily for prayer.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH
Madison Ave. at 71st St., NEW YORK
Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, D.D., Rector
Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Service and Sermon; 4 p.m., Evening Service and Sermon.
Wednesday 7:45 a.m. and Thursday 12 noon, Holy Communion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH, NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street
Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S.T.D., Rector
Sundays: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer — 1st Sunday, Holy Communion.
Daily: 8:30 a.m., Holy Communion.
Thursday and Holy Days: 11 a.m., Holy Communion.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION
5th Ave. and 10th St., NEW YORK
Rev. Roscoe Thornton Foust, D.D., Rector
Sundays 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 8 p.m., Service of Music (1st Sunday in month).
Daily: Holy Communion, 8 a.m.
5:30 Vespers, Tuesday through Friday.
This Church is open all day and all night.

ST. MARY THE VIRGIN
46th Street, East of Times Square
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. Grieg Taber
Sunday Masses: 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 (High). Evensong and Benediction, 8.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY
316 East 88th Street
NEW YORK CITY
The Rev. James A. Paul, Rector
Sundays: Holy Communion, 8; Church School, 9:30; Morning Service, 11; Evening Prayer, 8.

PRO CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY TRINITY
PARIS, FRANCE
23, Avenue George V
Services: 8:30, 10:30 (S.S.), 10:45
Student and Artists Center
Boulevard Raspail
The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, Bishop
The Very Rev. Sturgis Lee Riddle, Dean
"A Church for All Americans"

The WITNESS
For Christ and His Church

EDITORIAL BOARD

Roscoe T. Foust, Editor; William B. Spofford, Managing Editor; Alger L. Adams, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, James A. Mitchell, Paul Moore Jr., Joseph H. Titus.

★

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS: Frederick C. Grant, Book Editor; F. O. Ayres Jr., L. W. Barton, D. H. Brown Jr., Angus Dun, R. S. M. Emrich, T. P. Ferris, J. F. Fletcher, John Gass, C. K. Gilbert, C. L. Glenn, G. I. Hiller, A. C. Lichtenberger, C. S. Martin, R. C. Miller, E. L. Parsons, J. A. Paul, Rose Phelps, Paul Roberts, V. D. Scudder, W. M. Sharp, W. B. Sperry, M. H. Shepherd Jr., W. B. Spofford Jr., C. W. Sprouse, J. W. Suter, S. E. Sweet, S. A. Temple, H. H. Waggoner, Chad Walsh, W. M. Weber, W. N. Welsh.

★

THE WITNESS is published weekly from September 15th to June 15th inclusive, with the exception of the first week in January and semi-monthly from June 15th to September 15th by the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. on behalf of the Witness Advisory Board, Bishop Lane W. Barton, Chairman.

★

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; in bundles for sale in parishes the magazine sells for 10c a copy, we will bill quarterly at 7c a copy. Entered as Second Class Matter, August 5, 1948, at the Post Office at Tunkhannock, Pa., under the act of March 3, 1879.

★

POSTMASTER: Please send notices on Form 3578 and copies returned under labels Form 3579 to THE WITNESS, Tunkhannock, Pa.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH
Lafayette Square, WASHINGTON, D. C.
The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn
The Rev. Frank R. Wilson
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 a.m., 4:00 and 7:30 p.m.; Mon., Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 12; Wed., Fri., 7:30; Holy Days, 7:30 and 12.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
Shelton Square
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
The Very Rev. Philip F. McNairy, Dean;
Rev. Leslie D. Hallett;
Rev. Mitchell Haddad
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11.
Daily: Holy Communion at 12:05 noon. Also, 7:30 Tuesdays; 11 Wednesdays.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
Tenth Street, above Chestnut
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.
The Rev. Alfred W. Price, D.D., Rector
The Rev. Gustav C. Meckling, B.D.,
Minister to the Hard of Hearing
H. Alexander Matthews, Mus. D., Organist
Sunday: 9 and 11 a.m., 7:30 p.m.
Weekdays: Tues., Wed., Thurs., Friday, 12:30 - 12:55 p.m.
Services of Spiritual Healing, Thursdays, 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.
Two hundred hearing aids available for every service.

ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL
DENVER, COLORADO
Very Rev. Paul Roberts, Dean
Rev. Harry Watts, Canon
Sunday: 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 11 — 4:30 p.m. recitals.
Weekdays Holy Communion, Wednesday, 7:15; Thursday, 10:30.
Holy Days: Holy Communion at 10:30.

SERVICES
In Leading Churches

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
Main & Church Sts., HARTFORD, CONN.
Sunday: 8 and 10:10 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30, Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 8 p.m., Evening Prayer.
Weekdays: Holy Communion, Mon. 12 noon; Tues., Fri. and Sat., 8; Wed., 11; Thurs., 9; Wed. Noonday Service, 12:15.

CHRIST CHURCH
CAMBRIDGE
Rev. Gardiner M. Day, Rector
Rev. Frederic B. Kellogg, Chaplain
Sunday Services: 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m.
Weekdays: Wednesday, 8 and 11 a.m. Thursday, 7:30 a.m.

TRINITY CHURCH
MIAMI
Rev. G. Irvine Hiller, S.T.D., Rector
Sunday Services: 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

CHRIST CHURCH
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
Monument Circle, Downtown
Rev. John P. Craine, Rector
Rev. F. P. Williams
Rev. W. E. Weldon
Sun.: H. C. 8, 12:15; 11, 1st S. Family 9:30; M. P. and Ser. 11.
Weekdays: H.C. daily 8 ex Wed. & Fri. 7; H.D. 12:05. Noonday Prayers 12:05
Office Hours daily by appointment

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Very Rev. John S. Willey, Dean
Sunday: H.C. 8, 11 first S.; Church School, 10:50; M.P. 11
Weekday: Thurs. 10. Other services as announced.
Office Hours, Mon. thru Fri. 9-5

TRINITY CHURCH
Broad & Third Streets
COLUMBUS, OHIO
Rev. Robert W. Fay, D.D.
Rev. Timothy Pickering, B.D., Assistant
Sun. 8 HC; 11 MP; 1st Sun. HC; Fri. 12N HC; Evening, Weekday, Lenten Noon-Day, Special services as announced.

CHRIST CHURCH
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE
Rev. Payton Randolph Williams
7:30 a.m., Holy Communion; 9:30 and 11 a.m., Church School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Sermon; 6 p.m., Young People's Meetings.
Thursdays and Saints' Days: Holy Communion, 10 a.m.

CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
The Rev. J. Francis Sant, Rector
The Rev. William M. Baxter
Minister of Education
Sunday: 8:00, 9:25, 11 a.m.—High School, 5:45 p.m.; Canterbury Club, 6:30 p.m.

CHRIST CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA
"The Nation's Church"
Second Street above Market
Rev. E. A. de Bordenave, Rector
Rev. William Eckman, Assistant
Sunday Services 9:30 and 11:00.
This church is open daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
Shady and Walnut Aves.
PITTSBURGH
Rev. Eugene M. Chapman,
Rev. E. Laurence Baxter
Sunday: 8, 9:30, 11 & 4:30.
HC: Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat., 7:15.
Wed., Fri., 7:15 & 10:30.

TRINITY CHURCH
Newport, Rhode Island
FOUNDED IN 1698
Rev. James R. MacColl, 3rd, Rector
Rev. Peter Chase, Curate
Sunday: 8 H.C.; 11 M.P.
Wed. & Holy Days, H.C. 11

VOL. XXXIV, No. 44 The WITNESS DECEMBER 27, 1951
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH
PUBLICATION OFFICE, TUNKHANNOCK, PENNSYLVANIA EDITORIAL OFFICE, 12 WEST 11th STREET, NEW YORK 11, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

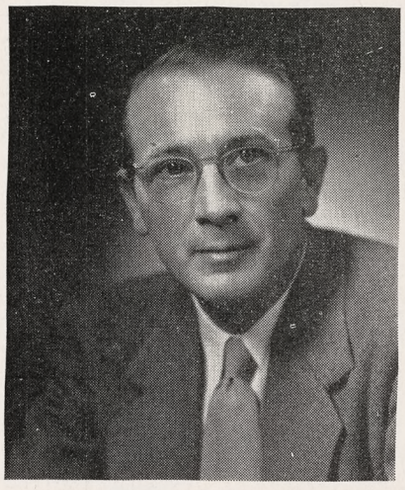
STORY OF THE WEEK

St. Stephen's in Minneapolis Dedicates Parish House

The Remarkable Growth of Suburban Parish Called Miracle By Bishop Keeler

★ "The age of miracles is not past," said Bishop Stephen E. Keeler in dedicating the new parish house at the Church of St. Stephen the Martyr, Edina, Minneapolis. The dedication was held December 13th.

"There were complaints when St. Stephen's was established that we were building too far out of town. No doubt, it was difficult for many to see that the big hole in the ground in this community could ever become in so short a time a thriving and outstanding parish." The Bishop pointed out in his dedicatory address something of the miraculous growth of the parish. "It began as a mission, but retained its mission status only four months during 1937. It quickly became a self-supporting parish, and now is one of the large and influential parishes of the diocese, maintaining a communicant strength of 1200, requiring double services to accommodate the congregation, and operating the largest church school of the diocese—indeed, one of the 15 largest in the Protestant Episcopal Church."



The Rev. Bernard W. Hummel, rector of St. Stephen's was paid warm personal tribute for his leadership in the parish, in which he is completing his 10th year as rector next February.

The dedicatory service was in two settings — begun in the church, and ended in the new parish house. The choir sang Handel's "Hallelujah, Amen." After evening prayers, Bishop Keeler addressed the congregation briefly, underlining the parish's concern for children and young people as being the basically sound approach for successful and growing parishes.

After the Te Deum was sung, the entire congregation joined the choir in the recessional, singing "The Church's One Foundation" and continuing through the cloister into the new $200,000 educational building. There the Bishop led the act of dedication first for the new building, and then for the L. J. Ludwig memorial library room. After the blessing, an informal inspection of the building was made. Teachers were in the rooms, and members of the parish-sponsored scout troop assisted. Members of the Woman's Auxiliary board served refreshments.

Two additional open houses were held: On Friday afternoon, an open house for children and their friends was held. On Sunday, December 16, an open house was arranged so that the large number of people who pass the church on Sunday afternoon drives might have opportunity to visit the building. The church is located in a picturesque woodland setting, and Minnehaha Creek flows through the property combining for one of the most beautiful settings for a church. The surrounding suburban area is filled with lovely homes, and great numbers of people normally drive past the church on Sundays.

The new parish house at St. Stephen's is a real answer to pressing parish and community needs. Those at the dedication service saw a building with gray stone exterior joined by a graceful cloister to the church proper. The lot on which the church is situated is a lengthy one adjacent to beautiful Minnehaha Creek, and the danger of a monotonous long structure was carefully avoided by the architects by breaking the lines of the building with bays of varying dimensions. The interior

BERNARD W. HUMMEL
The Rector of St. Stephen's halls, rooms, offices, and library were done in bright cheerful colors, and abundant fluorescent lighting guarantees comfortable vision at all hours. Acoustical ceilings diminish the noise problem. Instead of class-room tables, work shelves are installed along the walls, giving more space, and flexibility of use for the class rooms.

Fustes' With the Mostes'

St. Stephen's Church is a tribute to missionary interest. The residential suburb in which it is located on the southwest side of the city has grown rapidly in the last decade. In 1937 the department of missions, encouraged by Bishop Keeler, undertook the establishment of a new mission in the section, in which no church had been established.

The judgment of the diocesan leaders was confirmed by the increasingly rapid growth of the community. It was one of the rare instances when the Episcopal Church arrived "fustes' with the mostes'." The Rev. Elliott Darr Marston came as priest in charge of the new mission, and initial services were undertaken, with a Sunday school, in the Edina elementary school.

By 1939 a building had been constructed on a fine corner plot, adjacent to Minnehaha Creek. The expansion of the community gave the parish a wonderful opportunity to serve the newcomers, as business and industrial people began to establish homes in Edina.

The Rev. Mr. Marston, who was later a victim of polio in 1946, was succeeded in 1942 by the present rector, the Rev. Bernard W. Hummel. The building itself which under most circumstances would have been adequate, began to bulge at the seams. Community organizations began to develop, and to call upon St. Stephen's for housing. A fine relationship was thus developed, and the parish became distinctively the center of much of the community life. The space problem increasingly became acute, and by 1949 plans were under way to meet the need by constructing a new educational plant. A financial campaign brought in funds for what was seemingly an adequate building.

Then the blows began to fall —the blows of inflation. First some rooms were knocked off, and then the roof was knocked off. The plans for expansion had included a lengthening of the nave, as well as an educational plant. Now with the decreased purchasing power of the dollar, the whole program had to be reviewed. The decision finally was reached to defer the expansion of the nave until later, and to adopt the basic floor plans which provided two floors with eleven large class rooms, three offices, and a library as well as utility rooms. The pitched roof was omitted, and the present flat roof building is so designed that the extra floor can be added later. The present plant, which was begun in February of this year, cost slightly over $200,000.

The Building Meets A Need

A casual visitor to this suburban parish will be amazed at the activity which goes on. Over 100 monthly meetings, besides Sunday services and educational and parish youth activities, are held in the church. Prior to the construction of the new building the simple mechanics of "setting up" and "taking down" kept the custodians under constant pressure.

A listing of organizations regularly using the church would include in addition to the Auxiliary, the four choirs of the church, the vestry, the University of Life, Church school, and the young adults barn dance group, the following community organizations: Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Brownies, Blue Birds, Edina Woman's Club, Cub Pack, District Scout Leaders, Neighborhood Scout Leaders, Weekday Bible Classes (18 classes of released-time teaching), Edina-Morningside Lions Club. There are many additional unscheduled meetings of groups and commit-

ST. STEPHEN'S has one of the finest Church Schools in the country. Pictured here are some of the five-year youngsters in their classroom

(Continued on page 13)

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

CANON WEST BACKS BILL OF RIGHTS

★ Canon Edward N. West of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, told a congregation at St. Paul's, Eastchester, that American liberty will endure only if Americans preserve the right of every citizen to express his ideas, no matter how unpopular they may be. The occasion was the celebration of the 160th anniversary of the ratification of the Bill of Rights.

Canon West declared: "As a religious man, I must put up with an irreligious neighbor and, if necessary, defend his right to be that way. As one concerned with my own freedom of speech, I've got to be prepared to extend the same freedom to people of whose speeches I disapprove violently . . . As a man with strong political views I must defend the right of my opponents to get together and incorporate in resolutions statements of policy which are, from my point of view, to the worst interest of the country."

He described the duty of respecting others' rights to freedom of speech as "an annoying and often very burdensome price to pay for my citizenship. But without it I cannot be an American and, frankly, from my point of view and that of all my kind, without it I can never hope to be a Christian."

John O'Connor, president of the American Book Publishers Council, said we can give other peoples a "convincing example" of freedom, not merely by "lip-service to freedom as an ideal," but by "the actual practice of freedom in our own lives and activities." He declared, "We can escape the taint of smugness and self-complacency only as we practice within our own borders what we preach abroad."

CHURCHES IN EUROPE HAVE CONVOCATION

★ The convocation of the American Churches in Europe was held at St. Paul's, Rome, December 5, with Bishop Larned presiding. Among those attending were Dean and Mrs. Sturgis Riddle of Paris; Buel Weare, president of the Paris Herald Tribune; the Rev. and Mrs. Henry Sortorio of Nice; the Rev. and Mrs. Thomas Cox of Geneva; the Rev. Victor Stanley and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Morrill of Florence; and chaplains M. B. Courage, Webster Horstman and Fletcher Wood.

Dean Riddle was elected clerical deputy to the 1952 General Convention and Mr. Morrill as lay deputy—thus the first two deputies to be elected.

A highlight of the convocation was a party given at the U. S. embassy by Ambassador and Mrs. James Dunn.

DEAN KRUMM GIVES ADVENT TALKS

★ Men and women of downtown Los Angeles, crowded St. Columba's chapel of St. Paul's Cathedral, for a series of three noonday Advent talks by Dean John M. Krumm and the Rev. George W. Barrett, rector of St. James. They were presented as dialogues in theology. Their subjects were "death," "judgment," "heaven and hell."

HERE'S AN IDEA THAT WORKED

★ St. John's, Olney, Md., diocese of Washington, financed part of its building fund for a parish house by loans from parishioners at a low rate of interest. Each year part of these loans have been donated by holders of the notes toward the annual canvass, a painless way for them to contribute and an advantageous result for the parish which has now reduced an indebtedness of $23,000 to $5,000 through this and other means.

RURAL CHURCH STUDY IS LAUNCHED

★ The Rev. Norman Foote, director of the Town and Country Institute, Roanridge, Parksville, Mo., is on the advisory committee for an extensive 4-year scientific study of the rural church as a social institution. The study is financed by a $51,000 grant from the Rockefeller Foundation and will be conducted by the University of Missouri which will limit the study to that state. Prof. Lawrence M. Hepple of the department of rural sociology is to be the active head of operations.

SAN BENITO CHURCH CELEBRATES

★ The Advent, San Benito, Texas, with the longest continuous history in the diocese of West Texas, is celebrating its centenary. Founded fifty years before the railroad reached the community, it was the "only Episcopal Church between the western shores of the Gulf of Mexico and the Gulf of California," declared the Rev. R. O. MacKintosh, rector emeritus, in the centennial sermon. Bishop Jones attended the service along with several former rectors and the rectors of neighboring parishes.

The membership is now more than 700 persons as compared with the group of 60—only seven of them communicants—who petitioned the diocesan convention in 1851 for the establishment of the church.

BISHOP TUCKER TO RETIRE

★ The resignation of Bishop Beverley D. Tucker as diocesan of Ohio becomes effective on his birthday, February 4th. He has been bishop of the diocese since 1938.

MEN GET DINNER AT BAZAAR

★ Grace Mission, Orange Park, Florida, recently had a bazaar for the benefit of the building fund of the new parish house. The feature was a barbecue dinner prepared and served by the eighteen men who belong to the church. They served 235 persons. The Rev. William Way, rector-emeritus of Grace Church, Charleston, S. C., is temporary minister there.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EDITORIALS

Fallacious Argument

THE recurrent discussion of the use of atomic weapons in warfare often becomes unrealistic. Definitely so is the frequently offered excuse, typically set forth in a newspaper editorial, that "since war itself is immoral, the question of the morality of any particular weapon is not pertinent." That is a dangerous argument on several counts. It assumes there are no graduations of evil and so permits its advocates to justify any form of horror. The editorial continues its fallacious argument, holding that because war "is the way of barbarism, we must of necessity use the instrumentalities to which barbarians are accustomed." We are witnessing, in this country, too much of this sort of rationalization; the use of totalitarian methods by our own government in striving to meet the threat of Communism.

It is true, as Bernard Shaw remarked, that the only gentleman to come out of the last war was Jesus Christ. But does that justify any possible means of slaughter? If we are to use the way of barbarians, why stop at atomic weapons? Why not torture and put to death all the prisoners we take? It would be silly, if the advocates of schrekliekeit are right to shrink from that.

And to state that atomic weapons will be used only for "tactical" purposes is to us fantastic. Who is to determine what tactical purposes are? The British general who, in the first world war, stated, "When I joined the army I left my Christianity behind" was doubtless honest. But there is a vast difference between not being a Christian and being a brute without human decency or principle of any sort.

There is only one answer; the outlawing of the manufacture and use of atomic weapons—not to mention other weapons. And "outlawing" inevitably necessitates the creation of an international authority that can enforce law—or it is meaningless. This is the UN's purpose—unfortunately not too successful to date.

"Quotes"

OUR belief in immortality rests on the very integrity of the universe itself, but Christ enhances our belief in the fidelity of this world's government. In his view, this is our Father's world, a world that clothes the grass of the field, and feeds the fowl of the air, a world wherein earthly fathers give good things to their children, and our heavenly Father gives even so much better things to those who love him. As we catch the spirit of Christ's integrity, we feel convinced that we can trust him when he says about this hope of life beyond: "If it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you." We add the conviction of Christ's integrity to our belief in the world's integrity.

—RALPH W. SOCKMAN

Name Was Enough

THE recent death of Mary Kingsbury Simkhovitch, great Christian social worker, head of Greenwich House for 44 years, devout Episcopalian, brings to mind an incident in 1936 which demonstrates that "McCarthyism" is not a new phenomenon in American life. In the election that year The Witness was running a series of studies of the Presidential candidates, each by a notable religious leader and each entitled "Why, as a Christian, I shall vote for ————."

It so happened that the article on Roosevelt was written by Mrs. Simkhovitch. It happened also that a bundle of these magazines rested on a table in the vestibule of a certain Episcopal Church in a conservative community on the Sunday that a big industrialist chose to come to church. He was a man of great power, for his company had many mills in New England and the South, so that the welfare of thousands of working people rested on his decisions; but he was not what one might call an educated man and his prejudices ran deep. Among them was an aversion to anything Russian. So the name "Simkhovitch" was enough. Immediately he saw "red" and all that week he stewed and blustered. "The rector has gone Communist. Now he is putting articles on that man Roosevelt in the church vestibule written by a Russian commie. What is this Episcopal Church coming to?"

Who can measure the harm done by such irresponsible ignorance on the part of powerful men? And how can it be met? Many respectable influential citizens must have believed that story and that rector was suspect to them from that time onward. McCarthy has sowed his evil seed in a soil well prepared by his predecessors. Perhaps that explains why he and his breed have thrived in our current age of hysteria. We need more Christians like Mary Simkhovitch to counteract that hysteria.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

New Editors

WE are happy to announce the election of two additions to the Witness editorial board, the Rev. James A. Mitchell, the rector of St. Paul's, Englewood, N. J., and the Rev. Paul Moore Jr., who is one of the clergy carrying on the interesting inter-racial work at Grace Church, a depressed area of Jersey City.

The board, which meeting fortnightly at the Ascension, New York, now consists of Roscoe T. Foust, editor; William B. Spofford, managing editor; Alger L. Adams, Kenneth R. Forbes, Gordon C. Graham, George M. MacMurray, Benjamin Minifie, James A. Mitchell, Paul Moore Jr., Joseph M. Titus.

Our three regular columnists meet with the editors whenever it is possible for them to do so; Massey H. Shepherd Jr., who writes Living Liturgy; Clinton J. Kew, whose column on Religion and the Mind is growing in popularity with each number, and the creator of Mr. Entwhistle, Thomas V. Barrett.

Meditation At Christmastide By Modern Man

BY

THOMAS V. BARRETT
Rector, R. E. Lee Memorial Church, Lexington, Va.

(Is the farm still there by the quiet river,
And the little road snaking thro the hills
Where the school bus winding home
In the autumn sun surprises the crow,
And the lovers quiet in the lane?)

"Do I want my drink freshened? Of course I do.
Why not? I'll have another one.
But make it light, I'm driving home tonight."

(What makes me think I'm driving home?
Freshen the drink and make it strong;
Freshen the long drink with a jigger of tears
And the dark bitters of a lost world.
Home is a bend in the little road, Home is an hour
Between the sun-red barn and dusk cooled town.

Is the farm still there by the quiet river,
Locked in the orange arm of the hill
Like a tired child come home?)

"Thanks for the drink, it hits the spot.
Yes, I'll be there at ten tomorrow
We'll try to get that matter straightened out;
I realize how important the matter is."

(What can the matter be that's so important?
No matter is of any great importance.
Is the farm still there by the quiet river?

Is the tree still there in the winter night
Standing in the sour-dark earth—
Waiting in a green tranquility
For death in the living room?
Dying, dying in a burst of light,
Dying in a shower of ruby and silver
As love lives under the gothic boughs
And child laughter is a chain of bells
Ringing the joy of the evergreen time
That was the eternal moment
Holding the sadness and the love forever,
Spoken and unspoken
Known and unknown).

"Good evening Mrs. Lee," of the First Families of Virginia . . . "I think so too
We all should be more kindly."

(Is the hope still there in a lost world
And any joy there in the lost soul of man
In the frightened world?
How kindly should we be
In the despairing hopeless earth where
The lost farm trembles
On the edge of the deep river
And the lost tree is uprooted in the frozen ground
And dies in a night of no light
Where the ruby silver cascades no more
Down the dying green of the love tree.
Where the ruby is a stream of blood
On the wintered hills
And the silver a sea of spears

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Rising against the world out of the Fear of the loveless hopeless man
With no farm by the quiet river
No eternal green of the hope tree,
In the sad heart broken by the ancient sins
And the unmoveable grief.)

"How kindly should we be Mrs. Lee,
In the embittered world. Before
I finish this last drink; I'm driving home
Tonight."

(If I can find a home in a world with a lost
River and a lost tree, and a lost farm
In the hill's arm.
Do you include the communist
Your new scapegoat for the old sins,
The bogey-man of your half-neglected
Dreams. Do you include the brown black
Man with no river farm, no life tree
In a world frozen to the marrow of the heart?
How kindly pitiful Mrs. Lee
To the wretched scars of men
From Misery Mountain from
The cold stink of the creaking stairs
In the Cities of Convulsion?
We mustn't be too kindly must we
For decorum's sake, and the sake of Good Church people running a hundred bazaars
Going to a thousand meetings
Drinking ten thousand cocktails to forget
A lost world and a broken heart.

O Lord Christ Jesus
Of the river home place
And the green love tree
You too are lost in a lost world
With only the common blood
Under the terrible snows
And the heart broken with the unmoveable grief.

O Lord Christ, hear and save,
Have mercy. Come gather in
The fragments of the broken ruby
And the shattered silver. Find us
The lost river farm, and the Tree dying in a splendor of light
And the eternal moment
Of love and sadness spoken and unspoken,
Known and unknown.
Where the child laughter like bells
Rings the everlastingness of love
Human or otherwise.
By which once more the lost
Forgotten world will turn,
Turn, turn to the lost stable
And the gothic tree, turn
To the everlasting love
And the everlasting Light.)

Sociology in Bethlehem?

BY
JAMES A. MITCHELL
Rector of St. Paul's, Englewood, N. J.

"WHAT is God like?" This is a question which a child might ask, but it is also a question for which mature men have sought an answer since mankind first began to think. And the answers have been manifold, speculative, imaginative.

But when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, there was given the Christian answer—not in the form of speculation or philosophy, but in terms of human life: God is like Jesus Christ. "And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us and we beheld his glory, glory as of the only begotten from the Father, full of grace and truth."

But to the inquiring mind a further question immediately suggests itself: "What about the religion of this God-Man? If he came to show forth God-in-life, would not his life from the very start give visible expression to what constitutes true religion?"

That is a very stimulating and suggestive question. Here was a test. If this God-Man was to show forth what constituted true religion, then one need only look at that life and see religion in action. Let us consider then, from this angle, the events which tradition has clustered about the birth and early days of the baby Jesus. It should be very revealing.

Jesus and The Family

WE note immediately that Jesus was born into a family—not into a monastery, a temple, or a school. This has become such a commonplace fact that we easily overlook its significance. The holy family, glorified by art, is the prototype of the Christian family.

Evidently, therefore, religion is deeply concerned with the family as a primary unit of civilization. Evidently religion is to be nurtured in family life. Christianity is not Christianity unless it is carried into the home. And all the little happenings of everyday life, and all the deep and twisted problems of souls interacting in family relationships, and all the abiding joys that are born of love and sacrifice—all these things, have to do with religion—at least with the kind of religion Jesus brought.

Jesus and Politics

WE note secondly that there was a queer circumstance about the birth of Jesus. He was not born at his home in Nazareth; yet women do not travel seventy-five miles on foot and donkey in Mary's condition unless forced to do so. Joseph and Mary travelled to Bethlehem because a foreign emperor, whose soldiers had conquered their land, decreed that all his subjects must pay a tax. It was a tax journey which brought about the birth of Jesus in Bethlehem! Before he was even born, the life of the God-Man became involved with government and taxes!

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

And hardly was he born before the king of his own land, really an outlander whom the Romans permitted to rule, became alarmed by certain portents and sought the child that he might put him to death. Jesus became a political exile, a refugee, while a babe in arms!

Years later, when Jesus had attained a reputation as a prophet in Palestine, the son of that Herod, being a very curious and superstitious man, sent a messenger to him, and Jesus sent the messenger back with the words: "Go and tell that fox . . ."

All of this may seem very strange for the life of a God-Man, but these are the facts. Evidently religion is deeply involved somehow in politics and government.

Jesus and the Intellectual Life

A third strange tale connected with the birth of Jesus has still other implications—the story of the wise men. These men were not Jews; they were of other lands. They were not interested in politics or government as such. No, these men were the intellectuals, the scholars. Today we would call them "college professors" or "research men." They were learned men who spent their lives studying the stars and the universe. But they came from afar, and brought gifts, and knelt at the foot of the Christ-Child. Evidently the intellectual life was concerned somehow with religion; not merely the emotions were involved, but the mind.

Jesus and The People

THERE are other interesting sidelights which might be pointed out. Joseph and Mary were poor. If they had been rich, they would not have had to resort to the stable, even though the inn was full. Money can work wonders in the Orient. We know they were poor also, because instead of offering a lamb for sacrifice when the baby Jesus was presented in the temple, Joseph and Mary offered instead a pair of turtle-doves.

The God-Man was born among the poor—not in a palace, not in a home of luxury. No, his lot was cast with the masses of the people—and thus could he understand them, and thus could they understand him. From birth he took part in the basic economic struggle for food and shelter and clothing.

This same theme is borne out in the story of the shepherds, for in a pastoral land the shepherds are the working class, the peasants. And the message of the birth of the God-Man came first not to rulers, or to ecclesiastics, but to shepherds as they worked tending sheep. Then they came and stood in awe at the stable.

Dim light; donkeys and dogs; a manger-crib; peasant-parents—and the little Son of God!

"He came down to earth from heaven,
Who is God and Lord of all,
And his shelter was a stable,
And his cradle was a stall;
With the poor and mean and lowly,
Lived on earth our Saviour holy."

Jesus and Economic Life

YES, Jesus knew poverty and he knew hard work. We can be sure he knew the value of money. And when his religion got him into trouble with worldly men, it was in the economic realm that the trouble came. As has been pointed out, Jesus was not put to death for saying: "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow," but for daring to say: "Consider the thieves in the temple, how they steal."

Obviously the religion of Jesus was very deeply concerned with social and economic problems.

The Significance of All This

IT would seem that this is a good time for us to take this lesson to heart. At Christmastide, when our hearts are warm with the beautiful, sentimental story of the birth of the God-Man who founded our religion, it is well for us to remember that that religion is concerned with every aspect of life.

It would be mighty pleasant in many ways if we could keep our religious life a nice, quiet, emotional thing; if it consisted of moving hymns, quiet prayers, stained glass windows, lovely fellowship with congenial frieends. But when we consider Jesus and his life on earth, religion cannot be thus defined and limited.

"Where cross the crowded ways of life,
Where sound the cries of race and clan,
Above the noise of selfish strife,
We hear thy voice, O Son of Man."

Recent Reactions

YET, in recent years, whenever the Church or the clergy have had the temerity to make any pronouncement, or take any action, which applied religion in the economic and social realm—in the realm where people live—the cry has gone up: "Stick to your knitting; preach the pure gospel and leave these matters to the politicians and economists and industrialists."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

It was just as true in our Lord's own day. As we sing in a Christmas hymn:

> "Thou camest, O Lord, with the living word,
> That should set thy people free;
> But with mocking scorn, and with crown of thorn,
> They bore thee to Calvary."

The truth of the matter is that "the gospel" is not only a soothing message which brings comfort to the suffering, solace to those who mourn, temporary respite from a troubled and restless civilization into the certainty and peace of the eternal;—but also it is a challenge to the conscience, an incentive to social justice, a never-ceasing emphasis upon righteousness and duty and discipline. Every minister of Christ bears upon his conscience the burden of the full message of the gospel—not only the pleasant, pious things which every congregation likes to hear—but also the "hard sayings" which often seem very unnecessary and are most unwelcome.

In the new year ahead this question will arise again and again, because the problems that face America are not only theological and moral, but social, industrial, and economic—and they are problems which will try men's souls. Inevitably religion will be involved. It may be the deciding factor in the survival of civilization.

Christian Personality

BY

PHILIP M. McNAIRY

Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Buffalo

MODERN advertising delights in confronting the reader with two photographs, presumably of two different persons, but bearing a striking resemblance. The usual caption is, "Which is the real John Doe?" What would be a difficult identification as we look at a picture might be greatly simplified if we knew the individuals personally. Both might be dressed like American gentlemen, but one, upon acquaintance, might reveal that his claim to refinement goes no deeper than his wearing apparel or his haircut. The same method might well be applied to a study of Christian character with somewhat the same results. Two individuals attend the same church, belong to the same organizations, work in the same office or factory, have diplomas from the same school; but their attitude toward life, their standards of values, their habits of behavior are in startling contrast. Yet both are known as American Christians. To one unfamiliar with Christianity this ambiguity would be confusing, if not discouraging. "Christian" must have some other deeper connotation. There must be some way to distinguish an "acting" Christian from an "active" Christian. There is.

Paul, in his letter to the Christians in Ephesus, has given instructions for behavior which would make it easy to distinguish the real Christian. He says, "Be filled with the spirit . . . singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord; giving thanks always for all things unto God . . ." These are obviously not instructions which can be put on as one would wear a garment. They must be imbedded deep in the personality before they will emerge as consistent behavior. They are the Christ-like ingredients which will ultimately fashion a Christian personality.

Some will ask, "How can one sing when his heart is heavy? How can one be truly and sincerely radiant in the midst of discouragement and misfortune? Why should one give thanks for misery or poverty or tragedy?" These are valid questions. What they do not reflect is the cause of most such conditions. Many of them are brought about because a man has centered so much in himself that he becomes his own worst enemy. Frequently what appears to be tragedy, and what causes misery and suffering is a faulty perspective. It is this which real Christianity has to offer—which can turn our night into day and our sadness into joy and our ingratitude into thanksgiving—a new perspective, a new center of interest, a new resourcefulness for dealing with life's situations, a new means of turning our defeats into victories. The word of instruction to Ephesus suggests the key. "Be filled with the spirit." This is what the Church enables us to do—not by pew-sitting, not by sermon sampling, but by providing the time and the place (we must supply the will) to be emptied of all that hinders us, that we may be filled with the grace of God.

The real ingredients of Christian personality are not of our design or construction. They are of God. All he asks us to do is to make room in our hearts that he may plant. When this has been accomplished, there is no question as to "which is the real John Doe. For by their fruits ye shall know them."

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEWS

EPISCOPALIAN HEADS BAR ASSOCIATION

★ Howard L. Barkdull of Cleveland, Ohio, is the new president of the American Bas Association. He is a vestryman of the Ascension, Lakewood, Ohio.

HISTORICAL TREASURES IN AKRON CHURCH

★ St. Paul's Church, Akron, a new building costing a million dollars, will contain two historic items of significance. One is a block of stone from Canterbury cathedral and the other a brick from the foundation of the famous church at Jamestown, Va.

The stone from Canterbury is from an old section of the cathedral. It had become dislodged as a result of damage suffered from German bombing in world war two. The stone was given by the Archdeacon of Canterbury, Alexander Sargent. Accompanying it is a letter from the archdeacon to the rector of St. Paul's, the Rev. Walter F. Tunks, with these greetings: "From across the sea we of Canterbury send greetings, best wishes, and blessings to you of St. Paul's, and may this stone from the mother Church help in the building of a mighty cathedral to God in Akron."

The brick from Jamestown was given by Mrs. William Hunt of Brecksville. The late Mr. Hunt was a longtime friend of Tunks. He was a collector of ceramics, and had gathered many stones and bricks from historic buildings in many parts of the world. The first Anglican Church worship service to be held on American soil took place at Jamestown in 1607.

The Canterbury stone and Jamestown brick will be placed in the walls of the new St. Paul's, with bronze placques bearing the story of each.

CLARK NOMINATION WILL BE MADE

★ The demand on the part of Church groups from all parts of the country that President Truman should not send the nomination of General Mark Clark as ambassador to the Vatican is to be ignored. He stated at a press conference in Washington that he will send the nomination to Congress as soon as it reconvenes. When a reporter pointed out that Senator Connolly of Texas, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, had promised to keep the nomination in a committee pigeonhole, Mr. Truman made no comment.

THEOLOGICAL EDUCATION SUNDAY, 1952

January 27

At the request of the Joint Commission on Theological Education, I have designated the third Sunday after Epiphany, January 27, 1952, as Theological Education Sunday.

On that day I hope that there will be addresses in every church upon the importance of the work of our Theological Seminaries, and furthermore that in every parish there will be an opportunity for the people of the Church to give financial support to the Seminaries.

As everyone who stops to think must know, the quality of the clergy of the Church is of the utmost importance. When there is the best leadership in a parish, then there is forward progress in every direction. If there is further thought, our lay people will realize the significance of our seminaries. They must have adequate faculties, equipment and facilities to train the clergy of tomorrow. Here is a strategic need and opportunity.

HENRY K. SHERRILL
Presiding Bishop

* * * *

Berkeley Divinity School, New Haven, Conn.; Bexley Hall, Gambier, Ohio; Church Divinity School of the Pacific, Berkeley, Calif.; Divinity School of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia; Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass.; The General Theological Seminary, New York City; Nashotah House, Nashotah, Wis.; School of Theology of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.; Seabury-Western Theological Seminary, Evanston, Ill.; Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

GUILD OF SCHOLARS HAVE MEETING

★ The Guild of Scholars in the Episcopal Church held its annual meeting early in December at the General Theological Seminary, New York. The meeting included the presentation of papers, social sessions and attendance at the services of the seminary chapel.

The general subject of this year's meeting was, "The structure of reality in the light of the natural and biological sciences." Papers were read by John F. Lane, professor of chemistry at Rutgers, on "professional objectives of the natural scientist"; T. T. Odell, professor of biology at Hobart, on "A biologist looks at Christianity"; Howard D. Roelofs, professor of philosophy, University of Cincinnati, on "Science, truth and religion"; and by Frederick A. Pottle, professor of English at Yale, on "Practical programs for changing a positivistic climate of opinion." A summary discussion of the papers was led by John Wild, department of philosophy at Harvard.

President of the Guild of Scholars for 1952 will be Thomas S. K. Scott-Craig, professor of philosophy at Dartmouth. Retiring president is Dr. Roelofs.

The aim of the Guild is to relate the special discipliness of the academic, literary and scientific worlds to the historic faith and life of the Church.

STARTING A CHURCH HAS DIFFICULTIES

★ Clearance from ten boards of the city government of Oakland, California, including one from the board of health, two hearings before the city manager, and the trucking of a church building across ten miles of city streets, were some of the obstacles the diocese of California had to overcome before it could start work on its new property in the rapidly-growing Oak Knoll section of the city.

The bishop purchased the building from a Lutheran congregation, which had outgrown its quarters, for a nominal sum. Before the building is ready for occupancy on its new site, it will cost $12,000, still considerably less than it could be duplicated. It contains under one roof a moderately-sized chapel, and rooms for church school and parochial activities.

The lots the building now occupies are strategically located in the middle of a new residential community and only a short distance from the navy's vast Oak Knoll hospital, so that the clergyman to be assigned can provide spiritual ministrations in that institution while developing a center of Church life. The lots were acquired from St. Andrew's Church in Oakland, which has abandoned its plan of moving from its present location on the borders of the campus of Mills College for women.

THE CHURCH PENSION FUND

and its subsidiaries

administered for the benefit of the Church

THE CHURCH HYMNAL CORPORATION

Publishers of The Hymnal; Hymnal 1940 Companion; Book of Common Prayer; A Prayer Book for Soldiers and Sailors; Prayer Book Studies; Book of Offices; Stowe's Clerical Directory.

CHURCH LIFE INSURANCE CORPORATION

Offers low cost insurance and annuity contracts to clergy, lay officials and active lay workers of the Church, either voluntary or paid, and their immediate families. Services include individual insurance programming and assistance to parish officials in preparing and establishing plans for retirement of lay employees.

THE CHURCH FIRE INSURANCE CORPORATION

Low cost fire, windstorm and extended coverage insurance on property owned by or closely affiliated with the Church, and on the residences and personal property of the clergy.

Further information available by addressing any of the above at

20 EXCHANGE PLACE NEW YORK 5, N. Y.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

—MIRACLE CHURCH

(Continued from page 4)

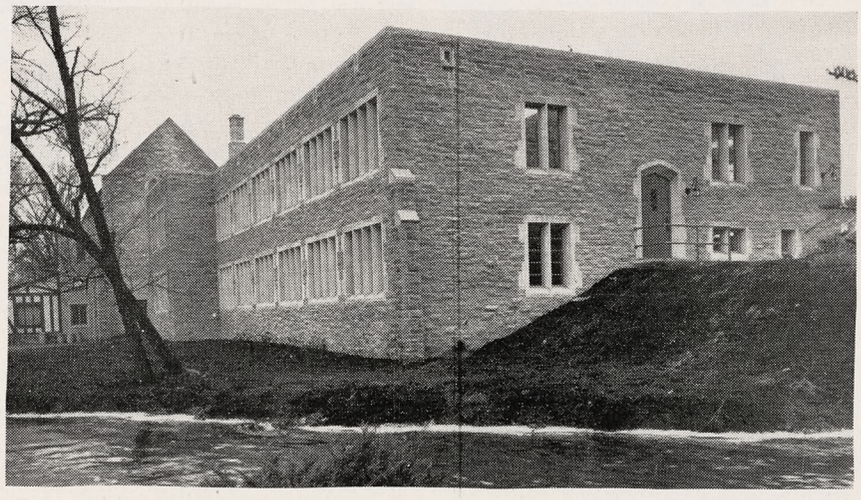
tees which call upon St. Stephen's, so that it is known as a community church.

Many of its present communicant membership represent backgrounds other than the Episcopal Church. The nearness of the church-school has frequently been the point of interest in the parish that has resulted in the confirmation of parents. The present membership is 1200 communicants. Two adult classes are presented each year upon the visitation of the Bishop, in May and June and one youth class, which averages over 30 each June.

An Educational-Minded Parish

The rector of the parish is well known throughout the diocese for his leadership in the field of education. He is on the advisory editorial board of the National Council, is chairman of the department of Christian education for the diocese of Minnesota, and finds time somewhere along the way to be chairman of the standing committee.



The strength of the parish can be shown by church-school statistics. There are two complete church school sessions, which involve children from the nursery through the 8th grade. Two complete administrative staffs, and two complete faculties serve them. There are duplicate Sunday church services at 9:30 and 11 and the sessions of the church school coincide with the church services. Two vested junior choirs serve at the church school worship services, and a high school choir enrolling 25 members sing at the 9:30 service. Five hundred children are enrolled and 75 persons are in teaching and administrative activities. The use of the new building has encouraged attendance to over 440 on Sundays.

A carefully directed program of teacher training is supervised by a part-time educational worker, Mrs. C. C. Olsen, who meets each month with teachers in departmental groups to work ahead on curriculum, audio-visual aids, handwork, class projects. The courses on "Christian Faith and Life" have been used for several years with outstanding results. Three times a year room mothers hear memory requirements, and intensive reviews during the 8th grade course prepare the pupils for confirmation class at the end of the 8th grade work. This involves 6 sessions of instruction with one of the clergy and a personal interview with the rector.

The high school activities carry on the educational work. Organized as a "University of Life," the high school group meets for supper, emphasis periods, and study courses. Chosen by a youth cabinet, paid instructors bring a variety of courses: boy-girl relations, the Church in America, the Utopias, Christianity vs. Communism, what other churches believe, and social resources of our community (A study of the personal welfare organizations in Twin-City area). Fifty high school young people are participating in this program. The administration of the church school, and the University of Life are the responsibility of the Rev. Paul Bankston, assistant minister.

As outlined previously, the church enthusiastically endorses and supports the many phases of the Scouting program, and most of the leadership in these community-wide activities will be found on the rosters of the parish membership.

Adults are not neglected. Two courses per year are routinely arranged, one during Lent, led sometimes by the clergy, and sometimes by visiting instructors competent in a particular field. A weekly devotional meeting for adults is a combination of study, inquiry, and prayer. The adults, while not organized on a 'semester' basis, are able to receive intensive instruction. The confirmation classes always have some persons present for refresher courses.

NEW PARISH HOUSE was dedicated this month and is used not only for parish activities but many community events

Do Missions Pay

One of the fortunate results of the parish being conscious of its recent beginnings is a keen missionary awareness. There are many members in the congregation still able to remember the days of meeting in the public school, and the early struggles

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

GOWNS

• Pulpit and Choir •
Headquarters for RELIGIOUS SUPPLIES

Church Furniture · Stoles
Embroideries · Vestments
Hangings · Communion
Sets · Altar Brass Goods

CATALOG ON REQUEST

National CHURCH GOODS SUPPLY COMPANY
821-23 ARCH STREET, PHILADELPHIA 7, PA.

VESTMENTS

Cassocks - Surplices - Stoles - Scarves
Silks - Altar Cloths - Embroideries
Priest Cloths - Rabats - Collars
Custom Tailoring for Clergymen

1837 Church Vestments Makers over 100 Yrs. 1951

COX SONS & VINING, Inc.
131 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y.

ALTAR GUILDS

Full range of finest qualities Pure Irish Linen for all church uses. Immediate delivery; prices unchanged.

Samples Free

MARY FAWCETT COMPANY
Box 325 Marblehead, Mass.
(Formerly Plainfield, N. J.)

★ ADDRESS CHANGE

IN MAKING AN ADDRESS CHANGE, PLEASE SEND BOTH THE OLD AND THE NEW ADDRESS AND ALLOW THREE WEEKS FOR THE CHANGE.

ALTAR LINENS
BY THE YARD

From one of the widest selections of Church linens in the United States. I am always pleased to submit free samples. Outstanding values and qualities imported from Ireland. Also ecclesiastical transfer patterns, beautiful household table damask and Plexiglass Pall Foundations in 5½, 6, 6½ and 7 inches at $1.

MARY MOORE
Box 394-W Davenport, Iowa

The Prayer Book
Its History & Purpose
BY
IRVING P. JOHNSON
Late Witness Editor

25c for single copy
$2 for ten copies

The WITNESS
Tunkhannock, Pa.

incidental to getting the church built in 1939. In terms of leadership in the diocese, missionary giving and support of the Indian work, the laymen of the parish exercise great interest, influence, and help. The missionary emphasis extends from the church school children in lower grades bringing gifts for children in Indian missions to the substantial amounts made available for the general Church's program by the vestry. The constant educational emphasis on the needs of the Church and the responsibilities of its membership have proved again and again that the informed churchman is a contributing churchman. By exercising its missionary concern, the parish is seeking in many ways to discharge its moral debt to those who made possible its founding. The dedicatory service was printed in a brochure, which announced the theme of the history of the parish: "We Are the Result of Missions." The emergence of St. Stephen's as a strong parish carrying community and diocesan responsibilities is abundant evidence that it pays to "get thar fustes' with the mostes'."

PEOPLE

CLERGY CHANGES:

RODNEY F. COBB, formerly rector of the Incarnation, Lynn, Mass., is now in charge of Grace Church, Everett, Mass.

PAUL W. STOUTSENBERGER, formerly rector of King and Queen parish, Chaptico, Md., is now rector of Christ Church, Clinton, Md.

EARLE R. CLOSSON, formerly ass't at St. Paul's, Washington, D. C., is now living in Florida where he is doing part time work.

J. MOULTON THOMAS, formerly rector of St. Matthew's, Wheeling, W. Va., is now rector of Christ Church, Baltimore, Md.

JERRY CARPENTER, formerly with the welfare ass'n of Akron, O., is now ass't to the director of the Philadelphia City Mission.

CASSOCKS
Surplices — Choir Vestments
Eucharistic Vestments
Altar Hangings and Linens
Prices Sent on Request
J. M. HALL, INC.
14 W. 40th St., New York 18, N. Y.
Tel. CH 4-3306

ST. JAMES LESSONS

A nine course series of instruction for Episcopal Church Schools including illustrated work books—150-250 pages (60c each) and teachers' manuals I, II, III 40c each, IV through IX 60c each).

No Samples - Payment with orders

St. James Lessons, Inc.
865 Madison Ave., Dpt. 5, N. Y. 21, N. Y.

Choir Pulpit GOWNS

Confirmation Robes, Paraments, Fine materials, beautiful work, pleasing low prices. State your needs. Write for Catalog.
DEMOULIN BROS. & CO.
1188 S. 4th St., Greenville, Ill.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
20 E. 22nd St., New York 10, N. Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE·BRASS·SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS

CATHEDRAL STUDIOS
Washington, London. Materials, linens, by the yd. Surplices, albs, Altar Linens, stoles, burses, veils. My new book, "Church Embroidery & Church Vestments" (1st edition sold out, 2nd edition now ready). Complete instructions, 128 pages, 95 illustrations, vestment patterns drawn to scale, price $7.50. Handbook for Altar Guilds 53c. L. V. Mackrille, 11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase 15, Md. Tel. Wisconsin 2752.

MONEY for your TREASURY
Over 1,500,000
SUNFLOWER DISH CLOTHS
Were sold in 1946 by members of Sunday Schools, Ladies Aids, Young People's Groups, etc. They enable you to earn money for your treasury, and make friends for your organization.
SANGAMON MILLS
Established 1915 Cohoes, N. Y.

THE BISHOP WHITE
PRAYER BOOK SOCIETY
Founded by Bishop White 1833
Donates to Missions, Institutions and Parishes unable to purchase them, in limited grants.
PEW SIZE
The Book of Common Prayer
The Church Hymnal (words only)
Apply THE REV. ALLEN EVANS, D.D., S.T.D., Sec.
319 Lombard St., Philadelphia 47, Pa.
Endorsement of Bishop must accompany request

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

BACKFIRE

Readers are encouraged to comment on editorials, articles and news. Since space is limited we ask that letters be brief. We reserve the right to abstract and to print only those we consider important.

FREDERICK SONTAG
Layman of Verona, N. J.

Television as a method of spreading the good word needs all the support and prayers we can muster. So there must be a reply to Marvin Hill's comments regarding what he dislikes in religious TV. (Witness Dec. 6).

I am in hearty accord with maintaining an atmosphere of dignity and reverence in a church at all times. There are occasions, however, when it seems in keeping with the Christian spirit to sacrifice a little of the dignity and reverence, as we may see it from our point of view in the congregation, in order that the Christian message in its dignity and reverence may reach the unreached who number far, far more than we realize. It is not the essence of the Christian spirit to think only of ourselves whether in church or out of church, but it is the essence of the Christian spirit to always and in all ways think of others.

With respect to the broadcast of the church services by radio, it is my deepest conviction that to present it interestingly to the radio audience adds interest and vitality to the visible congregation. The wise minister knows that he serves a radio-minded people who do not resent at all the radio method of presentation, but rather welcome this approach. To be sure, in television broadcasting of a church service, there are a few distractions caused by the technicians but these need not be as bad as it seems. We will learn through experience how to make these distractions less and less as time goes by. However, we do not feel it right to be condemned while we learn to use this new miracle, that many of us consider God given.

There is another factor in this whole situation and it is this. We can make our presentations so attractive, so attention appealing that no distractions will have an undesirable effect. A congregation in the sanctuary ought to become "home missionaries" enduring the few distractions for a moment in order that the listener or viewer may be reached for eternity. Paul endured the distractions of beatings, shipwreck, prison, etc., for the sake of reaching others. We must do likewise.

FRANCIS W. HAYES JR.
Rector of The Falls Church
Falls Church, Va.

I note from the recent issue of The Witness that The Falls Church has made its columns. It it always difficult living in a community which has taken its name from the Church, trying to keep the names separate. It was therefore very disheartening to note that The Witness had fallen into the same pit into which others had fallen in naming our Church "The Falls Church Church." Certainly the additional word church is not required.

I presume that the article was copied from an article in one of the Washington papers because of its similiarity. However, there are numerous errors which ought to be corrected although they are not terribly important. First off, the man didn't fall in the church. He fell off a ladder on the outside of the church. Secondly, and more importantly, the church is not 145 years old but much older. The church itself was established in 1732 or 33, and the present building was erected in 1769, which is a little bit older than 145 years. Also, as far as I know, I never made any statement as reported.

All of this is relatively unimportant but I thought you would be interested in keeping the records straight.

Shattuck School

FOUNDED 1858

Shattuck integrates all parts of its program: religious, academic, military and social to give high school age boys an environment in which to grow "in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man." Summer School-Camp. Catalogue

REV. SIDNEY W. GOLDSMITH, JR.
RECTOR AND HEADMASTER
Box W, Shumway Hall
SHATTUCK SCHOOL FARIBAULT, MINN.

CENTRAL SCHOOL OF RELIGION
(A Correspondence Institution)
6030 Lowell Ave., Indianapolis 19, Ind.
College level courses since 1896. Bible, Theology of O. & N. T., Pastoral Psychology, Church Publicity, Religious Education, etc. Complete interrupted studies at home. Excellent faculty. Reasonable. Write to Secretary for further information NOW.

KEMPER HALL
Kenosha, Wisconsin

Boarding and day school for girls offering thorough college preparation and training for purposeful living. Study of the Fine Arts encouraged. Complete sports program. Junior school department. Beautiful lake shore campus. Under the direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.
FOR CATALOG, ADDRESS, BOX WT

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
New York
Established 1901
A BOARDING SCHOOL for the forty boys of the Choir of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. The boys receive careful musical training and sing daily at the service in the Cathedral. The classes in the School are small with the result that boys have individual attention, and very high standards are maintained. The School has its own building and playgrounds in the close. Fee—$450.00 per annum. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Voice test and scholastic examination. For Catalogue and information address:
The CANON PRECENTOR,
Cathedral Choir School
Cathedral Heights, N. Y. CITY 25

CARLETON COLLEGE
LAURENCE M. GOULD, D.Sc., President
Carleton is a co-educational liberal arts college of limited enrollment and is recognized as the Church College of Minnesota.
Address: Director of Admissions
Carleton College
Northfield Minnesota

LENOX SCHOOL
A Church School in the Berkshire Hills for boys 12-18 emphasizing Christian ideals and character through simplicity of plant and equipment, moderate tuition, the cooperative self-held system, and informal, personal relationships among boys and faculty.
REV. ROBERT L. CURRY, Headmaster
Lenox, Massachusetts

HOLDERNESS
The White Mountain School, for boys 13-19. Thorough college preparation in small classes. Student government emphasizes responsibility. Team sports, skiing. Debating. Glee Club. Art. New fireproof building.
DONALD C. HAGERMAN, Headmaster
Plymouth New Hampshire

FORK UNION
MILITARY ACADEMY
Highest Government rating with strong Christian emphasis. Upper School prepares for University or Business. Fully accredited. R.O.T.C. Every modern equipment. Separate Junior School from six years up, housemothers. Students from thirty states. Catalogue, DR. J. C. WICKER, BOX 284, FORK UNION, VA.

Virginia Episcopal School
LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA
Prepares boys for colleges and university. Splendid environment and excellent corps of teachers. High standard in scholarship and athletics. Healthy and beautiful location in the mountains of Virginia.
For catalogue, apply to
GEORGE L. BARTON, JR., Ph.D., Headmaster
Box 408

ST. MARY'S-IN-THE-MOUNTAINS
An Episcopal college preparatory boarding school for fifty girls. Piano and Choral instruction. Art. Domestic Science. Mountain hikes and winter sports afforded by location in White Mountains. Horseback and Skiing lessons. New gymnasium. For catalogue address
Miss Mary Harley Jenks, Principal
Littleton, New Hampshire

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

Copyright 2020. Archives of the Episcopal Church / DFMS. Permission required for reuse and publication.

"Once to every man and nation Comes the moment to decide"

COMMUNISM AND CHRIST

By CHARLES W. LOWRY

Rector, ALL SAINTS CHURCH, Chevy Chase, Maryland

COMMUNISM—A NEW RELIGION

THE BACKGROUND OF COMMUNISM

THE CHRISTIAN REVOLUTION

JESUS CHRIST AND THE AMERICAN WAY

COMMUNISM AND CHRIST

Foreword by the Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, Bishop of New York

COMMUNISM AND CHRIST presents Communism in its role as the new universal salvation religion. A comparison is made between the claims and assets of Christianity and the claims and assets of Communism as its premier rival for the faith and allegiance of mankind. Dr. Lowry's appraisal of Communism's startling missionary appeal has urgent bearing upon the world's present crisis. His message is one which all free men must assimilate if they are to grasp the real peril in which the world stands—for today democracy everywhere is on trial and in peril, and its future depends upon spiritual renewal at the very deepest level.

BISHOP DONEGAN SAYS:

"HERE YOU WILL find a brilliant analysis and discussion of the most timely contemporary question—Communism . . . We must seek to understand the origin, history, development and appeal of Communism . . . Communism, as Dr. Lowry points out, is not simply a political system. It is a world religion, bidding for the loyalty of every man, woman, and child . . . Communism knocks at the door in the disguise of a savior offering a scheme of salvation, not of the soul, but of the body. Thus a doctrine of man is offered which is superficially attractive, but profoundly inferior to the doctrine of man as a child of God and an inheritor of the Kingdom of God."

Postage Additional

Morehouse-Gorham Co.

14 E. 41st Street
New York 17, N. Y.

29 E. Madison Street
Chicago 2, Ill.